

START

ROLL
NUMBER

Blue Stocking
1992

REDUCTION
RATIO

20

MICROCOPY RESOLUTION TEST CHART
T-10

APPLIED
IMAGE
Group-
IMAGING

MICROCOPY RESOLUTION TEST CHART
T-10

APPLIED
IMAGE
Group-
IMAGING

MICROCOPY RESOLUTION TEST CHART
T-10

APPLIED
IMAGE
Group-
IMAGING

MICROCOPY RESOLUTION TEST CHART
T-10

APPLIED
IMAGE
Group-
IMAGING

MICROCOPY RESOLUTION TEST CHART
T-10

APPLIED
IMAGE
Group-
IMAGING

MICROCOPY RESOLUTION TEST CHART
T-10

APPLIED
IMAGE
Group-
IMAGING

MICROCOPY RESOLUTION TEST CHART
T-10

APPLIED
IMAGE
Group-
IMAGING

MICROCOPY RESOLUTION TEST CHART
T-10

APPLIED
IMAGE
Group-
IMAGING

MICROCOPY RESOLUTION TEST CHART
T-10

APPLIED
IMAGE
Group-
IMAGING

MICROCOPY RESOLUTION TEST CHART
T-10

APPLIED
IMAGE
Group-
IMAGING

THE BLUE STOCKING

PRESBYTERIAN COLLEGE
CLINTON, SOUTH CAROLINA

BEGINS: 7 FEBRUARY 1992.

FILMED JUNE 2006
BY TIM BRIGHT FOR
THE SOUTH CAROLINIANA LIBRARY,
FROM THE ORIGINAL FILES IN POSSESSION OF PRESBYTERIAN COLLEGE.

THE SOUTH CAROLINIANA LIBRARY
UNIVERSITY OF SOUTH CAROLINA
COLUMBIA, S.C. 29208

Volumes of Presbyterian College's Blue Stocking

- v. 66, nos. 1-4, 18, 20, 21, and 23 (1983)
- v. 67/68, nos. 1-19 (1984)

Note: volume number changes after first issue

- v. 69, nos. 1-15 (1985, Jan.-Apr.)
- v. 80, nos. 1-27 (Sept. 1985-Apr. 1986)

Note: jump in volume numbers is because an error with Roman numerals was never corrected

Special issue August 30, 1986

- v. 81, nos. 1-23 (Sept. 1986-Apr. 1987)

Note: issue #19 is in two parts

- v. 82, nos. 1-21 (Sept. 1987-Apr. 1988)

Note: issue #18 is in two parts

- v. 83, nos. 1-15 (Sept. 1988-Apr. 1989)
- v. 84, nos. 1-13 (Sept. 1989-Apr. 1990)

Note: issue #12 is in two parts

- v. 85, nos. 1-16 (Sept. 1990-Apr. 1991)
- v. 86, nos. 1-12 (Sept. 1991-May 1992)
- v. 87, nos. 1-10 (Sept. 1992-Apr. 1993)
- v. 88, nos. 1-10 (Sept. 1993-Apr. 1994)
- v. 89, nos. 1-10 (Sept. 1994-Apr. 1995)
- v. 91, nos. 1-10 (Sept. 1995-Apr. 1996)

Note: volume #90 was skipped

- v. 92, nos. 1-10 (Sept. 1996-Apr. 1997)
- v. 93, nos. 1-10 (Sept. 1997-Apr. 1998)

Note: issue #9 is numbered #8.5

- v. 94, nos. 1-13 (Sept. 1998-Apr. 1999)
- v. 95, nos. 1-14 (Sept. 1999-Apr. 2000)

Note: issue #12 is in two parts

- v. 96, nos. 1-14 (Sept. 2000-Apr. 2001)
- v. 97, nos. 1-16 (Sept. 2001-Apr. 2002)
- v. 98, nos. 1-15 (Sept. 2002-Apr. 2003)
- v. 99, nos. 1-14 (Sept. 2003-Apr. 2004)

THIS MICROFILM EDITION IS MADE FROM THE MOST COMPLETE SET OF ORIGINAL ISSUES AVAILABLE AT THE TIME OF FILMING. IT HAS BEEN PRODUCED UNDER STRICT QUALITY CONTROL MEASURES. THE QUALITY OF THE IMAGES MAY REFLECT THE DEGRADATION OF THE ORIGINALS' PAPER AND INK, AND DUE TO A LACK OF CONTRAST, SOME PAGES MAY NOT HAVE REPRODUCED WELL.

NOTE:
THIS ROLL CONTAINS INTENTIONAL SECOND EXPOSURES DUE TO PHOTOGRAPHS, FADE CHANGES, AND ILLUSTRATIONS. ALSO,
GAPS IN PAGINATED MATERIALS
MAY BE PRESENT, AS BLANK PAGES ARE NOT FILMED.

1992

THE BLUE STOCKING

"Give the people the light, so they may find the way."

Volume LXXXVI Number 8

PRESBYTERIAN COLLEGE

Clinton, South Carolina 29325

Friday, February 7, 1992

Students injured in Fraternity Court weekend violence

From Staff Reports

This past weekend, PC's Fraternity Court was the scene of two separate violent incidents.

Friday night, John Broadway was struck in the head with a bottle by PC alumni Brad Tarbert at the Sigma Nu house. Broadway is a freshman and pledge for Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity. After the incident took place, Broadway was taken to the Laurens County Hospital for treatment. On Saturday, he was taken to the Greenville Memorial Hospital, where he was treated for a mild concussion and for a blood blister on the right side of his brain.

On Saturday night, a separate incident took place in front of the Pi Kappa Alpha house. Mike Nix, a senior and a Sigma Nu, was hospitalized as a result of a broken nose after a confrontation with Pi Kappa Alpha pledge, Gary Smith.

When asked about the violence of this

John Broadway

file photo

past weekend, Joe Nixon, dean of students, refused to comment and advised the Blue Stocking not to print the story.

The Blue Stocking also requested a copy of the incident report regarding the events of the past weekend. According to Public Safety Chief Grey Mayson, no incident report had been filed as of late Wednesday evening, even though both incidents resulted in injury to students and occurred on the PC campus.

However, according to Mayson, both he and Broadway met with Judge J.M. Copeland, a state magistrate, on Wednesday. Copeland advised Mayson to continue to investigate the situation, and he requested statements from individuals.

"Victims have the choice to press charges or not. It is not something that PC can do in this incident," said Mayson.

As a result of the violence that occurred

over the weekend, the Inter-Fraternity Council met on Monday night. At that meeting the IFC placed a ban on the two fraternities that were involved.

In a letter to the Blue Stocking, IFC President Paul Bass stated, "A ban, effective immediately, was placed on each of the two fraternities involved, keeping individuals from one fraternity from entering the other's house. A second regulation was passed to ensure that no further conflicts would occur between the two fraternities. Accordingly, members of both fraternities were warned that any further altercation would be dealt with by a $100 fine, suspension from Fraternity Court for the remainder of the year, and referral of the incident to the PC Judicial Council as a Code of Conduct violation."

At IFC's request, Bass's letter made no specific reference to the individuals involved or to the fraternities involved; however,

Blue Stocking sources have identified both.

Bass also stated that the presidents of the involved fraternities agreed to the new regulations and ensured that their members would comply.

In addition, the IFC decided to revise its policy on altercations. "Any fraternity man involved in an altercation will be fined $100 and banned from the Fraternity Court for four months. If an independent man is involved in an altercation he will be banned from the fraternity houses and the matter will be referred to the Judicial Council," said Bass in his letter.

According to Bass, the IFC has also scheduled a forum on fraternity relations for Wednesday, February 12. A time and location for the forum will be set on Monday. Bass urges all fraternity members to attend.

Mike Nix

file photo

Annual Arnold Symposium to 'test our presuppositions'

News Release

While planning Presbyterian College's 1992 Arnold Symposium, Dr. James Skinner wanted to bring forth a controversial topic that would allow people to test their current beliefs.

Dr. Skinner, the symposium coordinator, said this year's topic of "The Media and the Third World," to be held February 17-19 at the college, may hit closer to home than people think.

"This symposium, more than any of the preceding five, will work on the audience more. They will definitely be a large part of this symposium," Dr. Skinner said. "There will be a lot of information coming from the podium that will be totally new to people, and for that reason it will be more important. Here is a topic that causes us to reach out to the unknown. It's a subject that is uncomfortable for us. But if you're going to grow, you've got to reach, and it's time that we test our prejudices and presuppositions."

Helping the audience test their beliefs will be four nationally-renowned experts on the Third World, as well as a panel of Presbyterian College faculty members. The symposium will open on Monday, February 17, with a panel discussion at 8:15 p.m. in Edmunds Hall. The discussion will focus on where and how Americans learn about the Third World, and how they can improve their knowledge and understanding about those countries.

"I think an important aspect of the entire symposium is that opening forum," Dr. Skinner said. "That's when the audience will be asked, 'Where did you get your information and ideas?' I think a lot of people will learn that they have not been given a clear picture of the Third World."

The first of three programs on Tuesday, February 18, is planned for 11 a.m. when Dr. Edward Said, a frequent guest on ABC-

TV's "Nightline," appears in Belk Auditorium. Currently Professor of English and Comparative Literature at Columbia University, Dr. Said is widely regarded as the most prominent American spokesman for the Arab cause. His many books deal with Western misconceptions of Islam and the Orient, misconceptions rooted in essentially hostile stereotypes.

Dr. Jack Shaheen

file photo

The symposium will continue at 2:15 p.m. in Edmunds Hall, when Dr. Thomas W. Walker addresses the issue of Latin American Studies at Ohio

University. Dr. Walker served as a member of the Latin American Studies Association's delegation sent to observe the 1990 Nicaragua elections.

Rounding out symposium events on February 18 will be former print and broadcast journalist Jack Shaheen, currently Professor of Mass Communications at Southern Illinois University, writes often about "Our Cultural Demon: the Ugly Arab," in which he explores stereotypes of Arabs as "camel jockeys and ragheads."

The sixth annual Arnold Symposium will close on February 19, when Wall Street Journal reporter Jonathan Kwitney speaks at 11 a.m. in Belk Auditorium. Having either lived or traveled in 90 countries, Kwitney is the author of Endless Enemies: the Making of an Unfriendly World, which was a Book-of-the-Month Club selection.

"Because of our stereotypes, we don't look on the people in the Third World as human beings," Dr. Skinner said. "Look at the terminology - Third World. It's like a third-class ticket that nobody wants. When you use that word third, there is an implication that something is not important. We're talking about the majority of the world's population in these countries, but we simply tend to view the Third World as a problem."

THE BLUE STOCKING

"Give the people the light, so they may find the way."

Volume LXXXVI Number 8

PRESBYTERIAN COLLEGE

Clinton, South Carolina 29325

Friday, February 7, 1992

Students injured in Fraternity Court weekend violence

From Staff Reports

This past weekend, PC's Fraternity Court was the scene of two separate violent incidents.

Friday night, John Broadway was struck in the head with a bottle by PC alumni Brad Tarbert at the Sigma Nu house. Broadway is a freshman and pledge for Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity. After the incident took place, Broadway was taken to the Laurens County Hospital for treatment. On Saturday, he was taken to the Greenville Memorial Hospital, where he was treated for a mild concussion and for a blood blister on the right side of his brain.

On Saturday night, a separate incident took place in front of the Pi Kappa Alpha house. Mike Nix, a senior and a Sigma Nu, was hospitalized as a result of a broken nose after a confrontation with Pi Kappa Alpha pledge, Gary Smith.

When asked about the violence of this

John Broadway

file photo

past weekend, Joe Nixon, dean of students, refused to comment and advised the Blue Stocking not to print the story.

The Blue Stocking also requested a copy of the incident report regarding the events of the past weekend. According to Public Safety Chief Grey Mayson, no incident report had been filed as of late Wednesday evening, even though both incidents resulted in injury to students and occurred on the PC campus.

However, according to Mayson, both he and Broadway met with Judge J.M. Copeland, a state magistrate, on Wednesday. Copeland advised Mayson to continue to investigate the situation, and he requested statements from individuals. "Victims have the choice to press charges or not. It is not something that PC can do in this incident," said Mayson.

As a result of the violence that occurred

over the weekend, the Inter-Fraternity Council met on Monday night. At that meeting the IFC placed a ban on the two fraternities that were involved.

In a letter to the Blue Stocking, IFC President Paul Bass stated, "A ban, effective immediately, was placed on each of the two fraternities involved, keeping individuals from one fraternity from entering the other's house. A second regulation was passed to ensure that no further conflicts would occur between the two fraternities. Accordingly, members of both fraternities were warned that any further altercation would be dealt with by a $100 fine, suspension from Fraternity Court for the remainder of the year, and referral of the incident to the PC Judicial Council as a Code of Conduct violation."

At IFC's request, Bass's letter made no specific reference to the individuals involved or to the fraternities involved; however,

Blue Stocking sources have identified both.

Bass also stated that the presidents of the involved fraternities agreed to the new regulations and ensured that their members would comply.

In addition, the IFC decided to revise its policy on altercations. "Any fraternity man involved in an altercation will be fined $100 and banned from the Fraternity Court for four months. If an independent man is involved in an altercation he will be banned from the fraternity houses and the matter will be referred to the Judicial Council," said Bass in his letter.

According to Bass, the IFC has also scheduled a forum on fraternity relations for Wednesday, February 12. A time and location for the forum will be set on Monday. Bass urges all fraternity members to attend.

Mike Nix

file photo

termity relations for Wednesday, February 12. A time and location for the forum will be set on Monday. Bass urges all fraternity members to attend.

Annual Arnold Symposium to 'test our presuppositions'

News Release

While planning Presbyterian College's 1992 Arnold Symposium, Dr. James Skinner wanted to bring forth a controversial topic that would allow people to test their current beliefs.

Dr. Skinner, the symposium coordinator, said this year's topic of "The Media and the Third World," to be held February 17-19 at the college, may hit closer to home than people think.

"This symposium, more than any of the preceding five, will work on the audience more. They will definitely be a large part of this symposium," Dr. Skinner said. "There will be a lot of information coming from the podium that will be totally new to people, and for that reason it will be more important. Here is a topic that causes us to reach out to the unknown. It's a subject that we test our prejudices and presuppositions."

Helping the audience test their beliefs will be four nationally-renowned experts on the Third World, as well as a panel of Presbyterian College faculty members. The symposium will open on Monday, February 17, with a panel discussion at 8:15 p.m. in Edmunds Hall. The discussion will focus on where and how Americans learn about the Third World, and how they can improve their knowledge and understanding about those countries.

"I think an important aspect of the entire symposium is that opening forum," Dr. Skinner said. "That's when the audience will be asked, 'Where did you get your information and ideas?' I think a lot of people will learn that they have not been given a clear picture of the Third World."

The first of three programs on Tuesday, February 18, is planned for 11 a.m. when Dr. Edward Said, a frequent guest on ABC-

TV's "Nightline," appears in Belk Auditorium. Currently Professor of English and Comparative Literature at Columbia University, Dr. Said is widely regarded as the most prominent American spokesman for the Arab cause. His many books deal with Western misconceptions of Islam and the Orient, misconceptions rooted in essentially hostile stereotypes.

Dr. Jack Shaheen

file photo

The symposium will continue at 2:15 p.m. in Edmunds Hall, when Dr. Thomas W. Walker addresses the issue of Latin American Studies at Ohio

University. Dr. Walker served as a member of the Latin American Studies Association's delegation sent to observe the 1990 Nicaragua

elections.

Rounding out symposium events on February 18 will be former print and broadcast journalist Jack Shaheen, currently Professor of Mass Communications at Southern Illinois University, writes often about "Our Cultural Demon: the Ugly Arab," in which he explores stereotypes of Arabs as "camel jockeys and ragheads."

The sixth annual Arnold Symposium will close on February 19, when Wall Street Journal reporter Jonathan Kwitney speaks at 11 a.m. in Belk Auditorium. Having either lived or traveled in 90 countries, Kwitney is the author of Endless Enemies: the Making of an Unfriendly World, which was a Book-of-the-Month Club selection.

"Because of our stereotypes, we don't look on the people in the Third World as human beings," Dr. Skinner said. "Look at the terminology - Third World. It's like a third-class ticket that nobody wants. When you use that word third, there is an implication that something is not important. We're talking about the majority of the world's population in these countries, but we simply tend to view the Third World as a problem."

Editor Concerned with Hypocrisy on Campus

Dennie Lynn Hill
Editor-in-Chief

I was recently sitting and talking with my staff about our prestigious Presbyterian College and controversy and frustration filled the room. Is PC not the utopia that we were all led to believe in? Could it be possible that this is not Wonderland? Do actual, real life problems exist here? Surely not.

Yes, we may be a bit secluded here in the small, southern town of Clinton, South Carolina at a private, Presbyterian school of 1150 students, but we do not live in a utopia! So, why does the Administration try to pretend that we do?

We are all aware of the events that occurred last weekend at fraternity court. I would venture to say that the news on the front page of this issue of the Blue Stocking was not actually 'news' to anyone on campus, but just a clarification of the situation at hand. So, why then was my staff and myself led to feel as if we should just sweep the events under the carpet and go on with other important stories such as what hors d'oeuvres will be served at winter formal? What insolence! This is the student newspaper and the students deserve to know the facts about what happens on their campus.

The first time the administration attempt to alter what the students see and hear bothered me was last year on perspective student visitation day. The Blue Stocking had a table at the activities fair filled with past issues and an administrator requested that we remove all editions with controversial issues in them. I thought, what is the point of journalism if there are no thought provoking issues? Thought provoking issues often mean controversy, but what is wrong with that? Unfortunately, there wasn't a controversial issue in each edition. How I wished the entire table would have been empty.

I understand completely the college's concern about portraying a good image to perspective students, but should we deny the students the right to know the truth about our school? This year on minority student visitation day I noticed the school was suddenly void of the Blue Stocking edition that was just off the press the day before. Strange how over 1000 copies just disappeared on one Friday afternoon (They, unfortunately, usually linger in the halls for weeks). I was later told that there was concern about a letter to the editor concerning racism on campus and thus the reason for the disappearing Blue Stockings. Well, that is one way to get an outstanding class of 1996 - let them think that nothing controversial happens on our campus. Even though they have seen other campus newspapers and read about the same issues our school deals with, let them believe our school is so different and then let them be so disappointed when they do not get what they were promised.

I hate to say the administration is to blame because it is not the entire administration. Many members advocate our investigative reporting and our interest in covering problem areas on campus. Yet, there are a few who, because of their positions, feel the need to pretend that the problems that do exist on our campus are not worthy of recognition by the students. I truly understand these people's position in that they need to portray the school in a positive manner at all times. But, long term, I think that this type of behavior will only have a negative impact on our campus. I hope that next time a staff reporter tries to find out the facts about a problem on campus they will be given the facts that they deserve to know and I hope that when the story appears in the Blue Stocking that it will be available for anyone to read, perspective student or not.

Please note the Publication dates and deadlines for submissions to the Blue Stocking for the spring semester:

Publications:
FEBRUARY 28
MARCH 20
APRIL 3
APRIL 16
APRIL 23

Letters to the Editor must be in by midnight on the Friday before the publication.

Other information and submissions must be made 10 days before the publication.

The Blue Stocking of Presbyterian College
Clinton, South Carolina, 29325
Volume LXXXVI, Number 8
February 7, 1992

Editor-in-chief.....Dennie Lynn Hill
Managing Editor.....Jason West
News Editor.....Paul Atkinson
Politics Editor.....Ted Carmichael
Sports Editor.....Brad Busbee
Entertainment Editor.....Angie Richardson
Features Editor.....LeJeanna Maddox
Environment Editor.....Heather Moncrief
Photography/Darkroom.....Angela Mills
Layout Editor.....Carolyn Nichols
Copy Editor.....Mike Weaver
Advertising Editor.....Ann Mayfield
Subscriptions/Exchange.....Ron Mixon
Artist.....Edward Clark

Photography Staff:

John Tritt Margaret Davis Jason Winfield
Tracy Kurasaka Kimberlee Gibson Bill Boan
Laura Meyers Brad Sims Patrick John Pharr
Lee McAbee Melissa Jackson Lisa Weaver
Lee Maynard Adrienne Ivey

Staff Writers:

Elizabeth Spann Amanda Bowers
Karen Wittenbrook Frank McKay
Ed Kirkland Katherine Bonner
Everett Catts Adrienne Ivey Nancy Norton
Cher Fulbright Michelle Canteley
Cam Edgar Lee Maynard Trenton Arnold
Shira Garwood

The Blue Stocking is a biweekly student publication of Presbyterian College. The paper serves as a forum of news and opinion of regional and national concern. For advertising, contact The Blue Stocking, Presbyterian College, Box 1061, Clinton, SC 29325. The Blue Stocking welcomes letters to the editor from all members of the PC community. Signatures are required. Letters are printed on a space available basis. The Blue Stocking reserves the right to edit all letters for proper grammar and punctuation. The final deadline for submitting letters is Friday at 12:00pm on the week before publication.

Letters to the editor-Letters to the editor-Letters to the editor

Words from IFC President

I am writing this letter as a response to the remainder of the year, and referral of the incident to PC Judicial Council as a Code of Conduct violation. The Presidents of each of the involved fraternities agreed to the regulations and ensured that their members would comply.

Friday night, an individual was struck in the head with a bottle at one of the six houses at Fraternity Court. This individual was taken to the hospital and treated. The following night, another individual was hospitalized as a result of a separate incident. This event occurred in front of an adjacent house. Immediately following this, two separate groups of individuals approached each other with intentions of retribution. Yet, this potentially inflammatory conflict was avoided.

The Inter-Fraternity Council was forced to act swiftly. A ban, effective immediately, was placed on each of the two fraternities involved, keeping individuals from one fraternity from entering the other house. A second regulation was passed to ensure that no further conflicts would occur between the two fraternities. Accordingly, members of both fraternities were warned that any further altercation would be dealt with by a $100 fine, suspension from Fraternity Court for the remainder of the year, and referral of the incident to PC Judicial Council as a Code of Conduct violation. The Presidents of each of the involved fraternities agreed to the regulations and ensured that their members would comply.

After approving the two above regulations, the Inter-Fraternity Council decided to revise its policy on altercations. The following rules were passed unanimously. Any fraternity man involved in an altercation would be fined $100 and banned from the Fraternity Court for four months. If an independent man is involved in an altercation he will be banned from the fraternity houses and the matter will be referred to the PC Judicial Council.

A call was made for a Forum on Fraternity Relations. The IFC took this into consideration and scheduled a forum for Wednesday, February 12. A time and location will be set Monday. All fraternity members are strongly encouraged to attend the forum.

Thank you,
Paul H. Bass
President - IFC

Words on what fraternities and sororities have to offer

Dear Editor,

It was a beautiful Friday afternoon in January. The sun was shining, the sky was clear, and the temperature was warm. It was, in fact, last Friday, January 31st. I had just completed my week's work when, from my office, I heard the revels and cries of young men declaring themselves "brothers." What warmth! What mirth! What joy! My heart was full.

I am also most pleased that some of those individuals saw fit to invite me, albeit inadvertently, to stay and watch their merry-making. Thank you so much for parallel parking your very large vehicle behind my little car. (How could you have known I love to drive and also test my driving skills?) That's the only possible reason you could have parked behind me, leaving empty the two parking spaces to my left.

Oh, the fun I had as I cranked my steering wheel (sans power steering) first to the right (so I could back up into the two feet of room which you quite thoughtfully left between our two vehicles) then to the left (so I could creep forward just that much closer to freedom). Back and forth, left and right. Once again, my heart was full. Instead of a quiet walk with my dog, I had the rare chance to see young men clasp one another in warm embraces - breast to breast - unashamed by their emotional displays.

After I slowly inched my car into a wonderfully tight U-turn and then out onto Adair Street, I regretfully left this fine exhibition of male bonding behind and turned towards home. Those who think fraternities and sororities have nothing to offer should have been in the car with me.

Sincerely,
Gina Prosch

The Blue Stocking encourages all students, faculty, administration, and others in the community to write letters to the editor. The letters are due on the Friday before the issue is published. Thank you for your support.

Field trip to former Soviet Union

To the Editor,

I am working to put together, for PC students who are interested, an after-graduation field trip to Moscow and St. Petersburg (Leningrad) in the former Soviet Union. Arrangements are being made through Friendship Force in Atlanta. I cordially invite students who have an interest in the former Soviet Union and the incredible changes taking place there to join this group (ideally 15-25 in number) and me for this adventure.

Under the tentative plans as they now stand, the group leaves Atlanta around May 12, flies to Moscow for a week of "homestay" (living in Russian homes) and touring, then goes by train for a 2-3 day stay in St. Petersburg. Overnights in Amsterdam, perhaps, on the return home, we are to arrive back in Atlanta around May 23. Friendship Forces estimates total price (roundtrip flights, meals, accommodations, travel, visa fees, etc.) at less than $2,000.

I am grateful to The Blue Stocking for allowing me to make this announcement. Interested students should contact me (Neville 109, or telephone 8352) as soon as possible.

Sincerely,
David Gillespie
Political Science

Student finds CEP speaker offensive

Dear Miss Hill,

I attended the Cultural Enrichment Program in Belk Auditorium on Monday, January 20. I had expectations of hearing how the Open Door Program has helped the Atlanta Community fulfill Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.'s "Dream," or something relating to this holiday. Instead, I was nauseated by the ranting and raving of a disillusioned and obviously disturbed woman named Murphy Davis.

Ms. Davis began her lecture by telling us how a black man, whom she felt was completely innocent, was executed for being "associated" with someone who murdered a white woman. She thought this was completely unjust punishment, basing it on purely racial prejudice. Friend, I am here to tell you that regardless of the race of the criminal or the victim, accessory to murder is worthy of punishment. (I will not digress on the issue of capital punishment, however.)

Ms. Murphy Davis has evidently never experienced love from someone of the male gender in a healthy relationship. She began a "Male Bashing" tirade by quoting statistics of wives beaten by their husbands. She then insulted both male and female students when she stated that over half of the females in the audience would marry a man who would beat her. This suggests to me that over half of the men at PC will beat their wives. Ms. Davis' statement also insults the intelligence of PC women. She insinuates that girls that are my friends will lack the character judgement to choose a proper mate. I find it hard to believe that women attending a school of such high academic caliber could make such a grave misjudgement on such a widespread scale as Ms. Davis suggests.

It became increasingly evident that Ms. Davis was an ardent feminist, the type that most mainstream men and women despise. Men fear such women because of their radical power-hungry ideas. Women despise such feminists because they cloud the concept of equality with their radical ideology and thus damage the credibility of the typical woman in America today. Also these feminists typically have a masculine appearance, wearing short hair, no make-up and possessing the general appearance of a "dyke." The average American woman wishes to be treated as equal to men but does not desire to be associated with such a stereotype.

After recovering from this insult to my chauvinistic caveman tendencies, Ms. Davis approached economic issues with idealistic and unreasonable theories. I gathered that she believed Sam Walton to be a selfish crook who stole from the poor to buy expensive toys. Sam Walton is one of my personal heroes. This man pioneered Wal-Mart to be one of the most successful retail chains in the nation. His stores employ thousands of middle and lower class Americans. Sam Walton is the American Dream incarnate. Ms. Davis suggests that it is bad for such a man to be so successful. She wishes to redistribute his wealth to the poor in America. This economic policy has been tried before Ms. Davis. It was used in the former Soviet Union. Yes, the result is society without social classes—everyone is poor. We now can see that the Soviet Union is seeing the light of capitalism as it enters into the infancy stages of a free-market economy.

Ms. Davis also instructed me to throw a heavy object into the screen of my television. I thought of all that I would be missing if I destroyed my Window to the World. I remembered exactly one year ago when we all gathered in our dorm rooms to watch the events unfold in the Persian Gulf—LIVE on TV. How dare this woman insult my intelligence by suggesting that all college students do is waste time watching only MTV, Pro Wrestling, and Soaps.

I understand that the purpose of Cultural Enrichment Programs is to broaden our backgrounds in the areas art, literature, politics, etc. However, I fail to see any true literary, political, artistic, or social value to Ms. Davis' lecture and I sincerely hope that a little more research is done before my tuition money pays for another socialist, radical to give such a truly pointless lecture.

Sincerely,
Warren Blanchard

PC plans variety of events to celebrate Black History Month

Press Release
OFFICE OF PUBLIC RELATIONS

Although Black History Month does not officially begin until February 1, Presbyterian College has already gotten a head start on events with a lecture on Thursday, January 16, featuring Dr. Jermaine Disasa.

"Black History Month shouldn't be looked at simply as the month of February. The actual knowledge and teaching of black history should go on 365 days a year," said Chon Glover, Coordinator of Minority Affairs. "That's what we're hoping to achieve at Presbyterian College and we hope others will follow."

Dr. Disasa, a native African who now works in the Department of Educational Leadership and Policies at the University of South Carolina, opened the six week schedule of Black History Month events at PC with his lecture "Turning Difficulties into Opportunities."

In addition to Dr. Disasa's lecture, other Black History Month events scheduled at Presbyterian College are:

*A look at the origins of African-American music at 7 pm on Feb. 2 in Edmunds Hall. The guest speaker will be Dr. Horace Clarence Boyer, a professor of music theory and Afro-American music at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst. Dr. Boyer also serves as director of the Vocal Jazz and Afro-American Music Ensemble at the University of Massachusetts.

*A program featuring professional orator Dr. Patricia Russell-McCloud, J.D., at 11 am on Feb. 4 in Belk Auditorium. The president of Russell-McCloud and Associates in Atlanta, and a former senior managing attorney for the Federal Communications Commission in Washington, Dr. Russell-McCloud is noted for her dynamic delivery of research and statistical data in a manner that is both entertaining and informative.

*A Gospel Extravaganza featuring the Presbyterian College Fellowship Choir and other choirs from South Carolina colleges and churches at 7 p.m. on Feb. 9 in Edmunds Hall. The evening of singing will feature two segments of gospel music.

*The college's Black History Month Chapel Service, which is set for 11 am on February 11, will feature Rev. Clinton Marsh. Marsh is a former president of Knoxville College and moderator of the United Presbyterian Church in 1973. The Presbyterian College Fellowship Choir will also perform at the service.

*A program at 7 pm on Feb. 23 in Edmunds Hall featuring guest speaker Tom Jones of Columbia, SC, a nationally-renowned expert in the field of alternative commuter transportation and transportation systems management. Biographical sketches of important blacks will be featured. Jones is the president of Tom Jones and Company, a transportation, marketing, and personnel consulting firm in Columbia.

*The one-woman show "Africa Fire," featuring actress Vinnie Burrows, will be presented at 8:15 pm on Feb. 26 in Edmunds Hall. Burrows gathers African-American literature and history to conceive, produce, direct and perform her one-woman shows of folk tales and dramatic readings.

*The movie, "A Dry White Season," will be shown at 7 pm on Feb. 27 in Richardson Science Hall's Whitelaw Auditorium. Set against the background of South Africa in 1976, the film examines the devastation of two families - one black and one white - as they make a commitment to expose the injustices of a minority-ruled country.

All of the events during PC's Black History Month Celebration are free and open to the public. For more information, call 833-8285.

Open Door founders speak at annual Winter Conference Retreat

By Paul Atkinson
NEWS EDITOR

The annual Winter Conference, which began in 1969 as a way for members of different religious organizations to get together so that they may better understand their similarities rather than their differences, was held on January 17-19 at Camp Bethelwoods near Rock Hill, SC. The key speakers at the retreat, Murphy Davis and Ed Loring, founded the Open Door Community in Atlanta in 1981.

Approximately 80 members of the PC community attended the conference, including nine of the PC faculty and staff.

There were several group sessions, each designed to discuss topics which focused on the theme of service. In addition to the study and discussion involved by those attending, there were other retreat activities, such as a bonfire, a hay ride, and an ice cream party.

For the third consecutive year, the retreat featured a national recording artist as a song leader, as guitarist John Paul Walters provided music for the group.

Davis and Loring are both ordained Presbyterian ministers who have committed their lives to befriending the homeless of Atlanta and inmates on Death Row in the Georgia State Prison System. The Open Door is a residential Christian community for the homeless, established by the couple to draw attention to the need for affordable housing and human rights. The Open Door has become a traditional outlet for volunteer service through Presbyterian College's Student Volunteer Services.

The theme of service was based on the celebration of the 30th year of PC's Student Volunteer Services. Dr. Loring, a 1963 graduate of PC and a recipient of the Martin Luther King, Sr. Award, emphasized the need for passion in our lives. Some who attended thought Loring's message offensive. Dr. Ron Burnside explains, "The speakers wanted us to be more aware of the world situation. They brought to the conference experiences we don't have, and their purpose was to stimulate thought. The approach taken by Mr. Loring was a little strong, and it alienated some."

On the whole, however, most interpreted the experience of Winter Conference as beneficial. Dr. Hobbie believes that Winter Conference was generally a positive experience, even though he found offense with some of what Dr. Loring said. Dr. Hobbie does note, however, that "a challenge is sometimes offensive, and you have to get beyond that. I worry that some of the people who attended the conference were thrown off by the speaker's confrontational style. I hope people will not be turned off by style and miss the substance."

Several P.C. students and Dr. Steven Buggie gather in front of Camp Bethelwoods Christian Education Center at Winter Conference last January.

Annual Fund phonathon scheduled

The phones of PC's alumni soon will be ringing with student callers asking for support of the college in the annual phonathon which will be held from February 5 through March 4.

The phonathon secures nearly half of the gifts made each year to the Annual Fund. These gifts help provide needed financial assistance for students, faculty salaries, and current operational needs.

The phonathon is also important because a large number of alumni contributions attract large gifts from major corporations who consider alumni support a condition for making large gifts.

Both organizations and individuals will have the chance to win cash prizes and merchandise. In fact, a total of $900 in cash prizes will be given to organizations.

Groups interested in participating should contact Jim Morton, director of the Annual Fund, at extension 8325.

Students to visit PC for lock-in

The second annual "Carolina All-Nighter" is planned for February 8 - 9 at Presbyterian College and the Clinton Family YMCA. Sponsored by South Carolina Campus Ministries, the retreat is an opportunity for senior high school students from 22 churches in South Carolina to make new friends and become better acquainted with Presbyterian campus ministry programs which await them when the students go off to college.

The students will participate in small group activities led by students from the seven campuses. Other activities include workshops on missions, recreational events, a creative workshop, a dance, and a slide show on South Carolina Campus Ministries.

Campus chaplains and interns will be present from The Citadel, SC State University, The College of Charleston, University of South Carolina, Clemson University, Winthrop, and PC. The theme of this year's retreat will be "Celebrate Life."

The students will participate in small group activities led by students from the seven campuses. Other activities include workshops on missions, recreational events, a creative workshop, a dance, and a slide show on South Carolina Campus Ministries.

Presidential race offers everything from Nazi to candidate in bikini briefs

By Ted Carmichael
POLITICS EDITOR

A year ago most people would have said the presidential race was no contest. Bush was expected to glide into office riding on his victory in the Persian Gulf. But the real world has other ideas, and the country is suffering from a recession that it just can't shake. In the wake of Bush's drop in popularity many contenders have popped up, and the race is no longer a sure bet.

In Bush's own party there are two other contenders for the nomination: columnist Pat Buchanan and former Ku Klux Klan Grand Wizard David Duke. As for the Democrats, Arkansas' Bill Clinton is the current frontrunner, even with the unsavory reports of an affair with a cabaret singer. Also up for the nomination are Nebraska Senator Bob Kerry, former California Governor Jerry Brown, Iowa Senator Tom Harkin, and the former Senator from Massachusetts Paul Tsongas.

Pat's strike from the right. Buchanan is shooting hard for the G.O.P. nomination and attacking Bush for "letting down the American public" by going back on his no tax pledge. He claims to be true to the republican ideal in the spirit of Ronald Reagan. He is a conservative vintage 1950's and "America first" is his slogan for the '92 campaign. While his views often ignore political correctness, many people find the candor refreshing.

Buchanan loves a good debate, a trait that helped him as a columnist, as a speech writer for Nixon and Reagan, and now as a presidential candidate. Yet many of his statements cause people to wonder how free of prejudice he really is. He has said that AIDS is God's punishment for gay people, refers to the homeless as freeloaders, and suggested digging huge trenches to keep the Mexicans out.

Whether Buchanan turns out to be a David Duke in sheep's clothing, he is still causing problems for the Bush campaign. Bush's people are publicly saying that Buchanan may get 40% of the vote in the primary, while in private admit that his ceiling is around 25% (This is to make Bush look good by doing better than expected.) It has also been reported that Reagan was asked to speak on behalf of his former "veep." (He declined.) At any rate, it's not all downhill for the education president, even in his own party.

Best hope for the Democrats. Bill Clinton has jumped into the fray running with his 15-page "Clinton Plan." In it, he tells his ideas on everything from tax structure to defense. He's been planning his presidential run for at least 10 years and may just be smart enough to pull it off.

Clinton's political career began in 1979 when, at age 32, he became the youngest governor in the country. He lost the next race for governor, but came back in 1982 and has won every election since. Perhaps his greatest weakness as governor has been his efforts to please everyone. Clinton's desire for compromise sometimes makes him appear to take both sides of a political issue. For instance, he wants abortion to be "safe, legal, and rare." And on trade issues,

Clinton is usually antiprotectionist, but has said that we should tell the Japanese, "if they won't play by our rules, we'll play by theirs." Such seemingly opposites result in critics calling him "Slick Willie."

However, the governor from Arkansas seems to be the Democrat with the most to offer. He has a well thought out plan for changing the current tax structure that would supposedly distribute the burden more fairly and spur more investment. He has proposed a change in the current student loan system so that beneficiaries would be required to pay the loan back with community service. Clinton also advocates cutbacks in military spending that go beyond what Bush has proposed, and would cut an additional $100 campaign revolves around a national health care plan and every ad displays the line "Fight back America." Kerry's personality and looks stir memories of JFK, but convincing voters he's got substance as well as charm may be his biggest problem.

During the Vietnam War Kerry was a member of the elite corps known as the Navy Seals. It was while leading a seven man assault team that a grenade shattered his foot, yet he was still able to lead a counterattack and get everyone out safely. He now wears a prosthesis leg, and jogs five miles a day on it.

In the early seventies, Kerry got into the restaurant business, and now has investments in seven restaurants, as well as three people and isn't afraid to stand up for what he believes, even if it is politically unwise (Senator Jesse Helms, his ideological opposite, has praised him for this.) Even if he does not win the nomination this year, Bob Kerry is sure to become a major force in national politics.

Governor Moonbeam. Often described as the "alternative candidate" and running the "campaign of a different drummer," former two term governor of California Jerry Brown is probably the closest this campaign has to a populist candidate, at least in the way he spurs audiences with his rapid-fire rallies. The main theme of his speeches have to do with the corruption of "Big Money" in politics, and he has pledged to accept no more than $100 from any one contributor. Brown also cuts on the vague promises of past campaigns, saying, "You know the ads...you say 'I hate crime...and I hate taxes...and, oh, I love the environment. You know those ads!' Brown too often acts in the California fashion and 'lets it all hang out' as one reporter puts it. He has a good message in his revival of the American political system, but it is too often undermined by his image as a space cadet.

Tsongas and dance. Paul Tsongas, former Senator from Massachusetts, is an intelligent man but is terrible on the rhetoric thing. His speeches have been described as "bland and unexciting." And appearing in one ad wearing a speedo bathing suit probably wasn't a good idea. Tsongas talks mainly about how there needs to be "fundamental changes" in national policy, and says that democrats in general need to take a more pro-business stand. He also believes that our economic woes are internal, and the main way to reduce the trade deficit is to build better products. Tsongas has substance, but his everyman approach to politics just doesn't seem to be working.

In the left corner. Tom Harkin of Iowa wants to be known as "The President who rebuilt America." He seems to be the most liberal of all the candidates, and he claims to be "the only real Democrat in the race." He has a plan for national health insurance, but it's not as specific as the one Kerry is pushing. Harkin does have some important allies in the unions, but they complain that he is "having trouble moving beyond his initial stump speech." As for the Japanese, Harkin would demand that they reduce their trade surplus by 20% a year, or suffer the consequences. That might sound good to the boys from Detroit, but what most people don't need is an economic war with Japan.

K.K.Kan't. Coming from way over in right field, David Duke is riding on the fame of being the only Neo-Nazi in national politics. After serving as a Louisiana Legislator, he made an unsuccessful bid for the Senate, and later the governorship of Louisiana. He is the founder of the National Association for the Advancement of White People, but claims to be more tolerant than in days past, and says he supports equal rights for all races. Duke tries to portray himself as the only true champion of conservative ideals, and attacks Bush for "selling out" to the Democrats. As for his chances of getting the Republican nomination...yeah, right.

PC plans variety of events to celebrate Black History Month

Press Release
OFFICE OF PUBLIC RELATIONS

Although Black History Month does not officially begin until February 1, Presbyterian College has already gotten a head start on events with a lecture on Thursday, January 16, featuring Dr. Jerman Disasa.

"Black History Month shouldn't be looked at simply as the month of February. The actual knowledge and teaching of black history should go on 365 days a year," said Chon Glover, Coordinator of Minority Affairs. "That's what we're hoping to achieve at Presbyterian College and we hope others will follow."

Dr. Disasa, a native African who now works in the Department of Educational Leadership and Policies at the University of South Carolina, opened the six week schedule of Black History Month events at PC with his lecture "Turning Difficulties into

Opportunities."

In addition to Dr. Disasa's lecture, other Black History Month events scheduled at Presbyterian College are:

*A look at the origins of African-American music at 7 pm on Feb. 2 in Edmunds Hall. The guest speaker will be Dr. Horace Clarence Boyer, a professor of music theory and Afro-American music at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst. Dr. Boyer also serves as director of the Vocal Jazz and Afro-American Music Ensemble at the University of Massachusetts.

*A program featuring professional orator Dr. Patricia Russell-McCloud, J.D., at 11 am on Feb. 4 in Belk Auditorium. The president of Russell-McCloud and Associates in Atlanta, and a former senior managing attorney for the Federal Communications Commission in Washington, Dr. Russell-McCloud is noted for her dynamic delivery of research and statistical data in a manner that is both entertaining and informative.

*A Gospel Extravaganza featuring the Presbyterian College Fellowship Choir and other choirs from South Carolina colleges and churches at 7 p.m. on Feb. 9 in Edmunds Hall. The evening of singing will feature two segments of gospel music.

*The college's Black History Month Chapel Service, which is set for 11 am on February 11, will feature Rev. Clinton Marsh. Marsh is a former president of Knoxville College and moderator of the United Presbyterian Church in 1973. The Presbyterian College Fellowship Choir will also perform at the service.

*A program at 7 pm on Feb. 23 in Edmunds Hall featuring guest speaker Tom Jones of Columbia, SC, a nationally-renowned expert in the field of alternative commuter transportation and transportation systems management. Biographical sketches of important blacks will be featured. Jones is the president of Tom Jones and Company, a transportation, marketing, and personnel consulting firm in Columbia.

*The one-woman show "Africa Fire," featuring actress Vinnie Burrows, will be presented at 8:15 pm on Feb. 26 in Edmunds Hall. Burrows gathers African-American literature and history to conceive, produce, direct and perform her one-woman shows of folk tales and dramatic readings.

*The movie, "A Dry White Season," will be shown at 7 pm on Feb. 27 in Richardson Science Hall's Whitelaw Auditorium. Set against the background of South Africa in 1976, the film examines the devastation of two families - one black and one white - as they make a commitment to expose the injustices of a minority-ruled country.

All of the events during PC's Black History Month Celebration are free and open to the public. For more information, call 833-8285.

Open Door founders speak at annual Winter Conference Retreat

By Paul Atkinson
NEWS EDITOR

The annual Winter Conference, which began in 1969 as a way for members of different religious organizations to get together so that they may better understand their similarities rather than their differences, was held on January 17-19 at Camp Bethelwoods near Rock Hill, SC. The key speakers at the retreat, Murphy Davis and Ed Loring, founded the Open Door Community in Atlanta in 1981.

Approximately 80 members of the PC community attended the conference, including nine of the PC faculty and staff.

There were several group sessions, each designed to discuss topics which focused on the theme of service. In addition to the study and discussion involved by those attending, there were other retreat activities, such as a bonfire, a hay ride, and an ice cream party.

For the third consecutive year, the retreat featured a national recording artist as a song leader, as guitarist John Paul Walters provided music for the group.

Davis and Loring are both ordained Presbyterian ministers who have committed their lives to befriending the homeless of Atlanta and inmates on Death Row in the Georgia State Prison System. The Open Door is a residential Christian community for the homeless, established by the couple to draw attention to the need for affordable housing and human rights. The Open Door has become a traditional outlet for volunteer service through Presbyterian College's Student Volunteer Services.

The theme of service was based on the celebration of the 30th year of PC's Student Volunteer Services. Dr. Loring, a 1963 graduate of PC and a recipient of the Martin Luther King, Jr. Award, emphasized the need for passion in our lives. Some who attended thought Loring's message offensive. Dr. Ron Burnside explains, "The speakers wanted us to be more aware of the world situation. They brought to the conference experiences we don't have, and their purpose was to stimulate thought. The approach taken by Mr. Loring was a little strong, and it alienated some."

On the whole, however, most interpreted the experience of Winter Conference as beneficial. Dr. Hobbie believes that Winter Conference was generally a positive experience, even though he found offense with some of what Dr. Loring said. Dr. Hobbie does note, however, that "a challenge is sometimes offensive, and you have to get beyond that. I worry that some of the people who attended the conference were thrown off by the speaker's confrontational style. I hope people will not be turned off by style and miss the substance."

Several P.C. students and Dr. Steven Buggie gather in front of Camp Bethelwoods Christian Education Center at Winter Conference last January.

Annual Fund phonathon scheduled

The phones of PC's alumni soon will be ringing with student callers asking for support of the college in the annual phonathon which will be held from February 5 through March 4.

The phonathon secures nearly half of the gifts made each year to the Annual Fund. These gifts help provide needed financial assistance for students, faculty salaries, and current operational needs.

The phonathon is also important because a large number of alumni contributions attract large gifts from major corporations who consider alumni support a condition for making large gifts.

Both organizations and individuals will have the chance to win cash prizes and merchandise. In fact, a total of $900 in cash prizes will be given to organizations.

Groups interested in participating should contact Jim Morton, director of the Annual Fund, at extension 8325.

Students to visit PC for lock-in

The second annual "Carolina All-Nighter" is planned for February 8-9 at Presbyterian College and the Clinton Family YMCA. Sponsored by South Carolina Campus Ministries, the retreat is an opportunity for senior high school students from 22 churches in South Carolina to make new friends and become better acquainted with Presbyterian campus ministry programs which await them when the students go off to college.

The students will participate in small group activities led by students from the seven campuses. Other activities include workshops on missions, recreational events, a creative workshop, a dance, and a slide show on South Carolina Campus Ministries.

Campus chaplains and interns will be present from The Citadel, SC State University, The College of Charleston, University of South Carolina, Clemson University, Winthrop, and PC. The theme of this year's retreat will be "Celebrate Life."

The students will participate in small group activities led by students from the seven campuses. Other activities include workshops on missions, recreational events, a creative workshop, a dance, and a slide show on South Carolina Campus Ministries.

Presidential race offers everything from Nazi to candidate in bikini briefs

By Ted Carmichael
POLITICS EDITOR

A year ago most people would have said the presidential race was no contest. Bush was expected to glide into office riding on his victory in the Persian Gulf. But the real world has other ideas, and the country is suffering from a recession that just can't shake. In the wake of Bush's drop in popularity many contenders have popped up, and the race is no longer a sure bet.

In Bush's own party there are two other contenders for the nomination: columnist Pat Buchanan and former Ku Klux Klan Grand Wizard David Duke. As for the Democrats, Arkansas' Bill Clinton is the current frontrunner, even with the unstarred reports of an affair with a cabaret singer. Also up for the nomination are Nebraska Senator Bob Kerry, former California Governor Jerry Brown, Iowa Senator Tom Harkin, and the former Senator from Massachusetts Paul Tsongas.

Pat's strike from the right. Buchanan is shooting hard for the G.O.P. nomination and attacking Bush for "letting down the American public" by going back on his no tax pledge. He claims to be true to the republican ideal in the spirit of Ronald Reagan. He is a conservative vintage 1950's and "America first" is his slogan for the '92 campaign. While his views often ignore political correctness, many people find the candor refreshing.

Buchanan loves a good debate, a trait that helped him as a columnist, as a speech writer for Nixon and Reagan, and now as a presidential candidate. Yet many of his statements cause people to wonder how free of prejudice he really is. He has said that AIDS is God's punishment for gay people, refers to the homeless as freeloaders, and suggested digging huge trenches to keep the Mexicans out.

Whether Buchanan turns out to be a David Duke in sheep's clothing, he is still causing problems for the Bush campaign. Bush's people are publicly saying that Buchanan may get 40% of the vote in the primary, while in private admit that his ceiling is around 25% (This is to make Bush look good by doing better than expected.) It has also been reported that Reagan was asked to speak on behalf of his former "veep." (He declined.) At any rate, it's not all downhill for the education president, even in his own party.

Best hope for the Democrats. Bill Clinton has jumped into the fray running with his 15-page "Clinton Plan." In it, he tells his ideas on everything from tax structure to defense. He's been planning his presidential run for at least 10 years and may just be smart enough to pull it off.

Clinton's political career began in 1979 when, at age 32, he became the youngest governor in the country. He lost the next race for governor, but came back in 1982 and has won every election since. Perhaps his greatest weakness as governor has been his efforts to please everyone. Clinton's desire for compromise sometimes makes him appear to take both sides of a political issue. For instance, he wants abortion to be "safe, legal, and rare." And on trade issues,

Clinton is usually antiprotectionist, but has said that we should tell the Japanese, "if they won't play by our rules, we'll play by theirs." Such seemingly opposites result in critics calling him "Slick Willie."

However, the governor from Arkansas seems to be the Democrat with the most to offer. He has a well thought out plan for changing the current tax structure that would supposedly distribute the burden more fairly and spur more investment. He has proposed a change in the current student loan system so that beneficiaries would be required to pay the loan back with community service. Clinton also advocates cutbacks in military spending that go beyond what Bush has proposed, and would cut an additional $100 campaign revolves around a national health care plan and every ad displays the line "Fight back America." Kerry's personality and looks stir memories of JFK, but convincing voters he's got substance as well as charm may be his biggest problem.

During the Vietnam War Kerry was a member of the elite corps known as the Navy Seals. It was while leading a seven man assault team that a grenade shattered his foot, yet he was still able to lead a counterattack and get everyone out safely. He now wears a prosthesis leg, and jogs five miles a day on it.

In the early seventies, Kerry got into the restaurant business, and now has investments in seven restaurants, as well as three people and isn't afraid to stand up for what he believes, even if it is politically unwise (Senator Jesse Helms, his ideological opposite, has praised him for this.) Even if he does not win the nomination this year, Bob Kerry is sure to become a major force in national politics.

Governor Moonbeam. Often described as the "alternative candidate" and running the "campaign of a different drummer," former two term governor of California Jerry Brown is probably the closest this campaign has to a populist candidate, at least in the way he spurs audiences with his rapid-fire rallies. The main theme of his speeches have to do with the corruption of "Big Money" in politics, and he has pledged to accept no more than $100 from any one contributor. Brown also cuts on the vague promises of past campaigns, saying, "You know the ads...you say 'I hate crime...and I hate taxes...and, oh, I love the environment. You know those ads!' Brown too often acts in the California fashion and 'lets it all hang out' as one reporter puts it. He has a good message in his revival of the American political system, but it is too often undermined by his image as a space cadet.

Tsong and dance. Paul Tsongas, former Senator from Massachusetts, is an intelligent man but is terrible on the rhetoric thing. His speeches have been described as "bland and unexciting." And appearing in one ad wearing a speedo bathing suit probably wasn't a good idea. Tsongas talks mainly about how there needs to be "fundamental changes" in national policy, and says that democrats in general need to take a more pro-business stand. He also believes that our economic woes are internal, and the main way to reduce the trade deficit is to build better products. Tsongas has substance, but his everyman approach to politics just doesn't seem to be working.

In the left corner. Tom Harkin of Iowa wants to be known as "the President who rebuilt America." He seems to be the most liberal of all the candidates, and he claims to be "the only real Democrat in the race." He has a plan for national health insurance, but it's not as specific as the one Kerry is pushing. Harkin does have some important allies in the unions, but they complain that he is "having trouble moving beyond his initial stump speech." As for the Japanese, Harkin would demand that they reduce their trade surplus by 20% a year, or suffer the consequences. That might sound good to the boys from Detroit, but what most people don't need is an economic war with Japan.

K.K.Kan't. Coming from way over in right field, David Duke is riding on the fame of being the only Neo-Nazi in national politics. After serving as a Louisiana Legislator, he made an unsuccessful bid for the Senate, and later the governorship of Louisiana. He is the founder of the National Association for the Advancement of White People, but claims to be more tolerant than in days past, and says he supports equal rights for all races. Duke tries to portray himself as the only true champion of conservative ideals, and attacks Bush for "selling out" to the Democrats. As for his chances of getting the Republican nomination...yeah, right.

million over the next five years.

Clinton has prepared well for his bid for president. He is his own campaign manager, and has thoroughly studied the mistakes made in past elections. "You should have every negative in your record explored during the primaries," he says, in order to be less vulnerable to the negative campaigning that will come later. Also, he adds, "people want to see how you handle yourself when things blow up." Clinton is looking forward to debating with Bush, pointing to some of the president's strained rhetoric. (When asked about extending unemployment benefits, Bush replied, "If a frog had wings, he wouldn't hit his tail on the ground too hypothetically.")

Clinton knows how to handle his image as well as the press, but does that make a good president? Some say that while Clinton has good ideas, he is a poor manager and doesn't carry things through very well. Others criticize him for tailoring his platform after carefully polling voters, claiming that Clinton will say whatever will get him elected. In all fairness though, Clinton has been consistent on issues, and has shown a familiarity of the inner workings of politics, a trait that is considered essential in the White House.

The Seal of Nebraska. Senator Bob Kerry is running a close second behind Clinton in the polls at a time when "undecided" still gets more votes than any of the Democrats. He is a war-hero, a self-made businessman, and former governor. His health clubs. He ran for and won the governorship of Nebraska in 1982. During his term, Kerry managed to turn a $24 million dollar deficit into a $50 million dollar surplus. He dropped out of politics after only one term to teach at a college in California, but returned two years later and won the Senate race.

Kerry's political career shows many reversals on hot issues. At the start of his campaign for governor he said he was anti-abortion, but before it was over he had switched to pro-choice. Also, Kerry was initially in favor of the amendment against flag burning, but soon became one of the first to denounce it. To justify his turn around on certain issues, Kerry said, "Only dead men and fools don't change their minds. I am not locked into a position forever, in politics, if I find out I was wrong."

Kerry's main campaign issue is his plan for health coverage for all Americans. He says it can be funded with a 5% payroll tax, and that a family earning $40,000 a year would save approximately $500 annually.

Kerry doesn't seem to have much else to offer as far as detailed plans are concerned. He says that he will fight against Japan's unfair trade practices, but hasn't said how, and when asked what he would do to stimulate the economy, Kerry muttered, "I don't know." This perception, however, could be a result of his running first on his war-hero image before getting to specific plans. Also, Kerry shows a disdain for the traditional partisan politics that is refreshing to many

MEMBERS OF THE PC RECYCLING BOARD

Jeff Smith, President of Men's Council
Jodie Will, President of Women's Council
Margaret Barfield, SEE Representative
Heather Moncrief, Student Representative
Benjamin Jones, Student Representative
Mr. Skip Zubrod, V.P. of Finance
Mr. Jack Robertson, Director of the Physical Plant
Dr. Jerry Slice, Faculty Representative
Mrs. Charlotte Slice, Staff Representative

Student PickUp: Men's Council members, Women's Council members, and SEE members.

Any questions concerning the program can be directed to any of the board members. Anyone interested in volunteering his or her time in assisting with the weekly pick up is encouraged to call Jeff Smith at ext. 8562.

Recycling begins on campus

by Heather Moncrief
ENVIRONMENT EDITOR

PC appears to be taking a semi-active role in the newly established recycling program. While many have managed to make recycling a part of their daily lives, others still seem to be overlooking the need to take a part in this program. The most accessible locations for the can containers were chosen in an attempt to make recycling as easy and convenient as possible. Yet when the trash collected at SEE's Landfill on the Lawn was analyzed, it was found to include cans and to be, as a whole, 40-45% recyclable. The lack of knowledge concerning which items can be recycled is one reason for some people's lack of participation. As an attempt to assist the faculty, staff, and students with this problem, a list of acceptable items is found below. Everyone should read it carefully and take an active role in the campus program.

As a majority of the landfills in the United States reach their maximum capacities within the next two to three years, every individual will be affected. Garbage disposal costs will rise drastically, and regulations limiting items allowed in landfills will become more stringent. Recycling will become mandatory in most regions.

Individuals should begin to establish habits that will assist in the overall transition from a "throw-away society" to a preserving society. The Recycling Board hopes to give all members of the PC community the means to establish such habits. These habits will then be carried away from the campus. The Board desires all to take advantage of this new program which has been established.

RECYCLE PC PICK-UP TIMES

Recycle PC pick-ups are scheduled for Monday at 3:00 p.m. for the dormitories and academic and administration buildings, and for Thursday at 3:00 p.m. for the academic and administration buildings. If a problem arises and/or the items in your building are not picked up, notify Mrs. Charlotte Slice at ext. 8484.

RECYCLABLE

ledger paper:

typing paper brochures memos junk mail notebook paper computer paper
shredded paper
some magazines (non-slick paper) envelopes (cut out windows) stapled paper (if possible, remove staples) beverage cans (rinse with a SMALL amount of water)

glass

newsprint (keep separate from other paper)

Students can deposit paper in the trash can outside of the mailroom or with faculty members who have boxes in their offices.)

NON-RECYCLABLE

plastics
Styrofoam cardboard paper clips adhesives items held together by rubber cement slick paper (i.e. some magazine covers) recycle

today for tomorrow

PROTECT YOURSELF FROM AIDS
IT'S THE CHOICE OF A LIFETIME

► Drinking and drugs cloud your mind and cause risky choices.
► Unsafe sex can lead to AIDS.
► Get help for a drug or drinking problem.
► If you have sex, use condoms. Or avoid taking the risk altogether.

FIND OUT ABOUT DRUGS, SEX AND AIDS
CALL 1-800-322-AIDS

EAT IN - CARRY OUT - DELIVERY
$.99 PIZZA SPECIAL!

Any One
Medium Specialty Pizza
ONLY $.99

Choose From:
Meat Lovers
Cheese Lovers
Pepperoni Lovers
Supreme

With Purchase Of Another Medium Specialty Pizza at Regular Price.

Not good with any other coupon offer or P.C. discount.
One coupon per party per visit at the Clinton Pizza Hut only.
Must present coupon with purchase.

Presbyterian College

PRECYCLES

There is an alternative available to the faculty, staff, and students who see the need to avoid using polystyrene cups in GDH as well as throw-away cups when off campus. SEE will be selling reusable plastic mugs later this month. These granite-colored mugs printed in blue and green come with lids and unique benefits. A list of local businesses will be printed on the mug; these businesses will offer a range of discounts from free beverages to discounts on refills to discounts at such places as Subway on meals. As already mentioned, these mugs can also be used in GDH in place of Styrofoam and paper cups. The cost is only $3.00. Watch for news of their arrival!

SEE News

Students for Environmental Education has established a ride-share program. Such a program could decrease the number of PC students driving any distance from the campus alone. Sharing the road and the ride will lower the amount of pollutants being released into the atmosphere and the wasteful use of oil. A map is located on the bulletin board in Springs Campus Center for students to mark the locations of their intended travels. A student simply has to write his or her name and travel plans on a piece of paper and stick it to the map with a pin. This map offers students planning to travel to the same destination a means of contacting one another. For more information, check the map in Springs or call Kathryn Spearman at ext. 8785.

Polystyrene poses health risks

by Kathryn Spearman
GUEST WRITER

Today there is much controversy over the human health aspect of chemicals in the environment. Unfortunately, most people are unaware of the fact that a product a majority of Presbyterian College students, faculty, and staff use daily poses a serious health risk. This product is polystyrene, which is marketed under the trademark Styrofoam by Dow Chemical Company Insulation Board. Polystyrene production and use exposes human beings to two main chemicals that can cause health problems: styrene and benzene.

Styrene is toxic to the blood and to the nervous system. It has been proven to accumulate in fatty tissue. In the Environmental Protection Agency's TRI (Toxic Release Inventory) which ranks 302 chemicals on the basis of total environmental release per year, styrene ranked twenty-seventh. In 1988, styrene releases totaled 43 million pounds—second among known or suspected carcinogens included on the TRI. A significant portion of the releases were attributed to polystyrene manufacture.

The second chemical, benzene, causes immune and reproductive disorders. Not only is it toxic to the blood and to bone cells, but it is also known to cause cancer and leukemia. Benzene ranks thirty-fifth on the TRI and is fourth among releases of known or suspected carcinogens.

Now that the ingredients of a polystyrene cup have been described, how does one filled with coffee or tea affect an individual? Studies have shown that things such as fatty foods, wine, coffee with cream, and hot water will carry some amount of styrene into the body. It has also been proven that some individuals have styrene levels of up to 1/3 of that proven to cause nerve damage.

In comparison to the extensive research done on the effects of dioxin from paper manufacturing, little research has been done on the health effects of polystyrene. However, studies done thus far predict serious environmental and health danger from its production and its use. The fact that the two major toxic chemicals used in polystyrene production account for some of the largest releases of all toxic chemicals into the environment is evident. Unlike paper production, no new processes are being developed to make polystyrene less of a hazard. The only way to avoid the toxic chemicals in polystyrene is to avoid polystyrene altogether.

People Caring How All Brothers And Sisters Inhabit Today and Tomorrow

By Le Jeanna Maddox
FEATURES EDITOR

People Caring How All Brothers And Sisters Inhabit Today And Tomorrow... That's the motto to the members of PC's chapter of Habitat for Humanity decided upon at the beginning of the year to define their role on campus and within the Laurens County community.

Within the scope of that purpose, the fruition.

The turnout at recent meetings has been encouraging to President Laura Smith. She explains, "The chapter has had some discouraging times, but now it is alive and well with activity beginning to blossom. This reality was only a dream at one time. Such vision is attributed to students and faculty such as Mary Ellen Vernon, Greg Henley, Meredith Holder, and David Turpin."

PC sponsors student-led work trips al-involved try it once and come away with a new appreciation for the real and the simple things in life," adds Smith. "One works or volunteers intending to give of time and energy but returns filled with so much more - the satisfaction of helping someone and realizing how inter-related and inter-dependent people are on one another."

Last year PC helped establish an affiliate chapter of Habitat in Laurens County. After a year of fundraising, a site has been identiofficers of Habitat set two goals for the organization this year: to create enthusiasm within a stable campus chapter and to see the ground breaking of the first Laurens County house. At last week's meeting to commemorate the second birthday of PC's chapter, there was more than one reason to celebrate, as both goals are slowly coming to most every Saturday during the semester to sights in Greenwood or Greenville and is planning a Spring Break trip to Pensacola, Florida.

Tom Woodward, Ron Hull, Perry Parker, Brandi Rogerson give time and energy to make PC's chapter of Habitat work.

Some participants are understandably apprehensive about attempting to build a house, but they quickly learn that there is some sort of job for everyone. "Those fied in Clinton for the chapter's first house, with construction set to begin in March. On April 25, PC will sponsor a BANDBLAST to raise money for the completion of the house and, Habitat hopes, the beginning of a second. A number of bands will be donating their time and talents at fraternity chapter, with proceeds going to the Laurens chapter.

PC professor offers the experience of China to students

By Dr. Ron Burnside
GUEST WRITER

Presbyterian College students will have the opportunity to study in China in the fall semester of 1992 in a program offered by the South Atlantic States Association for Asian and African Studies. The program will be based at Beijing Foreign Languages Normal College.

A student will earn sixteen hours of credit, ten of which will be in Chinese language. In addition to the language course, the student will take two courses which will be taught in English. China in Perspective is a survey course taught by Chinese scholars aspects of Chinese cultural. Social Psychology: A Comparison of Chinese and Americans will be taught by a member of the faculty of East Carolina University who also will serve as resident director of the program.

In addition to course work, there will be a variety of activities and excursions in and around Beijing. Students will have the opportunity to attend theatrical performances, films, and opera, as well as visit factories, museums, neighborhood com-the program: Sally Brady, Michael Martin, Ted Carmichael, Chris Adair, and Price Timmerman.

The Great Wall of China

photo courtesy of Dr. Burnside

We Love Our Pledges!

Rebecca Bacock
Miki Barden
Mary Beth Brumelow
Tracy Pierro
Liz Foster
Erin Fox
Jennifer Harvey
Karen Ivey
Pam Kendall
Kristi Lett

Laney Wilkie
ZETA TAU ALPHA

Vanessa McAlister
Karen O'Connor
Kelsey Oelschlager
Shealy Painter
Lori Randall
Melynda Ray
Sally Schafer
Tracy Todd
Martha Ann King
Alison Vaughan

FRIENDS DON'T LET FRIENDS DRIVE DRUNK

F.N. WOLF & CO., INC.

Investment Bankers

110 Wall Street
NY, NY

We are a full-service investment firm, expanding and looking for entry-level account executives / stock brokers.

We will be on campus for informational meetings in the Carolina Union on Tuesday February 28th all day.

Or Contact:

Sean E. Kilmartin, Branch Manager
F.N. Wolf & Co.
5400 Glenwood Ave.
Suite 215
Raleigh, NC 27612

1-800-537-2190 919-781-1151
Member: NASD SIPC

Winter Formal to be 'big success'

By Amanda Bowers
STAFF WRITER

Saturday, February 8, the Springs Campus Center will come to life with the sounds of the Groove Krew and B. S. & M. Both bands will be playing at this year's Winter Formal. This is the third year the Student Union Board (SUB) has sponsored a formal for PC students. According to SUB Secretary Jessica Ray, the dance is becoming a tradition because, "there were a lot of requests for a formal that the entire student body can attend without being a member of an organization."

The Winter Formal is actually a semi-formal with a black tie option. The colors this year are red, black and silver. The bands will be playing on the second floor of Springs, downstairs light hors d'oeuvres, catered by the Inn on the Square, will be served. The bands will be playing from 9:00 pm to 1:00 am. Although the formal is sponsored by SUB, several other organizations contribute to its planning and success. The six fraternities, Baptist Student Union, Minority Student Union and the Men's Council have been selling tickets. The sororities will be decorating the gym on Saturday morning. According to Ray, "SUB is expecting the formal to be a big success." She also commented that, "the bands are great, and play a variety of music everyone will enjoy."

Tickets for the Winter Formal will be on sale in Springs until 5:00 pm Friday, February 7. They are $8.00 each or $14.00 per couple.

SEMESTER CALENDAR

February

8	SUB Winter Formal	9:00 p.m.
15-16	P. C. Choir "Broadway Cabaret"	8:15 p.m.
19	Arnold Symposium: Edward Said (Palestine/Israel/media/journalism)	11:00 a.m.
	"I" period will not meet
21	SUB Movie "New Jack City"	7:00 p.m.
25	Class make-up day from 19th	11:00 a.m.

March

9-13	Spring Break
16	Last day to drop courses "WP"
20	SUB Movie "Deceived"	7:00 p.m.
27	Battle of the Sexes	2:00 p.m.
	SUB Spring Swing Concert	8:00 p.m.
30	Summer/Fall 1992 pre-registration begins

April

10	Special Olympics
16	Summer/Fall 1992 pre-registration ends
17&20	Easter Holiday
21	Honors Day	11:00 a.m.
23-25	Play: "You're a Good Man Charlie Brown"	7:30 p.m.
24	SUB Movie "Cape Fear"	7:00 p.m.
29	Reading Day
	Commencement Practice for Seniors	4:00 p.m.
30	Final Exams begin

May

1,2,4&5	Final Exams
---------	-------------	--

National Players presents "Twelfth Night"

By Angie Richardson
ENTERTAINMENT EDITOR

On January 15, the National Players of Washington, D.C. presented Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night" in Belk Auditorium. The play was originally set in Elizabethan times, but this presentation was transported to the early 1920's. The music and costumes reflected the colorful, sentimental spirit of the times.

Separated during a shipwreck, twins Viola and Sebastian each think the other is dead. Disguised as a page (Cesario), Viola goes to work for Duke Orsino. She is sent to tell Countess Olivia of The Duke's love for her. Olivia falls in love with Cesario, instead of Orsino. The situation is complicated further when Viola falls in love with Orsino. The end of the play reunites Viola and Sebastian, identities are revealed, and the characters find love and happiness.

The title "Twelfth Night" refers to the festival on the twelfth day after Christmas when each household chose a member of the family to be king for a day. The play was written and named for the Twelfth Night celebration in Elizabeth's court in 1601. The title shows no relationship to the plot, though the fun-loving spirit of the festival is captured in the play.

This presentation of the play marked the eighth presentation of the play in 42 years of touring by the National Players. This is equalled only by eight presentations by the company of "Much Ado About Nothing."

New year for women's basketball

by Shara Garwood
STAFF WRITER

The PC Women's Basketball team started out 1992 with five solid wins against Gardner-Webb, Lenoir-Rhyne, Catawba, Elon, and Limestone. Melanie Johnson was honored by being named player of the week for a second time for the first week after Christmas. Also, three of the Lady Blue Hose are averaging in the double figures. Melanie Johnson leads the team with an average of 14 points, followed by Jennifer Hilliard with 13.4, and Amber Forester with 11.4 points.

The ladies lost their next three games against Wingate, Carson-Newman, and Mars Hill on January 15th, 18th, and 22nd. The team regrouped, though, and on Saturday, January 25th, they beat Lenoir-Rhyne 97-82 in overtime. Kaye Watts and Melanie Johnson were the leading scorers in this game with 22 points each. Coach Couture says this was an exciting and big win for the team. Wofford was the next team to fall to the Lady Blue Hose, 82-60, on Monday, January 27th. This was an important win for the women because they were beaten by the Terriers before Christmas. PC lost a close game against Erskine 65-69 on January 28 but bounced back on February 1st to beat Gardner-Webb at home 78-69.

The PC Ladies have a record of 14-5 and will finish the season with a winning record even if they fail to win another regular season game. They are second behind Carson-Newman in the South Atlantic Conference with a record of 6-3 and Coach Beth Couture says they are real excited to be at #2. The top three teams in the conference will move into the District Playoffs at the end of February. The next games are at Lander, Catawba, and Elon, then on the 10 and 12th PC will play their last two home games of the season against Mars Hill and Wingate respectively.

The SAC tournament, to be held in Boiling Springs, North Carolina, will be the 20 through the 22 of February. The District 26 Playoffs will begin on the 25 of February.

P.C. girls play hard at a home basketball game.

file photo

Date	opponent	Score	W/L	Leading Scorer/Rebounders
11/23	at Col. of Charleston	65-64	W	Forrester (17) / Hubbard (13)
11/24	at Coastal Carolina	79-65	W	Johnson (20) / Trainmell (7)
11/26	Converse	90-54	W	Johnson (21) / Hubbard (11)
12/4	@ Newberry	86-50	W	Johnson (17) / Hilliard (11)
12/5	@ Wofford	72-73	L	Forrester (26) / -----
12/10	Newberry	94-48	W	Hilliard (21) / Hilliard (6)
12/14	Lander	77-72	W	Johnson (26) / Hubbard (4)
1/4	at Gardner-Webb*	70-66	W	Forrester (18) / Forrester (6)
1/6	Lenoir-Rhyne*	89-69	W	Hilliard (22) / Hilliard (8)
1/8	Catawba*	65-58	W	Hilliard (17) / Johnson (11)
1/11	Elon*	63-56	W	Johnson (14) / Bailey (8)
1/13	Limestone	88-65	W	Forrester (19) / Hilliard (8)
1/15	at Wingate*	57-61	L	Jenkins (13) / Hilliard (8)
1/18	Carson-Newman*	49-70	L	Watts (12) / Lockwood (8)
1/22	at Mars Hill*	73-79	L	Hilliard (16) / Jenkins (10)
1/25	at Lenoir-Rhyne	97-82(OT)W		Watts and Johnson (22) / Three w(7)
1/27	Wofford	82-60	W	Watts (19) / Johnson (8)
1/28	at Erskine	65-69	L	Watts (17) / Williams (7)

@-Little Four Tournament, Due West
*-South Atlantic Conference game
HOME GAMES IN BOLD

Men's basketball team has their home winning streak broken

By Everett Catts
STAFF WRITER

The 1991-92 Men's Basketball Team has a 10-8 record and they are 5-2 in the SAC-8. PC is ranked third in the conference behind Lenoir-Rhyne and Gardner-Webb.

In the Aloha Invitational Tournament in Hawaii on December 29-30, the Blue Hose lost to Western Kentucky University, 82-64 despite being down by seven points with only 3:44 left in the game. Western Kentucky went on to beat N.C. State in the tournament finals, while PC played Chaminade of Hawaii. Even though the Blue Hose had a three point lead with only five minutes left in the game, they lost to Chaminade, 89-79.

Despite the loss, PC Coach Greg Nibert said he was proud of the team. "I was extremely proud of how we played. We left Hawaii with the confidence of playing two talented teams."

In the week of January 5-12, the Blue Hose went 3-0, with wins over Limestone and SAC-8 rivals Catawba and Elon. For his excellent play, Derrick Lovelace was named SAC-8 Co-Player of the Week. Lovelace averaged 16.3 points per game in the three PC wins.

On January 13, the Blue Hose suffered their first SAC-8 loss against Gardner-Webb, 52-49. Two days later, PC bounced back with a 65-61 win at Wingate. Bret Jones led the team with a 19 points and 9 rebounds in the game.

On January 18, the Blue Hose defeated Carson-Newman, 59-54. The game's highlight came when Mike Camacho hit a long 3-pointer with less than 30 seconds to go and no time left on the shot clock. The 3-pointer gave the Blue Hose a five point lead, clinching the victory.

On January 20, PC lost in overtime to Wofford, 62-53. The loss was the Blue Hose's first at home in almost a year. Dating back to February 1991, the Blue Hose had won eight straight at home. Coach Nibert said that one of the reasons for the winning streak is the student support of the home games.

In other game action, PC won on the road against Mars Hill, 70-54. On January 25, the squad lost to Lenoir-Rhyne, 88-77.

"I feel good about our record" said Nibert. "We need to play better offensively, and we need to take better shots and take better care of the basketball if we are going to win."

The Blue Hose played Newberry last night and play at home tomorrow against Gardner-Webb.

Remaining Men's 1992 Basketball Schedule

February	8	Elon	Away	7:30
	12	Wingate*	Home	7:30
	15	Carson-Newman	Away	7:30
	17	Newberry	Home	7:30
	19	Mars Hill*	Home	7:30
	22	Lenoir-Rhyne*	Home	7:30
	27-29	Food Lion SAC Tournament
March	7-11	District 26 Tournament

* Denotes South Atlantic Conference game

Couture takes PC athletics to 'new frontier'

By Brad Busbee
STAFF WRITER

When Beth Couture came to PC five years ago, women's basketball and volleyball had "on and off" seasons. Now, PC is reaching new frontiers in women's athletics. Coach Beth Couture has given PC winning teams and a great deal more.

One reason for her amazing success is that she truly loves what she does. More than anything, she seems to love seeing her students grow and learn. She loves seeing her players develop and come together as a team.

"It excites me when I see that what I have done makes a difference in my player's fundamentals and their talents," pointed out Couture.

Senior Shannon Carter has played under Coach Couture throughout high school and college. Carter says that Coach Couture uses her straight forward energetic nature to help the team reach their goals.

Senior basketball player Amber Forrester added, "Very rarely does Coach Couture give big pressure speeches to motivate us. She just expects us to tow the line."

Couture has no problem motivating her players because she is so highly self-motivated. "Things do get tough, especially when the two sports I coach begin to overlap each other. It just seems that whenever we start preparation for the next game, I just can't help but meet the challenge. The challenge of it all gets me going again," Couture said.

Beth Couture instructs her team during a time out.

photo courtesy of PaC SaC

Beth Couture has definitely taken on some challenges since she has been at PC. In 1990 Couture led her volleyball team to their first national tournament which was held in Hawaii. This past season the Lady Hose made another appearance at the tour-namment. In her five years as the volleyball coach she has received District Six Coach of the Year honors four times.

Things really started coming together for Beth Couture in 1990. She took over as head coach of the '89-'90 Lady Blue Hose Basketball team. The Lady Hose ended with a 20-10 record. It was the first time the women's basketball team had ever won 20 games in a season. They also competed in their first district tournament ever. She sees these events as the "first two milestones of her career," but insists that the hard work of her players has been instrumental in the success of all of her teams.

She believes she has found what she was meant to do. "I feel lucky to be able to do what I do. Every day is a new adventure," said Couture.

Her coaching style has a great deal to do with how the players relate and learn from each other. "Coach Couture seems to recruit the greatest players. The girls she recruits fit in well with the rest of us and usually become great friends of ours," pointed out Carter.

Couture goes after the recruits that are pursued by the bigger schools like USC and Clemson and keeps after them even when most of the small schools have given up. "I refuse to shy away from the good recruits because they seem big school bound. I think it's important to get good young athletes so they can challenge my older more experienced players for their positions and make them better," stated Couture. Couture also plays her younger players so they will be more capable when their time to lead.

Whatever it is that makes Coach Beth Couture so very successful, it seems to come naturally for her. Her charisma, her positive attitude about life, and her competitive nature make her a success.

ATTENTION GRADUATING SENIORS

The on-campus recruiting schedule is listed below. Please be aware that additions or cancellations occur regularly and it is important that you keep in close touch with the calendar of recruiters located in the Placement Office.

- February 11 - South Carolina National Bank (bank management trainees)
- February 13 - C&S Sovran (Bank management trainees)
- February 20 - Walmart Stores (retail management)
- February 25 - F.N. Wolf & Co. (investment banking/brokerage)
- February 26 - The Prudential Insurance Co. (Sales/service. Interested in residents of lower SC area from Columbia to Charleston.)
- February 27 - Georgia State Merit System (all state agencies)
- February 27 - Milliken (production management)
- March 3 - EDUCATION CAREER DAY (teacher candidates only)
- April 2 - Premier Industrial Corporation (industrial sales)

We are working with several other companies and agencies and hope to add them to the schedule as soon as they are able to schedule a mutually convenient time.

Please call or come by our office, 215 Douglas House, if we can help in any way.

The Community Concert
Association presents

CRESCENT
CITY JAZZ
BAND

February 22, 1992
7:30 pm
Belk Auditorium
Students admitted free with
P.C. I.D.

PROTECT YOURSELF FROM AIDS
IT'S THE CHOICE OF A LIFETIME

> Unsafe sex can lead to AIDS.

> Get help for a drug or drinking problem.

> If you have sex, use a condom. Or avoid taking the risk altogether.

FIND OUT ABOUT DRUGS, SEX
AND AIDS
CALL 1-800-322-AIDS

New year for women's basketball

by Shara Garwood
STAFF WRITER

The PC Women's Basketball team started out 1992 with five solid wins against Gardner-Webb, Lenoir-Rhyne, Catawba, Elon, and Limestone. Melanie Johnson was honored by being named player of the week for a second time for the first week after Christmas. Also, three of the Lady Blue Hose are averaging in the double figures. Melanie Johnson leads the team with an average of 14 points, followed by Jennifer Hilliard with 13.4, and Amber Forester with 11.4 points.

The ladies lost their next three games against Wingate, Carson-Newman, and Mars Hill on January 15th, 18th, and 22nd. The team regrouped, though, and on Saturday, January 25th, they beat Lenoir-Rhyne 97-82 in overtime. Kaye Watts and Melanie Johnson were the leading scorers in this game with 22 points each. Coach Couture says this was an exciting and big win for the team. Wofford was the next team to fall to the Lady Blue Hose, 82-60, on Monday, January 27th. This was an important win for the women because they were beaten by the Terriers before Christmas. PC lost a close game against Erskine 65-69 on January 28 but bounced back on February 1st to beat Gardner-Webb at home 78-69.

The PC Ladies have a record of 14-5 and will finish the season with a winning record even if they fail to win another regular season game. They are second behind Carson-Newman in the South Atlantic Conference with a record of 6-3 and Coach Beth Couture says they are real excited to be at #2. The top three teams in the conference will move into the District Playoffs at the end of February. The next games are at Lander, Catawba, and Elon, then on the 10 and 12th PC will play their last two home games of the season against Mars Hill and Wingate respectively.

The SAC tournament, to be held in Boiling Springs, North Carolina, will be the 20 through the 22 of February. The District 26 Playoffs will begin on the 25 of February.

P.C. girls play hard at a home basketball game.

file photo

Men's basketball team has their home winning streak broken

By Everett Catts
STAFF WRITER

The 1991-92 Men's Basketball Team has a 10-8 record and they are 5-2 in the SAC-8. PC is ranked third in the conference behind Lenoir-Rhyne and Gardner-Webb.

In the Aloha Invitational Tournament in Hawaii on December 29-30, the Blue Hose lost to Western Kentucky University, 82-64 despite being down by seven points with only 3:44 left in the game. Western Kentucky went on to beat N.C. State in the tournament finals, while PC played Chamaine of Hawaii. Even though the Blue Hose had a three point lead with only five minutes left in the game, they lost to Chamaine, 89-79.

Despite the loss, PC Coach Greg Nibert said he was proud of the team. "I was extremely proud of how we played. We left Hawaii with the confidence of playing two talented teams."

In the week of January 5-12, the Blue Hose went 3-0, with wins over Limestone and SAC-8 rivals Catawba and Elon. For his excellent play, Derrick Lovelace was named SAC-8 Co-Player of the Week. Lovelace averaged 16.3 points per game in the three PC wins.

On January 13, the Blue Hose suffered

their first SAC-8 loss against Gardner-Webb, 52-49. Two days later, PC bounced back with a 65-61 win at Wingate. Bret Jones led the team with a 19 points and 9 rebounds in the game.

On January 18, the Blue Hose defeated Carson-Newman, 59-54. The game's highlight came when Mike Camacho hit a long 3-pointer with less than 30 seconds to go and no time left on the shot clock. The 3-pointer gave the Blue Hose a five point lead, clinching the victory.

On January 20, PC lost in overtime to Wofford, 62-53. The loss was the Blue Hose's first at home in almost a year. Dating back to February 1991, the Blue Hose had won eight straight at home. Coach Nibert said that one of the reasons for the winning streak is the student support of the home games.

In other game action, PC won on the road against Mars Hill, 70-54. On January 25, the squad lost to Lenoir-Rhyne, 88-77. "I feel good about our record" said Nibert. "We need to play better offensively, and we need to take better shots and take better care of the basketball if we are going to win."

The Blue Hose played Newberry last night and play at home tomorrow against Gardner-Webb.

Date	opponent	Score	W/L	Leading Scorer/Rebounders
11/23	at Col. of Charleston	65-64	W	Forrester (17)/Hubbard (13)
11/24	at Coastal Carolina	79-65	W	Johnson (20)/Trammell (7)
11/26	Converse	90-54	W	Johnson (21)/Hubbard (11)
12/4	@ Newberry	86-50	W	Johnson (17)/Hilliard (11)
12/5	@ Wofford	72-73	L	Forrester (26)/-----
12/10	Newberry	94-48	W	Hilliard (21)/Hilliard (6)
12/14	Lander	77-72	W	Johnson (26)/Hubbard (4)
1/4	at Gardner-Webb*	70-66	W	Forrester (18)/Forrester (6)
1/6	Lenoir-Rhyne*	89-69	W	Hilliard (22)/Hilliard (8)
1/8	Catawba*	65-58	W	Hilliard (17)/Johnson (11)
1/11	Elon*	63-56	W	Johnson (14)/Bailey (8)
1/13	Limestone	88-65	W	Forrester (19)/Hilliard (8)
1/15	at Wingate*	57-61	L	Jenkins (13)/Hilliard (8)
1/18	Carson-Newman*	49-70	L	Watts (12)/Lockwood (8)
1/22	at Mars Hill*	73-79	L	Hilliard (16)/Jenkins (10)
1/25	at Lenoir-Rhyne	97-82(OT)W		Watts and Johnson (22)/Three w(7)
1/27	Wofford	82-60	W	Watts (19)/Johnson (8)
1/28	at Erskine	65-69	L	Watts (17)/Williams (7)

*-Little Four Tournament, Due West

*-South Atlantic Conference game

HOME GAMES IN BOLD

Remaining Men's 1992 Basketball Schedule

February	8	Elon	Away	7:30
	12	Wingate*	Home	7:30
	15	Carson-Newman	Away	7:30
	17	Newberry	Home	7:30
	19	Mars Hill*	Home	7:30
	22	Lenoir-Rhyne*	Home	7:30
	27-29	Food Lion SAC Tournament
March	7-11	District 26 Tournament

* Denotes South Atlantic Conference game

Couture takes PC athletics to 'new frontier'

By Brad Bushee
STAFF WRITER

When Beth Couture came to PC five years ago, women's basketball and volleyball had "on and off" seasons. Now, PC is reaching new frontiers in women's athletics. Coach Beth Couture has given PC winning teams and a great deal more.

One reason for her amazing success is that she truly loves what she does. More than anything, she seems to love seeing her students grow and learn. She loves seeing her players develop and come together as a team.

"It excites me when I see that what I have done makes a difference in my player's fundamentals and their talents," pointed out Couture.

Senior Shannon Carter has played under Coach Couture throughout high school and college. Carter says that Coach Couture uses her straight forward energetic nature to help the team reach their goals.

Senior basketball player Amber Forester added "Very rarely does Coach Couture give big pressure speeches to motivate us. She just expects us to tow the line."

Couture has no problem motivating her players because she is so highly self-motivated. "Things do get tough, especially when the two sports I coach begin to overlap each other. It just seems that whenever we start preparation for the next game, I just can't help but meet the challenge. The challenge of it all gets me going again," Couture said.

Beth Couture instructs her team during a time out.

photo courtesy of PaC Sac

Beth Couture has definitely taken on some challenges since she has been at PC. In 1990 Couture led her volleyball team to their first national tournament which was held in Hawaii. This past season the Lady Hose made another appearance at the tour-

namment. In her five years as the volleyball coach she has received District Six Coach of the Year honors four times.

Things really started coming together for Beth Couture in 1990. She took over as head coach of the '89-'90 Lady Blue Hose Basketball team. The Lady Hose ended with a 20-10 record. It was the first time the women's basketball team had ever won 20 games in a season. They also competed in their first district tournament ever. She sees these events as the "first two milestones of her career," but insists that the hard work of her players has been instrumental in the success of all of her teams.

She believes she has found what she was meant to do. "I feel lucky to be able to do what I do. Every day is a new adventure," said Couture.

Her coaching style has a great deal to do with how the players relate and learn from each other. "Coach Couture seems to recruit the greatest players. The girls she recruits fit in well with the rest of us and usually become great friends of ours," pointed out Carter.

Couture goes after the recruits that are pursued by the bigger schools like USC and Clemson and keeps after them even when most of the small schools have given up. "I refuse to shy away from the good recruits because they seem big school bound. I think it's important to get good young athletes so they can challenge my older more experienced players for their positions and make them better," stated Couture. Couture also plays her younger players so they will be more capable when their time to lead.

Whatever it is that makes Coach Beth Couture so very successful, it seems to come naturally for her. Her charisma, her positive attitude about life, and her competitive nature make her a success.

ATTENTION GRADUATING SENIORS

The on-campus recruiting schedule is listed below. Please be aware that additions or cancellations occur regularly and it is important that you keep in close touch with the calendar of recruiters located in the Placement Office.

- February 11 - South Carolina National Bank (bank management trainees)
- February 13 - C&S Sovran (Bank management trainees)
- February 20 - Walmart Stores (retail management)
- February 25 - F.N. Wolf & Co. (investment banking/brokerage)
- February 26 - The Prudential Insurance Co. (Sales/service. Interested in residents of lower SC area from Columbia to Charleston.)
- February 27 - Georgia State Merit System (all state agencies)
- February 27 - Milliken (production management)
- March 3 - EDUCATION CAREER DAY (teacher candidates only)
- April 2 - Premier Industrial Corporation (industrial sales)

We are working with several other companies and agencies and hope to add them to the schedule as soon as they are able to schedule a mutually convenient time.

Please call or come by our office, 215 Douglas House, if we can help in any way.

The Community Concert
Association presents

CRESCENT
CITY JAZZ
BAND

February 22, 1992
7:30 pm
Belk Auditorium
Students admitted free with
P.C. I.D.

PROTECT YOURSELF FROM AIDS
IT'S THE CHOICE OF A LIFETIME

► Unsafe sex can lead to AIDS.

► Get help for a drug or drinking problem.

► If you have sex, use a condom. Or avoid taking the risk altogether.

FIND OUT ABOUT DRUGS, SEX
AND AIDS
CALL 1-800-322-AIDS

Haynie helps college 'Fill the Gapp'

Press Release
Office of Public Relations

As a member of the Solid Waste Management sub-committee, it is Bob Haynie's job to be concerned about how we dispose of our solid waste. Haynie spoke on Tuesday, January 20, at Presbyterian College to share his information with students as they attempt to fully grasp the problem of waste management, the possible solutions available, and the role that individual communities can play in those solutions.

Haynie, who serves as Greenwood County manager, was influential in the development of the Solid Waste Management Act, which was adopted by the South Carolina General Assembly last May. The Act is a comprehensive law which encompasses the next six years, with the first actual evaluation of efficiency scheduled for 1996.

The plan's primary goal is to recycle 25 percent of the waste stream and to reduce the volume of the waste stream by 30 percent. A major barrier is the public's lack of knowledge about how to recycle, what to recycle, and what to expect from recycling.

Haynie said Greenwood County has already introduced the initial stages of the act and, in an effort to fight the lack of education, has created a "Fill the GAPP" promotion. GAPP (Glass, Aluminum, Paper, Plastic) containers are placed in each home and families are encouraged to recycle those products. The "GAPP-Man" appears on nationwide cable television systems such as CNN, ESPN, and USA to remind people to recycle and to provide tips and information about the project.

Haynie's appearance was sponsored by the Presbyterian College Recycling Board, which was formed last year. This semester, students and administrators at the college have an opportunity to become part of the solution through a new recycling program. Recycling boxes have been placed in administrative offices to collect paper goods, while recycling bins for aluminum can have been placed in dormitories.

Also planned are recycling demonstrations and information which will help educate the entire Laurens County community.

Out Of Africa will be shown on P.C. channel 33 at 9:30 pm on February 3, 4, 7, 10, 12, 14. This was mostly filmed in Kenya and includes many scenes (including the same train ride) that you will see on the MAY AFRICA FLEXICOURSE. This course gives you 3 hours elective biology credit and is open to all students, any major. See Dr. Hudson or Dr. James for details.

The Episcopal Church Especially Welcomes Students
+ ALL SAINTS' EPISCOPAL CHURCH
One Block North of Greenville Dining Hall

Sunday Schedule

8:30 am Holy Eucharist
9:45 am Christian Education
10:30 am Coffee (in Parish Hall)
11:00 am Holy Eucharist
6:00 pm + CANTERBURY — for College Students

Need someone to talk to?

The Rev. Nancy J. Allison, Rector, (833-1388)
The Rev. Lemnart Pearson, Priest-in-Charge (833-8295)

Alpha Delta Pi

Alpha Delta Pi had a successful RUSH! Congratulations to our new girls: Lisa Bruce, Katherine Bonner, Natasha Casada, Avery Cheves, Ann Dodd, Elizabeth Gilbert, Holly Harper, Jennifer Harris, Kate Hartman, Leigh Hearnburg, Catherine Hedges, Alice Leach, Ashby Lawton, Kathryn Massey, Kelly Reiser, Katherine Rhanc, Jennifer Roach, Katy Ross, Ashley Small, Jennifer Tanner, and Ashley Williams. This weekend we will travel to Lake Rabon for a Sisterhood Retreat! Congrats to Sigma and Zeta on their rush also!

SAM

SAM had its first meeting on Monday, January 27. Len Grions, from Citizens Trust Corporation, spoke about insurance at the meeting. SAM is sponsoring a contest to design an ad for Terry's Restaurant to be put in the Blue Stocking. The prize is $50. Look for signs about the contest around campus or contact George Rea for more details. The dates for our next meetings are February 10, February 24, and March 23.

ZTA

Zeta Tau Alpha would like to welcome our new pledges: Rebecca Babcock, Miki Barden, Mary Beth Brumelow, Liz Foster, Erin Fox, Jennifer Harvey, Karen Ivey, Pam Kendall, Kristi Lett, Martha Ann King, Vanessa McAllister, Karen O'Connor, Kelsey Oelschlager, Shealy Painter, Tracy Pierro, Lori Randall, Melynda Ray, Sally Schafer, Tracy Todd, Alison Vaughan, and Laney Wilkie. We had a wonderful Bid Day. We went ice-skating in Greenville and spent the night at the First Presbyterian Church. We're looking forward to a great semester. ZTA pledges are tough! We love you!

Sigma Nu

The brothers and pledges of Sigma Nu hope that everyone had a great time during rush. We wish everyone luck on their decisions. Thanks to all the Little Sisters and Rush Girls that contributed to another successful Rush season. We're looking forward to an eventful Spring semester, packed with road trips and theme parties. Again, we hope that Rush was a good experience for everyone, and thanks to all the rushees for a great turnout.

Intramural News

The intramural department would like to congratulate the winners of the Schick 3 on 3 basketball tournament held at Presbyterian College. The winning women's team was Nicki Soderberg, Ann Dyer, Toni Lockhart, and Shannon Carter. The winning men's team was Tony Robertson, Tyrone Phillips, Jod Dow, and Rodney Lightsey. Both of these teams performed well at the Southeast Regionals at Furman, with our women's team placing third. Thanks to all who participated.

SRS

New hours for Safe Ride Shuttle: 9:30pm - 2am Friday and Saturday nights.

Habitat for Humanity

Watch for more information about our Bandblast!! on April 25 to raise money for the Laurens Habitat Chapter. A number of local bands will be donating their talents to the cause. Final plans are also being made for a Spring Break trip to Pensacola, Florida. For more information, contact Laura Smith or Maria Medeiros. Watch the bulletin board in Springs for sign-ups for the weekend work trips!

WOULD IT HELP TO TALK?

Contact a Peer Connector

- * students who are trained as peer counselors
- * confidential discussion
- * caring
- * nonjudgmental
- * appropriate referrals
- * convenient - just pick up the phone and call a Peer Connector

Peer Connectors:

David Braghirol	ext. 8108
Ashli Calloway	ext. 8861
Jennifer Elliott	ext. 8789
Shara Garwood	ext. 8948
Tamara Mann	ext. 8942
Lee Maynard	ext. 8978
Maria Meidanis	ext. 8934
Helen Moore	ext. 8786
Carolyn Nichols	833-1351
Julie Nielsen	ext. 8603
Stacey Peters	ext. 8777
Cher Sadler	ext. 8883
Lee Stokes	ext. 8783
Bill Wright	ext. 8673

Presidential candidates debate campaign issues

The following are questions that the three SGA presidential candidates were asked to answer.

In your opinion, what is the status of race relations on the PC campus? As SGA President, what would you do to improve race relations at PC?

Martin: While spending the past year on the Minority Concerns Committee, I have realized that many students are unaware of the racial issues here at PC. Although steps have been taken to improve racial relations and racial awareness, such as Cultural Diversity Week, Black History Month, and the push to observe Martin Luther King Jr.'s birthday, student participation is still low. Additional emphasis should be placed on getting people to participate with an open mind. Students should develop a greater sense of racial awareness. Once aware of the situation faced by minority students, the student body can move to ease these problems. As SGA president, I would encourage every attempt to increase racial awareness and continue the work which I have done with the Minority Concerns Committee.

McKay: I believe that racial tensions this year are better than in the past two years. We have had no major incidents this year to my knowledge. As president, I would encourage all students to interrelate with those of a different race as much as possible, not necessarily in a racial forum, although those meetings can be helpful, but in everyday student life. I feel that those people who are unwilling to accept others' rights to have their own cultures, religions, or political views are rejecting a major portion of the liberal arts education.

Moncrief: While many students still refuse to accept that PC has a racial problem, I feel that others have not only recognized the problem but have also begun to take steps towards solving it. However the planning of many diversity awareness programs as well as the proposal for an African American Studies minor are merely initial steps. Mass student interest is definitely lacking; evidence of this is visible in the low attendance at the planned programs. How can an interest be created? As SGA president, my first goal in solving this problem would be education. Individuals must be forced to stop ignoring such a crucial problem on our campus. Forums can only help the problem if the information gained is utilized. If elected, I plan to not only utilize such ideas but also to reach out to other student organizations for further ideas.

A lot of attention has been devoted recently to violence at the Fraternity Court. What do you feel the problem is and what would you suggest to correct that problem?

Martin: The events are very unfortunate and those involved have been dealt with by the IFC and Dean Nixon. I do not believe that there are major problems inherent in our fraternity system. In the near future, additional emphasis should be placed on developing stronger inter-fraternity relations. In addition, IFC should be encouraged to become a stronger organization. By developing stronger inter-fraternity relations and having a strong IFC, future incidents can be avoided.

McKay: I can see three types of violence that can occur at Fraternity Court. There can be problems among Greeks, between Independents and Greeks, and between members of the community and Greeks. In my opinion, all of the possible problems that may arise between these three groups are results of the lack of consideration for others by one or more of these groups. This lack of consideration can be directed toward a fraternity's right to individuality, its property, and its ideals. Although most of the problems at Fraternity Court occur because of an individual's actions, each fraternity should be more careful in the regulation of its parties and its guest in order to lessen the likelihood of a violent incident.

Moncrief: A key problem in this area is inconsistency in disciplinary action. There appears to be an inconsistency in enforcement of policy by the Dean of Students Office. A set policy needs to be established and maintained for dealing with acts of violence by and against students of Presbyterian College. Students knowledgeable of inevitable punishment may be less likely to commit such acts. However as things stand at present, this fear of punishment appears to be lacking. The steps IFC has made recently towards developing new policy to govern such incidents are to be commended, but they must be enforced by both ends of the spectrum. As president, I would promote such enforcement.

More students are becoming aware of the environment and their role in protecting it. How do you rate PC's recycling program and what do you suggest SGA can do to increase environmental awareness?

Martin: I think PC's recycling program is a big success. At the beginning of the year, SGA presented to the administration the idea of increasing environmental awareness and the idea of a campus wide recycling program. Due to many hours of hard work by individuals such as Jeff Smith, Jodie Will, and Heather Moncrief, the program has really gotten off the ground. It is SGA's job, as well as the student body's, to continue the work that has already been done. From participating in recycle pick-ups to writing articles in the environment section of the Blue Stocking, there are many ways for students to get involved. There are a variety of steps that can be taken in the future in order to increase environmental awareness, such as adding recycling containers at Fraternity Court, continuing to offer environmental CEPs, and continuing to place pressure on the administration to discontinue use of environmentally unsafe products, such as styrofoam.

McKay: The recycling movement on campus has gained a strong foothold, but it will require very much effort from the students to continue. I'm sure that there are ways that the Recycling Board can gain support from the students such as continuing to print informative articles in the Blue Stocking, but I feel that the best way to strengthen this movement on campus is for each student who is interested to take the initiative to spread his interest to others so that this concern will spread to every person on campus.

Moncrief: As one of the key establishers and a member of the Recycling Board as well as the Environment Editor for the Blue Stocking, I feel confident in saying that recycling on our campus has made great strides. Participation in some buildings is higher than in others; but through education and "peer pressure", I hope more members of the PC community will become involved in recycling. When we (the Recycling Board) place containers at the fraternity houses in March, I feel that more students will be able to take an active role in the program. While the Blue Stocking is presently the main source of education, the process must be taken further.

With increased support and interest, I would like to encourage "Environmental Awareness" as a theme for guest lecturers, films, and other CEPs. This is not merely a PC problem; it is a universal one, and it deserves attention.

Should PC distribute condoms to students in an effort to protect them from sexually transmitted diseases?

Martin: The distribution of condoms by PC is a very sensitive subject. The presence of sexually transmitted diseases and the sexual activity among PC students cannot be ignored. I believe that condoms should be placed on the PC campus. I realize many parents and guests might find it alarming to find a condom machine in the dorms. However, a suitable location should be sought, and condoms should be offered at a reduced price or free.

McKay: Although I feel that it is the individual's responsibility to take action to prevent such diseases, it may be a good idea to make condoms available to students in order to encourage action against sexually transmitted diseases. I am personally opposed to condom dispensers in the dorms, but if elected president, it is not my decision to make, it is the students' decision. I think that taking this action may damage the school's image, but it may be in the best interest of the students to provide for their health. If the school were to implement this policy, I would encourage that the condoms be given to resident assistants to then be given to any student who requests one.

Moncrief: With the daily rise in AIDS cases in our region, I believe Presbyterian College can no longer ignore the issue. By no longer ignoring the issue, PC can not abandon the idea of distributing condoms. In my opinion, the means of distribution is the only question. Dispensers could be placed in dormitories or in a few central locations, or condoms could be handed out randomly. I fear the last case would be rather unsuccessful, but it is an idea. Students should not be falsely led to believe that any sex is 100 percent safe sex, they should realize that there is such a thing as safer sex. PC should not merely be concerned with the education of its students; it should also be concerned with the protection of their health so they will be able to utilize the education they receive.

Mike Martin

Frank McKay

Heather Moncrief

GDH acting irresponsibly by serving polystyrene

by Jason West
MANAGING EDITOR

Throughout my life, I have always considered myself to be a conservative, sheltered, Southern Baptist, all-American from a small town in South Carolina. My world has revolved around family, tradition, church, and friends. I guess you could say that my background is right out of the pages of "Our Town" or "It's A Wonderful Life."

Being a conservative, one would not expect me to be an environmentalist. Well, I didn't use to be one. I never recycled anything until I came to PC. I carelessly threw away paper, used polystyrene extensively, and thought that people who recycled aluminum were just "cheapskates" who were trying to make a little extra money by going through the trash or walking along the highways collecting cans. I also thought that people who pushed for environmental reforms were "dangerous liberals," who were far to "radical" to be taken seriously. I can clearly see now that my perception of environmentalism was very limited and distorted.

Since coming to PC and broadening my horizons, I realize that environmentalism should not be considered an ideological movement which pits "conservatives" against "liberals." Instead, it should be a movement that meets no boundaries and is of importance to us all!

I am here to tell you that the Earth is dying! All you have to do is read a magazine or watch the nightly news to see that this is true. Everyday, the hole in the ozone layer increases by two percent. Every second, a portion of rain forest the size of a football field is destroyed. Everyday, 480 polystyrene items are used in Greenville Dining Hall (GDH). I guess you could say that GDH, in addition to the destroyers of the rain forests and the industrial polluters, is an accessory to the murder of the planet Earth.

For PC to be such a progressive school, it doesn't make sense for its dining hall to still be serving styrofoam. We are all aware of the danger that polystyrene does to the Well, some things sound too good to be true. Here it is February, and GDH is still using polystyrene extensively. SEE and others have suspected that their agreement has been broken and that GDH is once again ordering polystyrene.

Last week, SGA President Paul Scouten approached Vernon Powell, GDH director, to find out the truth. Scouten reported that Powell became defensive about the whole issue and refused to deny or confirm whether GDH had reordered polystyrene. In fact, Powell insinuated that Scouten was being hypocritical and said to him, "Well, your office does reorder paper that the reason he orders polystyrene is because students request it. I can't believe that a large number of students would ask for a product that is known to cause damage to the environment. However, next week the entire student body will be allowed to vote on a non-binding referendum, which asks if polystyrene should be served in GDH. The referendum question will appear on the ballot with the candidates for SGA Executive Council. I guess, Mr. Powell, we will find out if the students of PC really do want polystyrene in GDH. You can't deny a vote.

I believe that it is of vital importance that all students vote to not serve polystyrene in GDH. It's the right thing to do because every little bit helps. If we are going to save the Earth from destruction then we are going to have to start in our own "backyard."

I applaud the recent actions of the Recycling Board because they are making a difference and are making recycling easier. I also applaud the members of SEE for serving as an environmental "watch dog" for the entire campus. Without these two groups, PC students would be missing out on a lot. Thanks for all that you do.

There is an old proverb that says, "To whom much is given, much is expected." As Americans, we have been blessed with many things, both materially and spiritually. Therefore, it is our responsibility to insure that those who come after us will enjoy the blessings we currently have. Recycle now; tomorrow may be too late.

Powell has continuously stated

"... in addition to [being] the destroyers of the rainforests and the industrial polluters, [GDH] is an accessory to the murder of the planet Earth."

environment, yet GDH still uses styrofoam cups and bowls.

Last semester, a group of students from SEE (Student for Environmental Education) approached the staff of GDH to request that polystyrene no longer be served. After some discussion, it was agreed that GDH would no longer purchase polystyrene. However, since the dining hall had bought it in bulk before the beginning of the year, it was decided that they would use the polystyrene until it ran out. From that point on it would no longer be ordered.

doesn't it?"

Well, Mr. Powell, paper and polystyrene are two different things. I'm sure that SGA reorders paper, just like the Blue Stocking does. The difference is that you can recycle paper and you can't recycle certain elements of polystyrene. However, that is besides the point.

It is irresponsible of GDH and its staff to order polystyrene and it is even more irresponsible to lie to students! In fact, lying is an honor code violation.

Powell has continuously stated

The Blue Stocking of Presbyterian College
Clinton, South Carolina, 29325
Volume LXXXVI, Number 9
February 28, 1992

Editor-in-chief.....Dermie Lynn Hill
Managing Editor.....Jason West
News Editor.....Paul Atkinson
Politics Editor.....Ted Carmichael
Sports Editor.....Brad Bushee
Entertainment Editor.....Angie Richardson
Features Editor.....Lelanna Maddox
Environment Editor.....Heather Moncrief
Photography/Darkroom.....Angela Mills
Layout Editor.....Carolyn Nichols
Copy Editor.....Mike Weaver
Advertising Editor.....Ann Mayfield
Subscriptions/Exchange.....Ron Mixon
Artist.....Edward Clark

Photography Staff:
John Tritt Margaret Davis Jason Winfield
Tracy Kurasaka Kimberlee Gibson Bill Boan
Laura Meyers Brad Sims Patrick John Pharr
Lee McAbee Melissa Jackson Lisa Weaver
Lee Maynard Adrienne Ivey

Staff Writers:
Elizabeth Spann Amanda Bowers
Karen Wittenbrook Frank McKay
Ed Kirkland Katherine Bonner
Everett Catts Adrienne Ivey Nancy Norion
Cher Fulbright Michelle Canley
Lee Maynard Trenton Arnold
Shara Garwood Leigh Hearnburg

The Blue Stocking is a biweekly student publication of Presbyterian College. The paper serves as a forum of news and opinion of regional and national concern. For advertising, contact The Blue Stocking, Presbyterian College, Box 1061, Clinton, SC 29325. The Blue Stocking welcomes letters to the editor from all members of the PC community. Signatures are required. Letters are printed on a space available basis. The Blue Stocking reserves the right to edit all letters for proper grammar and punctuation. The final deadline for submitting letters is Friday at 12:00pm on the week before publication.

Letters to the Editor - Letters to the Editor - Letters to the Editor - Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

In regard to Warren Blanchard's letter in the February 7 issue of the Blue Stocking, I would like to ask Blanchard to put aside for a moment his super-capitalist, "a crime is a crime is a crime" and "all radical feminists are dykes" views and look closely at America's reality today.

None of us wants to believe that husbands batter their wives, that boyfriends batter their girlfriends, or even, to take another example from the same issue of the Blue Stocking, that fraternity members fight among themselves. We want to believe that we live in more enlightened times. But if we fail to recognize that such incidents occur, and occur frequently not occasionally, then we are either blind, ignorant, insensitive, naive, or perhaps in the worst case, we are brutalizers ourselves. Statistics can be misleading, but even if one-tenth of PC women end up marrying men who will batter them, we are to be pacified by this knowledge and see this reality as somehow falling within the minimum standards of acceptable behavior?

Since Blanchard's letter appeared, several women students at PC have assured me that they know fellow students who are battered by their boyfriends. And that these incidents are not isolated but indeed are widespread. Even if there were only one case of such brutality, it would be intolerable. Amounts and numbers don't matter; the physical safety and emotional health of all individuals do matter.

So instead of venting your frustrations and wrath, Warren Blanchard, on Murphy Davis and other "radical feminists" like, presumably, my wife and partner who has shoulder-length hair, wears some make-up, and does not conform to any stereotype that I know of (You must have a real need to perpetuate stereotypes since your letter is full of them) and like me (and I have shoulder-length hair, a red beard, and other strikingly male characteristics), who don't you open your eyes and mind, which is presumable why you are getting an education, and really see the campus, society, and world in which you live?

Sincerely,
Jana Czerwonky

To the Editor:

I have been a student at Presbyterian College for over three and a half years, and some things that happen at this school never cease to amaze me. Last week, I glanced at the Blue Stocking and my eye wandered over a particular letter addressed to you. To my amazement (actually, words cannot describe my state of mind) this letter was a blatant attack upon Ms. Murphy Davis, a fine woman who was invited to PC to address the student body at a CEP event on January 20, 1992. Regrettably, I was unable to attend the lecture; however, I do not wish to divagate upon the subject matter of the speech - knowing first hand of Ms. Davis' accomplishments, I'm sure it was a fine one. I found the letter astonishing on the grounds that I understand and know what Ms. Davis has contributed to the betterment of my home, Atlanta, Georgia. She has attempted to heal the social wounds found in many Atlanta neighborhoods where the majority of PC students would fear to tread. Simply the letter was an abomination to our school, our intelligence, and to our academic integrity.

After re-reading the letter in question, I surmised that the author obviously has a firm grip on the concepts of temperance and tact. He was especially adept at addressing the ideals and philosophies of one of my personal heroes, Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., of whom Ms. Davis was speaking in memoriam. I also inferred that he maintained a sensitivity toward the obligations of all "good" old red-blooded Americans to maintain a sense of political correctness concerning an individual's choice of lifestyle, especially by discussing such an agenda in a college-sponsored newspaper, which is, I might add, open to interpretation and criticism from all venues of intelligentsia and academia.

Additionally, the author was very keen in parlaying his knowledge of the missions of the National Organization for Women, as well as the Gay Rights Lobby. He was extremely helpful in explaining Soviet and Eastern Block economics to the readers with his vast knowledge of the subject. Perhaps we should replace Boris Yeltsin with Sam Walton? After all, Walton seems to be perfect for running the Commonwealth of Independent States. Subsequently, it is our moral imperative to model their fledgling democracy after our own.

After showing the questionable letter to a number of faculty members of a fellow Presbyterian institution, Agnes Scott College, I found their reactions to be as, if not more, astounded than mine. Off the record, they found it difficult to believe that individuals so reactionary in nature would even attend Presbyterian College.

I am not incensed at the fact that the questionable letter was published by the Blue Stocking. I am amazed at the content of the letter itself. It would seem logical that if such letters continue to pervade, then absolutely no speaker worth his weight in gold in the academic community would want to lecture at Presbyterian College, no matter what the occasion. Perhaps, at this juncture, it would be prudent to invite Representative David Duke to lecture the student body on "Truth, Justice, and the American Way" and to forget the rest of the scheduled CEP events?

Who knows what would happen if the author of the letter actually lost his "Window to the World" (i.e. his television) - he might, in fact, read the newspaper. After all, you can't believe everything you see on the Morton Downey Jr. Show.

Sincerely,
M. P. Darling, Jr.

To All:

I would like to first draw the attention of the reader to the opening. Notice that it is not addressed "To Whom It May Concern," but rather "To All." The justification for this is the majority of students on the Presbyterian College campus are not concerned. So, I must reach out with all my literary abilities to catch those who do not seem to care.

The focus of this letter is not about racism or hatred, which seems to be the focal point of many letters, but rather it is about the problem of styrofoam. How many readers can say that they are truly conscious of the problem entailed with styrofoam? Too many people don't realize that styrofoam doesn't go away. It is here to stay. You might think to yourself that recycling it is the obvious answer. No, sorry, it is not that easy. The gases given off when styrofoam is recycled are toxic, and worse for the environment than an industrial smogstack. There is no answer to the problems that styrofoam creates.

If styrofoam is so hazardous to the environment, you would think that people would be conscious of the fact. Well not only are people denying the environment, but our so called liberal alma mater, Presbyterian College, is also.

At first, it was said that the school had purchased styrofoam in bulk, and would first have to use all the purchased toxins before they could buy the more preferable choice, paper cups. Well friends, even I was fooled by this flagrant violation of the Honor Code. In fact the school has continued to purchase these cups of poison despite the uproar of a few concerned students. It is time to put a stop to this travesty.

All I ask of the student body is to recognize a problem, for there is no denying the fact that there is a problem here. It needs to be reconciled. Once you have recognized a problem you are already on your way to a solution. If you feel justified using styrofoam even after reading this letter then it is your problem. If you can not justify using styrofoam, then don't. Take three small glasses instead of two large non degradable cups. Instead of using a bowl that will be an eye sore for your great-grandchildren, use a washable bowl. When GDH serves everything in styrofoam, refuse to accept it. If people will not accept their meals on styrofoam, GDH will be forced to wake up and bring about change.

I ask anyone who reads this letter to take a picturesque drive to the falls, a famous hangout for many Presbyterian students. You will find in the mist of the beautiful, raging water, one of the biggest environmental disasters of the greater Clinton area. Please take notice of what is going on in the environment around you, and do what you can to help improve your world. Even if it's just refusing a styrofoam cup at GDH, or denying the styrofoam casing of the Big Deluxe at Hardees, or purchasing Camel lights (whose filters are biodegradable) rather than your regular brand. Take notice of your world. Arise from your latent state of passivity and take action. Remember abstaining is sometimes the best way to keep yourself out of trouble. A clean earth will always be possible, but not probable.

Sincerely,
Jeffrey H. Garrison

Dear Editor:

This environmental "kick" that has been popular the last couple of years has been very beneficial to our struggling planet. With the 20th celebration of Earth Day in 1990, people all over the world pledged to save the planet from destruction, mainly our own. I see that this environmental euphoria has finally struck Presbyterian College.

I applaud PC's recent actions. The introduction of recycling bins throughout the campus and the creation of a Recycling Board are a start. However, the continued use of styrofoam in Greenville Dining Hall makes no sense whatsoever. For a school to take this kind of environmental initiative may look good on paper (as it did in the last issue of the Blue Stocking). Yet, a sense of hypocrisy arises when the school allows styrofoam to be used. Enough said!

Peace,
Peter Bayley

see LETTERS, page 6

Jock Rock demolished to make way for an information gazebo

by Paul Atkinson
NEWS EDITOR

Perhaps you haven't noticed, but a campus landmark has been uprooted in the name of progress. PC's famed Jock Rock, the large concrete platform once located beside Douglas House, was demolished last week to clear the way for a new information house. The suggestion and funding for the new structure comes from a private benefactor.

The new information center will be a wood and red brick gazebo-style structure that will be slightly larger than the old Jock Rock. The gazebo will contain monitors with VCRs, pamphlets, and maps to help prospective students and other visitors become better acquainted with Presbyterian College. It will remain open to the public during the day year-round and will be used as a registration center and meeting point for some special events held by Presbyterian College such as the annual Visitor's Day.

The new information gazebo will also replace the information

A new information gazebo will soon be erected where Jock Rock once stood.

photo by Angela Mills

board located beside Douglas House, but its concrete platform will remain in place to serve as a general meeting point for students and events just as Jock Rock has in the past.

Some students were surprised with the sudden removal of the old Jock Rock and were angry that the students were not informed of the administration's decision to do so. The administration had, however, consulted SGA officials in the fall of last year of its plans to build the new information center in the place of the Jock Rock.

Skip Zubrod, vice-president for finance, expressed regretful concerns that the student body had not been directly notified of the school's decision to replace the concrete platform, but he believed that the new structure would be more beneficial and aesthetically pleasing for the school.

The new information center is expected to be completed this spring.

Tour six Civil War Battlefields and get CEP credit. For more information, call Dr. Needham

Candidates seek SGA positions Elections scheduled for next week

by Jason West
MANAGING EDITOR

Thirteen candidates have announced their intentions to seek six positions on the Executive Council of the Student Government Association (SGA). Elections for the Executive Council are scheduled for Wednesday, March 4. A possible run-off election has been scheduled for March 5.

Michael Martin, Frank McKay and Heather Moncrief have all declared their candidacies for SGA President. Martin is a 5 year senior from Simpsonville, South Carolina and currently serves on SGA as a senior representative. McKay is a junior from Dunwoody, Georgia and has never served on SGA before. Moncrief is a junior from Clinton, South Carolina and currently serves SGA as a junior class representative.

Wendy Hubbard, Ron Mixon, Hagan Thompson and Jay Sims have all declared their candidacies for SGA Vice President. Hubbard is a junior from Atlanta, Georgia and is the current SGA secretary. Mixon is a junior from Rome, Georgia and has never held an elected SGA office. Thompson is a sophomore from Milledgeville, Georgia and has served this year as a sophomore class representative. Sims is a junior from Columbia, South Carolina and currently holds the office of junior class representative.

The office of SGA secretary is being sought by Whui Min Chang and Cathy Copley. Chang is a freshman from Orangeburg, South Carolina, and Copley is a sophomore from Clinton. Neither Chang nor Copley have served on SGA before.

Karen Sharper is the only announced candidate for the office of SGA treasurer. Sharper is a freshman from Cheraw, South Carolina and has also never served on SGA before.

Meg Oxford is the only announced candidate for the office of SUB president. Oxford is a junior from Griffen, Georgia and has never served on SGA before.

BJ Cottrell and Lauren Owings have announced their candidacies for judicial council chairperson. Cottrell is a junior from Franklin, Tennessee, and Owings is a sophomore from Eastley, South Carolina. Both candidates presently serve on the Judicial Council.

Food Committee gives report

by Paul Atkinson
NEWS EDITOR

* There are currently two new salad dressings available in GDH.

* The styrofoam supply is quite large but is being depleted. Why does GDH

SGA's Food Committee has com-

Karen Wittenbrook fixes a salad at GDH.

photo by Angela Mills

piled the following list of "Food Facts" for any one concerned about operations at Greenville Dining Hall (GDH):

* Did you know that you only pay for 70 percent of your meals at GDH? Many PC students think they pay for every meal at GDH, however the system is designed to take into account the fact that YOU DO NOT eat every meal at GDH.

* A meal plan which would allow a student to purchase 15 meals a week would only save you about $25 versus the current system. Why is this? It is a direct result of the fact that PC students pay for only 70 percent of their meals. Also, if PC did establish a meal plan of 10 to 15 meals a week, the cost of a computerized system would dramatically outweigh the $25 extra paid by each student!

have so much styrofoam? It was cheaper for the school to buy the cups and bowls in mass quantities, therefore the school has enough styrofoam to last an entire school year.

* Now there are two soups being served daily at GDH. The left side of GDH has a different soup than the right side.

According to Wendy Hubbard, SGA Secretary, the Food Committee needs your help for new ideas and suggestions. Hubbard suggests that if you have a problem with something in GDH, don't sit back and complain to your friends. Take the time to share your concerns with either Vernon Powell or Ray Bell. The Food Committee ask that suggestions be sent to Box 1060 or you can contact Hubbard or SGA Representative Dean Sheorn.

South Carolina General Assembly to look at DUI bill

by Leigh Hearnburg
STAFF WRITER

The South Carolina General Assembly is currently considering a controversial bill that would drastically change South Carolina's DUI laws.

The proposed bill would change the current DUI legal blood alcohol level of .10 to .08. It would also set the limit for minors at .04 and require an immediate loss of their license for 90 days if found in violation.

The bill would also require that every one arrested be videotaped so that the tape could be used as evidence in court. The battle lines have been drawn among those for and against this proposed bill. Testimony before House committees has already begun.

Opponents to the bill say that it would only serve to scare off tourists and that the breathalyzer is not as reliable and accurate as we are led to believe.

Thomas Sponseller, executive director of the South Carolina Hospitality Association, pointed out to members of the House that the year after Maine lowered its limit to

"... representatives are being flooded with evidence and proposals from both sides."

.08, alcoholic fatalities increased by 7 percent. He said that if this bill should pass it would simply be a "waste of law enforcement effort."

Those in favor of the bill, including a very strong contingent from Mothers Against Drunk Driving (MADD), have argued that the opponents of the bill seem to want to protect drunk drivers.

Dennis Natty with the State Commission on Alcohol and Drug Abuse reported on studies that showed that people with a .08 blood alcohol level were 3.5 times as likely to be involved in a crash and nearly twice as likely to die in a crash. MADD is fighting "or even stricter laws including a level of .04 for minors."

As the House considers this bill, representatives are being flooded with evidence and proposals from both sides. Several proposals involved with this bill have already been thrown out by a House sub-committee, but that hasn't stopped MADD, which is still fighting for much stricter laws than South Carolina currently has. The logistics of the bill are still changing as is its fate, and the debate continues.

Tsongas wins in New Hampshire; candidates prepare for Super Tuesday

by Ted Carmichael
POLITICS EDITOR

As usual, the voters of New Hampshire had a few surprises for the presidential candidates. At the nation's first primary, held on February 18, Paul Tsongas came out ahead with 35 percent of the popular vote. And in the GOP, Buchanan surpassed expectations by finishing just 16 percentage points behind President Bush.

Tsongas had been slowly building up support over the past few weeks. According to one staff member, the "slow but steady" approach is normal for one of his campaigns. He has methodically worked on his name recognition, and struggled not in vain to improve his speaking ability. In an interview he jokingly remarked, "At the beginning, I was sort of irritated that no one bothered to look for dirt." Because of his win in New Hampshire, he is hopeful of receiving some much needed publicity, but he will also be the focus of the press's close scrutiny.

The ex-Senators' biggest problem, however, is going to be getting votes in the South, where he is relatively unknown. He doesn't have a very strong organization and, like most of the democratic candidates has just about run out of money. Bill Clinton, on the other hand, is doing well in both departments, and is expected to pick up a lot of votes on March 10, which is this year's "Super Tuesday." Clinton was optimistic last week, and with good reason. Even though he received only 26 percent of the popular vote, he managed to pick up half of the Democratic delegates in New Hampshire, tying Tsongas with nine. Out of all the delegates committed as of Sunday, Tsongas has only 11, while Clinton has 90. Tom Harkin is in second with 65, thanks primarily to his home state of Iowa. There are a total of 4,287 delegates for the Democratic party.

and 2,144 of those are needed to get the nomination.

Buchanan did much better than most people expected. He won 37 percent of the popular vote, and of the 1,105 republican delegates needed for the nomination, he has 9 to Bush's 14. When addressing his supporters Tuesday night, Buchanan said, money will keep up, especially in light of how well he has done in the first primary.

Bush's people are not that worried, however. New Hampshire is known for being rather unique in the way it votes, and the recession has done more damage there than in most other states. Also, Bush has much stronger supply lines when it comes to funds, and his national campaign is more organized. And finally, if the country eases out of the recession this summer, as most economists predict, a lot of the pressure will be off Bush.

The next few weeks will be very important in the Bush-Buchanan battle. They are both concentrating on the South, where most of the primaries between now and "Super Tuesday" are. Last week the two spoke to crowds in Charleston that were less than a block away, and they also plan to hit Georgia before the March 3 primary there. Buchanan may be in trouble here, where the recession is less severe, and where Bush is known to have a lot of support. According to one political analyst, Bush plans to appeal to the stereotypical southern patriotism with many references to "Operation Desert Storm." Most importantly though, Bush plans on painting Buchanan as a "dangerous fringe" candidate, but without direct attacks that would give Buchanan more credibility.

The South will also be an important battleground for the Democrats. This will be the test for Kerry, Harkin, and Brown as they scratch for funds they'll need to take third place. Clinton is expected to get a lot of support from this region, and according to Dr.

Kenneth Orr, he may even drop by PC on his swing through South Carolina. As for Tsongas, if he can last through the next few weeks, the campaigns will head back up North where he generally has more support. Then we will see if he is able to "send Washington a message."

George Bush

file photo

Around the World

Indianapolis, Ind. - "Iron" Mike Tyson was found guilty of rape and two counts of criminal sexual-debauchery. His accuser was Desiree Washington, a native of Coventry, Rhode Island, and a contestant in the 1991 Miss Black America Pageant. Sentencing is scheduled for March 27, but Tyson plans to appeal the decision. He has hired Harvard law professor Alan Dershowitz, who once represented televangelist Jim Bakker.

AT&T has recently unveiled its new VideoPhone 2500, a device that comes with a tiny camera lens and color screen. Similar devices have existed for decades, but this is the first that doesn't need expensive special equipment to work. The VideoPhone uses new technology to work on standard telephone lines and transmits six images per second (compared to 30/sec. for TV). It should be available in May of this year, and is expected to cost $1,500.

Milwaukee, Wis. - Jeffrey Dahmer was found sane by a 10-to-2 jury verdict. He has already pleaded guilty to the murder and dismemberment of 15 men and admitted to eating body parts and having sex with some of the corpses. He faces a mandatory life-sentence for each killing.

San Francisco, Cal. - Taxi driver Charles Hollom chased a mugger with his cab and pinned him against the wall of a building. The mugger, whose leg was broken during the citizen's arrest, was sentenced to 10 years for robbery, but won a suit against Hollom saying that the cabbie used excessive force. When word of the verdict got around, a local radio station helped raise over $25,000 to cover the expenses. Holland says he would do "exactly the same thing again."

London, England - Last month John Major and Boris Yeltsin were surprised at the tardiness of their respective secretaries of defense, Tom King and Marshal Yevgeny. The excuse: They had burnt the midnight oil while partaking in a case of rare 1939 Crimean champagne. Major was not pleased at the bad form, but Yeltsin, perhaps with envy, exclaimed, "Good God! I thought all of that vintage had been drunk by Khrushchev!"

Russia - Yeltsin's jump to a market economy is starting to show some signs of success as food finds its way to the marketplace. When the price supports for all goods were removed a few months ago, the country was shocked when prices increased by as much as 20 percent. Now they seem to be leveling off, and in some cases prices are even going down. One of the major factors in this trend is the strengthening of the ruble. The Central Bank of Russia has reduced the money supply by 30 percent, and foreign investors are snatching up rubles in order to invest in state-owned properties. However, the production and employment losses may prove to be too much to overcome, and the Russian people still have a long way to go.

Jock Rock demolished to make way for an information gazebo

by Paul Atkinson
NEWS EDITOR

Perhaps you haven't noticed, but a campus landmark has been uprooted in the name of progress. PC's famed Jock Rock, the large concrete platform once located beside Douglas House, was demolished last week to clear the way for a new information house. The suggestion and funding for the new structure comes from a private benefactor.

The new information center will be a wood and red brick gazebo-style structure that will be slightly larger than the old Jock Rock. The gazebo will contain monitors with VCRs, pamphlets, and maps to help prospective students and other visitors become better acquainted with Presbyterian College. It will remain open to the public during the day year-round and will be used as a registration center and meeting point for some special events held by Presbyterian College such as the annual Visitor's Day.

The new information gazebo will also replace the information

A new information gazebo will soon be erected where Jock Rock once stood.

photo by Angela Mills

board located beside Douglas House, but its concrete platform will remain in place to serve as a general meeting point for students and events just as Jock Rock has in the past.

Some students were surprised with the sudden removal of the old Jock Rock and were angry that the students were not informed of the administration's decision to do so. The administration had, however, consulted SGA officials in the fall of last year of its plans to build the new information center in the place of the Jock Rock.

Skip Zubrod, vice-president for finance, expressed regretful concerns that the student body had not been directly notified of the school's decision to replace the concrete platform, but he believed that the new structure would be more beneficial and aesthetically pleasing for the school. The new information center is expected to be completed this spring.

Tour six Civil War Battlefields and get CEP credit. For more information, call Dr. Needham

Candidates seek SGA positions Elections scheduled for next week

by Jason West
MANAGING EDITOR

Thirteen candidates have announced their intentions to seek six positions on the Executive Council of the Student Government Association (SGA). Elections for the Executive Council are scheduled for Wednesday, March 4. A possible run-off election has been scheduled for March 5.

Michael Martin, Frank McKay and Heather Moncrief have all declared their candidacies for SGA President. Martin is a 5 year senior from Simpsonville, South Carolina and currently serves on SGA as a senior representative. McKay is a junior from Dunwoody, Georgia and has never served on SGA before. Moncrief is a junior from Clinton, South Carolina and currently serves SGA as a junior class representative.

Wendy Hubbard, Ron Mixon, Hagan Thompson and Jay Sims have all declared their candidacies for SGA Vice President. Hubbard is a junior from Atlanta, Georgia and is the current SGA secretary. Mixon is a junior from Rome, Georgia and has never held an elected SGA office. Thompson is a sophomore from Milledgeville, Georgia

and has served this year as a sophomore class representative. Sims is a junior from Columbia, South Carolina and currently holds the office of junior class representative.

The office of SGA secretary is being sought by Whui Min Chang and Cathy Copley. Chang is a freshman from Orangeburg, South Carolina, and Copley is a sophomore from Clinton. Neither Chang nor Copley have served on SGA before.

Karen Sharper is the only announced candidate for the office of SGA treasurer. Sharper is a freshman from Cheraw, South Carolina and has also never served on SGA before.

Meg Oxford is the only announced candidate for the office of SUB president. Oxford is a junior from Griffin, Georgia and has never served on SGA before.

B.J. Cottrell and Lauren Owings have announced their candidacies for judicial council chairperson. Cottrell is a junior from Franklin, Tennessee, and Owings is a sophomore from Easley, South Carolina. Both candidates presently serve on the Judicial Council.

Food Committee gives report

by Paul Atkinson
NEWS EDITOR

SGA's Food Committee has com-

- * There are currently two new salad dressings available in GDH.
- * The styrofoam supply is quite large but is being depleted. Why does GDH

Karen Wittenbrook fixes a salad at GDH. photo by Angela Mills

have so much styrofoam? It was cheaper for the school to buy the cups and bowls in mass quantities, therefore the school has enough styrofoam to last an entire school year.

* Did you know that you only pay for 70 percent of your meals at GDH? Many PC students think they pay for every meal at GDH, however the system is designed to take into account the fact that YOU DO NOT eat every meal at GDH.

* A meal plan which would allow a student to purchase 15 meals a week would only save you about $25 versus the current system. Why is this? It is a direct result of the fact that PC students pay for only 70 percent of their meals. Also, if PC did establish a meal plan of 10 to 15 meals a week, the cost of a computerized system would dramatically outweigh the $25 extra paid by each student!

According to Wendy Hubbard, SGA Secretary, the Food Committee needs your help for new ideas and suggestions. Hubbard suggests that if you have a problem with something in GDH, don't sit back and complain to your friends. Take the time to share your concerns with either Vernon Powell or Ray Bell. The Food Committee ask that suggestions be sent to Box 1060 or you can contact Hubbard or SGA Representative Dean Sheorn.

South Carolina General Assembly to look at DUI bill

by Leigh Hearnburg
STAFF WRITER

The South Carolina General Assembly is currently considering a controversial bill that would drastically change South Carolina's DUI laws.

The proposed bill would change the current DUI legal blood alcohol level of .10 to .08. It would also set the limit for minors at .04 and require an immediate loss of their license for 90 days if found in violation.

The bill would also require that every-one arrested be videotaped so that the tape could be used as evidence in court. The battle lines have been drawn among those for and against this proposed bill. Testimony before House committees has already begun.

Opponents to the bill say that it would only serve to scare off tourists and that the breathalyzer is not as reliable and accurate as we are led to believe.

Thomas Sponseller, executive director of the South Carolina Hospitality Association, pointed out to members of the House that the year after Maine lowered its limit to

the opponents of the bill seem to want to protect drunk drivers.

Dennis Nady with the State Commission on Alcohol and Drug Abuse reported on studies that showed that people with a .08 blood alcohol level were 3.5 times as likely to be involved in a crash and nearly twice as likely to die in a crash. MADD is fighting 'or even stricter laws including a level of .04 for minors.

As the House considers this bill, representatives are being flooded with evidence and proposals from both sides. Several proposals involved with this bill have already been thrown out by a House sub-committee, but that hasn't stopped MADD, which is still fighting for much stricter laws than South Carolina currently has. The logistics of the bill are still changing as is its fate, and the debate continues.

"... representatives are being flooded with evidence and proposals from both sides."

.08, alcoholic fatalities increased by 7 percent. He said that if this bill should pass it would simply be a "waste of law enforcement effort."

Those in favor of the bill, including a very strong contingent from Mothers Against Drunk Driving (MADD), have argued that

Tsongas wins in New Hampshire; candidates prepare for Super Tuesday

by Ted Carmichael
POLITICS EDITOR

As usual, the voters of New Hampshire had a few surprises for the presidential candidates. At the nation's first primary, held on February 18, Paul Tsongas came out ahead with 35 percent of the popular vote. And in the GOP, Buchanan surpassed expectations by finishing just 16 percentage points behind President Bush.

Tsongas had been slowly building up support over the past few weeks. According to one staff member, the "slow but steady" approach is normal for one of his campaigns. He has methodically worked on his name recognition, and struggled not in vain to improve his speaking ability. In an interview he jokingly remarked, "At the beginning, I was sort of irritated that no one bothered to look for dirt." Because of his win in New Hampshire, he is hopeful of receiving some much needed publicity, but he will also be the focus of the press's close scrutiny.

The ex-Senators' biggest problem, however, is going to be getting votes in the South, where he is relatively unknown. He doesn't have a very strong organization and, like most of the democratic candidates has just about run out of money. Bill Clinton, on the other hand, is doing well in both departments, and is expected to pick up a lot of votes on March 10, which is this year's "Super Tuesday." Clinton was optimistic last week, and with good reason. Even though he received only 26 percent of the popular vote, he managed to pick up half of the Democratic delegates in New Hampshire, tying Tsongas with nine. Out of all the delegates committed as of Sunday, Tsongas has only 11, while Clinton has 90. Tom Harkin is in second with 65, thanks primarily to his home state of Iowa. There are a total of 4,287 delegates for the Democratic party, and 2,144 of those are needed to get the nomination.

Buchanan did much better than most people expected. He won 37 percent of the popular vote, and of the 1,105 republican delegates needed for the nomination, he has 9 to Bush's 14. When addressing his supporters Tuesday night, Buchanan said, money will keep up, especially in light of how well he has done in the first primary.

Bush's people are not that worried, however. New Hampshire is known for being rather unique in the way it votes, and the recession has done more damage there than in most other states. Also, Bush has much stronger supply lines when it comes to funds, and his national campaign is more organized. And finally, if the country eases out of the recession this summer, as most economists predict, a lot of the pressure will be off Bush.

The next few weeks will be very important in the Bush-Buchanan battle. They are both concentrating on the South, where most of the primaries between now and "Super Tuesday" are. Last week the two spoke to crowds in Charleston that were less than a block away, and they also plan to hit Georgia before the March 3 primary there. Buchanan may be in trouble here, where the recession is less severe, and where Bush is known to have a lot of support. According to one political analyst, Bush plans to appeal to the stereotypical southern patriotism with many references to "Operation Desert Storm." Most importantly though, Bush plans on painting Buchanan as a "dangerous fringe" candidate, but without direct attacks that would give Buchanan more credibility.

The South will also be an important battleground for the Democrats. This will be the test for Kerry, Harkin, and Brown as they scratch for funds they'll need to take third place. Clinton is expected to get a lot of support from this region, and according to Dr.

Kenneth Orr, he may even drop by PC on his swing through South Carolina. As for Tsongas, if he can last through the next few weeks, the campaigns will head back up North where he generally has more support. Then we will see if he is able to "send Washington a message."

George Bush

file photo

Around the World

Indianapolis, Ind. - "Iron" Mike Tyson was found guilty of rape and two counts of criminal sexual-deviate conduct. His accuser was Desiree Washington, a native of Coventry, Rhode Island, and a contestant in the 1991 Miss Black America Pageant. Sentencing is scheduled for March 27, but Tyson plans to appeal the decision. He has hired Harvard law professor Alan Dershowitz, who once represented televangelist Jim Baker.

AT&T has recently unveiled its new VideoPhone 2500, a device that comes with a tiny camera lens and color screen. Similar devices have existed for decades, but this is the first that doesn't need expensive special equipment to work. The VideoPhone uses new technology to work on standard telephone lines and transmits six images per second (compared to 30/sec. for TV). It should be available in May of this year, and is expected to cost $1,500.

Milwaukee, Wis. - Jeffrey Dahmer was found sane by a 10-to-2 jury verdict. He has already pleaded guilty to the murder and dismemberment of 15 men and admitted to eating body parts and having sex with some of the corpses. He faces a mandatory life-sentence for each killing.

San Francisco, Cal. - Taxi driver Charles Hollom chased a mugger with his cab and pinned him against the wall of a building. The mugger, whose leg was broken during the citizen's arrest, was sentenced to 10 years for robbery, but won a suit against Hollom saying that the cabbie used excessive force. When word of the verdict got around, a local radio station helped raise over $25,000 to cover the expenses. Holland says he would do "exactly the same thing again."

London, England - Last month John Major and Boris Yeltsin were surprised at the tardiness of their respective secretaries of defense, Tom King and Marshal Yevgeny. The excuse: They had burnt the midnight oil while partaking in a case of rare 1939 Crimean champagne. Major was not pleased at the bad form, but Yeltsin, perhaps with envy, exclaimed, "Good God! I thought all of that vintage had been drunk by Khrushchev!"

Russia - Yeltsin's jump to a market economy is starting to show some signs of success as food finds its way to the marketplace. When the price supports for all goods were removed a few months ago, the country was shocked when prices increased by as much as 20 percent. Now they seem to be leveling off, and in some cases prices are even going down. One of the major factors in this trend is the strengthening of the ruble. The Central Bank of Russia has reduced the money supply by 30 percent, and foreign investors are snatching up rubles in order to invest in state-owned properties. However, the production and employment losses may prove to be too much to overcome, and the Russian people still have a long way to go.

Pi Kappa Phi

The brothers of Pi Kappa Phi welcome all our new officers, associate members, and social affiliates!! We would like to thank all our Rush Girls for their always appreciated sincere effort. New officers are: Archon, Javan Jordan; Vice-Archon, Reggie Bason; Treasurer, Chris Garrett; Secretary, Tyler Jones; Warden, Ed Kirkland; Historian, David Dixon; Chaplain, BJ Cottrell; P.U.S.H. Chairman, Stanton Smith; and Social Chairman, Daniel Eyerly. Associate Members: John Demyan, Matt Glenn, David Grieve, Jason Humphries, Mark Hunt, Dave Lewis, Rob MacCredie, Chad McGaha, Ben Medley, Dean Sheom, Craig Streetman, Chris Thomas, Spenser Treadwell, and Daniel Webb. Our three new social affiliates are Steve Ellis, Neely Loring, and Bill Wright. Tidy Bowl award goes to Spencer and Ben. Congratulations guys. You earned it!

Last semester Beta Chapter had a really LETTERS, continued from page 3

Dear Editor:

As president of Students for Environmental Education (SEE) I am very happy to see some response to our overwhelming environmental problems, not only on a global scale, but here at PC. However, I am distressed to note the lack of knowledge PC students have about their opportunity to get out and do something.

The "recent actions" the school has taken have overshadowed the fact that for the past two and a half years a small, but dedicated group, has carried out a successful recycling program in the women's dorms, and to date has collected over 1049 pounds of aluminum, not to mention the countless bags of paper, plastic, and glass. And with the formation of the recycling board and the support of the school, I am very happy to see this becoming a more comprehensive program.

However, the issues go far beyond that. On the subject of polystyrene, SEE has tried to get it removed from GDH and at one point we were under the impression it would no longer be ordered. Obviously that is not true, so we are continuing our efforts to stop its use, but it takes time and research. One way to let them know you don't want polystyrene is to just not use it. Bring your own cup or buy an Eco-mug that SEE is currently selling.

SEE is also preparing to do an energy audit of the school. A study showed that over $1000 worth of heat is lost a year through the windows of Richardson alone. This audit will help show ways PC can save some of that nuclear energy it uses.

We have just begun work on a new project of ride-sharing. The basic idea is if two people are going to Atlanta for the weekend, instead of both driving, why not share the ride?

And of course, SEE will be sponsoring another Earth Day in April. So, if you really want to get involved at the grass-roots level and do something, I strongly encourage you to attend our meetings. Only with your help can we continue to clean up the environment.

Sincerely,
Kathryn Spearman

worthwhile Halloween party for the Whitten Center with the Zetas. We also raised $1700 for P.U.S.H., our national outreach service project, with a scaffold sit and toll road. Good job Stanton! This semester we're looking forward to Roseball, Carolina Cup, P.U.S.H. Week, and I.M. swimming and softball. We would like to congratulate all Greeks on their new prospective members!!

Can you give up GDH for a night?

Want to give up something for Lent? How about skipping supper one night to help feed the hungry? March 4 is Ash Wednesday, the beginning of Lent and the day picked for our campus to fast. A sign-up for students willing to skip supper in GDH on March 4 will be held through Friday. The list will be given to GDH and the money for your dinners after the fast will be sent to Oxfam America.

Dear Editor:

As an "ardent" feminist living within the PC community, I feel compelled to respond to the February 7 letter-to-the-editor, written by Warren Blanchard. Although, passionate in its execution, point by point Warren shows that he has been blessed with a wonderfully sheltered life and is still innocent to the world around him. His obvious anger and hurt are by-products of awakening and growth, and I applaud PC for pushing students to look around them and embrace the journey toward responsible adulthood. As rattled as Warren sounds, I would say that his journey has begun... but on to the points in Warren's article which I will specifically address.

Point 1 - It is interesting that a man-child would refer to a well-educated, well-traveled, mature woman as "ranting," "raving," "disillusioned" and "disturbed." Murphy Davis has political and economic savvy achieved by jumping in the trenches without hesitation. She has returned with wounds, but not without strong and articulate resolve. Her articles are published in highly respected journals, and she has an admirable reputation in the social justice arena. Of the two, Warren appears to be having the tantrum and he uses the dirty tactics of name-calling and intimidation in his arguments.

Point 2 - Statistics of woman abuse cannot be qualified as "male bashing." Our society, as well as others, must admit to this epidemic problem if we are to move toward a truly equitable society. It is a fact that one out every two women will experience some form of violence within a love relationship during their life. Forty two percent will be pregnant at the time of the attack. Twenty-five percent of women will be sexually assaulted. One of every four female children and one out of ten male children are sexually abused, ninety-nine percent of their abusers are male. Contrary to our stereotype, women and children comprise a large segment of the homeless population and over half of the families in poverty are female headed. The insidiousness of sexist advertising, visual violence against women on TV and screen, sexist and racist jokes, sexual harassment, cut calls from dorm windows,

Campolo to highlight SVS celebration

Press Release
CHAPLIN'S OFFICE

Dr. Tony Campolo, who has been called one of the most dynamic speakers in the field of Christian service, will highlight Presbyterian College's year-long 25th anniversary celebration of Student Volunteer Services. He will appear at 11:00 am on March 17 in Belk Auditorium. His presentation carries CEP credit.

PC Chaplain Greg Henley says, "Tony Campolo grabs your attention and will not let you go. You don't want to miss him. He is one of a kind."

Dr. Tony Campolo

Dr. Campolo, professor of sociology at Eastern College in Pennsylvania, will discuss the role of service in today's society. Campolo is the author of 14 books, including The Kingdom of God is a Party. He is the founder of the Evangelical Association for the Promotion of Education - an organization which ministers to the social, economic, and spiritual needs of people in urban America and Third World countries.

etc., serve to undermine women in every facet of their lives. These problems are systemic and ideological and cannot be reduced to simply the "right choice of mate." I suggest that Warren visit the Lauren County Safe Home or one of the other shelters across the state where more are turned away than can be accommodated.

Point 3 - Radical feminists are mainstream women and men. The radical feminists I know include a doctor's wife with eight children, a female Presbyterian minister, a farmer, a teacher, a college professor, a lawyer, a painter, a housewife, etc., ad infinitum. We are not despised, nor do we despise. We are loved by our neighbors, our children, our parents, our church, our partners. And, it is our love for our families, our children, our country and our world that spurs us to challenge our reality, and to change it. Feminism is not a state of being, but rather a series of intentional actions, the purpose of being to expose and challenge the crippling effects of our patriarchal way of life. We work to envision and create new communities that do not need the tools of woman abuse, homophobia, militarism, hierarchy or racism. I will concede that some in our society are wary of feminists because they do indeed actively work for and demand change. Change may be frightening, but that does not make the need for change any less. And I wonder how Warren got the notion that he was qualified to speak for the wishes of the "average American woman?" This is, case in point, one of the rubs of women today - uninformed males attempting to speak for females as to what they need, want, care about, should look like, should act like. Warren should realize that women are refusing to buy that old bag of goods, that we aren't average, but extraordinary, and that we demand the right to speak for ourselves.

Point 4 - I grant Warren his adulation of Sam Walton as the epitome of the American dream. That he is. But Warren is meshing the American dream, capitalism and nationalism with Christianity. Although we tout that our country was grounded on Christian principles, those principles were subjective then and have diluted and warped them ever since. The "American Way" is not the "Christian Way." Murphy Davis, as a Christian feminist, was offering a Christian critique of our economic dilemma which is far more complicated than simply labeling the "isms." (By the way, all the "isms" are patriarchal, so feminists are not interested in using them as models.) The impact of the tight concentration of wealth and power on women and children worldwide is devastating. Changing the economic systems of the world to a new order, not an old, patriarchal order, is the feminist's greatest challenge.

Point 5 - I would guess that even Murphy has a TV. But we must understand that the media is a brainwashing tool. We think it is entertainment, and we demand to have it. But think about it - where do we get our images of the "average American woman," or of war as glory, or of sexuality, or of minorities, or of the world? I challenge Warren to think about this more than he has. How can the masses overcome this bombardment of stereotyping and manipulation if we believe it all to be true, if we don't open a critical eye, if we aren't outraged at what we are given as the "way it is?" I encourage all at PC, and especially Warren, to step down from their "Ivory Tower" and look at our world as it really is. Share someone else's pain, suffering, fear or frustration. Then, after the shock, pick yourselves up and work loudly, unflinchingly and without excuses toward a world society based on Christian justice. This is the Christian feminist message of Murphy Davis.

Sincerely,
Janet L. Henley, Director
Trinity Resource Center

Due to lack of space, we were unable to print all of the letters to the editor. We want to thank everyone who submitted letters, and we are sorry if yours was not printed. We will put the remaining letters in the next issue.

--- The Blue Stocking

Chinese professor experiences American college life

by LeJeanna Maddox
FEATURES EDITOR

You've probably seen him in the halls of Neville or riding his bike through campus and mistaken him for a student. His English is better than that of most Americans, and with his amiable smile and sense of humor, he does indeed seem to meld into the atmosphere of PC.

Professor Jiang Chengzhong is this year's visiting professor of Chinese, sponsored by the International Christian Youth Exchange. The program was initiated with the vision of giving Chinese professors the opportunity to spend an extended amount of time in America.

Professor Jiang had hopes of being selected one day, but the suspension of the program during the Tiananmen Square episode made his expectations seemingly unrealistic. When he met Dr. Burnside at his own school in China last spring, however, he learned that the program had been re-initiated. Burnside recommended Jiang and another of his colleagues to the selection board, setting the wheels in motion, and Jiang seized the coveted opportunity.

In keeping with the norm of Chinese culture, program participants do not select their location in the United States. "It is just a privilege to be able to come anywhere in America; we don't care where," explains Jiang. Nevertheless, it was quite a shock when he arrived on a typical autumn day in Clinton while the student body was on Fall Break.

Professor Jiang comes from the bustling city of Changchun (population 2 million). While he admits that he would have preferred to experience the American lifestyles in a city more like his own (New York, San Francisco, Washington), he has been very happy at PC. "PC is more than I expected. In China, we have no laws on our campuses. And the lake is wonderful. I have been very impressed," he says.

The beauty of the surroundings is not the only aspect of PC that has impressed Professor Jiang. He has observed several marked differences in the academic system as well. He has taught English Listening Comprehension at Changchun University for five years and admits that, although Americans may be spoiled by our system, he much prefers it.

"In China, all of the professors in a particular department share one office. They have one corner of a desk to put their books on, if they're lucky," he explains. American students (at least at PC) also have the advantage of going back to a professor's office for help or just to talk after class. But in China, "After class, the professor may have one cup of coffee in his office. Then he goes home."

Jiang has observed some positive and some negative aspects of American culture. He is particularly disturbed by the massive amounts of mindless waste Americans commit, especially of food and paper.

When he is not teaching or challenging PC's Ping-Pong King (Burnside) to a match, Professor Jiang enjoys watching uncensored news on the television or reading periodicals. And if you are really lucky, you might catch him square dancing or playing Simon and Garfunkel on his guitar.

Jiang also has been attending the Methodist Church with the Burnside and had an opportunity to meet St. Nick there this Christmas. He spent most of the Christmas break with the other ICYE participants in Charlotte, where he took in a Charlotte Hornets game.

Maybe it is true that one can only see an accurate picture of America through the eyes of a non-American. And maybe it is also true that it would benefit us greatly to adopt that same perspective. To Professor Jiang, America represents a country of abundance and beauty, yet a country that cannot fully appreciate and respect its facilities and resources. To him, America represents an incredible opportunity to learn, discuss, challenge, and experience a lifestyle quite different from his own.

PC's beautiful campus is what Professor Jiang loves about America.

Students get a taste of the 'reign of God' by going to Honduras

by Camisha Clarke
STAFF WRITER

Consider for a moment what you are doing for spring break. Does your response sound familiar to what most college students do during spring break? Perhaps you are doing something similar to the eight PC students, Rev. Greg Henley, Chaplain, and Dr. Charles McKelvey, associate professor of Sociology, who have chosen to spend their spring break in Honduras as a central element of the new course, Third World Experience and Seminar.

Since the 1970's mission trips during spring break have been sponsored by the Student Volunteer Services, usually to mission sites in the United States, but over the years the idea has evolved into a broader learning experience. In March of 1989, Henley designed an annual one-hour elective religion travel seminar course that led eight students and two professors to a small village in the Dominican Republic where they were hosted by Habitat for Humanity

Dr. Charles McKelvey in Honduras last spring.

photo courtesy of LeJeanna Maddox

International. Following the trip the group reflected upon their concerns for the Third World countries and attempted to understand the conditions behind poverty.

Continuing the tradition with more concrete objectives, Henley and McKelvey are jointly teaching Third World Experience and Seminar so that students may engage in "critical thinking about themselves, the world, their values, their culture, and their faith convictions" according to Henley. Offering a three-hour course this year, as opposed to the one-hour credit in the past, is designed to give the students more time for preparation and discussion before and after the mission trip during spring break. Presently, there is a class variety of eight students enrolled in this course. Senior Kelli Lester says, "I think it would be a great learning experience to see how our government affects other countries." Indeed, a mission trip to Honduras will provide a taste of the reign of God for First World Christians relating to the poor

Christians of the Third World for eight days.

Although this is not the first mission trip for freshman Katherine Wilkerson, she is interested in "broadening my perspective on life" by comparing and contrasting the causes of poverty in the Third World and in the United States. She says, "I think I'll learn not to take things for granted."

Hosted by the Christian Commission for Development, which sponsors many programs seeking to improve the lives of Hondurans, and sponsored in part by the Presbyterian Church (USA), this trip is offering these students a positive learning experience about poverty and the Third World that they will probably never have in North America. What better way is there to build relationships with Hondurans? Henley has stated with enthusiasm, "My goal is that students who take this course will be transformed by their experience to work for a more just and humane community."

Ozone depletion is worse than expected

By Ted Carmichael
POLITICS EDITOR

NASA, in conjunction with scientists from other institutions, announced their findings on the ozone layer, which were much worse than anyone expected. It has already been shown that the number of ozone molecules (O₃) in much of the northern hemisphere have declined 4 percent to 8 percent over the last decade. Last month however, an orbiting satellite and a modified spy plane recorded extremely high levels of chlorine monoxide (ClO), a by-product that forms when chlorofluorocarbons (CFCs) break down the O₃ molecules. The new data implies that the ozone layer could be temporarily depleted by as much as 40 percent late this winter and in early spring over northern parts of the U.S., Canada, Europe, and Russia. This is comparable to the "hole" recorded over Antarctica a few years ago, which was a 50 percent depletion.

Chlorine atoms originate in the CFCs. These atoms strip away one of the oxygen atoms from the O₃ and form a normal oxygen molecule (O₂) and a ClO molecule.

Another oxygen atom then combines with the ClO to form a new O₂ molecule and release the chlorine atom. The chlorine is then able to continue breaking apart more ozone molecules. One atom of chlorine is estimated to destroy up to 100,000 molecules of ozone.

As the ozone layer is depleted, more ultraviolet light rays penetrate the stratosphere and reach the earth. These rays can be very harmful to the population below. UV light has been connected to many forms of skin cancer as well as cataracts in the eyes. In Australia, there has been a three-fold increase in the number of skin cancers, and the government issues warnings when UV levels are expected to be high. What's more, UV radiation can interfere with photosynthesis causing low crop yields, and can also kill phytoplankton, which is at the beginning of the food chain. Even the weather patterns can be affected. When O₃ absorbs UV light, heat is generated which helps create stratospheric winds. With the absence of some of that heat, the whole temperature structure of the stratosphere is changed.

An international treaty signed two years ago requires a total phaseout of CFCs by the year 2000. This new information, however, induced many countries to call for an faster timetable. Germany has pledged to stop CFC production by 1995, and President Bush has said that the U.S. will do the same. An international fund will also be set up to help poorer countries, such as China and India, to phase out their use of CFCs.

The downside to all this action is that it probably won't do any good in the near future. Researchers believe that, even if all CFC production were stopped today, levels of chlorine would continue to rise for at least a decade. This is because CFCs can last for 100 years or more, and natural levels will not return for at least a century.

Perhaps the lesson to be learned from this is to not expose the earth to such huge experiments when the consequences are unknown. The possible danger to the ozone layer was first reported in 1974, but it took hard evidence to get the world moving, after the damage was done. Predictions of global warming are largely ignored because they cannot be proven, and the amount of carbon dioxide in the atmosphere has increased 25 percent due to man's tampering. Is it not reckless to continue acting as we do when we don't know what the effects will be? Is it not frightening to consider what consequences it may be too late to avoid?

VOTE

SGA ELECTIONS
WEDNESDAY, MARCH 4

TAKE THIS COUPON
AND GET A FREE
DESSERT WITH YOUR MEAL AT...

Terry's

Eco-Mugs are a success

By Heather Moncrief
ENVIRONMENT EDITOR

The sell of Eco-Mugs by Students for Environmental Education has proven successful. In less than one week of their arrival, the 500 mugs ordered were sold. The response has been overwhelming. Eco-Mugs can be seen all over Clinton, from GDH to Subway. The businesses participating in this program have been extremely supportive. No problems have arisen, except for the lack of more mugs to sell. To solve this problem, SEE has placed a second order. This order will arrive after spring break.

These 20 ounce insulated beverage containers hold both hot and cold drink. The project is an attempt to cut down on solid waste and to give GDH a reason to stop ordering polystyrene. Not only will purchasers be doing their part in our waste problem, but they will also receive discounts at certain local restaurants when using their mugs in place of nonreusable cups. These mugs will be on sale again for only $3.00 in GDH in late March.

PC trash items are analyzed by SEE

by Kathryn Spearman
GUEST WRITER

Unfortunately, America has become a throw-away society, dependent on disposable products. On January 30, Students for Environmental Education depicted this problem by finding out what percentage of Presbyterian College's trash is recyclable. At 7:30 a.m. with the assistance of the maintenance department, SEE started digging through the school's trash. When it was all over, they found that based on volume 40% of the trash was recyclable.

There is means for a change in these figures. With the implementation of the PC recycling program, it is easier for all to recycle. SEE encourages everyone to do his or her part and recycle.

Student trash fills the "landfill on the lawn."

Piles of bags display the amount of daily waste on our campus.

Margaret Barfield, a member of SEE, separates aluminum cans for recycling.

Recyclable cardboard made up a large portion of the trash analyzed.

Nelson plays crucial role in PC athletics

by Everett Catts
STAFF WRITER

Anyone who is associated with Presbyterian College athletics knows Nelson Jones. Although Nelson is an important figure to deal with in the athletic program, if you spend a great deal of time in his office something must be wrong with you. The reason being is that Nelson Jones is PC's head athletic trainer. His job is crucial to all of PC's athletic programs. Keeping athletes from injury and helping them to quickly recover from injuries is what Nelson does.

Jones came to PC in the summer of 1986, after graduating from East Tennessee State University in 1983 and completing two years of graduate school at Furman in 1985. During his time as an essential part of the PC athletic machinery, Nelson has brought about many important changes. Upon his arrival at PC, the athletic department did not have a training room at all. Nelson has been able to establish a training room that is outstanding for any small school and among the best and biggest in the South Atlantic Conference. PC's training room is now equipped with the latest in treatment resources. Nelson pointed out that, "The facilities we have are essential to give the athletes the best care possible."

Nelson Jones is highly respected by both the athletes and the coaches because of his work ethic. Be it the day of a practice or a game, Nelson and his student-trainers are the first to arrive and the last to leave on a regular day.

"We are responsible for about 260 athletes, and we cover their health and welfare," stated Jones. "And when they do get hurt, we're responsible for getting them back on the playing field as quickly and safely as possible."

The number one goal of Nelson and his staff is the prevention of injury. He does this by planning conditioning programs to suit the demands the sport will have on the athletes playing that sport. Nelson and his assistants implement taping, bracing, and most importantly stretching to further prevent injury to PC's athletes. With application of ice and heat and with use of whirlpools, ultrasounds, and electrostimulation, injuries are treated.

Nelson Jones gives a great deal of credit to his student-trainers. They are junior Aaron Boggs, sophomore Everett Catts, freshmen Anne Dyer and Stacey Lewellyn, and senior Marcus Holiday. He hand picks the trainers from the applications sent to PC for admission. The five trainers on Nelson's staff help him stay organized and prepared to deal with any situation that may arise.

The secret to Nelson Jones' success is probably that all of PC's athletes trust him and realize his desire to help them is genuine.

"To be a successful trainer," said Jones, "you have to be able to get along with people. If you try to get to know the athletes, it makes it a lot easier to deal with their problems. I respect the athletes here not just because they are students and athletes second, but because they're easy to get along with."

Nelson Jones assists a student.

photo by Angela Mills

TAKE THE KEYS.
CALL A CAB.
TAKE A STAND.

Ever Get A Pal Smashed?

Men's basketball finishes second in the SAC - 8

by Everett Catts
STAFF WRITER

With home wins over Wingate, Mars Hill, Newberry, and Lenoir-Rhyne, the Blue Hose Men's Basketball Team finished with a 4-1 record in the final three weeks of the regular season. PC crushed Wingate on February 12, 83-54. The Blue Hose were without Head Coach Gregg Nibert; nevertheless Assistant Coach Dan Nunnery headed PC's squad in a huge victory. Bret Jones' 29 points led the Blue Hose, who had the lead for the entire game.

On February 15, at Carson-Newman, PC suffered its only loss of its last three weeks of the regular season, a 65-64 overtime thriller. In the game, senior Scott Cox scored the 1000th point of his career at PC. On February 17, the Blue Hose defeated Newberry, 84-69, shooting 70 percent from the field. Leading PC again was junior Bret Jones, who had 25 points. The Blue Hose beat Mars Hill on February 19, a game in which Jones reached the 1000-point career scoring mark also. Lenoir-Rhyne was PC's next victim; an 80-65 win on February 22 put the Blue Hose in a three way tie with Lenoir-Rhyne and Elon for second place in the SAC-8.

Going into the SAC-8 Tournament in Catawba, the Blue Hose are 16-12 overall, with an 8-6 conference record. Despite being ranked second in the conference, PC is seeded fourth in the tournament and played Catawba in the opening round yesterday. With a win yesterday, the Blue Hose will play the winner of the Gardner-Webb vs. Mars Hill game tonight at 8:00.

Women's and men's tennis teams begin season

by Amanda Bowers
STAFF WRITER

Women's Tennis

It's a little known fact that PC's women's tennis team has just begun their 1992 season ranked 16th in the nation. With the same team returning from last year, the women have their sights set on winning the district and going to the nationals. The team has opened their season with a 7-2 victory over Francis Marion and a 5-4 win over Coastal Carolina.

The Lady Blue Hose started their spring season practice on January 13. They have, however, been practicing all year, with a short break in November and December. Coach Donna Arnold says she expects a tough schedule this year. Three of the teams they play - Mobile, Elon, and Berry - are ranked in the top ten nationally. Coach Arnold feels the team's strongest competition in the conference will come from Elon.

The experience of this returning team will help. Coach Arnold says, "If we get into a tight situation, we will know how to handle it better." If the team can win the district this year, they will automatically qualify for the nationals this summer.

Men's Tennis

The men's tennis team opened their spring season February 14 with a 6-1 loss to Furman. Although they suffered two more losses over the weekend to Wofford and the College of Charleston, Coach Bobby McKee said he was very pleased with everyone's performance. He especially commended the play of Mallory McRae and Matthew Gruhn.

The men went into this season ranked 14th in the country in the NAIA. Their goal is to make it to the National Tournament. They have already secured at least a tie for the conference title by winning six conference games this past fall. The only thing standing in their way is a win over Carson-Newman, a team they beat last year.

Coach McKee says that this year's team should benefit from its depth. "We are much stronger than last year," he said. "We are way ahead of my schedule."

The number one singles player for the Blue Hose is Mallory McRae, followed by number two Scott Ambrose, number three Mark Nease, number four Sentre Smith, and number five Matthew Gruhn. Seniors are Smith, Chris Clay, and Gruhn, who is also the team captain.

The team's losses in their first few matches this season are no indication of their quality of play. According to Coach McKee, this is the toughest schedule in five years, and his team has been playing "good tennis."

Katie Lockwood jumps to score for PC.

photo courtesy of David Hubbard

EAT IN - CARRY OUT - DELIVERY
$.99 PIZZA SPECIAL!

Any One
Medium Specialty Pizza
ONLY $.99
Choose From:
• Meat Lovers
• Cheese Lovers
• Pepperoni Lovers
• Supreme

With Purchase Of Another Medium
Specialty Pizza at Regular Price.

Not good with any other coupon offer or P.C. discount.
One coupon per party per visit at the Clinton Pizza Hut only.
Must present coupon with purchase.

Wind Ensemble presents Winter Concert

By Angie Richardson
ENTERTAINMENT EDITOR

On February 25, 1992, the Presbyterian College Wind Ensemble presented the annual Winter Concert in Belk Auditorium. The ensemble played a variety of selections, including a concert suite from the film "Dances With Wolves," arranged by Jay Boccocci; "The Stars and Stripes Forever," and "The Black Horse Troop" by John Phillip Sousa; and "My Heart Is Filled With Longing" by Johann Sebastian Bach.

Dr. Orval Oleson directs the 40 students and one faculty member who play various percussion, woodwind, and brass instruments. From Hollywood film music to patriotic marches, the ensemble had something to offer everyone. "The Black Horse Troop," written for the Cleveland, Ohio National Guard Calvary by John Phillip Sousa is a high spirited march. It was first performed in October 1925 while the troop rode onto stage and stood behind the band. "Slava!" is Leonard Bernstein's tribute to Mstislav Rostropovich, the name means glory, but it was also Rostropovich's nickname. The "Dances With Wolves" concert suite includes: the main theme, Looks Like a Suicide; the John Dunbar Theme; Journey to Fort Sedgewick; Pawnee Attack; the Love Theme; and the Buffalo Hunt. The concert concluded with Bach's "Passion Chorale" as arranged by Alfred Reed and Sousa's patriotic "The Stars and Stripes Forever."

Three concerts are presented annually by the Presbyterian College Wind Ensemble. The next concert will be the Spring POPS concert planned for April 28, 1992. For more information, contact the Presbyterian College music department at 833-8470.

file photo

The comedian Carrot Top will be performing in Springs Campus Center on March 4 at 8:00 p.m.

PC Faculty Plan Exhibit, Gallery Talk

News Release

CLINTON, S. C. - Members of the Presbyterian College art department hosted an art exhibit and gallery talk at 7 p.m. on Thursday, February 20 in the Thomson Library Auditorium. Included in the show were paintings and photographs by Dr. Bob Hild, Mr. Mark Anderson, Ms. Diana Olencki, and Mr. Blake Praytor, whose works were displayed and discussed.

Dr. Hild presented a combination slide show and lecture about his contributions to the exhibit. He addressed the origin of his work, and his slide show consisted of the "images that led to the images" in the show.

Anderson, however, had a more specific topic to address. He received a grant through the college that allowed him to travel the east coast, studying different landscapes along the way. He began his journey in Edisto Island and gradually worked his way up the eastern seaboard, before moving inland to visit a Monet exhibit in Chicago. His two-month excursion ended in the Smoky Mountains. Mr. Anderson recalled the events and highlights of his trip during the gallery talk.

There was a short reception, beginning at 6:30 p.m., prior to the program. The gallery talk began at 7 p.m. Both the reception and the gallery talk were open to the public at no cost.

photo courtesy of Steve Owens

Dr. Gaines sings the lead "Trouble" for the hit production Broadway Cabaret.

Broadway Cabaret a 'hit'

By Cher Fulbright
STAFF WRITER

On Saturday, February 15 and Sunday, February 16, the PC choir performed yet another wonderful show - this time it was the Broadway Cabaret. The show opened with "Everything's Coming Up Roses" from the Broadway show "Gypsy." Then, for the next 55 minutes, the choir and individual singers sang tunes from such shows as "Kiss Me Kate," "Oh Broadway," "Into the Woods," and "The King and I."

Memorable performances of the Broadway Cabaret included Choral Director Dr. Charles Gaines' rendition of Harold

Hill singing "Trouble" from "The Music Man," and the scenes of Scotland shown while the choir sang tunes from "Brigadoon." The audience also loved the tap dancing of Kelly Magee while the choir sang songs from "Oh Broadway."

The Broadway Cabaret ended with favorites like "Grease," "You're the One That I Want," and "We Go Together" from the hit 1972 Broadway show "Grease."

Attendance for both Saturday night and Sunday afternoon was good, and students who elected not to attend this CEP event missed an excellent performance by the choir.

NOBODY KNOWS LIKE DOMINO'S How You Like Pizza At Home 2 Regular 12" Cheese Pizzas for $8.88! Just call and order your favorite TWO regular 12" cheese pizzas. <small>Valid at participating stores only. Not valid with any other offer. Prices may vary. Customer pays sales tax where applicable. © 1991 Domino's Pizza Inc.</small>	P.C. Student Discounts Medium one topping pizza $5.99 Large one topping pizza $7.99 Good anytime-no coupon needed-to campus
Wild Wednesday $5.00 SPECIAL 12" Pepperoni Pizza <small>Valid at participating stores only. Not valid with any other offer. Prices may vary. Customer pays sales tax where applicable. © 1991 Domino's Pizza Inc.</small>	Lunch Special! A 12" 1 topping Pizza ONLY $5.00 Open for Lunch everyday, 11:30-4:00 <small>Valid at participating stores only. Not valid with any other offer. Prices may vary. Customer pays sales tax where applicable. © 1991 Domino's Pizza Inc.</small>
COUPON CRUSHER! We Accept All Pizza Hut Coupons <small>Valid at participating stores only. Not valid with any other offer. Prices may vary. Customer pays sales tax where applicable. © 1991 Domino's Pizza Inc.</small>	COUPON CRUSHER! We Accept All Pizza Hut Coupons <small>Valid at participating stores only. Not valid with any other offer. Prices may vary. Customer pays sales tax where applicable. © 1991 Domino's Pizza Inc.</small>

Dr. Dean Thompson chosen PC Professor of the Year

by Paul Atkinson
NEWS EDITOR

When a professor daily wears suspenders and a bow tie, you know one of two things: either he is a cultivated gentleman, or he has a passion for detail - Dr. H. Dean Thompson is both.

He is known by some as Dr. Doom because of his generous use of red ink on his student's essays, but most tend to think of him in a different light. During an average weekday afternoon, a small gathering of students usually crowds around his door in the hallway, waiting to speak with him. Sometimes they are there with a question about his class, but more often they come just to sit and talk, taking advantage of Dr. Thompson's willingness to communicate.

"Getting to know people by teaching them is a reward in itself," Thompson explains while touching up the paint on a doorframe in his house. "I thrive on watching students blossom and helping them in their times of need."

When Thompson began teaching at PC in 1988, he brought with him his love of learning and the desire to spread his appreciation for literature. One of Thompson's first students at PC, Mike Darling, says of him, "He gives all of himself to others for the sake of learning itself, and without that, I wouldn't have the interest in literature that I have today."

When asked of his reaction about being named Professor of the Year, Thompson stops painting and steps forward, lecturing with his brush. "This award says much more about my department than what it says about me. I have to teach well just to keep up with my colleagues." He leans back against a step ladder and winces. "In teaching I live with a constant sense of failure, but I stick with it because who knows, maybe next semester I will be more satisfied."

"He has a profound commitment to his students, and he pushes them to the fullest extent because he truly cares for and loves them," Dr. Richard Baker remarks.

Who? Dr. Doom? How can a man greet such a title with a full grin? Well, not everyone has such a sense of humor - it is nearly impossible to keep a straight face during one of his stories or jokes - but that shot of joy that he attempts to deliver to his students every day distinguishes him from all others.

Thompson, however, argues that he should not be viewed differently from other professors at PC. He says, "My profession is full of peacocks - people who are consumed by the weight of their egos, who live only for the glorification of their names. They are charlatans, fools, and jackasses. I saw right away that if I wanted to teach, I'd have to give my whole life to it. I have never seen a more dedicated group of teachers than are present here. That's why I came to Presbyterian College. I have never seen a peacock on this faculty."

Thompson's lack of selfishness is what makes him so appealing as a teacher and a friend. The essence of his values resonate through his constancy of hope, joy, and passion.

His philosophy can be seen in all he does.

Before completing the touch-up painting on the doorframe with a long, patient line of paint, Thompson pauses and sighs. "People will never notice this," he begins, "but I will... and that makes it all worthwhile."

We have noticed, Dr. Thompson, and we celebrate you in your recognition.

photo by Steve Owens

Dr. Thompson instructs one of his English classes on the front steps of Neville Hall. Thompson was recently selected as PC Professor of the Year.

Fight erupts at Alpha Sigma Phi house

by Jason West
MANAGING EDITOR

Another altercation occurred at Fraternity Court this past weekend. On Sunday morning at around 12:30, a fight broke out at the Alpha Sigma Phi house. This makes for the third violent incident at Fraternity Court within the past two months.

According to a statement prepared by the Brothers of Alpha Sigma Phi, the fraternity was sponsoring a mixer with the Social Club, which is primarily a minority student organization. Reportedly, Tim Haskins, a non-student and uninvited guest, started the altercation by shouting racial slurs at Lynn Leakes, a PC junior, and other guests of the fraternity. Afterwards, a fight erupted. Haskins is a 21-year-old white male and a resident of Caldwell Street in Clinton.

Public Safety was called by members of the fraternity. Upon arrival, Officer Ray Hurley arrested Haskins and charged him with public disorderly conduct. The incident report filed on the matter showed that Haskins had been drinking alcohol. Hurley also reported that Haskins attempted to hit him.

On Monday, Haskins was found guilty by a Clinton magistrate of disorderly conduct and fined $248. PC Public Safety Chief Grey Mayson also placed a trespass warning on Haskins, which bars him from any activity on the PC campus.

In addition, Leakes reported to Public Safety that Haskins had earlier left messages on his answering machine that were "threats against him." Mayson reports that the tape with the messages on it have been taken as evidence and an investigation into the matter is continuing. Mayson says that other charges against Haskins are possible.

Mayson points out that this particular incident is somewhat different from past altercations at Fraternity Court. "In this instance, we are dealing with a local element. The person involved was definitely a red neck type person," said Mayson. "If the boy had not been drinking, this situation might not have taken place."

Reservation deposit due

Press Release

The office of the Business Manager and Treasurer reminds all PC students who plan to return next year that a space reservation deposit of $200 must be submitted to the Cashier by May 1, 1992.

According to Skip Zubrod, business manager, if a student has not paid the deposit by May 1, he or she will be dropped from class rolls for the fall term and will also lose his or her space in college housing.

The space reservation deposit is refundable until May 1. If a student withdraws or decides to move off campus after that date, the deposit is forfeited.

The space reservation deposit is not an extra academic fee. Instead, it will apply against a student's fall semester charges.

In Remembrance...

Ben Hay Hammet

Ben Hay Hammet, retired vice president for college relations at Presbyterian College, died February 24, 1992, at his home after an extended illness. He was 70.

Hammet was a 1943 graduate of PC. He also earned a journalism degree from the University of Missouri. He left a career in journalism with International News Service, now United Press International, to return to PC in 1949 as director of alumni and public relations. During the next four decades, he developed and directed a coordinated program of alumni and public relations, publications and information services that helped PC's rise to national recognition. He also developed the award winning Annual Giving program, the Junior Fellows program, events such as Parent's Weekend, Youth Day, and a college magazine that was cited for excellence by the Council for the Advancement and Support of Education. In 1983, the Board of Trustees elected him to the position of vice president for college relations.

Hammet was also author of a 212 page published history of the college, The Spirit of PC: A Centennial History of Presbyterian College.

He was chosen for the inaugural Distinguished Service Award of the PC Board of Visitors in 1966 and for the Alumni Association's highest honor, the Alumni Gold P, in 1971. When he retired in 1989, he received an honorary doctorate of humane letters degree from Presbyterian College and also the Order of the Palmetto, South Carolina's highest honor, by direction of Governor Carroll Campbell. In 1991, college officials named an annual award for media ethics and integrity in his honor. The first recipient will be announced in early 1993.

Memorials may be made to Hammet Scholarship, c/o Presbyterian College, South Broad Street, Clinton, South Carolina.

PC offers opportunities to serve others

by Dennie Lynn Hill
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

Last week I watched a moving television special on homelessness in America. I have encountered homeless people in my lifetime and I always felt sympathy for them, but never empathy. I never actually put myself in their position. The television special gave me a new insight into homelessness through an interview with a homeless man named Isaiah.

When we pass homeless people on the streets we do not know their name or anything about them personally. But the interview I watched showed me that there was more to these forgotten people than what we usually see. I now pray for a man named Isaiah, a man I do not know, but am touched by. Prayer alone is not enough, we must also be active in making a change by getting involved in organizations that help homeless people.

I cannot imagine being without a family for support and love or not knowing where I would find my next meal or if I would. I cannot imagine sleeping on the sidewalks of Washington, DC covered by newspapers, but many people

"Prayer alone is not enough."

can imagine it because they live that way every day.

Dum Vivimus Servimus, as we live we serve, the motto that we, as part of the PC community, are supposed to live by, but do we? I know that I need to reconsider what my idea of service is. I think of my brother who spends Saturday mornings building houses for the needy through Habitat for Humanity.

Yet, there is a Habitat chapter on our campus and I have never even been involved. I applaud those students in Habitat who take their time and give of themselves for others who need them. What I now realize is that the needy people who need the members of Habitat also need those who are not yet members of Habitat. I challenge myself and all the students and faculty at PC to become active in serving others. If not through Habitat through any of the other service organizations on campus, for there are many. Through Student Volunteer Services alone there are over 20 community service projects and just over 30 percent of the student body is involved. I know that I am in the wrong percentage of that group. Together we can make a difference in our school, community, state, nation, and world. I think it's time for us to serve as we live.

Hansard Scholar sends impressions from London

Dear Everyone,

A bomb explosion in a tube station on an early Friday morning, now there's something that doesn't happen in Clinton, South Carolina. Hello to everyone on the PC campus, and I hope and trust everyone is doing well. I have been meaning to write y'all for a few weeks, so here's a letter from London. On Friday the 28th of February I started my day with a nice one hour walk to work on a typical fog covered English day. I usually ride the subway to work but this morning because of an IRA bomb explosion at a tube station on the other side of town from where I live, the entire subway was closed. Yes I could have taken the bus, but they were as full as Springs mail hall at 11 or 12 any day of the week. Anyway the walk was a nice change. In addition to the bomb injuring a few innocent individuals it also turned the entire city of London upside down. People were fighting for cabs, falling out of red double decker buses, and most of all, walking with an objective, not caring who they knocked down. The thing was one day and one bomb wasn't enough. The next day I'm walking down Oxford Street and all at once policemen are yelling over the megaphone for the crowd to leave Oxford Street because of a security alert, but it ended up being a false alarm. Now then, that's all about bombs, now I'll tell y'all about London. To say it simply, and if the reader can forget the first part of this letter, London is great! I am taking some different courses and I work for Gwyneth Dunwoody who's 61 and a Labour member in the House of Commons. She is unquestionably one of the funniest individuals I have ever known and she is a wonderful person to work for, because of her obvious humor. The next amazing point is her mother is 82 and in the House of Lords and she is just as funny. They are both as perfect as the Queen. There's only two things wrong with London, the pubs close at eleven every night and the air pollution is horrible. The paper might edit this out, but if they don't some people might not want to read the next sentence. The air pollution in London is so bad that the stuff in your nose turns charcoal black. Excuse me. I have traveled around the United Kingdom and have had some great experiences. I think of the campus and y'all often and hope everyone is doing well. Good Luck to the spring teams in finishing their season!

Sincerely,
Bill Graves

The Blue Stocking of Presbyterian College
Clinton, South Carolina, 29325
Volume LXXVI, Number 10
March 27, 1992

Editor-in-Chief.....Dennie Lynn Hill
Managing Editor.....Jason West
News Editor.....Paul Atkinson
Politics Editor.....Ted Carmichael
Sports Editor.....Brad Busbee
Entertainment Editor.....Angie Richardson
Features Editor.....Leleanna Maddox
Environment Editor.....Heather Moncrief
Photography Editor.....Brian Koehler
Layout Editor.....Carolyn Nichols
Copy Editor.....Mike Weaver

Advertising Editor.....Ann Mayfield
Subscriptions Editor.....Ron Mixon
Artist.....Edward Clark
Photography Staff
Kimberlee Gibson Adrienne Ivey
Angela Mills
Staff Writers
Maria Meidanis Amanda Bowers
Leigh Hearnburg Katherine Bonner
Karen Wittenbrook Cher Fullbright
Camisha Clarke Michelle Caney
Shara Garwood Everett Catts
Kathryn Spearman Frank McKay

The Blue Stocking is a biweekly student publication of Presbyterian College. The paper serves as a forum of news and opinion of regional and national concern. For advertising, contact The Blue Stocking, Presbyterian College, Box 1061, Clinton, SC 29325. The Blue Stocking welcomes letters to the editor from all members of the PC community. Signatures are required. Letters are printed on a space available basis. The Blue Stocking reserves the right to edit all letters for proper grammar and punctuation. The final deadline for submitting letters is Friday at 12:00 pm on the week before publication.

Letters to the Editor - Letters to the Editor - Letters to the Editor - Letters to the Editor - Letters to the Editor - Letters

Dear Editor,

There have been many rumors circulating the campus referring to the possibility of the commencement exercises being held outside on the front plaza. As a graduating senior, I am very interested in this subject. The day of commencement is one which is very important in the life of a senior. For some, it marks the beginning of pure adulthood. Therefore, it should be a day which the student can enjoy, take pride in and look back upon and be proud of. Granted, I will have my diploma framed and placed upon my wall to look at and reflect upon my four years at Presbyterian College, and no matter where the event takes place, I will remember it. However, my education at Presbyterian College is more than just a piece of paper. It is friendships, both good and bad times, love—of people and of the environment in which I received my education. Therefore, the day of commencement is one which should belong to the seniors. As Dr. Orr stated at this year's opening convocation, seniors are allowed to march in with the faculty because it marks the beginning of one's senior year, and therefore they (the seniors) should be recognized. Could we also not be recognized by having OUR commencement service where we (the senior class) have requested it over these past few years?

In conclusion, I would just like to emphasize again that commencement exercises are designed to honor the students and their accomplishments during their four years in college. Why not make that ceremony what the persons being honored want?

Sincerely,

John Douglas

Dear Editor:

Warren Blanchard's letter in your last edition concerns and puzzles me. Mr. Blanchard and I attended the same convocation on January 20, but we apparently heard quite different messages. I heard a Presbyterian minister calling me to live out the gospel of Jesus Christ. I was reminded by the minister, Murphy Davis, that sin (in one example, domestic violence) is not confined to the "others" of society but exists also in the lives and hearts of people just like us; that God is present in even the sick, the poor, the homeless, the imprisoned, the outcast of society and thus that whatever I do (or don't do) for those less fortunate, I do (or don't do) for God; that something is not quite right about a world in which some have more than enough while others have nothing at all; and that, whether it makes me uncomfortable to be told so or not, it is basically sinful for me to sit around passively (perhaps watching TV) when I should instead be actively carrying God's love to the world.

Admittedly, the gospel of Christ is a radical call to service, but I am surprised and saddened that here at Presbyterian College—with the motto While We Live, We Serve—the gospel message would seem so radical as to incite a student to defame the character of the minister who presented it.

I hope that the time will come on this campus when no one will seek to "kill the messenger" who brings an unsettling message and when we can all discuss without rancor, defensiveness, and slander even those ideas with which we disagree.

Sincerely,

Ann D. Moorefield

Dear Editor:

I am writing to thank all the people who helped me in my campaign. You don't know how much I appreciated and needed the support that you gave me over the last two weeks. There were times when I thought everything would fall apart, but then you were there to encourage me and give me the strength I needed to keep going. Many of you don't even know that you helped me, but I intend to get in touch with you individually and express my gratitude personally. Thanks also to all of you who supported me with your votes; thank you for having confidence enough to trust me with such a responsibility.

Second, I would like to congratulate Michael on his victory as well as the other newly elected SGA officers on theirs. I feel confident that he will take his job seriously and perform to the best of his ability as president. I also want to thank Michael and Heather for their competitive, but fair, opposition. I had a great deal of fun these past two weeks and hope that they feel the same.

Sincerely,
Frank McKay

Dear Editor,

The Presbyterian College Men's Basketball Program wanted to thank the Blue Thunder Pep Band along with director Orval Oleson and also the PC Blue Hose Cheerleaders and director Susan Polson for their efforts throughout the season. Also, a special thank you for the tremendous effort and support you gave our team at the SAC Tournament. Your support and enthusiasm carried our team to the Finals.

Thanks Again,
1992 PC Basketball Team
Greg Nibert
Head Basketball Coach

Dear Editor,

I am a sophomore, and I live in Bailey Hall. People ask me why I live in Bailey, but unless you have experienced the fellowship in Bailey you can't knock it. I firmly believe it is one of the best dorms on campus. Believe it or not a lot of people would agree with me. All this aside, there are certain improvements which could be made. Oh sure, it would be nice to have a total renovation, but I don't see that happening in the near future.

Bailey needs air! There is only one other dorm on campus (Doyle) that has no air conditioning. The rumors from Douglas House are that Doyle is to get renovations and air over the summer. Presbyterian College can afford a new gazebo, a new academic building, a new maintenance building, and a new theater. Yet, it can't afford air conditioning for Bailey. Why is that?

Bailey needs a facelift. The dorm could be improved 100 percent by a simple paint job and new carpet. We also need new washing machines and dryers. The washers thump loud enough to be mistaken for a Victorian-age helicopter landing site. Worse yet, the dryers cost 25 cents, and they run for about 10 to 15 minutes. I'm not exaggerating. It once cost me more to dry my clothes than it did to wash them.

Bailey Hall has a lot of history and unfortunately it shows every moment of it. Most of the guys who live in Bailey have a special place in their hearts for it, yet we can't help thinking that when Bailey became run down PC built two new dorms for the girls that lived here. The guys got stuck with the remains. As a caledonian, I'm told to tell perspectives that there are no freshman dorms on campus, yet that is exactly what Bailey is.

No other dorm on campus is as fun or friendly as Bailey. I don't understand why the administration can't see fit to make the minor improvements I've mentioned. Last year, I asked a senior administrative officer if Bailey was getting some improvements. He chuckled quietly and said that about three dorms before Bailey were slated to be fixed up. What are those? Maybe Barron and Smyth? It's Bailey's turn to be fixed up, and I urge the administration to think about it.

Sincerely,
Warren Sloan, President
Bailey Hall

Dear Editor,

The members of Alpha Sigma Phi wish to dispel any rumors concerning the fight at the Alpha Sigma Phi-Social Club mixer on March 21. Time Haskins, a non-student and an uninvited guest, started an altercation shortly after midnight during the mixer. The only involvement of the Brothers of Alpha Sigma Phi was an attempt to break up the fight between Mr. Haskins and a few of the invited guests, and to call Public Safety for disorderly conduct. We have taken steps to prevent any further incidents such as this one. We apologize to any and all guests who had to witness the incident. Again, we wish to emphasize that no Brother or Pledge of Alpha Sigma Phi was involved. Also, the incident was not a product of Social Club's participation in the mixer. We regret that there are elements in society today that cause these kinds of problems. We, the members of Alpha Sigma Phi, wish to eliminate any forms of aggression on this campus. The reason for the mixer was to promote a better social environment for all PC students.

Respectfully,
The Brothers and Pledges of Alpha Sigma Phi

SGA Election Returns

* - denotes winners

President

*Mike Martin
Frank McKay
Heather Moncrief

Vice President

*Ron Mixon
Wendy Hubbard
Hagan Thompson
Jay Sims
Chris Weldon

Secretary

*Jeff Garrison
Whui Min Chang

Treasurer

*Karen Sharper

Judicial Chair

*Lauren Owings

SUB President

*Meg Oxford

Should GDH serve styrofoam?

Yes - 27
No - 384

Should GDH find an alternative to styrofoam?

Yes - 379
No - 18

Should graduation be held outside or inside?

Outside - 353
Inside - 44

Total number voted in general election - 520 (47.2%)
Total number voted in run-off election - 460 (41.8%)

PC Board of Trustees approves faculty promotions

Stallworth made officer by being named Dean of Alumni Affairs

Press Release
OFFICE OF PUBLIC RELATIONS

Tom Stallworth file photo

Thomas A. Stallworth has been promoted to Dean of Alumni Activities at Presbyterian College. Stallworth, an ordained minister, earned his bachelor's degree in Bible from Presbyterian College in 1955. He added a bachelor of divinity degree from Columbia Theological Seminary before beginning a 14-month stint as assistant pastor of First Presbyterian Church in Rome, Georgia. Stallworth later did graduate study at Union Seminary, where he earned his master's degree in theology.

He returned to PC in 1959 as chaplain and assistant professor of religion. In 1969, he accepted the dean of students position, but returned to the classroom full-time in 1971, teaching courses in Old and New Testament, philosophy, and sociology. He has served as chairman of the faculty athletic committee and faculty representative to the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics, in addition to directing activities in the alumni office.

The PC Board of Trustees also approved six faculty promotions. Dr. Jonathan T. Bell was promoted to associate professor of physics, while Dr. Jerry K. Slice was promoted to associate professor of economics and business administration. Promoted and granted tenure were: Mark Anderson, associate professor of art; Dr. David Evans, associate professor of chemistry; Meredith McQueen Holder, associate professor of business administration; and Dr. Booker T. Ingram, associate professor of political science.

Also granted tenure were Dr. Orval Oleson, associate professor of music, and Dr. Robert Morrison, associate professor of French and Spanish.

The Board also appointed and reappointed departmental chairs for the 1992-93 academic year. Reappointed to another four-year term as chair of the business and economics department was Sam Howell, associate professor of business administration. Reappointed as chair of the physical education department was Bob Strock, assistant professor of physical education.

The terms of Dr. Joel Jones (mathematics) and Dr. Ingram (political science) will be extended three more years, and Dr. Dorothy Brandt, Charles A. Dana Professor of Education, was appointed to fill a two-year vacancy as chair of the education department.

Dr. Bell was appointed chair of the physics and computer science department, while Lt. Colonel James Staples, who has been appointed by the US Army to succeed Lt. Colonel Joel Rexford as professor of military science this fall, was confirmed as chair of the military science department.

Dr. Bell was appointed chair of the physics and computer science department, while Lt. Colonel James Staples, who has been appointed by the US Army to succeed Lt. Colonel Joel Rexford as professor of military science this fall, was confirmed as chair of the military science department.

Dr. Bell was appointed chair of the physics and computer science department, while Lt. Colonel James Staples, who has been appointed by the US Army to succeed Lt. Colonel Joel Rexford as professor of military science this fall, was confirmed as chair of the military science department.

Dr. Bell was appointed chair of the physics and computer science department, while Lt. Colonel James Staples, who has been appointed by the US Army to succeed Lt. Colonel Joel Rexford as professor of military science this fall, was confirmed as chair of the military science department.

Dr. Bell was appointed chair of the physics and computer science department, while Lt. Colonel James Staples, who has been appointed by the US Army to succeed Lt. Colonel Joel Rexford as professor of military science this fall, was confirmed as chair of the military science department.

Duke Power gift to help with Neville Hall renovation

Press Release
OFFICE OF PUBLIC RELATIONS

Duke Power Company completed its pledge to Presbyterian College's renovation of historic Neville Hall, as Duke Power officials Alan Sweet of the Laurens office and John Geer of the Anderson-area office presented a check for $40,000 to PC President Dr. Kenneth B. Orr.

That contribution brought Duke Power's total gift to $100,000 during its five-year pledge, which will help renovation projects on Neville Hall continue throughout the spring and summer. The facility contains classrooms, faculty offices, and a language laboratory.

"This gift will allow us to continue with the interior and structural renovations of Neville Hall, which is the academic heart of the campus," said Dr. Ted Brown, vice president for financial development. "Duke Power's support of this project will help ensure the future vitality of this facility."

The exterior of Neville Hall was completely refurbished in 1988, and work on classrooms and corridors is currently underway. The facility, built in 1907, is named for former PC President W.G. Neville.

Neville Hall serves as the focal point of the PC campus.

file photo

'Rubbergate' scandal has been 'blown way out of proportion'

by Ted Carmichael
POLITICS EDITOR

Yet another scandal has reared its ugly head in the House of Representatives. Thousands of checks have bounced in what many have dubbed "rubbergate." Outrageous! Who do these elected officials think they are? Why should they be able to write bad checks—checks that are covered without bound by the House bank—and not have to pay any kind of penalty like most Americans would? And besides, these are the people who are supposed to be running the country, yet they don't seem to be able to balance their own checkbooks. (Perhaps that's why we have a $400 billion deficit this year.) It's one more scandalous example of a corrupt and self-serving congress...or is it?

Before passing judgement one should first look at the nature of the "bank" itself. I put that word in quotation marks because it is really just a check cashing facility, set up for House members over 150 years ago as a convenience. Every month's paycheck goes into the "bank," and the member can write checks against that balance, or withdraw the entire amount for deposit in a separate account, such as that of a more traditional bank. There is no fee for use of the House bank, but there are no interest payments either. Therefore, when someone overdrafts their account, what really happens is they are borrowing the money from the other congressmen, at no cost to the taxpayer.

Let me illustrate: South Carolina National—as well as most local banks—has a similar system where students can open a checking account with no cost and no minimum balance requirement, but also pay no interest. You even get a one hundred dollar

"overdraft protection" to cover any bad checks. There are two main differences between this bank and the one in the House. 1) Interest payments: When you or I use the bank's money, we have to pay for it. That's how banks make a profit. The House bank, however, is a not-for-profit institution; hence the "free" loans. 2) Overdraft limits: The difference here is, they didn't have any.

Therefore, congressmen pay no heed to being overdrawn a few thousand dollars.

Yet, according to Congressman John Spratt (D-SC) the House bank never had less than one or two million dollars in it.

But should we have people in Congress that are this sloppy with their finances? And what about those people who wrote hundreds of bad checks? Should they be allowed to abuse the system like this?

Well, certainly the House bank needed stricter rules, but it should be pointed out that before last September there were no rules. Members didn't have to refrain from writing bad checks. It has been shown in recent weeks that overdrawing their accounts was politically stupid for the House members, but I would contend that, financially speaking, you would be an idiot not to take full advantage of the system. If someone says to you, "Here's some money; take as much as you want and pay it back whenever you can," would you not take it? As for the sloppy question, well, if there was no charge for writing a bad check, what reasons would you have for being meticulous about your records? Why worry about letting it happen again?

As for those who were not just sloppy but knew full well what they were doing, perhaps making money on these interest-free loans...well, I seriously doubt that there are many members of Congress that are that greedy. Let's face it, they are in the public service department. Most of those who aren't already well-off could make more money in the private sector. If financial gain is their goal, then they probably wouldn't be in Congress.

I say forget about something so unimportant and petty as "rubbergate." Something that has obviously been blown way out of proportion shouldn't affect who we send to Congress. Let's spend our energy on more important matters. It's time to put this "House bank" stuff into perspective.

Commentary: US welfare system in need of reform

by Leigh Hearnburg
STAFF WRITER

Is it possible to beat a dead horse any more than Americans have when dealing with welfare? Just the mere mention of the word sends chills down every politician's spine. It has proven to be one of those insurmountable issues that everyone has an opinion about but few have answers and even fewer have workable answers.

Politicians and honest people alike have simply chosen to put the issue of welfare aside and hope that somehow without directly addressing the issue America can work its way around the problem and eventually solve it. However, recently around the nation the issue has once again been brought to the forefront and Americans are agreeing to disagree and hoping that the welfare system will fix itself. It won't.

The recent California ruling in Miller v. Carlson dealt with problems from reform, and Wisconsin's governor led a headstrong fight to reform his state's welfare program. These examples have reminded us that even when the federal government has addressed an issue and "solved" the apparent problem, as the government did with the Job Opportunities and Basic Skills (JOBS) program, the problems for the individual states are just beginning. JOBS was enacted as part of the 1988 welfare reform program, and requires states to offer education and training to help make welfare clients self-sufficient.

In Miller v. Carlson, a federal judge ruled that California must provide child-care assistance to people on welfare who are enrolled in state-approved education and training activities, under the guidelines set up in JOBS. The case was brought up by families who could not get child-care as a result of budget cuts. In Wisconsin, Governor Thompson has implemented something called Learnfare, which takes away some welfare benefits from families whose children have a high number of unexcused absences from school.

To satisfy the requirements of the federal reform bill, every state implemented its own personal JOBS program. Each state's program developed its own personality and its own problems; however, the concept in all of the states was the same. Now, though, the great idea has become a reality of problems for many states. California, because of the ruling in Miller v. Carlson, is going to lose thousands upon thousands of dollars and in Wisconsin Governor Thompson's efforts to turn around the system there have resulted in a huge political battle and everyone in the state seems to be losing out: taxpayers and welfare recipients alike. The problems that those and many other states are facing are old ones that simply have new issues added on to them. Should the state have to provide child-care for all welfare recipients? Exactly how far can the state go in its regulations in order to reform the system? These are just two of the questions that California and Wisconsin are facing respectively, along with a myriad of other problems in other states.

Because of badly regulated programs many people receive benefits without doing anything. Also, many programs have been criticized for encouraging single mothers to avoid marriage and have more kids. The bottom line is that though reform has been implemented, the problems of the welfare system are far from solved. Day after day in state after state people are taking advantage of the system and the taxpayers are losing. The other side of the coin is that there are people out there in the system who are losing also. More and more problems are arising such as those faced by California and Wisconsin and the old problems haven't even been solved yet.

It is easy to identify these problems but difficult to solve them. The first step is identification. However, the next step is action. That is what Governor Thompson is doing in Wisconsin. Even though his policies are controversial, he is promoting action and results in dealing with the problems of welfare. Similarly, in California, the lawsuit has been just as controversial, yet it has brought attention to the problems that so desperately need to be solved.

Most Americans agree that the welfare system is in need of reform, but few agree on how we should go about it. Instead of debating the possible solutions and backing down from controversy, politicians and everyone need to address the issues head on and begin trying different solutions.

The examples for action are out there if only all of America will take notice.

Presidential Field Narrows Down To Four Candidates

by Ted Carmichael
POLITICS EDITOR

The number of candidates in this year's primary has now been reduced to four. On the Democrat's side there is only Bill Clinton of Arkansas and former governor of California Jerry Brown. And in the race for the republican nomination Pat Buchanan is still causing problems for President Bush, even though getting the nomination at this point would be just about numerically impossible.

The Democrats. In what was a surprise move to many people Tsongas dropped out of the race last week, stating lack of funds as his reason. He also had not done as well as he needed to do in Michigan and Illinois, as he barely held his own against Brown. Clinton took about half of the popular vote in both states, and now has the nomination pretty much wrapped up.

Clinton had said late last year that these two states were the true test for the primary, since they are both neutral territory for the candidates. He has worked for months organizing in both states, with the help of prominent friends from his school days at Yale. In fact, for a governor of a small, poor state, Clinton has a tremendous network of contacts. Senator Sam Nunn gave his campaign credibility early on, and former governors Richard Riley of South Carolina and James Blanchard of Michigan have both endorsed him. When allegations of draft dodging threatened the campaign, many former Rhodes scholars who studied with Clinton at Oxford came to his defence, including Harvard economist Robert Reich and Time magazine Editor-at-Large Strobe Talbott. And of course his wife, Hillary Clinton, is a great asset. She has been rated one of the country's top 100 lawyers for a number of years, and she has many powerful lawyer friends in both New York City and Washington, D.C.

It's thanks to these and many other high placed FOB's (Friends Of Bill) that Clinton has had the financial backing needed for a successful national campaign. Finances, or lack thereof, is the major cause of Harkin, Kerry, and Tsongas all pulling out of the race. Brown, who has said he will not accept any donations over $100, is barely holding on. But he vows that he will stick with it until the last primary, which will be in California on June 2. While other candidates travel on chartered planes, he squeezes into the coach section of scheduled flights, sleeps on foldout couches, and is driven around by unpaid volunteers. Brown, however, is getting a surprising amount of money through his infamous 800 number (1-800-426-1112) which, at this point, is the only thing keeping him going.

The Republicans. There is a lot of pressure on Buchanan to get out of the race before he does too much damage to Bush's campaign. Buchanan has acknowledged that he won't be able to get the nomination now, but he says he is staying on until California so that he can push the Republican party in the "right" direction (no pun intended). "We've been driving the debate, so why quit when we are winning the argument?" Winning the argument indeed: many people jokingly say that Buchanan is running the country. When he criticized the president for funding pornographic art, the White House responded by firing the head of the National Endowment for the Arts. He attacked a proposal that would require churches to disclose the names of large contributors, and Bush quickly replied that the policy would be "re-evaluated." And finally, after Buchanan harped relentlessly about Bush breaking his "no new taxes" pledge, Bush told The Atlanta Journal that raising taxes was "a big mistake."

Perhaps the most common criticism of Bush these days is that he is unprincipled. The New York Times recently said that he had an "appalling lack of conviction" and called him "President Noodle." Even Ronald Reagan was reported to have said that Bush "just doesn't seem to stand for anything." Reagan denied the story, however, and later had this to say during an appearance at the Los Angeles Regency Club: "George Bush was with me in my crusade. I support his candidacy to the fullest." Even Nixon, who criticized the US response to the Soviet invasion as "pathetically inadequate," said that Bush was "without question...the best man to lead the United States and the free world in the years ahead."

Nevertheless, tempers are wearing thin in the Bush camp as the re-election campaign seems to be floundering. Some advisors want him to give concessions to win back the conservative right, while others are cautioning against alienating the moderates who got him elected in the first place. Now Bush has returned to Washington in response to charges that he should act more "presidential."

As for Buchanan, many people wonder why he insists on staying in the race. He can't seem to get much more than a third of the popular vote in any primary, and even the National Review has said he should drop out. But what he is probably doing is setting himself up for 1996, just like Reagan did when he ran against Gerald Ford 16 years ago. By the time he gets to California, Buchanan could have a mailing list of nearly 50,000 supporters and many important PAC connections. This will give him an edge over possible future candidates, such as Vice President Quayle, James Baker, and Jack Kemp. So for now, expect to continue hearing his pointed attacks against "King George."

Congratulations!

Our new initiated sisters!

Rebecca Bacock	Vanessa McAlister
Miki Barden	Karen O'Connor
Mary Beth Brumbelow	Kelsey Gelschlager
Tracy Pierro	Shealy Painter
Liz Foster	Lori Randall
Erin Fox	Melynda Ray
Jennifer Harvey	Sally Schafer
Karen Ivey	Tracy Todd
Pam Kendall	Martha Ann King
Laney Wilkie

Zeta Tau Alpha

The Episcopal Church Especially Welcomes Students
+ ALL SAINTS' EPISCOPAL CHURCH
One Block North of Greenville Dining Hall

Sunday Schedule

8:30 am	Holy Eucharist
9:45 am	Christian Education
10:30 am	Coffee (in Parish Hall)
11:00 am	Holy Eucharist
6:00 pm	+ CANTERBURY — for College Students

• Need someone to talk to?
The Rev. Nancy J. Allison, Rector (833-1388)
The Rev. Thomas Pearson, Priest on Campus (833-8295)

PC collects 3,509 pounds of recyclable material

by Heather Moncrief
ENVIRONMENT EDITOR

Recycle PC has received its first weight statistics for materials recycled by Presbyterian College students, administrative staff, and faculty. Participation has been greater than was anticipated, and for the first recycling period, total weight of all recycled materials amounted to 3,509 lbs. The statistics for each of the recycled items are as follows:

MATERIAL	POUNDS COLLECTED
CARDBOARD	406
CANS	610
GLASS	403
LEDGER PAPER	493
NEWSPAPER	1,597

SIDEWALK SURVEY

What is your opinion of the recently implemented Recycle PC program? Do you see it as successful?

Laura Smith, junior.

Kathleen Dowd, sophomore.

"Ideally, it's a super concept and I commend those who have made efforts in that direction. I see it as making a difference, but it could be improved. For one, it could push to discontinue the use of Styrofoam products in GDH. Also, there are some problems with places to accumulate the recycled glass, paper, etc. in the dorms. For instance fire regulations do not allow for available space to house containers. But overall I think it is effective, especially with aluminum."

"The steps PC has taken are just a beginning to a successful recycling program. The program has started to make more students aware of the need to recycle and of the problems our society faces. We live in an extremely wasteful environment, and every attempt we can make to stop the waste should be done."

The steps taken that I am aware of include the recycling bins in Neville Hall, the dormitories, and other public areas. I have seen numerous students use them; and hopefully, we will continue to use them. The Eco-mugs sold by SEE, for example, are a great way to get students to do their share. I think that we should continue to make students more and more aware by publicizing the need that exists. I think people like you, Heather, have brought about a lot of consciousness concerning the environment. (I forgot to mention the SEE landfill. I don't know exactly what the purpose of that project was, but if it had gotten more publicity, it would have had more of an impact.) The Recycle PC program is on its way to being a positive and needed influence on PC."

B.J. Cottrell, junior.

"Whereas, the P.C. recycling effort is now in full swing technically, well, what about in reality? It's about time P.C. joined the recycling bandwagon. I want to see this project continued and expanded, like more receptacles in more places. Now that it is started, let's get everyone involved: students and faculty. More publicity and awareness-raising activities must complement this movement to spur involvement and keep it alive."

Will Lindstrom, junior.

"I think that the Recycle PC program is fantastic, but I don't feel that it can be called successful. "Successful" implies completion, and recycling must be an ongoing process. There may never be a victory, but we must continue to work towards the goal."

As for the program itself, selling the SEE mugs was a fantastic idea, as was placing the recycling bins around campus. Perhaps certain locations could be targeted for more of the bins (fraternity court jumps to mind). Finally, SEE seems like a great idea, and I hope to see its results soon."

Maybe we can't make a difference halfway around the world, but we can work to improve our own allotted space. The majority of us are living in the lap of luxury, and I think it's great that so much "carpeting" is going on. I do hate, however, that this could be the last day we'll seize. I guess my best suggestion would be continued education; without awareness, there is no hope."

Landon Westbrook, sophomore.

"I think the program has been very successful. I believe that many people were already recycling aluminum cans, but now more people are also recycling glass. I'd like to see more recycling of plastic. It is especially good to see the recycling of ledger paper because we get so much junk mail from student and school organizations. I think the recycling committee has done a great job, but I'd like to see the whole school participate more strongly with all recyclable materials."

Zeta Tau Alpha, Sigma Sigma Sigma, and Theta Chi received awards for showing their spirit for PC.

Basketball spirit awards are given

The winners of the spirit contest held over the entire basketball season are: In first place Theta Chi, second Sigma Sigma Sigma, and in third place Zeta Tau Alpha. Ben Jones accepted the first place award for Theta Chi while Celest Bowers accepted the second place award for Sigma Sigma Sigma and Elizabeth Perusse accepted the third place award for Zeta Tau Alpha.

Head Coach Gregg Nibert expressed his appreciation to these three groups by presenting cash prizes to each. He also thanked the PC pep band who traveled with the team to the conference tournament. "I would like to let everyone who supported us in any way this season know that their efforts were well appreciated by the team's players and coaching staff."

Women's Basketball finishes a winning season

Shara Garwood
STAFF WRITER

The PC Women's Basketball Team finished their season with a winning record of 16-10. The season drew to a close at the South Atlantic Conference Tournament in Boiling Springs, North Carolina, on February 20-22, when the team lost to Wingate by one point, 65-64.

Coach Beth Couture wants to emphasize the team's winning record. She stated, "The team played hard and improved a lot and we hope to improve more next year."

The top three scorers of the year were

Melanie Johnson, Jennifer Hilliard, and Allison Hubbard with an average of 13.5, 11.8, and 10.4 points, respectively. Allison Hubbard was

"We had a great start and I'm very pleased with the season and the kids"

PC went into the tournament fourth in the conference. They had won only two out of their last seven games. The Lady Blue Hose lost to Lander 64-50, Catawba 64-49, Elon 87-75, Mars Hill 88-83, and Wingate 67-59, before beating Carson-Newman 59-53 and Converse 78-72.

PC Baseball makes progress

Brad Busbee
SPORTS EDITOR

When the 1992 PC Baseball team began their spring season, their first game was played here at PC on the fifteenth of February against Union College. Union, from Kentucky, was able to defeat the Blue Hose in both games of the double header. Sophomore Jeff Wilson attributed the loss to "Opening game jitters." Since that date PC's record shows their improvement. With a 11-14 record the Blue Hose see themselves coming into their own. Now, every player on the team is looking toward the conference tournament.

The team is led by co-captains senior catcher David Fields, junior shortstop Greg Desto, and junior pitcher/DH, Robbie Waldrop. First base is played by Brad Alewine, second by Brian Thompson, and third base by Marcus Miller, while the outfield is manned by Eric Hytinen in left, Julius Prince in

A PC player slides into first base.

photo by Brian Koehler

center, and Joe Berube in right.

After their three game sweep over Lenoir-Rhyne the Blue Hose are mentally ready for their next conference game. "We are looking to playing Wingate three games this weekend," said student assistant Matt Huntsberger.

PC Tennis teams ranked nationally

by Brad Busbee
SPORTS EDITOR

This year's tennis season has brought a great deal of success to PC's men's and women's Blue Hose Tennis teams. The women's tennis team boasts a fine 9-6 record and is ranked sixteenth in the nation while the men's squad is ranked nineteenth in the NAIA and has a 14-11 record. Both of PC's tennis teams express enthusiasm about their play and show optimism about their remaining matches.

The Lady Blue Hose swept conference rivals Catawba College and Elon College 9-0 last weekend. Elon was ranked eighth in the nation. "We feel very strong and are excited about our matches with Wingate, Converse and Carson-Newman next weekend," pointed out Coach Arnold. "Minda Griffin, Dina Pagent, and Michelle Pace are all playing extremely well," she said.

The conference matches with Wingate on Friday and the match with Converse on Saturday will be held here at PC. Sunday, the squad will travel to Carson-Newman to compete in their fourth regular season conference match.

The men's tennis team has also had success. After their three wins out of six matches over spring break one of which was a win over thirteenth ranked Flagler College, the team has been gaining momentum. According to Coach McKee, the way the squad recently played against Coastal Carolina showed a great deal of progress. "Even though we lost, we looked much better than we did last year," pointed out McKee.

This weekend will be a big weekend for the men's team as well. Saturday morning PC will face Lincoln Memorial and at two thirty that afternoon, they will host High Point College. Sunday, Berry College who is currently ranked fifteenth in the nation will face PC. "Since its Spring Swing Weekend and since we are doing well, the team expects everyone to come out and watch us play on Saturday," said Coach McKee.

Co-captain Greg Desto said, "At first we couldn't seem to make things click. We wouldn't either hit the ball well and play average defense or we'd play great defense and do an average job of hitting. Now, we're playing up to our potential. Everything is coming together."

BLUE HOSE RECORD COLUMN

Baseball (11-14)

PC 5, Newberry 4
Allen 8, PC 5
Elon 7, PC 1
Elon 10, PC 0
Elon 5, PC 1
U. of Pittsburgh 10, PC 4
New Hampshire Col. 7, PC 5
#2 North Florida 8, PC 2
Carson-Newman 14, PC 10
PC 7, Carson-Newman 5
Carson-Newman 8, PC 6
Quincy 6, PC 4
PC 6, Quincy 1
PC 4, Lenoir-Rhyne 1
PC 4, Lenoir-Rhyne 1
PC 7, Lenoir-Rhyne 1
West Virginia St. 7, PC 6

Men's tennis (14-11)

PC 8, Clemson White 1
PC 9, Augusta 0
PC 8, Carson-Newman 1
#18 Birmingham So. 5, PC 4
#12 Wm. Carey 5, PC 4
#9 West Florida 6, PC 0
PC 7, Spring Hill 1
PC 6, #13 Flagler 3

Women's tennis (9-6)

Boston U. 9, PC 0
Stetson 6, PC 3
Mobile 7, PC 2
PC 7, Armstrong State 2
PC 9, Elon 0
PC 9, Catawba 0

Golf

Tied for 7th out of 14 teams in Lenoir-Rhyne Invitational Tournament.
5th out of 18 teams in Carson-Newman Persimmon Hill Tourney.

Golf team begins season

by Everett Catts
STAFF WRITER

The 1992 Presbyterian College Golf Team began its season earlier this month. On March 2 and 3, the squad completed in the Lenoir-Rhyne Tourney, finishing tied for seventh out of 14 teams. Craig Stevens' score of 159 was PC's best. PC finished fifth out of 18 teams in Saluda's Persimmon Hill Tourney, which was on March 16 and 17. The low man was Kelly Yelding, with scores of 77 and 83 totaling 160. On March 23 the Blue Hose finished fourth out of seven teams in the Richard Rendleman Tourney at Catawba. Kelly Yelding and Brad Stevens tied with scores of 79. Brad Stevens was also named All-Tournament.

The Blue Hose are led by Coach Chuck King. His team has the following players: Seniors Kelly Yelding, David Nelson, Van Cato, Craig Stevens, Brad Ellenburg, and Bret Boulware. Sophomores Will Holmes and Freshmen Brad Stevens, David McMullen, and Trip Bryan round up the rest of the squad. PC played North Greenville College yesterday and play in the Graysburg Hills Tourney in Chucky, Tennessee on March 30 and 31.

Fraternity raises money and awareness for handicapped

by Camisha Clarke
STAFF WRITER

"Best strong enough to care" is the slogan used by Pi Kappa Phi and People Understanding the Severely Handicapped (PUSH), a national service project founded and funded solely by the national Pi Kappa Phi fraternity to raise money and awareness for the disabled.

Throughout the year the members of Pi Kappa Phi, the only national fraternity in existence that has established a national philanthropy, participate in various activities that not only raise money for PUSH but also create emotional, intellectual and physical accord with the severely mentally and physically handicapped. Included in that list of activities is the annual PUSH-a-thon in which fraternity brothers push a wheelchair around campus for 48 hours. Since 1977 when Pi Kappa Phi founded PUSH, every brother has developed some empathy for the handicapped.

On Thursday, March 19, and Friday, March 20, the Presbyterian College chapter of Pi Kappa Phi sponsored a PUSH-a-thon at PC with hopes of developing contributions and sensitivity within students and faculty concerning daily struggles and accomplishments of the handicapped. Furthermore, the fraternity collected wheelchairs from the Laurens County Hospital and the Whitten Center, a school and home for the severely mentally and physically handicapped, and every brother participated in one way or another.

Along with the five brothers who rode in wheelchairs to classes, meals and all their other activities, other brothers took two-hour shifts at some time during the day or night to push these wheelchairs around campus. Both Stanton Smith, the Pi Kappa Phi PUSH Chairperson, and B.J. Cottrell organized this activity.

Completing a worthwhile project and given some support, Pi Kappa Phi raised approximately $300 from the PUSH-a-thon, which raised its total of funds donated to PUSH this year to over $2000. Even with the success of this particular activity, there still remains the negative realization of the inaccessibility for the handicapped on this campus.

Stanton Smith, who rode to meals in a wheelchair, clearly described the difficulties in the Greenville Dining Hall when he said, "It was just a big inconvenience." Although the dining hall has a ramp and a handicapped door for an accessible entrance, some of the foods that Smith normally would have eaten were out of reach and, therefore, not eaten simply because the foods were placed too far out of reach for a handicapped person.

Another problem that confronted the PUSH participants was the confirmed inaccessibility of the academic buildings at PC. All the brothers who rode to classes in a wheelchair agreed that Richardson Hall, Neville Hall, and Douglas House were unworkable for an unescorted handicapped person. The rear entrance to Richardson Hall has steps whose elevation makes impossible for a person in a wheelchair to enter. Even the double doors in front are unworkable because it is extremely difficult, if at all possible, to hold open two doors simultaneously while pulling a wheelchair through them as well. Hence, the doorways are too narrow.

Neville Hall is also not well-equipped for a handicapped person. The presence of an elevator does not excuse the lack of suitable size. In fact, when one of the fraternity brothers made use of the elevator, the wheelchair fit into the elevator so jointly that the elevator door actually scraped the wheelchair as it closed.

Furthermore, reaching the administrative services of the Dean of Students, Counselors, and Director of Residence Life, as well as other faculties on the second floor of Douglas House would be virtually impossible for a person in a wheelchair because their is no elevator as an alternative to the staircase.

Having to attend classes in all of these inaccessible academic buildings raised the awareness of the Pi Kappa Phi brothers and B.J. Cottrell, who rode in a wheelchair on Friday. Since he was unable to get into many of these buildings and classrooms, he and many others found it inconvenient to be carried up several steps. "Having to get help a lot of times makes you feel almost worthless. That's a big blow to your ego and your dignity to have to have someone help you repeatedly throughout the day," said Cottrell. Shamefaced and amazed, Cottrell also said, "I can only imagine what it would be like to have to go through that every day."

In addition to the inaccessibility of the academic buildings, there also exists a need for some kind of facilities in all of the residence halls except Georgia Hall, which contains an elevator that does not operate at all times during the school year. Hence, a handicapped prospective student would be thoroughly discouraged by the numerous lack of facilities for the physically handicapped. Fortunately, accessibility has been discussed recently among faculty and administration, but no solution or path of action has been decided upon. How long will a student in a wheelchair outside of Douglas House have to wait before he can see the Dean of Students with ease?

The efforts of Pi Kappa Phi in the PUSH-a-thon have hopefully removed the phobias and inhibitions that lie within each person and have enforced an empathy toward the physically disabled. Although this fraternity was "not trying to touch any sore spots," there were still some negative reactions as well as some encouraging support. Perhaps each person should consider the advice of Cottrell when he said, "Don't let your inhibitions get the best of you because, handicapped or not, we all have something to give."

PC student to 'go for the extra mile' this summer for handicapped

Press Release
OFFICE OF PUBLIC RELATIONS

David Dixon could get a summer job and earn some spending money for his next college year. That's what many of his friends will be doing when the spring semester ends in early May.

Instead, the Presbyterian College student has decided to do some traveling. He'll pedal 3500 miles across the country on bicycle - but it won't be a sightseeing tour. No, he'll be "going the extra mile" for people with disabilities.

Dixon, a junior from Greenville, South Carolina, and a member of Pi Kappa Phi fraternity at PC, will join 49 other students from colleges and universities across the nation for a 62 day "Journey of Hope." The students are all members of Pi Kappa Phi chapters participating in PUSH America.

PUSH, an acronym for People Understanding the Severely Handicapped, was founded by Pi Kappa Phi fraternity to improve the lives of people with severely handicapped conditions through service, volunteerism, education and awareness. PUSH Inc. is a private, non-profit organization that has served these special individuals for more than 14 years by raising more than $1.75 million by the Pi Kappa Phi membership.

Another PC student, Dave Aucremann, participated in the PUSH

America ride during the summers of 1990 and '91 - and Dixon was impressed by his fraternity brother's experience.

"I've been curious about PUSH America since I joined the fraternity. Dave talked to me about it and, to be honest, I haven't spent a lot of my time doing volunteer service. This, I thought, would be a good start. Hopefully by doing this, I'll make somebody's life a little better," said Dixon, the son of Dr. and Mrs. J. Kelly Dixon of 21 Bartram Grove, Greenville.

The PUSH America participants will leave from Washington, D.C., on June 15 for a nine week trek to San Francisco.

David Dixon will be riding across the country this summer in support of handicapped people.

photo by Brian Koehler

One team will travel a southern route, while the other - of which Dixon will be a member - travels a northern route.

"I'll get to know the other 24 guys on my team really well," he said. "It's a good diverse group from all over the country, and I look forward to being a part of it."

In the days leading up to their travels, the team members will provide presentations on campuses and in communities helping others understand the issues facing those with disabilities. After cycling an average of 75 miles per day, the team will take part in many more presentations and special events, often meeting with those for whom they are riding.

Besides raising awareness, PUSH America hopes to raise more than $200,000 for future educational programs, with much of the money raised by the team member. Dixon and the other 49 students must each raise a minimum of $4000 to qualify.

Anyone interested in "going the extra mile" by making a tax-deductible donation to PUSH on David Dixon's behalf can contact him at 833-8646.

Cost of attending PC increases by $884

by Jason West
MANAGING EDITOR

The cost of being a student at Presbyterian College is once again increasing. At its last meeting, the PC Board of Trustees gave approval to the new operating budget and fee schedule for the 1992-93 year.

According to Dr. Kenneth Orr, PC president, the operating budget for the coming year is set at $19.6 million. Of that amount, $15.2 million (77 percent) will be generated by tuition and fees. The remaining $4.4 million will come from endowments, gifts, and other contributions.

Tuition and other fees for next year's PC students will increase by $884. Broken down, that is a tuition increase of $382 per semester, a boarding fee increase of $48 per semester, and a general fee increase of $12 per semester.

"Tuition increases are justified because operating costs go up. The college attempts to keep PC wages competitive, so we budget in salary increases. There is an increase in health insurance cost for our employees. Utility increases are to be expected and financial aid assistance increases also," said Orr.

Orr points out that this year's increase

is the same percentage increase (6.5 percent) as last year's. "Last year, we experienced the lowest tuition increase percentage in 14 years. We made every effort this year to keep it at the same level," he added. "By comparison, last year a lot of public institutions were experiencing tuition increases of 10 percent or more."

In the midst of rising college costs, Orr reports that he does see some positive things. "I too am concerned about the rising cost of attending college. It hits me in my pocket book like everyone else. However, it would appear to me that a downsizing of increases is occurring," he said.

"In the 1980's, PC experienced tuition increases of 8 to 9 percent. In fact, one year PC went over 11 percent. Unless we have runaway inflation, I don't see that happening again. There are still going to be increases, but the increases are going to be less," added Orr.

"I don't know of anyone who enjoys a fee increase. PC has been operating with a balanced budget for the past decade because we are not willing to operate in a deficit situation. Deficits jeopardize the future of the institution. It is in everyone's best interest for students and parents to allow PC to operate in the black," said Orr.

devotion to his job and to the people here." Mason also added that beyond his duties as an officer, Reeder has been a dedicated friend to his co-workers.

A friend bids farewell to students and staff

by LeJeanna Maddox
FEATURES EDITOR

Several hundred people turned out last

Tuesday at a reception to honor and bid farewell to a long-time member of the PC administration.

Hubbard Reeder retired last week after serving PC for thirteen years through the Public Safety Office. Guests at the reception included students, members of the Clinton community, and at least half of the Clinton Police Department, a testament in itself to the respect Reeder has garnered during his time here.

"You could tell he really enjoyed it," remarked Chief Grey Mason. "I was glad we had the number of students and the people from the community."

When Chief Mason relieved "Reeder" for the last time early Tuesday morning, both parties had mixed emotions. "He has been a very devoted and very faithful officer," noted Mason. "There have been times when all three of the officers were sick but were on the job anyway. It's times like those when we needed each other. He showed real devotion to his job and to the people here." Mason also added that beyond his duties as an officer, Reeder has been a dedicated friend to his co-workers.

Officer Hubbard Reeder file photo

Prior to coming to PC, Reeder served twenty years in the U.S. Navy. He is a decorated veteran of the Korean and Vietnam Wars. He has received the Purple Heart, has been awarded the Bronze Medal three times, and is a four-time recipient of the Good Conduct Medal.

He spent a large portion of his time in the Navy as a military policeman. An officer is already in training to fill the position Reeder is vacating. Mike Carbonneau has recently moved to the Clinton area after graduating from the police academy in Florida. "Mike has big shoes to fill, and he realizes it," says Mason.

Although he has officially retired, Reeder plans to stay busy. He has accepted a part-time position as a security guard at Laurens High School. The job will allow him to continue doing what he enjoys while leaving him more free time to spend with his grandson Christopher.

Clinton area after graduating from the police academy in Florida. "Mike has big shoes to fill, and he realizes it," says Mason.

Although he has officially retired, Reeder plans to stay busy. He has accepted a part-time position as a security guard at Laurens High School. The job will allow him to continue doing what he enjoys while leaving him more free time to spend with his grandson Christopher.

Clinton area after graduating from the police academy in Florida. "Mike has big shoes to fill, and he realizes it," says Mason.

Although he has officially retired, Reeder plans to stay busy. He has accepted a part-time position as a security guard at Laurens High School. The job will allow him to continue doing what he enjoys while leaving him more free time to spend with his grandson Christopher.

Dr. William Barron, son of N. G. Barron, was present at the dedication of Barron Dorm this past Friday.

photo by Steve Owens

Residence hall dedicated in honor of Columbia native N.G. Barron

Press Release
OFFICE OF PUBLIC RELATIONS

While attending Presbyterian College, the Reverend Narciso Gonzales Barron established an impressive history of service. Upon his graduation in 1933, that dedication to service did not end as he entered the ministry and devoted his life to serving others until his death in 1970.

On Friday, March 20, Presbyterian College paid tribute to the Columbia native by dedicating a new residence hall in his name.

"Presbyterian College is pleased to dedicate this splendid residence hall to honor the memory of one of our alumni, N.G. Barron, for his long and effective service as a Presbyterian minister," PC President Kenneth B. Orr said. "He is fondly remembered by his friends and family as a warm and gracious minister who served as a respected spokesman of the gospel for 33 years."

Rev. Barron, born 1911, was an active member of the student body at Presbyterian College. He was a member of Beta Kappa Fraternity, as well as the literary, scientific and journalistic societies. In addition to serving on the newspaper and literary magazine staffs, he was a member of the varsity football, basketball, baseball and boxing teams.

Following his undergraduate career at PC, Rev. Barron received the B.D. degree from Columbia Theological Seminary in Virginia.

From 1940 to 1945, Barron served as a chaplain in the U.S. Army, and was the first chaplain to graduate from the U.S. Army Tactical School. He later served as minister of Presbyterian congregations in South Carolina and Georgia, and gave 13 years of service to the First Presbyterian Church in Eufala, Alabama, prior to his death.

Following his undergraduate career at PC, Rev. Barron received the B.D. degree from Columbia Theological Seminary in Virginia.

From 1940 to 1945, Barron served as a chaplain in the U.S. Army, and was the first chaplain to graduate from the U.S. Army Tactical School. He later served as minister of Presbyterian congregations in South Carolina and Georgia, and gave 13 years of service to the First Presbyterian Church in Eufala, Alabama, prior to his death.

"Rev. Barron had a life of service that was very genuine," said Ed Campbell, the college's director of development for major gifts. "PC would have a difficult time finding a graduate who better exemplified a commitment to service. It's appropriate that we honor him."

Barron was the nephew of N.G. Gonzales, the first editor and manager of The State newspaper in Columbia. Among his family members who attended Friday's ceremonies were his wife, Ruby Clarke Barron of Eufala, Alabama; his sister, Margaret Brown of Columbia; and his children, F. Hutton Barron of Birmingham, Alabama; Lucie Gonzales Barron Eggleston of Columbia; William Rowan Barron of Knoxville, Tennessee; and Sally Barron LaBadie of Atlanta.

Barron was the nephew of N.G. Gonzales, the first editor and manager of The State newspaper in Columbia. Among his family members who attended Friday's ceremonies were his wife, Ruby Clarke Barron of Eufala, Alabama; his sister, Margaret Brown of Columbia; and his children, F. Hutton Barron of Birmingham, Alabama; Lucie Gonzales Barron Eggleston of Columbia; William Rowan Barron of Knoxville, Tennessee; and Sally Barron LaBadie of Atlanta.

Barron was the nephew of N.G. Gonzales, the first editor and manager of The State newspaper in Columbia. Among his family members who attended Friday's ceremonies were his wife, Ruby Clarke Barron of Eufala, Alabama; his sister, Margaret Brown of Columbia; and his children, F. Hutton Barron of Birmingham, Alabama; Lucie Gonzales Barron Eggleston of Columbia; William Rowan Barron of Knoxville, Tennessee; and Sally Barron LaBadie of Atlanta.

Barron was the nephew of N.G. Gonzales, the first editor and manager of The State newspaper in Columbia. Among his family members who attended Friday's ceremonies were his wife, Ruby Clarke Barron of Eufala, Alabama; his sister, Margaret Brown of Columbia; and his children, F. Hutton Barron of Birmingham, Alabama; Lucie Gonzales Barron Eggleston of Columbia; William Rowan Barron of Knoxville, Tennessee; and Sally Barron LaBadie of Atlanta.

INTRAMURALS

The Intramural Department would like to thank all students, faculty, and staff that participated in the 1992 Intramural basketball season. The champions were: women's league - Couture's Chaos, C league - Org Jack, B league - DFA, and A league - Supreme Court. In the other sports concluding in February, Ike Dickey defeated Mark Evans to win the IM Singles Tennis Championship. With only softball and swimming left to play this spring, Sigma Nu and Theta Chi are tied in the race for the all sports trophy.

HABITAT FOR HUMANITY

A group of Habitat volunteers spent their Spring Break in Pensacola, Florida working on a local Habitat project. Thanks to Dean Nixon and student volunteers: Laura Smith, LeJeanna Maddox, Ron Mixon, Phil Ulrich, Chuck Conrad, Adreana Villabos, Marta Albaney, Billy Hooper, Minh Vu Nguyen, and Ron Hull.

Congratulations to our new officers! We are looking to a great year. (President-LeJeanna Maddox, Vice-President-Ron Hull, Corresponding Secretary-Jennifer Gordon, Recording Secretary-Margaret Johnson, Treasurer-Mark Hunt, Spokesperson/Special Projects-Erica Durham)

Mark April 25 on your calendar! Habitat will be sponsoring a fundraiser that will be an all day band concert - BANDBLAST! Get excited! Great music! Great people! Great fun!

STUDENT AFFAIRS

Mr. Lennard Jorgensen has been retained by the college to provide professional counseling for PC students. Mr. Jorgensen will be on campus from 1:00 to 5:00 pm Wednesdays for the remainder of this semester. Appointments may be made by calling extension 8378 or 8379. Jorgensen has completed all course work toward a Ph.D. in Counseling Psychology and is currently working on his dissertation. He has experience in individual and group counseling and has recently completed a one year internship program at USC Columbia.

CAMP COUNSELOR'S COURSE

Recreation Leadership, a May 25-30 course, is a unique opportunity to prepare for camp work. It provides skills and resources in games and social recreation, song leading, and Folk and Square Dancing. In addition, attention is given to puppetry, the philosophies of camping, and how to work with special groups such as the mentally retarded and elderly.

Since class is held at least 8 periods a day, most of the written homework is completed following a syllabus which is available from the instructor. Enrollment is limited to 12 so that each student has enough leadership time to develop skills in class. Religion 326 is taught by Dr. Jack Presseau, who can be reached at home (833-3531) where he is working on a sabbatical project or, on Monday and Thursday afternoon, at his office (833-8382).

PI KAPPA ALPHA

A belated congratulations to our new

pledges: Brian Inman, Lance Dauby, Robby Stargell, Blake Stonzell, Ryan Brown, Jamie Smith, Gary Smith, John Broadway, Ben Biggar, Tim "Shemp" Sheppard, and Tommy Harney.

Elections were held Tuesday, February 25. Our new officers are: SMC-Dave Wahn, IMC-Tim Davis, THC-Mike Bell, SC-Ted Chapin, MC-Todd Shearer, Social-Brad Wildes, Pledge Tyrants-J.D. Johnson and Brad Palmer, House Chairman-Nathan Snellings, Fund Raiser-Brian Rogers, Rush-Greg Owens, Historian-Jim McClary, IFC Reps-Mike Fletcher and Brian Thomas, Rick-John Edwards, Alumni Relations-John Crawford, Intramurals-Will Robinson, Fire Marshall-Alex Hormone, Community Service-Mike Mathis.

Dream Girl was a great weekend! The brotherhood heartily congratulates our new Dream Girl, Malia Collar. "Projectile Award" goes out to Robby Stargell.

Thank you to all Zetas who came out last weekend. Timewarp was incredible. You guys are great to party with. Please continue coming out.

ALPHA DELTA PI

The sisters of Alpha Delta Pi would like to congratulate all of our new officers. We would also like to welcome our new members into full Delta membership. We are so proud of all of you, and we love you all very much. Recently initiated Delta members are: Katherine Bonner, Lisa Bruce, Natasha Casada, Avery Cheves, Ann Dodd, Elizabeth Gilbert, Holly Harper, Jennifer Harris, Leigh Hearnburg, Kate Ashby Lawton, Alice Leach, Kelly Reiser, Katherine Rhame, Jennifer Roach, Katy Ross, Ashley Small, Jenny Wallace, and Ashley Williams. Diamond Days were very special! Thanks goes out to everyone who has helped with Teeter-Totter for the Ronald McDonald House. Everyone had fun in the spirit of service.

We are looking forward to our annual Senior Roast and making memories at Black Diamond Ball. Thanks for a great semester sisters!

THETA CHI

The Brothers of Theta Chi would like to congratulate all of the new officers: President Ben Jones, Vice President Jay Pullin, Secretary Todd Carby, Chaplain Chad Smith, Treasurer Lee Edenfield and Pledge Marshall Harrison Jones.

Several brothers recently went to Florida State for the Annual National Theta Chi Convention. Good luck to goalie Bret Boulware, who will be representing the Blue Hose at the NAIA Senior Bowl.

KAPPA ALPHA

The brothers of Kappa Alpha Order want to congratulate our new officers for the 1992-93 school year. They are: Michael Ivey - I; Charles Cannon - II; William Stover - III; Frank McKay - IV; Bud Martin - V; Neil Hunter - VI; Jay Quantz - VII; Lee Neel IV - VIII; and Ron Mixon - IX. Thank you to our old officers for a great year and outstanding leadership.

World premiere scheduled for PC stage

Press Release
OFFICE OF PUBLIC RELATIONS

As a boy, Richie Prosch would dutifully accompany his family to visit Rose Sophie Suckstorf, his father's great aunt. Like many trips to see older family members, it was filled with stories in Rose's living room - not exactly a growing boy's ideal way to spend an afternoon.

As he grew older, however, Prosch became fascinated with the tales and anecdotes, and found time in his schedule to visit Rose at her home in Bloomfield, Nebraska. While compiling three children's books about the stories, the free-lance writer and artist was suddenly struck by an idea to give permanence to his relative's stories - a dramatic presentation entitled "The Last Rose of Summer" that will make its world premiere Thursday, April 2, at Presbyterian College's Edmunds Hall.

"Two years ago when I was putting together the children's books, I realized that there were some of Rose's stories that didn't fit. They were either too adult or too short for a book," Prosch said. "This dramatic presentation seemed the best place for them. It really isn't a play or simply an oral interpretation. There is some drama, some comedy pieces, narrative storytelling, and pieces acted out. I think it will be different from anything people have seen recently."

Along with his wife Gina, an English

instructor at Presbyterian College, Prosch hopes to share some of his relative's spirit and love of a good story. Born in 1897 in Dennison, Iowa, Rose's family moved to a farm in Bloomfield when she was 10. She worked at several businesses in town and finally married Harry Suckstorf, the town pharmacist, at the age of 35. The couple traveled frequently, allowing Rose to add to her tales, until Harry died in 1968. Rose died on March 28, 1991, at the age of 93.

"The reason I've always found Rose so fascinating is that she was always ahead of her time and lived such a full life. She worked around these German farmers and earned their respect, which was unheard of for a woman of her time. Plus, she basically saw the 20th century during her life. The perspective she could give you was incredible," said Prosch.

Prosch said he could not even guess the number of stories he heard while sitting in Rose's living room. However, he said he will never forget the environment in which they were told - an environment he hopes to recreate during the show.

"The Last Rose of Summer" will explore Rose's life through the dramatic re-telling and discussion of six energetic yarns.

"The Last Rose of Summer" will begin at 8:15 pm in Edmunds Hall on April 2. There is no admission charge and the public is invited.

PC Choir to perform Spring Concert

The Presbyterian College Choir will present its Spring Concert on Thursday, April 9, at 8:15 pm in Edmunds Hall. The public is invited to attend this free program.

The forty-voice choir has recently returned from its Spring Tour to churches in South Carolina, Georgia, and Florida. Dr. Charles T. Gaines, Charles A. Dana Schickele).

Two senior choir members, Kathy Kennedy and David Pitts, will be guest conductors for two pieces. Kennedy has selected the American Folk Song "The Water is Wide" and Pitts will conduct "Charlottown." From the humorous "Songs Mein Grossmama Sang" by Lloyd Pfautsch.

PC Choir file photo

Professor of Music, is conductor of the choir.

The concert will be an all American program. Music by American composers from Revolutionary War days up to the present will be heard. Two compositions by the most original early American composer, William Billings, will be performed.

Two tunes by Stephen Foster will be sung along with folk song arrangements and spirituals.

Other composers to be heard are Charles Ives and P.D.Q. Bach (or Peter the choir will sing "Fraulen Bo-Peepon" and "Jack and Jill."

Soloists will be Lawana Leroy, David Long, David Pitts, and Elizabeth Bryan. Accompanists will be Christy Smithman, Rebecca Hentz, Stacey Peters, and Mrs. Nancy Von Hollen.

During the concert the Choir and members of the Lectures and Fine Arts Committee will honor Dr. David Moorefield, professor of philosophy and Coordinator of LFA. Moorefield will retire at the end of this academic year.

Cost of attending PC increases by $884

by Jason West
MANAGING EDITOR

The cost of being a student at Presbyterian College is once again increasing. At its last meeting, the PC Board of Trustees gave approval to the new operating budget and fee schedule for the 1992-93 year.

According to Dr. Kenneth Orr, PC president, the operating budget for the coming year is set at $19.6 million. Of that amount, $15.2 million (77 percent) will be generated by tuition and fees. The remaining $4.4 million will come from endowments, gifts, and other contributions.

"I too am concerned about the rising cost... It hits me in my pocket book like everyone else."

Tuition and other fees for next year's PC students will increase by $884. Broken down, that is a tuition increase of $382 per semester, a boarding fee increase of $48 per semester, and a general fee increase of $12 per semester.

"Tuition increases are justified because operating cost go up. The college attempts to keep PC wages competitive, so we budget in salary increases. There is an increase in health insurance cost for our employees. Utility increases are to be expected and financial aid assistance increases also," said Orr.

Orr points out that this year's increase

is the same percentage increase (6.5 percent) as last year's. "Last year, we experienced the lowest tuition increase percentage in 14 years. We made every effort this year to keep it at the same level," he added. "By comparison, last year a lot of public institutions were experiencing tuition increases of 10 percent or more."

In the midst of rising college costs, Orr reports that he does see some positive things. "I too am concerned about the rising cost of attending college. It hits me in my pocket book like everyone else. However, it would appear to me that a downsizing of increases is occurring," he said.

"In the 1980's, PC experienced tuition increases of 8 to 9 percent. In fact, one year PC went over 11 percent. Unless we have runaway inflation, I don't see that happening again. There are still going to be increases, but the increases are going to be less," added Orr.

"I don't know of anyone who enjoys a fee increase. PC has been operating with a balanced budget for the past decade because we are not willing to operate in a deficit situation. Deficits jeopardize the future of the institution. It is everyone's best interest for students and parents to allow PC to operate in the black," said Orr.

A friend bids farewell to students and staff

by LeJeanna Maddox
FEATURES EDITOR

Several hundred people turned out last

Tuesday at a reception to honor and bid farewell to a long-time member of the PC administration. Hubbard Reeder retired last week after serving PC for thirteen years through the Public Safety Office. Guests at the reception included students, members of the Clinton community, and at least half of the Clinton Police Department, a testament in itself to the respect Reeder has garnered during his time here. "You could tell he really enjoyed it," remarked Chief Grey Mason. "I was glad we had the number of students and the people from the community."

When Chief Mason relieved "Reeder" for the last time early Tuesday morning, both parties had mixed emotions. "He has been a very devoted and very faithful officer," noted Mason. "There have been times when all three of the officers were sick but were on the job anyway. It's times like those when we needed each other. He showed real devotion to his job and to the people here." Mason also added that beyond his duties as an officer, Reeder has been a dedicated friend to his co-workers.

Officer Hubbard Reeder file photo

Prior to coming to PC, Reeder served twenty years in the U.S. Navy. He is a decorated veteran of the Korean and Vietnam Wars. He has received the Purple Heart, has been awarded the Bronze Medal three times, and is a four-time recipient of the Good Conduct Medal. He spent a large portion of his time in the Navy as a military policeman.

An officer is already in training to fill the position Reeder is vacating. Mike Carbonneau has recently moved to the

Clinton area after graduating from the police academy in Florida. "Mike has big shoes to fill, and he realizes it," says Mason. Although he has officially retired, Reeder plans to stay busy. He has accepted a part-time position as a security guard at Laurens High School. The job will allow him to continue doing what he enjoys while leaving him more free time to spend with his grandson Christopher.

photo by Steve Owens

Dr. William Barron, son of N. G. Barron, was present at the dedication of Barron Dorm this past Friday.

Residence hall dedicated in honor of Columbia native N.G. Barron

Press Release
OFFICE OF PUBLIC RELATIONS

While attending Presbyterian College, the Reverend Narciso Gonzales Barron established an impressive history of service. Upon his graduation in 1933, that dedication to service did not end as he entered the ministry and devoted his life to serving others until his death in 1970.

On Friday, March 20, Presbyterian College paid tribute to the Columbia native by dedicating a new residence hall in his name.

"Presbyterian College is pleased to dedicate this splendid residence hall to honor the memory of one of our alumni, N.G. Barron, for his long and effective service as a Presbyterian minister," PC President Kenneth B. Orr said. "He is fondly remembered by his friends and family as a warm and gracious minister who served as a respected spokesman of the gospel for 33 years."

Rev. Barron, born 1911, was an active member of the student body at Presbyterian College. He was a member of Beta Kappa Fraternity, as well as the literary, scientific and journalistic societies. In addition to serving on the newspaper and literary magazine staffs, he was a member of the varsity football, basketball, baseball and boxing teams.

Following his undergraduate career at PC, Rev. Barron received the B.D. degree from Columbia Theological Seminary in Virginia.

From 1940 to 1945, Barron served as a chaplain in the U.S. Army, and was the first chaplain to graduate from the U.S. Army Tactical School. He later served as minister of Presbyterian congregations in South Carolina and Georgia, and gave 13 years of service to the First Presbyterian Church in Fufala, Alabama, prior to his death.

"Rev. Barron had a life of service that was very genuine," said Ed Campbell, the college's director of development for major gifts. "PC would have a difficult time finding a graduate who better exemplified a commitment to service. It's appropriate that we honor him."

Barron was the nephew of N.G. Gonzales, the first editor and manager of The State newspaper in Columbia. Among his family members who attended Friday's ceremonies were his wife, Ruby Clarke Barron of Fufala, Alabama; his sister, Margaret Brown of Columbia; and his children, F. Hutton Barron of Birmingham, Alabama; Lucie Gonzales Barron Eggleston of Columbia; William Rowan Barron of Knoxville, Tennessee; and Sally Barron LaBadie of Atlanta.

INTRAMURALS

The Intramural Department would like to thank all students, faculty, and staff that participated in the 1992 Intramural basketball season. The champions were: women's league - Couture's Chaos, C league - Org Jack, B league - DFA, and A league - Supreme Court. In the other sports concluding in February, Ike Dickey defeated Mark Evans to win the IM Singles Tennis Championship. With only softball and swimming left to play this spring, Sigma Nu and Theta Chi are tied in the race for the all sports trophy.

HABITAT FOR HUMANITY

A group of Habitat volunteers spent their Spring Break in Pensacola, Florida working on a local Habitat project. Thanks to Dean Nixon and student volunteers: Laura Smith, LeJeanna Maddox, Ron Mixon, Phil Ulrich, Chuck Conrad, Adreana Villabos, Maria Albaney, Billy Hooper, Minh Vu Nguyen, and Ron Hull.

Congratulations to our new officers! We are looking to a great year. (President-LeJeanna Maddox, Vice-President-Ron Hull, Corresponding Secretary-Jennifer Gordon, Recording Secretary-Margaret Johnson, Treasurer-Mark Hunt, Spokesperson-Special Projects-Erica Durham)

Mark April 25 on your calendar! Habitat will be sponsoring a fundraiser that will be an all day band concert - BANDBLAST! Get excited! Great music! Great people! Great fun!

STUDENT AFFAIRS

Mr. Lennard Jorgensen has been retained by the college to provide professional counseling for PC students. Mr. Jorgensen will be on campus from 1:00 to 5:00 pm Wednesdays for the remainder of this semester. Appointments may be made by calling extension 8378 or 8379. Jorgensen has completed all course work toward a Ph.D. in Counseling Psychology and is currently working on his dissertation. He has experience in individual and group counseling and has recently completed a one year internship program at USC Columbia.

CAMP COUNSELOR'S COURSE

Recreation Leadership, a May 25-30 course, is a unique opportunity to prepare for camp work. It provides skills and resources in games and social recreation, song leading, and Folk and Square Dancing. In addition, attention is given to puppetry, the philosophies of camping, and how to work with special groups such as the mentally retarded and elderly.

Since class is held at least 8 periods a day, most of the written homework is completed following a syllabus which is available from the instructor. Enrollment is limited to 12 so that each student has enough leadership time to develop skills in class. Religion 326 is taught by Dr. Jack Presseau, who can be reached at home (833-3531) where he is working on a sabbatical project or, on Monday and Thursday afternoon, at his office (833-8382).

PI KAPPA ALPHA

A belated congratulations to our new

World premiere scheduled for PC stage

Press Release
OFFICE OF PUBLIC RELATIONS

As a boy, Richie Prosch would dutifully accompany his family to visit Rose Sophie Suckstorf, his father's great aunt. Like many trips to see older family members, it was filled with stories in Rose's living room - not exactly a growing boy's ideal way to spend an afternoon.

As he grew older, however, Prosch became fascinated with the tales and anecdotes, and found time in his schedule to visit Rose at her home in Bloomfield, Nebraska.

While compiling three children's books about the stories, the free-lance writer and artist was suddenly struck by an idea to give permanence to his relative's stories - a dramatic presentation entitled "The Last Rose of Summer" that will make its world premiere Thursday, April 2, at Presbyterian College's Edmunds Hall.

"Two years ago when I was putting together the children's books, I realized that there were some of Rose's stories that didn't fit. They were either too adult or too short for a book," Prosch said. "This dramatic presentation seemed the best place for them. It really isn't a play or simply an oral interpretation. There is some drama, some comedy pieces, narrative storytelling, and pieces acted out. I think it will be different from anything people have seen recently."

Along with his wife Gina, an English

instructor at Presbyterian College, Prosch hopes to share some of his relative's spirit and love of a good story. Born in 1897 in Dennison, Iowa, Rose's family moved to a farm in Bloomfield when she was 10. She worked at several businesses in town and finally married Harry Suckstorf, the town pharmacist, at the age of 35. The couple traveled frequently, allowing Rose to add to her tales, until Harry died in 1968. Rose died on March 28, 1991, at the age of 93.

"The reason I've always found Rose so fascinating is that she was always ahead of her time and lived such a full life. She worked around these German farmers and earned their respect, which was unheard of for a woman of her time. Plus, she basically saw the 20th century during her life. The perspective she could give you was incredible," said Prosch.

Prosch said he could not even guess the number of stories he heard while sitting in Rose's living room. However, he said he will never forget the environment he hopes to recreate during the show.

"The Last Rose of Summer" will explore Rose's life through the dramatic re-telling and discussion of six energetic yarns.

"The Last Rose of Summer" will begin at 8:15 pm in Edmunds Hall on April 2. There is no admission charge and the public is invited.

pledges: Brian Inman, Lance Dauby, Robby Stargell, Blake Stonzell, Ryan Brown, Jamie Smith, Gary Smith, John Broadway, Ben Biggar, Tim "Shemp" Sheppard, and Tommy Hamey.

Elections were held Tuesday, February 25. Our new officers are: SMC-Dave Wahn, IMC-Tim Davis, THC-Mike Bell, SC-Ted Chapin, MC-Todd Shearer, Social-Brad Wildes, Pledge Tyrants-J.D. Johnson and Brad Palmer, House Chairman-Nathan Snellings, Fund Raiser-Brian Rogers, Rush-Greg Owens, Historian-Jim McClary, IFC Reps-Mike Fletcher and Brian Thomas, Rick-John Edwards, Alumni Relations-John Crawford, Intramurals-Will Robinson, John Marshall-Alex Hormone, Community Service-Mike Mathis.

Dream Girl was a great weekend! The brotherhood heartily congratulates our new Dream Girl, Malia Collar. "Projectile Award" goes out to Robby Stargell.

Thank you to all Zetas who came out last weekend. Timewarp was incredible. You guys are great to party with. Please continue coming out.

ALPHA DELTA PI

The sisters of Alpha Delta Pi would like to congratulate all of our new officers. We would also like to welcome our new members into full Delta membership. We are so proud of all of you, and we love you all very much. Recently initiated Delta members are: Katherine Bonner, Lisa Bruce, Natasha Casada, Avery Cheves, Ann Dodd, Elizabeth Gilbert, Holly Harper, Jennifer Harris, Leigh Hearnburg, Kate Ashby Lawton, Alice

PC Choir to perform Spring Concert

The Presbyterian College Choir will present its Spring Concert on Thursday, April 9, at 8:15 pm in Edmunds Hall. The public is invited to attend this free program.

The forty-voice choir has recently returned from its Spring Tour to churches in South Carolina, Georgia, and Florida. Dr. Charles T. Gaines, Charles A. Dana Schickel).

Two senior choir members, Kathy Kennedy and David Pitts, will be guest conductors for two pieces. Kennedy has selected the American Folk Song "The Water is Wide" and Pitts will conduct "Charlottown." From the humorous "Songs Mein Grossmama Sang" by Lloyd Pfautsch.

PC Choir file photo

Professor of Music, is conductor of the choir.

The concert will be an all American program. Music by American composers from Revolutionary War days up to the present will be heard. Two compositions by the most original early American composer, William Billings, will be performed. Two tunes by Stephen Foster will be sung along with folk song arrangements and spirituals.

Other composers to be heard are Charles Ives and P.D.Q. Bach (or Peter the choir will sing "Fraulen Bo-Peep" and "Jack and Jill."

Soloists will be Lawana Leroy, David Long, David Pitts, and Elizabeth Bryan. Accompanists will be Christy Smithman, Rebecca Hentz, Stacey Peters, and Mrs. Nancy Von Hollen.

During the concert the Choir and members of the Lectures and Fine Arts Committee will honor Dr. David Moorefield, professor of philosophy and Coordinator of LFA. Moorefield will retire at the end of this academic year.

Dreams So Real headlining tonight at SUB Spring Swing

Press Release
ATHENS, GA

"There's no time to sleep, just stand and deliver," Dreams So Real challenges in one of their newest songs, "You and the River," and as 1992 begins they seem poised to accomplish just that. You may already know Dreams So Real's penchant for blending muscular with the melodic, yet no one could have imagined the maturation and diversity of the group since the release of their first major label album in 1988. But a listen to the power-pop trio in 1992 might convince you otherwise. "This is a group that has not reached it's peak," says Russell Carter, the group's longtime attorney and advisor. From the rousing rocker "Eye to Eye," to the country-pop flavor of "The Ballad of Bobby Rose," or from the smooth mainstream sound of "Last Go Round" to the emotive, anthemic "Jump in the Fire," Dreams So Real is ready to deliver it's strongest album yet. This is a group who has the advantage of being known across the country and in the industry and is poised to make a strong impact at radio.

In 1985 vocalist/guitarist Barry Marler met vocalist/bassist Trent Allen and drummer Drew Worsham in a local Athens record store and shortly thereafter released an independent (Coyote/Twintone) Peter Buck produced single "Everywhere Girl" which climbed CMJ's New Music Report and became the best selling single in the label's history. The group followed that in 1986 when Buck produced Father's House, an album Musician Magazine called "...as promising a debut as you're likely to hear."

In 1988 the group released their first major label album Rough Night in Jericho, which garnered them extensive AOR as well as alternative airplay in addition to video airplay on MTV and TBS with the title track and with "Bearing Witness". The album firmly established the group as one of the most promising acts of the future while taking their trademark vocal harmonies and song craftsmanship nationwide and even across the Atlantic into Europe.

1990's Gloryline proved that Jericho was no fluke. The group showed maturity and diversity with songs like - the title track, a chilling tale of a child's awakening to the cruel presence of racial prejudice; the brilliant remake of the Badfinger classic "Day

After Day"; "Stand Tall," a rocker augmented by the guest appearance of B-52 Cindy Wilson; and finally the sardonic, southern anthem "Overton Park/ Faith," which urges the naive to "...buy faith, it's a steal."

Perhaps it would be appropriate to think of Dreams So Real as a steal. For surely the best is yet to come from these Georgia rockers.

Dreams So Real will be the headlining group at tonight's Spring Swing. Admission to the concert is free for PC students.

file photo

Dillon Fence to be featured at SUB Spring Swing concert

Press Release
CHAPEL HILL, NC

You'll like the guys in Dillon Fence. Everybody likes the guys in Dillon Fence. They're the sort of guys you would introduce to your sister or let borrow your car without hesitation. They live in Chapel Hill, North Carolina and take their name from a folk art environment/junkyard in nearby Dillon, South Carolina. Dillon Fence are four, good looking, nice guys who churn out absolutely irresistible pop songs with more than a little R & B flavor. Pop songs with a universal appeal, stemming from what the Washington Post's Geoffrey Himes recognized as Dillon Fence's "ability to make the small, ordinary events seem as momentous as they do in the midst of teenage innocence."

Dillon Fence consist of Greg Humphreys, Kent Alphin, Chris Goode, and Scott Carle.

Rosemary is Dillon Fence's extraordinary debut album, expertly produced by Ron St. Germain for Mammoth Records.

You'll get "fenced in" by the instantly catchy guitar hook of "Summer," the infectious soul of "I Will Break," and the simple, hooky charm of "Mockingbird." Rosemary is eleven songs under a groove - orchestrated and driven by Greg Humphreys's smooth, soulful vocals.

Rosemary's melodic guitar sound is clear and bright - no grunge. Rosemary is guitar, bass and drums you will want to dance to - no drum machines, synthesizers or industrial machine racket. Rosemary is real live pop-soul tunes and quality musicianship - no samples. The sincere, radio-friendly, sing-in-the-shower kind of tunes that you, your mom and your kid sister are apt to like.

People instantly respond to Dillon Fence's honest approach, clean image and monster pop hooks. The band has broken all attendance records at North Carolina clubs, sold 8,000 copies of its self-marked EP and packed 'em in at colleges and clubs throughout the Southeast with delirious, dancing crowds. Even Ron St. Germain, a veteran engineer/producer who has worked with everyone from U2, The Cure, and Mick Jagger to Sonic Youth, Bad Brains, and Soundgarden, is so excited about these guys that he's been using his pilot license to fly in for their shows, jump on stage and add some tambourine to the dance party.

Dillon Fence will be featured tonight at the annual SUB Spring Swing concert, which gets underway at 8:00 pm in Belk Auditorium. Admission to Spring Swing is free with a PC ID and $5.00 for the general public.

photo courtesy of Mammoth Records

Spring Swing band, Dillon Fence, includes band members Greg Humphreys, Kent Alphin, Chris Goode and Scott Carle.

Murder mystery proves to be a 'Bone Chiller!'

by Angela Richardson
ENTERTAINMENT EDITOR

Murder, mystery and puzzles will confuse and delight students as the Presbyterian College Players present "Bone Chiller!" March 22-28 in the Douglas House Studio Theater.

Thirteen people gather in the Travers Mansion for the reading of the late Josiah Travers' will. Written in the form of a puzzle, the will leaves the fortune to anyone who can decipher it. Each character races against the others to solve the puzzle to claim the fortune and find Josiah's murderer. Time after time, the murderer strikes causing confusion to envelop the Travers Mansion as the characters become suspicious of family and friends and fear for their lives.

The cast does an excellent job performing the "Clue"-like murder mystery. "This production is a result of the hard work of about 30 students, and I think the audience will be pleasantly surprised and entertained," said Dr. Dale Rains, professor of speech and drama who is directing the show. Hard work and long hours make this production a sure success.

The play begins a 7:30 nightly with suspense and murder. For reservations, call 833-8317 between 2 and 5 pm weekdays.

Cast List

Jerry Delvin: Benjamin Medley
Connie Travers: Kathy Kennedy

Buzzy Burdett: Shamba Warwick
Theodosia Travers: Betsy Walgren
Flame Fondue: Kim Fry
Zita Van Zok: Conchita Woodruff
Mauvins: Artie Turner
Addie Sheridan: Angela Mills
Eloise Ainsley: Karen Wittenbrook
Pippi: Brandi Rogerson
Lucy: Beth Harrelson
Dan Denton: Christopher Nichols
Stage Manager: Rebecca Hentz

PC student awarded sociology fellowship

Press Release
OFFICE OF PUBLIC RELATIONS

Chris Weldon is a student who is unafraid to take the initiative. Not only is Weldon a member of the Presbyterian College Student Government Association, minority student union, student fellowship choir, and football and track teams, but he is always willing to tackle a new challenge. For example, when Weldon recently saw a notice on a bulletin board about Minority Opportunity Summer Training Fellowships offered by the American Sociological Association, he inquired about the opportunity, filled out the application and wrote two required essays.

Now, Weldon's initiative has been rewarded.

The junior sociology major from LaGrange, Georgia, is the first student from Spring comes to PC.

Chris Weldon

file photo

Presbyterian College to be awarded that fellowship, which will allow him to study for six weeks this summer at the University of Michigan.

The fellowship includes room, board, and travel will allow Weldon to gain an intensive introduction to graduate study in sociology. While it entails participating in a research project at the University of Michigan, the fellowship will also carry over to Weldon's senior year at Presbyterian College. Upon returning to college, he will select a faculty member in the PC sociology department with whom he will work on a more personal research project.

"Chris has done an outstanding job as a leader on this campus with his efforts to increase awareness of pertinent issues," said Chon Glover, coordinator of student volunteer services and minority affairs, who helped Weldon with the application process. "This fellowship is most deserved and will help him carry out important research."

Weldon is the son of Ezekiel and Diane Weldon of LaGrange.

Third Political Parties: A PC Perspective of the Political Periphery

by Michael P. Darling, Jr.
GUEST WRITER

Dr. David Gillespie, a founder and integral member of the Presbyterian College Political Science Department, will soon join the ranks of publishing professors who have produced books that have captivated university classrooms and interested readers alike. Dr. Gillespie's new book, Politics at the Periphery. Third Parties in a Two Party America, is to be published by the University of South Carolina Press before the end of this year.

When asked why he was attracted to the topic of third parties, Gillespie said, "It was for the same reason that I wanted to become a political scientist - a keen interest in all political bodies who share in a vision". Gillespie implies that it was his fascination with those groups who have a concrete agenda - some noble, some silly, and some extremely dangerous - which interested him in beginning his research. He also notes that he is not attempting to point out and dwell on extremism, rather, those parties which carry an alternative agenda to the centrist positions of the Democratic and Republican parties. He further suggests that this

Dr. Gillespie

file photo

which began in earnest in the mid- 1970's, Dr. Gillespie has encountered some rather unique politically active individuals. He told of an encounter at a cafe in Brooklyn, New York with the leader of the American Maoist party. During their conversation, his Maoist host turned up the volume of a nearby radio so that their dialogue would not, according to the Maoist, "be overheard by Federal Agents". In contrast to his experience with an avowed Communist, Gillespie also parlayed a story of meeting the leader of the American Nazi Party at the then National Headquarters for the Nazi's which was in Arlington, Virginia. If readers find these tidbits alluring, many more transcribed interviews and experiences will appear in Gillespie's published work.

The publication date has yet to be established so that an accurate Third party appendix from the upcoming November elections may be added; however, the PC community can soon expect is what makes America different from other democracies.

While conducting his research,

David Gillespie's interesting and insightful text to appear in campus and specialty bookstores across the nation.

Setting a goal and achieving it requires courage

by Jason West
MANAGING EDITOR

About six years ago, my family began the process of "putting" my dad through college. Let me tell you, it was an experience of both anguish and joy.

Way back in 1964, my father graduated from a small, rural high school in South Carolina. Unfortunately, he did not enroll in college due to the fact that the Vietnam War was going strong at the time. Instead, he enrolled in the navy and after serving his country faithfully, he came home to marry my mom.

Dad got a job with E. I. Dupont de Nemours Company, and he and Mom began to build a family.

Well, in 1986, my father began to long for something he had never obtained, and that something was a college degree. With the help of his employer, he enrolled in Limestone College and began the journey down the long road to higher education.

For a four year period,

Dad would travel to Columbia, South Carolina, every Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday to take his college classes. (Limestone is actually located in Gaffney, South Carolina, but it has a satellite college in Columbia.) mother had to always deal with my younger brother Adam. You see, by nature, Adam was a walking discipline problem.

Of course, Dad's not being around a lot did cause a great deal of famand history, I often found myself helping Dad with his work. We spent many hours together researching term papers and answering discussion questions and problems about literature, government, and any other subject you can think of.

In 1990, Dad finally finished. He graduated from college at the same time I graduated from high school. I am very proud of my dad because he has proven to me that an education is something worth working for. It takes a lot of courage for a forty-year-old man to start school all over again.

Courage is something that nearly everyone strives for but only a few actually achieve. I view my dad as a man of courage and someone I can take great pride in. He beat the odds and successfully obtained his goal of a college education.

Dad, I have always admired you, and I am proud to say that you are my father!

Courage is something that nearly everyone strives for but only a few actually achieve.

During his college years, Dad had to concentrate a great deal of his time on his studying. Hence, Mom was forced to play the role of "wife," "mother," and "father." She even had to become the family disciplinarian. That was a job in which my ily arguments and problems. However, he somehow managed to be at home and listen when he was needed most.

Since he had not had a formal education for over twenty years, college was a culture shock for Dad. Because he was so unfamiliar with English, math,

The Blue Stacking of Presbyterian College
Clinton, South Carolina, 29325
Volume LXXXVI, Number 11
April 16, 1992

Editor-in-Chief.....Dennie Lynn Hill
Managing Editor.....Jason West
News Editor.....Paul Atkinson
Politics Editor.....Ted Carmichael
Sports Editor.....Brad Busbee
Entertainment Editor.....Angie Richardson
Features Editor.....LeJeanne Maddox
Environment Editor.....Heather Monerief
Photography/Darkroom.....Brian Koehler
Layout Editor.....Carolyn Nichols
Copy Editor.....Mike Weaver
Advertising Editor.....Ann Mayfield
Subscriptions/Exchange.....Ron Mixon
Artist.....Edward Clark

Photography Staff
John Triu Margaret Davis Jason Winfield
Tracy Kurasaka Kimberlee Gibson Bill Boan
Laura Meyers Brad Sims Patrick John Pharr
Lee McAbee Melissa Jackson Lisa Weaver
Lee Maynard Adrienne Ivey

Staff Writers
Elizabeth Spann Amanda Bowers
Karen Wittenbrook Frank McKay
Ed Kirkland Katherine Bonner
Everett Catts Adrienne Ivey Nancy Norton
Cher Fulbright Michelle Cantley
Lee Maynard Trenton Arnold
Shara Garwood Leigh Hearnburg

The Blue Stacking is a biweekly student publication of Presbyterian College. The paper serves as a forum of news and opinion of regional and national concern. For advertising, contact The Blue Stacking, Presbyterian College, Box 1061, Clinton, SC 29325. The Blue Stacking welcomes letters to the editor from all members of the PC community. Signatures are required. Letters are printed on a space available basis. The Blue Stacking reserves the right to edit letters for proper grammar and punctuation. The final deadline for submitting letters is Friday at 12:00pm on the week before publication.

PC Social Science Students Win Academic Awards

by Dr. Stephen Buggie
GUEST WRITER

On Friday, April 3rd, eight research papers written by Presbyterian College students were given at the Fifteenth annual Carolina Undergraduate Social Science Symposium, which was held at Lander College in Greenwood. In the academic conference tradition, the presentations were brief fifteen minute lectures by the authors. The researchers read their reports and in some instances supplemented them with paper handouts or overhead transparencies. Following each lecture the authors were questioned about their research. Two sessions ran concurrently in adjacent classrooms so that those who attended could choose to attend sessions on topics of personal interest. Thirty to forty persons typically were present at each session.

The twenty-three papers spanned a broad range of topics and methodologies in sociology, psychology, and anthropology. Student authors and faculty advisors attended from six campuses: Augusta College, Francis Marion, Lander College, USC at Aiken, Western Carolina University, and Presbyterian College.

The PC student presenters and their report topics were as follows: Teri Barefield on education and capital punishment; Edward Clarke on deterrence in prisons; Stacey Creter and Christi Wynn on visual perception in volleyball; Danny Eagen and Betsy Glenn on euthanasia attitude persuasion; Paige Wilson and Kim Lemon on eye contact in dating couples; Kim Tucker on attitudes towards female athletes; Kimberly Nations on the relationship of personal traits to subjects' attitudes towards soviet communism; and Cathy Sawyer on the distinctiveness of Southern culture. Dr. Robert Freymeyer and Dr. Stephen Buggie accompanied the PC students to Lander for the symposium.

The lecture sessions were completed by noon, followed by a special luncheon at the faculty dining room on the Lander campus. The keynote speaker at the conference was Dr. Ernest Furchtgott, Chair of the Psychology department at USC-Columbia. Dr. Furchtgott's lecture was entitled, "Why Am I Majoring in the Social Sciences?" The theme of his talk was that a liberal arts education based on the social sciences is particularly appropriate in the present era of rapid technological change.

Special recognition was given at the symposium's conclusion to the authors of the three best papers. During the morning lectures, faculty advisors from the six participating campuses rated each presenter on four criteria: clarity, originality of the topic, methodology, and presentational style. The ratings were compiled and compared, and the highest ranked researchers were identified. The presenters with the three best composite rating scores won certificates and cash prizes of $50, $30, or $20. Presbyterian College students won two of the awards, a disproportionately high share. Teri Barefield won the third place prize for research on capital punishment, and Cathy Sawyer won the second place prize for her analysis of Southern regional culture. The top ranked prize was won by a student from Western Carolina University, whose paper analyzed a student internship site with the methods of cultural anthropology.

By 2:30 pm, the symposium ended and participants returned to their home campuses. Why are such conferences held and what are their benefits? For many decades academic conference had been the haven of researchers, teaching faculty, and graduate students. Involvement of college undergraduates is a recent phenomenon. Since the 1970's, large regional conferences have welcomed undergraduates' participation, sometimes offering special sections for undergraduate presenters. The annual social science symposium at Lander college caters to undergraduate exclusively so that students are among their peers from neighboring campuses in the local region. The benefits of making a conference presentation are substantial, for the presenters themselves and also for their major departments. The opportunity to make a formal presentation encourages students to develop their work at a higher level than would ordinarily be done for a class project. At the end of each semester, the typical term paper or project often is abandoned in a file drawer. But the papers read at the symposium were not buried; they were substantially revised by their authors in preparation for the conference. The student symposium enable students to speak formally before an unfamiliar but sophisticated audience, a useful skill for many professions. For students and faculty alike, the chance to hear about studies done by others elsewhere in the same field generates many fresh ideas as well as providing a standard by which one's own efforts can be judged. Furthermore, the experience of having participated in an academic conference is a special achievement that may give the student presenter a competitive edge over other candidates in gaining admission to graduate school.

photo by Stephen Buggie

PC student presenters (left to right): Kim Lemon, Kim Tucker, Paige Wilson, Kimberly Nations, Cathy Sawyer, Betsy Glenn, Edward Clarke, Stacey Creter, Danny Eagen, and Teri Barefield.

photo by Stephen Buggie

PC student presenters who won prizes for best papers at the Carolina U.G. Social Science symposium, April 3, 1992: Cathy Sawyer (left) and Teri Barefield (right)

EAT IN - CARRY OUT - DELIVERY
$.99 PIZZA SPECIAL!

Any One
Medium Specialty Pizza

ONLY $.99

Choose From
• Meat Lovers
• Cheese Lovers

With Purchase Of Another Medium
Specialty Pizza at Regular Price.

Not good with any other coupon offer or P.C. discount.
One coupon per party per visit at the Clinton Pizza Hut only.
Must present coupon with purchase.

• Pepperoni Lovers
• Supreme

Rhonda Peck dedicates college career to serving others

by Le Jeanna Maddox
FEATURES EDITOR

You may not know exactly who she is, but there's no doubt you've heard her. Her sneeze across GDH is a better jolt than a cup of coffee to wake you up in the morning, and her smile and vociferous enthusiasm preceded her, wherever she goes. Channeling that enthusiasm into volunteer services, Rhonda Peck has left an indelible mark on PC, a mark that she hopes will be contagious after she graduates.

Rhonda's commitment to service began long before college. After winning the Atlanta Community Service Award in high school, Rhonda was looking for a college with a strong volunteer program. "I decided to come to Presbyterian College because of Student Volunteer Services. I was involved with a lot of service work in high school, and I wanted to continue my involvement with that," says Peck. One of her first service endeavors involved the establishment of a Habitat for Humanity chapter on campus.

She worked closely with alumnae Mary Ellen Vernon to create a PC as well as a Laurens County chapter, and she later served as President of the campus group.

The most challenging but rewarding aspect of Rhonda's four years at PC has been her role this year as the student intern

Rhonda with a Thornwell sister. photo courtesy of Chon Glover coordinator for Student Volunteer Services. She oversees the coordination of each of the twenty-eight organizations under work that figure into the success of such a tremendous project. She adds that the inspiration for her desire to serve comes from her grandmother. "I wouldn't be where I am without her support. She has always taught me to have a positive attitude, to be enthusiastic, and to be non-judgmental."

An Elementary Education major, Rhonda has already secured a job next year teaching kindergarten at Pace Academy in Atlanta. "It's always been a goal of mine to return there, because that's my alma-mater," she explains.

Rhonda's one piece of advice to PC students is, "Get involved with everything you can. Don't sit in your room. Find your niche, and give it your all!" She firmly believes in the school's motto, Dum Vivamus Servimus, and stresses that if PC students take advantage of their opportunities, they can learn as much by giving themselves to others as they can in the classroom. By serving, she says, "You learn about others, and even more about yourself."

SVS. "I make sure that each program has enough volunteers and that the coordinators have everything in order," she explains. She makes it all sound simple, but few people realize the frustrations and hours of

'Music to Build By'

PC's Habitat for Humanity chapter gears up for first annual Bandblast

by Le Jeanna Maddox
FEATURES EDITOR

Question: What's the best way to spend your last weekend on campus before exams?

Question: When's the last time you heard seven different bands for a meager five dollars?

If you've been anywhere on campus for the past few weeks, you must have seen or heard that the obvious answer to these perplexing inquiries is Habitat for Humanity's

BANDBLAST! On Saturday, April 25, seven bands will perform an all-day marathon concert on the Pondo to raise money for the Laurens County chapter of Habitat for Humanity. The Neighbors from Athens, GA; Simon Sez from Greenwood; The Crosseie Walkers from Thomson, GA; Clinton's Ruff Boyz; and PC's very own Naked Betsy and Elizabeth and Landon have all generously agreed to donate their time and talents to the benefit concert.

When PC's chapter of Habitat was chartered during the 1989-90 school year, the student founders had a vision of creating a Laurens County affiliate chapter. Thanks to the efforts of some dedicated PC students like Mary Ellen Vernon, the county chapter was begun. The average cost of building materials for a house is close to $25,000, however, so the county has dedicated its first two years to fundraising efforts. With the monetary goal nearly realized, Habitat hopes to raise enough money through BANDBLAST to enable the county chapter to purchase a plot of land and to begin construction this summer.

BANDBLAST coordinators Kimberly Nations, Jennifer Gordon, and Mark Hunt have sacrificed immeasurable energy and time to insure the success of this first annual event. "I'm really excited about the potential of this fundraiser - not only helping to start the first house in Laurens County but also increasing the awareness of Habitat's mission," says Gordon. "I'm thankful for the support of the PC and Clinton communities, and hope that everyone will come out and enjoy a fabulous day!"

You are invited to bring a picnic and a blanket, a frisbee or a football, your parents or a date. There will be food, drinks, and doorprizes. The activities begin at 11:00AM and will go on continually until 7:00PM. Tickets are $5 in advance and $8 at the gate and may be purchased in the dining hall.

Join us with
"Music to Build By"
at BANDBLAST

April 25, 1992
11AM till 7PM

Tickets $5 in advance and $8 at the gate.

All proceeds go to the Laurens Chapter of Habitat for Humanity.

Clinton's own - Ruff Boyz

Dave Lamotte - Montreat, NC

PC's - Naked Betsy

The Neighbors - Athens, Georgia

Food and recreation

Simon Sez - Greenwood

PC's - Elizabeth and Landon

The Crosseie Walkers - Thomson, Georgia

PC Alumna discusses water quality in South Carolina

by Jane D. Settle, 1977 PC Graduate
GUEST WRITER

Water quality is a large aspect of environmental protection. The South Carolina Water Pollution Control Act and the Federal Clean Water Act are the two primary pieces of legislation which regulate water pollution activities in this state. The S.C. Department of Health and Environmental Control (DHEC) is the state agency mandated by the United States Environmental Agency to enforce these laws.

Many activities associated with growth and development have the potential for degrading water quality in our coastal waters. Pollutants enter bodies of water from both point sources which emanate from the end of a pipe or a single point and nonpoint sources which runoff from sources such as paved highways, bridges, parking lots, and activities and over broad geographic areas. These are the primary categories into which NPS is grouped. There are numerous components each of which may be present in many of the different categories of nonpoint source pollution. Runoff of pesticides from farm fields is one of the oldest known nonpoint sources and a cause of catastrophic results in the form of fish kills. Surprisingly high levels of bacteria can be introduced into waterbodies from livestock operations, even on a small scale.

The growth and development previously mentioned is resulting in inputs from several other categories of NPS pollution. Construction activities, both of buildings and highways for access, can result in greatly increased loadings of sediment and other substances into coastal waters unless proper Best Management Practices are utilized. Impacts on fish and other wildlife can range aerial and ground dispersion, represent other nonpoint sources which result from human habitation which has the potential to input pesticides into coastal waters.

One of the primary reasons that people move to coastal areas is to obtain access to the water. The number of registered boats in the eight coastal counties of South Carolina is increasing rapidly, having increased by several thousand in the last fifteen years. The number of marinas has also risen. Marinas, if well-operated, may not result in the introduction of pollutants, but possible sources are present. Discharges from "heads" of larger boats, spills of gasoline or oil, excess detergents from cleaning boats, runoff of contaminants from "on-the-hill" boat maintenance activities, and leachate from toxic bottom coatings are all possibilities.

Probably one of the worst forms of nonpoint source pollution occurs in our own yards. When individuals put pesticides on flowers or flea spray or dip on pets, where do they rinse the used containers? If it is near a stream, marsh or city sewer, this is contributing to nonpoint pollution. Also, if pesticides are sprayed or fertilizer is applied soon before a rain the excess ends up in the nearest water body. These are things that everyone can work on to decrease nonpoint source pollution.

The primary function of the Environmental Evaluations Program is to investigate, monitor and report on these changes and alterations from both natural processes and man's activity within the coastal and marine environment. Permit applications to federal and state agencies which involve physical and chemical alterations to wetland habitats are reviewed by EEP biologists. These agencies include the U.S. Army Corp of Engineers, the U.S. Coast Guard, the S.C. Coastal Council, the S.C. Department of Health and Environmental Control, and the S.C. Water Resources Commission. Comments from these reviews are submitted to the Environmental Affairs Coordinator in Columbia, S.C. through the Director of Office of Fisheries Management for inclusion into a single department position for each application.

Other activities include the preparation of resource inventories and assessments, the review of federal and state environmental impact statements, certifications, assessments and reports required of more complex proposed alterations, investigations of spills and discharges of toxic materials and contaminants, fish kills and other impacts related to maintenance of high water quality, assistance in field sampling efforts for ongoing studies of the Environmental Studies Section of MRRI, and participation on numerous committees and task forces related to environmental impacts and comprehensive planning efforts.

During Fiscal Year 1990-1991, the EEP reviewed and commented on a total of 1,417 state and federal permits and certifications for various construction activities and alterations in coastal wetlands and waters of the state. Over a third of the permit responses

file photo

late a variety of pollutants which are washed into adjacent waterbodies with every rain event. Older coastal cities like Charleston have major flooding problems and contribute significantly to water quality degradation from runoff after rains. The amount of pollution which can be introduced is more evident when one thinks about this in terms of water volumes. A one-inch rainfall deposits 27,000 gallons of water on one acre of land. Multiply this by the hundreds of acres in a city the size of Charleston and these numbers quickly become millions of gallons. The primary factor which determines whether this water becomes runoff into adjacent rivers and marshes or percolates into the soil is whether the surface on which it falls is impervious or not. This type of runoff from impervious surfaces surrounding waterfront industry can carry many different types of pollutants with the potential to impact coastal resources. Also, construction of housing immediately adjacent to coastal waters increases the rate of runoff and the level of contaminants present in the area. One type of land use which is rapidly increasing, the development of golf courses, may be contributing unknown levels of a wide variety of pesticides to coastal waters. Mosquito abatement and other vector control activities, both submitted consisted of formal objections for projects which were felt to have potential adverse impacts on marine and estuarine resources. In an effort to minimize environmental impacts, special conditions were requested to be placed on over a half of the processed applications. The number of permit requests is steadily increasing, resulting in continued pressure on the coastal resources.

The 500,000 acres of estuarine wetlands in South Carolina have recognized value to coastal fisheries as well as to many other aspects of the economy including tourism and recreation. However, growth and development are occurring in South Carolina's coastal zone at an astonishing rate. The projection of a population of 700,000 by the year 2000 in the tri-county area is bewildering, for if it is not properly managed the rapid development could bring with it a number of new problems which can result in a larger variety of negative impacts on the coastal resources and the habitats upon which they are dependent.

PROTECT YOURSELF FROM AIDS
IT'S THE CHOICE OF A LIFETIME

- Drinking and drugs cloud your mind and cause risky choices.
- Unsafe sex can lead to AIDS.
- Get help for a drug or drinking problem.
- If you have sex, use a condom. Or avoid taking the risk altogether.

FIND OUT ABOUT DRUGS SEX
AND AIDS
CALL 1-800-322-AIDS

Public education in America: Problems and suggested solutions

by Ted Carmichael
POLITICS EDITOR

When taken in context of history, the American educational system is an incredible achievement. The illiteracy rate is lower than it has ever been, our way of thinking in general is on what we would like to think of as a higher plain, and equal education for all is considered not only a privilege, but a God-given right. Yet before we strain our arms patting ourselves on the back, we should consider what could be done that we do not do. What are the shortcomings of our system?

We should view the American system in the context of the age we live in: how does it compare to our status, as well as the systems of other countries? It is under this scrutiny that we can see the failures. There is a growing disparity between poor schools and rich ones. Also, we are not allocating enough of our resources as a whole to public education. And finally, we do not teach our children well enough; they don't learn the right things and, in general, have an antagonistic view towards education.

In many cases, only six percent of a school's operating budget comes from the federal government, and 47 percent comes from the state. That leaves the remaining 47 percent up to local property taxes, which causes the inequality. Wealthier school districts, by definition, have more funds to allocate to students. Even in districts that are in close proximity, there can be a vast difference in the amount of money spent per student. For example, the Glen Rose district in an affluent area of Texas spends over $9,300 per pupil, which is three times that spent in schools in the Rio Grande Valley. Books and supplies are sparse in some inner city schools in Chicago, while in Winnetka, a suburb north of the city, there is a public school that has seven gyms, rooms for wrestling, fencing, and dance instruction, and an Olympic-style swimming pool.

Some places are fighting these inconsistencies through the courts. The finance system in Kentucky was ruled unconstitutional by their supreme court in 1989. Whereas before the wealthier school districts got $4,200 a year per student, compared with only $1,700 in the poorest areas, now every school receives at least $3,200 for each pupil.

In New Jersey and Texas the systems have been found unconstitutional, but what system to replace it with is still the cause of much debate. Also, people in many states are bitterly opposing any changes in the year than France, Germany, Japan, and the United Kingdom. And as a percentage of gross national product, the United States is about average, yet we still rank near the lowest among industrialized nations when it comes to standard international tests. This seems to indicate that it is not how much money we spend, but where we spend it.

our resources to the next generation, we need to switch the roles of the state and national governments. With a national, uniform system we could instigate long term plans and goals.

National curriculums and standards need to be established, so that the country has some idea of where its going with education. Complains University of Illinois professor Herbert Walberg, "We have so much autonomy, everyone does their own thing, to the point where a fifth-grade teacher can't count on a fourth-grade teacher having taught certain things." Also, with the federal government in charge, the local taxes can be dropped in favor of national ones, so that, as Kozol argues in his book, the money can then be fairly distributed among the districts. Then if certain schools wanted to raise extra money for special projects, they could do so through the local PTA.

Not only do we need to revamp what our kids learn, we need to change how they learn. There is a stigma to doing schoolwork that is prevalent in the system, and teachers are more likely to be seen as the enemy than a mentor. Hanging out and being cool is more important than going to class, and "only geeks bother to do their homework." Chester Finn makes the point that teachers are not held "accountable" for their performance, and argues against tenure, says, "Try to imagine a law giving doctors 'operating-room tenure.'" And Education Secretary Lamar Alexander notes that teaching "is the only profession in which you are not paid one extra cent for being good at your job."

In a historical sense, the strides we have made in education are to be commended, and probably will be centuries from now. There are still many problems that need to be addressed, and this paper has only touched upon a few of them. We need, in general, to continually strive for improvement, not to stay competitive in the world marketplace, then merely because education is a noble pursuit. It creates stability, understanding among different peoples, and advances society as a whole. What do we live for if not to pass on the knowledge we possess?

Not only do we need to commit more of system. Jonathan Kozol, whose book Savage Inequalities exposes many of these problems, makes the point that wealthier Americans "do not want poor children to be harmed, they simply want the best for their children."

Certainly, the gross disparities need to be corrected, but to give every district the exact same amount would be unfair as well. This is not, after all, a socialist state; some protection of the status quo in school systems is expected, as in the rest of American society. What is more important is an increased commitment to education overall. We need to raise the bottom line standards that have been slowly drifting towards the gutter.

In inflation adjusted dollars, spending per student has increased 33 percent in the past ten years. President Bush concluded from this that we should "stop trying to measure progress in terms of money spent. It's time we held our schools-and ourselves-accountable for results." Bush makes a good point. We spend more per student, per

PC Adds Whitt to Athletic Department

by Brad Bushee
SPORTS EDITOR

PC was lucky to be able to nab Rick Whitt from North Carolina State University early this semester. Whitt is the new football defensive back coach and the head track coach for PC.

"I like PC a lot. The people here make all the difference in the world. I've felt welcome since I first got here. I'm positive that I'll form great friendships here that will last on down the road," said Whitt. "In every place that I've been where we've been successful, there has been this kind of atmosphere."

Coach Whitt is excited about the upcoming football season. His optimism has already rubbed off on some of his players. "He is a very understanding coach and a great teacher. He is good at realizing each player's strength and weakness. We all feel good about this coming season," pointed out defensive back Todd Shearer.

Whitt's position as head track coach is something he takes very seriously. "One reason I am so excited about Track is that it gives me a great chance to get to know the athletes that will be playing football much better," said Whitt.

Whitt's coaching career began at Central Davidson High School in Lexington, North Carolina after graduating from Catawba College in 1976. Three years later, Whitt was at Clemson as a part-time graduate assistant, and later as a coach residing in the athletic dorm. During his second year at Clemson, he was the defensive back coach of a national championship team. His next two years at Clemson Whitt acted as the outside linebacker coach.

From Clemson he went to Appalachian State where he continued coaching outside linebackers. A year later, he became the defensive coordinator and the outside linebacker coach. Whitt stayed at Appalachian until the spring of 1989.

The following two years he became the defensive coordinator at the University of South Carolina and then moved on to North Carolina State University.

Coach Rick Whitt is a fine addition to what is a fine athletic department staff. His experience and fresh optimism will be instrumental in PC's future athletic success.

photo by Brad Bushee

Coach Rick Whitt leads the track team stretching.

PC Women's Tennis Dominates SAC

by Shara Garwood
STAFF WRITER

For the third year in a row the Presbyterian College Women's Tennis Team has won the South Atlantic Conference Tournament. The team played in Burlington, North Carolina, April 10-12 and won a total of 111 points. The second place team only earned 77 points. Coach Donna Arnold received her third consecutive SAC Coach of the year award.

PC had a player in all of 6 of the singles finals and all three of the doubles finals. They won 7 of the 9 matches and every member of the team made the all-conference team.

The team is currently 14 in the NAIA with Andrea Henderson ranked thirty-seventh in singles and Henderson and Catherine Scott ranked twentieth as a doubles team.

PC will be hosting the District 26 Tournament on April 16-19. The winner of the tournament automatically qualifies for the NAIA National Tournament which will be held in Overland Park, Kansas on May 18-23. Coach Arnold says, "Our goal is to win districts. We lost last year by two points so we are determined to win this year. Please come out and support the team."

Intramural Softball Standings

A-LEAGUE

NATIONAL W	L
PKA	3 1
Upper Deck	3 1
SN	2 1
DX BD	1 2
Uderground	0 4

Overweight

PKΦ	2	1
ΣΝ	1	2
ΘΧ	0	2
ΠΚΑ	0	2
ΚΑ	0	3

C-LEAGUE

AMERICAN W

AMERICAN		L
DX 1	3	0
Bad Bombers		3
0
Rascals	1	2
Ultimate	1	3
KA	0	3

NATIONAL W

DX	2	0
Bad Bombers	2	0
ПКФ	1	1
ПКА	1	2
Prairie Dogs	0	3

B-LEAGUE

Canned Heat	3 0
DGC	2 0

AMERICAN W

Orgasmatron	1	0
Doyle	1	0
DX II	1	1
ASΦ	0	2

photo by Brad Bushee

Tim Williams pitches for the Overweight Lovers in their victory over KA Tuesday.

NOBODY KNOWS LIKE DOMINO'S

How You Like Pizza At Home.

2 Regular 12" Cheese Pizzas for $8.88!

Just call and order your favorite TWO regular 12" cheese pizzas.

Valid at participating stores only. Not valid with any other offer. Prices may vary. Customer pays applicable sales tax. Limited delivery area. $2.00 delivery fee. (any order over $20.00). ©1989 Domino's Pizza, Inc.

P.C. Student Discounts

Medium one topping pizza $5.99
Large one topping pizza $7.99

Good anytime-no coupon needed-to campus

Wild Wednesday

$5.00 SPECIAL

12" Pepperoni Pizza

COUPON CRUSHER!

We Accept All Pizza Hut Coupons

Lunch Special!

A 12" 1-Topping Pizza

ONLY $5.00

Open for Lunch everyday, 11:30-4:00

Valid at participating stores only. Not valid with any other offer. Prices may vary. Customer pays applicable sales tax. Limited delivery area. $2.00 delivery fee. (any order over $20.00). ©1989 Domino's Pizza, Inc.

COUPON CRUSHER!

We Accept All Pizza Hut Coupons

COUPON CRUSHER!

We Accept All Pizza Hut Coupons

Meet me at Terry's

Breakfast Lunch Dinner

15% off of any purchase.

Limit one coupon per visit.

Not good with other specials.

Breakfast Lunch Dinner

Expires 5-5-92

'Connells' and other bands to visit Carowinds

by Katherine Bonner
STAFF WRITER

The Connells are scheduled to perform at Carowinds' Palladium Amphitheatre on April 24 at 7 pm to celebrate the end of the semester and give students the chance to blow off some steam before their final exams. Also featured will be Firehose, Buffalo Tom, and Dillon Fence (recently featured at PC's Spring Swing Concert). Ticketmaster centers (704-522-6500) or at the Palladium box office.

The Connells are one of the south's favorite alternative groups. Their latest album, One Simple Word, has been very successful, with such hits as Stone Cold Yesterday and Speak to me. The group, which has become very popular with college students, is made up of Mike Connell, David Connell, Doug MacMillan, and Peele Wimberley.

Carowinds has some great concerts lined up for the summer months, including Travis Tritt, George Thurgood, Dolly Parton, The Temptations, and The Beach Boys. Carowinds season pass holders can attend any Palladium Concert for just $8.00. Season passes are available at Carowinds or at local Belk stores. For more information on Palladium summer concerts, contact Carowinds or Ticketmaster.

The Connells will be performing at Carowinds on April 24 at 7:00 pm.

file photo

PC professor presents play

by Angela Richardson
ENTERTAINMENT EDITOR

The Last Rose of Summer, a presentation by Richie and Gina Prosch, is based on the tall tales and stories of Rose Suckstorf. The play was performed on April 2 at 8:15 by Richie and Gina Prosch, Laura Robinson, Biffa Quantz and Dr. Dean Thompson.

Rose told stories about her life and adventures growing up in Bloomfield, Nebraska. As a young woman she appears to be a strong, courageous, stubborn woman with a sense of humor to add life to her stories.

The setting consisted of simple living room furniture to create a comfortable home-like atmosphere. Chairs were placed on the stage, and members of the audience were invited to join Rose in her "living room."

Gina Prosch, a member of the Presbyterian College English Department of English, and Richie Prosch a free-lance writer and artist wrote the play about Mr. Prosch's grandmother, Rose.

Her adventures include the first time she drove a car, and her friendship with a woman named Melba. She recalls bits and pieces of her life and shares them with her friends and family. She tells about her husband and her life with him, and she describes in vivid detail her life before and after her marriage.

Freshman Jeff Phillips feels that, "although initially confused and amazed by the intricacy of the performance, I grew to appreciate the unusual style. I do believe this play marks an exciting turn in modern theater."

The play provides a friendly, familiar feeling for the audience, and invites them to join the past and experience the adventures with Rose. Not only is Rose the narrator, but the guide on an exciting journey through time.

SUB to sponsor 'Cape Fear'

by Laura Meyers
STAFF WRITER

Suspense, revenge, defeat, hatred, and fear all come to life in Martin Scorsese's movie Cape Fear. A convicted rapist, Max Cady (played by Robert DeNiro), is put behind bars for fourteen years. During this time, he plots his revenge on Sam Bowden (played by Nick Nolte), Cady's former lawyer. To witness this psychological thriller, stop by Springs Campus Center on April 24 at 7:00 pm. The showing of Cape Fear is sponsored by the Student Union Board.

Campus and Clubs

ALPHA DELTA PI

Thanks goes to all our seniors for keeping their sense of humor during Senior Roast! We will miss you all so much! A special congratulations goes out to our student teachers for doing so well on their APTs. We are very proud of all of our seniors!

CONGRATULATIONS intramural swim team! We are proud of you all for winning the '91-'92 championship!

Black Diamond Ball was a blast! Thanks goes out to all of our sisters who worked so hard to make it a success; you did a terrific job!

INTRAMURALS

The Intramural Department would like to thank everyone that participated in the swim meet. The winning teams were Theta Chi and Alpha Delta Pi. Individual standouts at the meet were Jessica McCullough - Alpha Delta Pi, Vanessa McCalister - Zeta Tau Alpha, Trip Lacoste - Theta Chi, and Chuck Conrad - Pi Kappa Alpha. In other intramural sports concluding in March, Joe Nixon defeated Paul Terry to win the annual racquetball tournament.

As of April 1st the intramural all sports standings are A League: Theta Chi - 365, Sigma Nu - 250, Bad Boy Bombers - 195; B League: Theta Chi - 240, Rascals - 220; and Women's Zeta Tau Alpha - 270, Theta Chi Rush Girls - 180.

PI KAPPA ALPHA

Congratulations to Beth Schlich. She is the winner of the 6 disc player given away at the 1992 Cow Drop.

Last weekend was our annual Hawaiian Party complete with a six piece Reggae band - thanks to everyone who came out.

Tau Delta of the week goes to Brian "the tongue" Thomas.

SIGMA SIGMA SIGMA

On Friday, April 10 at 8:10, Sigma participated in MY 102.5's Shout in the Weekend on the Love and Hudson morning show.

We would like to congratulate our new sisters: Stacey Peters, Barbara McGhee, Kimberly Stancel and Angela Richardson.

THETA CHI

The brothers and pledges of Theta Chi attended our annual brother/pledge camp out on April 3, 1992. Thanks to Jay Pullin for the use of his land in Georgia, it was a great time. Theta Chi and Zeta Tau Alpha also had a successful mixer on April 4. April 11 was alumni day for Theta Chi. We had a great turnout with plenty of activities including a lunch-time cook out, attendance of the Blue Hose Soccer alumni game and a great band party featuring PC's own "Naked Betsy." Good luck to all on exams and have a safe summer.

THE BLUE STOCKING

"Give the people the light, so they may find the way."

Volume LXXXVI Number 12

PRESBYTERIAN COLLEGE

Clinton, South Carolina 29325

Friday, May 1, 1992

Clarke awarded summer research grant

by LeJeanna Maddox
FEATURES EDITOR

Camisha Clarke has recently joined the ranks of outstanding PC students who have been awarded grants for summer research. Clarke has received a research apprenticeship in mathematics from the Minority Research Apprenticeship Program and will spend June 14- August 8 at The State University of New York Stony Brook. Sponsored by the US Department of Education, the program is designed for undergraduate students who wish to engage in research work with faculty and graduate students in the areas of mathematics, marine science, political science, or sociology. A total of seventy-five students from across the United States were selected to participate, and Clarke will be one of only five students taking part in the math division through the Minority Research Program. The fellowship includes a stipend, housing, food, and round-trip transportation to New York. Clarke, a Sophomore from Miami, Florida, is a math major with minors in media studies and computer science. Her advisor Lutricia Hunter says of Clarke, "I find her to be quite talented. I think she is making her mark at PC." She also commended Clarke's ability to write and express herself well. Such a combination of abilities should prepare Clarke well for any profession she may choose to pursue after a stint in the Peace Corps upon her graduation.

Camisha Clarke

file photo

West named new Blue Stocking editor

Press Release

The Publications Board and the Russell

Project Subcommittee on Communications have selected Jason West to serve as the editor-in-chief of the Blue Stocking for the 1992-93 academic year.

West, who is a rising junior from Kershaw, South Carolina, is a political science and history major. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Jesse West, Jr. West has previously served as the managing editor of the Blue Stocking.

"I am really looking forward to next year," said West. "I know that my staff and I will attempt to continue the good work that was done this year on the Blue Stocking. The paper currently serves as an outlet for student opinion, and it will continue to do so."

As far as changes to the look of the paper, West says that there will be a few, minor adjustments. "The overall design of the paper looks great. I do not anticipate any changes in that area. However, next year, we will be introducing a permanent columnist, we will be using more graphics and charts, the editorial will be selected by the Editorial Board, and we might even use some color photography in a few issues," said West.

West says that the Blue Stocking staff editors for next year have already been selected. The staff will include LeJeanna Maddox, managing editor; Ron Mixon, business manager; Ted Carmichael, politics editor; Ricky Dill, news editor; Martha Lynn Smith, features editor; Angie Richardson, design editor; Kim Gibson, darkroom editor; Heather Moncrief, environment editor; Camisha Clarke, entertainment editor; Everett Catts, sports editor; and Ann Mayfield, advertising manager.

Jason West

file photo

Two PC students arrested by Clinton police for 'streaking'

file photo

Streaking is nothing new at PC. In 1988, a Blue Stocking photographer captured this student in front of Neville Hall.

by Michele Barker

Clinton Chronicle

STAFF WRITER

Two Presbyterian College students were arrested and charged with indecent exposure shortly after midnight Friday, April 17 after Clinton police received several complaints of four naked males near the college's plaza.

According to the incident report, which listed "society" as the victim, Eric J. Bossman, 21, of Taylors, South Carolina, and Phillip Andrew George, 18, of Greenville, were two of four men who were chased by the police after complaints were received by Assistant Police Chief Carroll Barker and PC Public Safety.

The two students were placed in jail early Friday morning and bond was set at $248 each. They were released around 3:00 am, the incident report said.

Clinton Police Chief Chesley Richards said Monday that the cases were not disposed of in city court this week, but probably will be disposed of next week.

Richards said he thought the two men cited "stress from having exams" as the reason for their actions.

Editor Bids Farewell

by Dennie Lynn Hill
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

Friends, I am not sure if there is any one definition that truly gives justice to this word, but I have been lucky enough to find many people that represent what this word means to me. I would like to take this time in my last editorial to thank many of the friends who have supported me this past year during my editorship.

To the unsung "Springs" heroes, Paul Scouten, John Douglas, and Roben Raines, who made a second home out of their offices in Springs; thank you for the late night words of wisdom and encouragement. It is wonderful to know and admire such dedicated people who have so much to give. Thank you for all you have given me.

To many faculty and administra-

Letters to the Editor - Letters to the Editor - Letters to the Editor - Letters to the Editor - Letters to the Editor - Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

On Friday, April 12, over 200 athletes gathered at Presbyterian College for the eighteenth annual Area Five Special Olympic games. The participants came from Saluda, Newberry, and Laurens Counties to compete in twelve events.

This day would not have been successful without the help of many people. First of all to Rhonda Sprouse, secretary in the Chaplain's office, for her time in putting together the heats and schedules so that each athlete could participate in two events. Second of all, to Laura Collier, Katie Lockwood, Alex Odum, Tracey Doolittle, Meg Oxford, Frank McKay, Aaron Miller, Valerie Schoenleber, and Marcus Holiday for coordinating segments of the day and most of all to the over 150 volunteers who executed the games. Thanks for making Special Olympics a successful day!

Sincerely,
Chon Glover
Coordinator of SVS

Letters to the Editor - Letters to the Editor - Letters to the Editor - Letters to the Editor - Letters to the Editor - Letters to the Editor

tors including Dean Moncrief, Dean Nixon, Andy Altizer, Martha Ann Greene, Dr. Brandt, Dr. Hill, Dr. Prator, and Dr. Thompson; thank you for your devotion to the students on this campus, especially me. You truly exemplify the spirit of this college. Your love shines through to all the student's lives that you touch. Thank you for allowing me to receive such a wonderful gift. To my family, I can not put into words how much I love you and thank you for giving me the opportunity to attend such a wonderful institution and to hold a position that has given me a chance to see the world from a different perspective. I could not dream of a more wonderful, giving family than the one I have. Thank you for helping me to fulfill my dream of being editor. You all made it possible for me to succeed.

"It is wonderful to know and admire such dedicated people who have so much to give."

To my loving roommate and my strong group of friends, the support and love you girls have given me is overwhelming. True friendships are hard to come by, but I certainly have found just that from all of you. Thank you for understanding the time that I spent in my office instead of with you all. I know that seemed like most of the time, but you all stood by me and encouraged me instead of turning away. I could not have made it without you.

And last, but certainly not least, to my wonderful staff, the hard work and commitment that you have given this year is simply amazing. You have made the Blue Stocking a wonderful publica-

Letters to the Editor - Letters to the Editor - Letters to the Editor - Letters to the Editor - Letters to the Editor - Letters to the Editor

To the PC Student Body:

The 1992-93 Student Government Association would like to take this time to congratulate all members of its council on their elections and appointments. We would also like to acknowledge and thank the members of the 1991-92 Student Council for all of its time and effort during this academic year.

We would also like to congratulate the newly chosen FOB and TOB leaders. These students will establish what we hope will be a good first impression for the incoming students this fall. We regret that we could not accept all of the applicants but encourage those who did not receive this appointment to seriously consider applying for SGA committees this fall.

During the summer break, we would like to ask all students to reflect upon their year at PC and to develop ideas for the future of SGA and Presbyterian College. This coming year will create a multitude of opportunities for everyone, which we hope that the students will take advantage of in order to get more involved in campus activities.

tion. All of your efforts have certainly paid off. To Jason West, you have gone above and beyond the call of duty this semester. You are a wonderful leader and I know you will take the paper to great heights during your term as editor. Thank you so much for all you have given to this publication. You are an incredible journalist and a wonderful friend.

My time as editor has ended, but the knowledge and insight that I have gained from this experience will never leave me. When I took this position, Andrea Hodgkin, editor emeritus, told me that I would leave it a different person. I did not believe her until now. Journalism has a way of opening your eyes, mind, and heart in ways that you never dreamed possible. I am thankful for the impact this position has had on my life and for the opportunity to discover such wonderful friends.

As a parting note, we would like to let all students know that the SGA office will always be open. Please feel free to come by any time to voice any concerns or opinions you may have about the way things are on campus, or feel free to call the SGA office or drop a note in the SGA post office box.

Sincerely,
Michael Martin
SGA President

Ron Mixon
SGA Vice President

Jeff Garrison
SGA Secretary

The Blue Stocking is a biweekly student publication of Presbyterian College. The paper serves as a forum of news and opinion of regional and national concern. For advertising, contact The Blue Stocking, Presbyterian College, Box 1061, Clinton, SC 29325. The Blue Stocking welcomes letters to the editor from all members of the PC community. Signatures are required. Letters are printed on a space available basis. The Blue Stocking reserves the right to edit all letters for proper grammar and punctuation. The final deadline for submitting letters is Friday at 12:00pm on the week before publication.

Photography Staff

John Tritt Margaret Davis Jason Windfield
Tracy Kurasaka Kimberlee Gibson Bill Boan
Laura Meyers Brad Sims Patrick John Pharr
Lee McAbee Melissa Jackson Lisa Weaver
Lee Maynard Adrienne Ivey

Staff Writers

Elizabeth Spann Amanda Bowers
Karen Wittenbrook Frank McKay
Ed Kirkland Katherine Bonner
Everett Catts Adrienne Ivey Nancy Norton
Cher Fulbright Michelle Canley
Lee Maynard Trenton Arnold
Shara Garwood Leigh Hearnburg

The Blue Stocking of Presbyterian College
Clinton, South Carolina, 29325
Volume LXXXVI, Number 12
May 1, 1992

Editor-in-chief.....Dennie Lynn Hill
Managing Editor.....Jason West
News Editor.....Paul Atkinson
Politics Editor.....Ted Carmichael
Sports Editor.....Brad Busbee
Entertainment Editor.....Angie Richardson
Features Editor.....LeJeanna Maddox
Environment Editor.....Heather Moncrief
Photography/Darkroom.....Brian Koehler
Layout Editor.....Carolyn Nichols
Copy Editor.....Mike Weaver
Advertising Editor.....Ann Mayfield
Subscriptions/Exchange.....Ron Mixon
Artist.....Edward Clark

College to hold 109th commencement

Press Release

OFFICE OF PUBLIC RELATIONS

Presbyterian College will hold its 109th Commencement Exercises on Sunday, May 10, with 262 seniors expected to receive baccalaureate degrees, and three respected leaders in the fields of business and religion set to receive honorary degrees.

Delivering the main commencement address will be Spartanburg native Dr. Harold Dean Thompson, Assistant Professor of English, who last month was named PC's 1992 Professor of the Year. Also speaking will be Tricia Lindrich of Richland, South Carolina, who was named the college's 1991-92 Outstanding Senior.

An honorary doctor of humanities degree will be conferred upon Hugh Shockley Jacobs of Clinton, former president and treasurer of Jacobs Press. Also, an honorary doctor of letters degree will go to Dr. J. Howard Edgington, senior minister at First Presbyterian Church in Orlando, Florida, who will deliver the baccalaureate address.

Commencement weekend will begin on Saturday, May 9, when the senior class hosts a barbeque dinner for alumni and friends beginning at 5:30 pm on the college's west plaza. Following the dinner, the senior class will host an informal program in Belk Auditorium.

Sunday's schedule gets underway at 8:30 am with the fifth annual ROTC Hall of Fame Induction in Jacob Hall's Chapman Conference Center. Designed to recognize distinguished military careers of PC alumni who participated in the college's Reserve Officer's Training Corps, the ROTC Hall of Fame will add Major General (Ret.) Christian Pate, a 1956 Presbyterian College graduate, as a member this year.

Following the ROTC Hall of Fame induction, ROTC senior cadets from PC and other area colleges will receive US Army Reserve commissions.

The baccalaureate service is planned for 10:30 am in Belk Auditorium, followed by lunch at noon at Greenville Dining Hall. The commencement ceremony will begin at 2:30 pm in the Ross E. Templeton Center, followed by a reception for the graduates at 4:00 pm at the lake on the east plaza. Presiding over the commencement activities will be PC President Dr. Kenneth B. Orr and trustee chairman Dr. W. Frank Harrington, senior minister of Peachtree Presbyterian Church in Atlanta.

Coach Tim Corbin talks with his players before the game. photo by Steve Owens

Baseball team ends season

by Everett Catts
STAFF WRITER

The 1992 Presbyterian College Baseball Team ended its season last weekend at the South Atlantic Conference Tournament (SAC) in Boiling Springs, North Carolina. After winning their last six out of seven games, the Blue Hose finished the season with a 22-20 record. Going into the weekend of April 17-18, the squad was fifth in the conference with a SAC-8 record of 9-9, behind fourth place Lenoir-Rhyne.

With a three game sweep of Gardner-Webb, accompanied by one Lenoir-Rhyne loss or two Elon losses, the Blue Hose could advance to the four team double elimination SAC-8 Tournament.

The PC team did go on to sweep Gardner-Webb, winning 15-3, 16-4, and 9-3. With Lenoir-Rhyne's loss to Wingate on April 17, the Blue Hose were in the playoffs for the first time in Head Coach Tim Corbin's career at PC. With the sweep of Gardner-Webb, the team's conference record improved to 12-9.

On April 23, the night before the SAC-8 Tournament, an awards banquet was held to announce All-Conference Selections. Making the 2nd Team All-Conference were junior shortstop Gregg Desto, who batted .319; senior pitcher Ray Canady, who had a record of 6-3; and senior pitcher Kris Kirkland, who had seven wins and three losses. Sophomore rightfielder Joe Henry Berube was PC's only 1st Team All-Conference Selection. Berube was the team's leading hitter, with a .365 batting average and led the SAC-8 in doubles.

The SAC Tournament started on April 24 when PC played Catawba in the opening game. The Blue Hose got an early lead, going up 3-0 in the top of the first. Catawba came back in the same inning with two runs, making the score 3-2. Catawba later scored three more runs, leading 5-3, but PC came back in the top of the fourth. After scoring a run and loading the bases, the Blue Hose regained the lead when Berube smacked a grand slam over the scoreboard in right field, as the team went up 8-5. Berube would be announced to the All-Tournament Team later that weekend. Catawba would tie the score and go up 11-8 in two later innings. In the top of the ninth, the Blue Hose would come back, thanks to a two-run homer by freshman second baseman Elton Pollock. The homerun made the score 11-10, but PC could not tie the game, and the game ended with the same score.

Later that day, the Blue Hose played Elon, a team which lost to Carson Newman in the first round. Elon got on the board early, scoring two runs in the bottom of the first. PC later made the score 2-1 thanks to Elton Pollock, who tripled and scored. The game was postponed because of darkness at the end of the fifth inning and would be completed the next morning. Despite numerous scoring opportunities, the Blue Hose were unable to tie the score and lost the game 2-1.

Coach Corbin commented on his team's overall play. He said, "We improved. We were a better ballclub at the end of the year than at the beginning. The effort in the tournament was good. We were loose and played good baseball. We were not nervous, and for the most part we outplayed the other two teams."

Corbin also talked about the seniors on the squad, his first recruiting class, saying, "I'm happy that the seniors got to the post season tournament. They have been loyal and have shown good work habits for four straight years."

In discussing the team's overall play, co-captain Gregg Desto said, "We expected at the beginning to do a lot better than we did. But at the midway point of the season we knew we were not going to do as well as we'd expected."

The Russell Program and the PC English Department are pleased to announce a Writer's Workshop to be held on campus June 4, 5, and 6. PC students are invited to attend. If interested, please fill out the registration form below and return it to Ann Adam's office in Neville Hall. For more info, call PC extension 8463.

Fees - $75 (covers registration, room, meals) $60 (covers registration and meals) $50 (covers registration and room) $30 (covers registration)

Name _____
P.C. Address _____ P.C. Phone _____
Home Address _____
City, State, Zip _____
Telephone () _____ Amount enclosed _____

Please place a check mark by the side of the workshops that you wish to attend. You may choose two. If you choose two, the workshop staff will assign you to Round 1 (Friday) and Round 2 (Saturday). Check also in the appropriate space if you plan to submit a manuscript in advance for consideration by the workshop leader. If enough manuscripts are submitted to a workshop leader, one of the rounds of that workshop may be set aside for those who have submitted manuscripts, the other round will be for those who have not submitted manuscripts in advance. All manuscripts should be mailed by May 15 to the address below. Write prominently on the back of the envelope the workshop for which you wish the manuscript to be considered. Remember to place a check mark below opposite the manuscript type to indicate that you will be sending it by May 15.

WORKSHOP	WORKSHOP LEADER	MANUSCRIPT
<input type="checkbox"/> 1 Writing Fiction	Starkey Flythe	<input type="checkbox"/> One chapter or story
<input type="checkbox"/> 2 Writing Poetry	Carolyn Forché	<input type="checkbox"/> Five poems
<input type="checkbox"/> 3 Writing for the Stage	John MacNicholas	<input type="checkbox"/> A one-act play of not more than 25 pages, with a scene from a play, with a paragraph synopsis of play
<input type="checkbox"/> 4 Writing on Personal Experience	Beth Thames	<input type="checkbox"/> One example
<input type="checkbox"/> 5 Writing Newspaper Features	Jim Cornelison	<input type="checkbox"/> One example
<input type="checkbox"/> 6 Writing for Children	Nancy Ruth Patterson	<input type="checkbox"/> One example

New officers selected for 1992-93

by Heather Moncrief
ENVIRONMENT EDITOR

Officers for the 1992-93 Recycling Board have been selected. Chairperson will be Heather Moncrief, secretary/treasurer will be Todd Love, and IFC representative will be Benjamin Jones. The faculty, staff, and administrative members will remain the same: Dr. Jerry Slice- faculty advisor, Mrs. Charlotte Slice, Mr. Skip Zubrod, and Mr. Jack Robertson. Representatives from Students for Environmental Education and Women's and Men's Councils will be selected in the fall by the groups' newly-elected presidents, Bill Wright, Shelly Carson, and Quin Bynum. The one remaining position on the board, representative from the student body at large, will be filled in the fall; anyone who is interested in this position should contact Heather Moncrief, ext. 8951.

The program has made impressive strides this year. Hopefully, it will remain as strong next year. Thanks goes out to all who were members of the Recycling Task Force and to Jodie Will and Jeff Smith for a job well done.

Earth Day celebrated on campus

by Heather Moncrief
ENVIRONMENT EDITOR

Presbyterian College celebrated its third annual Earth Day Sunday, April 26. Booths were set up by several student groups including Student Volunteer Services, the Recycling Board, Westminster Fellowship, Beta Beta Beta, Zeta Tau Alpha, Sigma Sigma Sigma, Pi Kappa Phi, Theta Chi as well as by Mrs. James elementary school class. Music was provided by local musicians. While cool weather apparently kept many students away from the celebration, many local citizens with young children enjoyed an afternoon of learning about our environment.

Students for Environmental Education would like to thank all of those who participated and attended Earth Day '92.

T-shirts as well as "Recycle PC" stickers and canvas tote/grocery bags are still available. If interested, call

photo by Heather Moncrief

Mrs. James' elementary school class shares in the festivities.

Kathryn, at ext. 8785, or Charlotte, at ext. 8484.

Campus Recycling Statistics

ITEMS	FIRST AMOUNT (LBS.)	SECOND AMOUNT (LBS.)	TOTAL RE- CYCLED MATERIAL (LBS.)
CANS	610	480	1,090
GLASS	403	283	686
LEDGER PAPER	493	266	759
NEWSPAPER	1,597	1,808	3,405
CARDBOARD	406	129	535

photo by Heather Moncrief

Rob McCredie performs at Earth Day.

EAT IN - CARRY OUT - DELIVERY
$.99 PIZZA SPECIAL!

Any One
Medium Specialty Pizza

ONLY $.99

Choose From
Meat Lovers
Cheese Lovers

With Purchase Of Another Medium
Specialty Pizza at Regular Price.

Not good with any other coupon offer or P.C. discount.
One coupon per party per visit at the Clinton Pizza Hut only
Must present coupon with purchase.

Pepperoni Lovers
Supreme

THE BLUE STOCKING

"Give the people the light, so they may find the way."

Volume LXXXVII Number 1

PRESBYTERIAN COLLEGE

Clinton, South Carolina 29325

Friday, September 18, 1992

Campus crime statistics show slight decline for last year

PC CAMPUS CRIME STATISTICS

CRIMES	1991	1990	1989
Aggravated Assault	0	0	1
Arson	0	0	0
Burglary	57	63	53
Motor Vehicle Theft	2	0	2
Murder	0	0	0
Rape	0	0	0
Robbery	0	0	0
ARRESTS	1991	1990	1989
Alcohol Violations	5	19	3
Drug Violations	1	0	0
Weapons Violations	0	0	0

The Presbyterian College Public Safety Department submits uniform crime reports to the Clinton Police Department for inclusion in State and FBI crime statistics.

by Ricky Dill
NEWS EDITOR

The 1991 year at Presbyterian College saw a slight decline in criminal activity, according to the Public Safety office. Statistics showed a drop in the number of burglaries, alcohol arrests, and complaints of trespassing on campus.

In 1990 there were 19 alcohol related arrests at PC. This number fell to five in 1991, though there were 18 arrests off campus and three DUI's which PC security traced from other agencies.

Statistics indicate that there were 57 burglaries on campus, which resulted in $15,400 worth of lost merchandise. Some of that merchandise, $3,585 to be exact, was recovered. According to Presbyterian College Chief of Security Grey Mayson, that figure is not necessarily an indication of student thefts.

Mayson reports that about 60 percent of the recoveries in thefts were due to "Project ID." Mayson suggests that a bigger response from students toward "Project ID" would not only help in recovering stolen items but would also eventually cut down the amount of burglaries taking place on campus.

"I think students have become more aware of public safety because of publicity during the last few years, and they are willing to take steps to make sure their campus is safe," Mayson said. "Because they are more interested in their safety, they relate well to the public safety staff."

Last year 65 students registered their belongings with "Project ID." Chief Mayson was happy with student participation because the project was in its first official year. For the 1992-93 school year only 32 students have registered so far. That number is exceptionally low considering the amount of announcements and letters sent out to inform freshmen and transfers how helpful "Project ID" can be to them. Public Safety has decided to go around and knock on doors, urging students once again to take the time to fill out the ID forms.

"People believe that this is such a safe campus and they trust their fellow students to the point that they won't think twice about leaving their doors unlocked," Mayson said. "It is a safe campus, but a lot of the burglaries are due to walk-ins - people who do not belong on the campus. The numbers could be reduced if people would lock their doors and mark their possessions."

Applied Ethics Program inaugurated during 113th Opening Convocation

by LeJeanna Maddox
MANAGING EDITOR

Amid the pomp and circumstance of Opening Convocation, September 8, was a day of new beginnings at Presbyterian College. The assembly, honoring the class of 1993 and PC's scholarship patrons, marked the official beginning of the college's 113th academic year.

As a component of the larger celebration, the day also honored the inauguration of the college's new Applied Ethics Program, made possible by a grant from the Knight Foundation. Dr. Sissela Bok, world renowned author and ethicist, addressed the assembly on the topic "Applied Ethics: Liberal Arts Serving the Future."

The Knight Foundation, to which application may be made by invitation only, announced the award in September 1991, and since that time plans have been made to fully implement the three-year program. Dr. Richard Baker, Assistant Professor of Philosophy and program coordinator, explained, "The committee which has been formed to develop and coordinate this program envisioned it as one that would be interdisciplinary in nature, including all academic departments and touching all areas of campus life. We envisioned a program that would address ethical issues in public and professional life as well as in private lives."

When fully expanded, the program will involve not only the philosophy department but will envelop the areas of biology and business, as well.

Dr. Sissela Bok borrowed from Dr. Samuel Johnson to define applied ethics as "ethics put to the use of life." Whereas ethics has historically been studied on a purely theoretical level, there has been a recent emphasis on the application of ethical theories to everyday situations. According to Bok, the necessity of practical application has been ushered in in the past three decades with the growing issues of homelessness, corruption in government, animal research, and disposal of nuclear arms.

Bok stressed that applied ethics must become a part of educational curriculum, as many students are not exposed to such training in the home or community.

"Students all over this country and increasingly in many other countries want to be able to think through ethical questions they encounter in a more rigorous way." She continues, "They want to have the chance to think ahead, not just suddenly to be confronted in a work situation with a terrible dilemma and to be frightened into doing one thing or another."

PC President Dr. Kenneth B. Orr and Dr. Sissela Bok helped usher in the 113th academic year during Opening Convocation on September 8. photo by Steve Owens

Concluding her address, Bok challenged the Presbyterian students and faculty to let their lives be a torch, an inspiration which can be passed on to future generations.

American students have no idea where they have been or where they are going

by Jason West
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

Two weeks ago, I was reading an education journal and came across an article which detailed a recent study of high school students in the Western World. This particular study compared the educational standards and achievements of Americans with those of students from France, Germany, Belgium, etc. The study concluded that Americans were the least intelligent of the world's industrialized people.

The study found many American students not able to answer basic science and math questions, not able to speak grammatically correct, and not able to answer questions about geography and history. The study proved that American kids are not prepared for the 21st Century.

After reading this article, I began to ponder on why Americans were thought to be so "uninformed." I honestly believe that American students are not dumb or stupid; they are just confused.

Richard Lederer, a high school teacher from Connecticut, believes the same thing. A few years ago, he compiled a "history of the world" from actual student test answers collected from high schools and colleges across the United States.

Lederer concludes that Americans are so "shallow" because they don't understand their history and are confused about their origins.

The following are some of the responses which Lederer has collected. (One has to wonder if any of these responses have ever appeared in the "blue books" of Presbyterian College students.)

*The inhabitants of ancient Egypt were called mummies. They lived in the Sarah Dessert and traveled by Camelot. The climate of the Sarah is such that the inhabitants have to live elsewhere, so certain areas of the dessert are cultivated by irrigation.

*Moses led the Hebrews to the Red Sea, where they made unleavened bread, which is bread made without ingredients. Afterwards, Moses went up on Mount Cyanide to get the ten commandments. Solomon, one of David's sons had 500 wives and 500 porcupines.

*Without the Greeks, we couldn't have history. The Greeks invented three kinds of columns - Corinthian, Doric, and Ionic. They also had myths. A myth is a female moth. One myth says that the mother of Achilles dipped him in the River Styx until he became intollerable.

*Socrates was a famous Greek teacher who went around giving people advice. They killed him. Socrates died from an overdose of wedlock. In the Olympic Games, Greeks ran races, jumped, hurled the biscuits, and threw the java.

*The Renaissance was an age in which more individuals felt the value of their human being. Martin Luther was nailed to the church door at Wittenburg for selling papal indulgences. He died a horrible death, being excommunicated by a bull. Gutenberg invented the Bible. Sir Walter Raleigh is a historical figure because he invented cigarettes. Sir Francis Drake circumnavigated the world with a 100 foot clipper.

*Queen Elizabeth was the Virgin Queen. As a queen, she was a success. When Elizabeth exposed herself before her troops, they all shouted "hurray." Then her navy went out and defeated the Spanish Armadillo.

*Christopher Columbus was a great navigator who discovered America while cursing about the Atlantic. The winter of 1620 was a hard one for the settlers. Many people died and many babies were born. Captain John Smith was responsible for this.

*Abraham Lincoln's mother died in infancy, and he was born in a log cabin which he built with his own hands. When Lincoln was president, he wore only a tall, silk hat.

All kidding aside, the responses which Lederer has collected are a sad commentary on the state of American education. America is supposedly the most powerful, most industrial, most educated, most prosperous nation on the earth. However, it would appear that the majority of Americans are not able to explain just how our nation evolved to this point.

I believe that if you do not understand history, then you will certainly not understand the future. If Americans think that Sir Walter Raleigh invented cigarettes, and if Americans can't add and subtract, and if Americans cannot explain the principle of cellular respiration, then we have no place leading the world into the next century.

It is time we as a nation finally took a look at where we have been, where we are now, and where we are going. God help us to regain our sense of knowledge.

The Blue Stocking of Presbyterian College
Clinton, South Carolina, 29325
Volume LXXXVII, Number 1
September 18, 1992

Editor-in-Chief.....Jason West
Managing Editor.....Leleann Maddox
News Editor.....Ricky Dill
Politics Editor.....Ted Carmichael
Sports Editor.....Everette Catts
Entertainment Editor.....Camisha Clarke
Features Editor.....Martha Lynn Smith
Environment Editor.....Heather Moncrief
Photography Editor.....Kim Gibson
Layout Editor.....Angela Richardson

Advertising Editor.....Ann Mayfield
Subscriptions Editor.....Ron Mixon
Artist.....Michael Christensen

Photography Staff
Kimberlee Gibson Todd Love

Staff Writers
Elizabeth Cunard Amanda Bowers
Leigh Hearnburg Katherine Bonner
Kristina Pruitt Cher Fulbright
Paula Warren Michelle Cantey
Brian Sacco Shelly Phipps
Kim Rabon Jamey Pate
Tobin Turner Tonia Sneed

The Blue Stocking is a biweekly student publication of Presbyterian College. The paper serves as a forum of news and opinion of regional and national concern. For advertising, contact The Blue Stocking, Presbyterian College, Box 1061, Clinton, SC 29325. The Blue Stocking welcomes letters to the editor from all members of the PC community. Signatures are required. Letters are printed on a space available basis. The Blue Stocking reserves the right to edit all letters for proper grammar and punctuation. The final deadline for submitting letters is Friday at 12:00 pm on the week before publication.

Policy to deal with campus alcohol problem 'more openly'

by Tobin Turner
STAFF WRITER

As the 1992-93 school year progresses, PC students will quickly receive a clear message from faculty, staff, and administrators that drunken behavior will not be tolerated.

Several new programs and policies have been implemented this year to deal with the on-campus alcohol problem, including a new list of sanctions that will serve as standard penalties for alcohol violations by individuals.

Any student caught in violation of school alcohol policy on campus will receive a $50 fine or a 12 hour work detail in addition to a mandatory eight hour risk reduction class.

A second offense would result in a $100 fine or a 24 hour work detail, a second eight hour risk reduction class, and contact with the offender's parents.

A third offense would result in suspension.

Breaches of state law, such as fake ID's, serving minors, and underage drinking, can result in fines up to $100 and the loss of driving privileges for 90 days. Clinton City policy prohibits open alcohol containers in most public places, including sidewalks and roadways. Alcohol is also prohibited on campus, except in "wet" rooms, where both occupants are of legal age.

The administration's stricter attitude is due in large part to the Alcohol Advisory Committee, which is chaired by Dr. Joel Jones and includes other faculty representatives, members of the Student Affairs staff, members of the Student Government Association, and members of the Greek and Social Life Committee.

"The Advisory Committee found alcohol abuse to be a widespread problem among a too large percentage of PC students - a problem that needed to be dealt with more openly," said Jones.

The college will be placing heavy emphasis on student awareness of the alcohol problem during the 1992-93 school year. One program designed as a risk reduction program for students is OCTAA (On Campus Talking About Alcohol), which is for individuals experiencing any type of alcohol-related problem. The plans are to implement OCTAA in various areas of campus life, but the program focuses primarily on PE 101: Concepts of Physical Education, a course required for all freshmen.

Another program on campus is BACCHUS (Boost Alcohol Consciousness Concerning the Health of University Students). The goal of BACCHUS is to help the campus address the needs and problems associated with the misuse and abuse of alcohol. Peer-to-peer influence will be used to fight myths about college drinking, to halt students from driving while intoxicated, and to feature alcohol-free social events.

The Student Affairs Office will once again organize Alcohol Awareness Month in October, which is designed to enlighten the entire campus community on collegiate alcohol use. Scheduled to speak during October are David Leschke, director of chapter services for BACCHUS, and Kim Alexander, a paraplegic whose injuries resulted from a drunk driving related automobile accident.

College officials hope that new alcohol measures will educate students, raise awareness and abstinence, and decrease abuse.

PC security officer Kensla Coates prepares to patrol the campus. Public Safety will be responsible for enforcing the college's alcohol policy. photo by Kim Gibson

Class of 1996 largest freshman class in PC history

by Ted Carmichael
POLITICS EDITOR

The first month of school is always exciting, with seeing old friends for the first time in months, getting into the routine of classes, and meeting the hordes of new students. But this year there are quite a few more freshmen than anyone expected.

The class of 1996 is the largest single class in the history of Presbyterian College. Out of the 957 students accepted, 348 decided to start their college career here, which is nearly 50 more than were expected. What's more, the average SAT score of the incoming class once again is higher than that of the previous year's.

The total population of the school is now 1167, representing 25 different states across the US and seven different countries. That's a far cry from the 908 students that were here in 1985. (Or, for that matter, the 425 or so we had in 1955.)

But don't expect the population to continue growing as fast as it has in the last few years. The administration's long term plan is to keep the student body between 1150 and 1200 students for the next few years.

And don't think having so many more students than expected didn't present any problems. The Dean of Students Office ended up putting students in Douglas House, Bailey Hall's lounge, and other alternate housing. Also, some students were forced to share mail boxes for the first part of the year. Even GDH has experienced the overpopulation, with lines that sometimes exceed half-an-hour or more.

Still, the problems were not insurmountable (especially with $700,000 in extra tuition money), and having such a strong freshman class is well worth the trouble associated with it.

SGA Vice President Ron Mixon (left) and Assistant Director of Student Activities Chris Patterson (right) frolic on the "Slip and Slide" during Freshman Orientation. This year's freshman class is the largest in PC history. photo by Leleann Maddox

PC student feels 'lucky' to have survived the wrath of Andrew

by Paula Warren
STAFF WRITER

It was just after midnight when the first waves, lightning, thunder and rain came and winds of 50-75 miles-per-hour began. The "screaming winds" sent shivers up the spines of those waiting through the twelve hours of the storm. All one could do was listen to the sound of the objects being thrown against houses. The only thought was "we're going to die," as the last thing heard on a walkman was that the eye of Hurricane Andrew ripped through South Dade County, Florida, home of Cher Sadler.

Sadler, a junior at PC, and her parents were at their home when Hurricane Andrew hit Florida in the early morning hours of August 24. Mandatory evacuation had been called for North Miami, Miami Beach, Biscayne, and coastal-lying residential areas. Sadler's home is in the Cutler Ridge area, about ten miles north of Homestead.

"The only preparations my family had made were to fill our two tubs and the washing machine with water, to have candles and matches ready, to make sure the torches were working, and to fill our vehicles with gas," said Sadler. "The wait at the gas station the Sunday before the hurricane was over two hours. The lack of plywood and the expensive cost of the plywood left our windows unboarded. Then, the only thing left to do was sit and wait."

The Sadlers first began their wait in the living room, until pebbles and tiles began crashing through the front windows. After the power went out, they moved to the kitchen, where they sat together by candlelight.

"My father was unusually calm during

the storm. However, my mother hid her face throughout the hurricane," commented Sadler. "The scariest part of the storm was hearing our possessions being ripped away and not being able to do anything about it."

Around 9:00 am, the last bands of the storm came through the city. There was enough light to view the tremendous damage done around the neighborhoods. It was also at this time that yells were heard. Neighbors were yelling for other neighbors, making sure everyone was alive and needed no assistance.

"My family was really lucky. The roof in my room and in the two bathrooms collapsed, and there was also extensive water damage. The house will need a new roof, ceiling, and walls. My family feels luckier than most, as we have half a roof and some walls," said Sadler.

Sadler said that the area looked like a post-nuclear war movie. Complete blocks or entire communities no longer exist. Homestead and Florida City were blown away. Even though most possessions were ruined or blown away, people were able to find some sense of humor. For example, one sign in the Sadler's neighborhood read, "Home is where your roof landed!"

Houses built before 1968 survived the hurricane better than those constructed after that date. Luckily, the Sadler home fell into the first category. Whole communities of prefabricated houses fell. Unlike some of

Cher Sadler's truck bears witness to her hurricane experience of just a few weeks ago. Sadler is a PC junior and a resident of Dade County, Florida.

photo by Kim Gibson

ROTC combines leadership, excellence and excitement

by Christie Grant
STAFF WRITER

Until the Vietnam War, PC required all able-bodied freshmen and sophomores to take ROTC as part of the required core curriculum. As a result, PC students excelled on campus as military leaders and abroad as valiant fighting soldiers.

"It's been around for seventy-three years," said Capt. Paul DeFluri, Assistant Professor of Military Science. "It's a part of the college's history - a strong part of its history - and a lot of people don't want it to go away."

The college's ROTC program is off to a strong start this year with large enrollment and several exciting activities planned. Over one hundred freshmen are enrolled, and sixteen sophomores are currently participating in the program. Students may elect to take ROTC all four years and strive to achieve higher military ranks and a possible army commission. A beginning cadet will learn customs and traditions of the Service, national defense, leadership development, ethics, management, fitness programs, and professionalism.

On September 26, the corps will go white water rafting down the Nantahala River in North Carolina. Then on November 13-14, confidence levels will be high as the corps travels to Fort Jackson for a field training expedition.

DeFluri also commented that the rifle club will be expanded to a rifle team this year. He hopes to have a rifle match with Wofford at PC's rifle range that is located behind Templeton. In addition, a Ranger Platoon that will focus on extra training, more survival skills, and adventures will enable students to do more things outside of class.

According to DeFluri, "The short term advantages of taking ROTC are helping students get some required hours and helping boost their GPA's. The course is not academically taxing and it helps expose you to different things. Leadership principles and organizational skills are gained because you are placed in an environment that fosters leadership."

And he adds quickly, "The long-term advantage is a lifelong opportunity to serve."

ROTC scholarships are available for two or three years. Each scholarship pays most of tuition and on-campus expenses as well as allowing for textbooks, classroom supplies, and equipment. Students who receive an award must attain an undergraduate degree in the field in which the scholarship is awarded. If interested, contact

Captain DeFluri or Captain Deborah Conley.

BOING! It is a long way down for students as they take part in ROTC's open rappelling day. Rappelling is just one of the many adventures awaiting ROTC participants.

photo by Steve Owens

Honor and Ethics: 'It matters more than anything else'

by Martha Lynn Smith
FEATURES EDITOR

extent in at least ten incidents of lying, cheating, stealing, plagiarizing, and tolerance of an offense.

"It matters more than anything else," Socrates said referring to honor and ethics.

"Ethics has always been studied theoretically," said Dr. Sissela Bok, renowned ethicist from Harvard University, "but, ethics can tell us nothing unless applied."

If ethics "matters more than anything else" but no one knows how to apply them, then Presbyterian College students living in a community governed by a strict code of honor and in an imperfect world are faced with a great challenge.

The Knight Grant

However, Presbyterian College is embracing an opportunity to face that challenge. PC is an honored Knight Foundation grant recipient and will use the $237,000 received from that grant to fund an applied ethics lecture and curriculum program. The next three years will show a pronounced effort to incorporate practical ethics into the curriculum.

The first series of this effort is called "Medicine, Ethics, and Society," leaving open the possibility for ethical debates on topics such as euthanasia, abortion, AIDS, confidentiality, healthcare, and more.

Not only was Presbyterian College one of eight institutions to receive a grant from the Knight Foundation, but it was also specially selected to compete for this honor.

Philosophy professor Richard Baker is coordinating the applied ethics program at PC. He illustrates an example of applied ethics in the PC Report.

"We read 'Huckleberry Finn' in one

The Spirit of PC: Traditional bagpipers lead the processional of faculty and seniors to begin the 113th academic year. This year's convocation address inaugurated the Knight Program of Applied Ethics.

photo by Kim Gibson

The Honor Code

Modeled on a successful honor code at Davidson College, the present code was modified by student initiative in 1989 to be separate but not divorced from the Code of Conduct and to include stiffer penalties. PC and The Citadel are the only institutions in South Carolina to have an Honor Code, and as many who have traveled will testify, many schools up North do not abide by any such code.

In the past three years, the Judicial Council has enforced the honor code to the full of my classes, and when Huck decides that he is willing to go to hell to save his friend Jim, the runaway slave, then I want those students to see and feel that as a noble and courageous decision on Huck's part," said Baker.

"I want them to feel the importance of ethical issues and to see the beauty of certain actions."

To feel the importance of ethical issues and to apply them in daily life - that is the challenge - because "It matters more than anything else."

Little Known Facts

In the history of PC, there have been a few attempts to change the institution's name. It was previously called Clinton College and then the Presbyterian College of South Carolina before its name was eventually shortened to Presbyterian College. Other name change suggestions throughout the years have included Poinsett College, Pickens College, Pinckney College, Palmetto College and Douglas College.

The PCSC got its name from the acronym for the Presbyterian College of South Carolina. It was first published under that name in 1914, but the first yearbook, the Garnet and Blue, was published in 1900.

a new regular feature in The Blue Stocking

Good news in one hundred words or less

Provided by SVS
as a new weekly feature for
The Blue Stocking

I suppose I finally realized what it means when people say that in giving we receive. When I went with Habitat for Humanity to the house in Greenville to work alongside the family which consisted of an elderly man and his grandchildren, I was surprised to find out how grateful they were for what they had - each other. The little boys made the most of things as they showed off their hand springs and other acrobatic feats. We laughed together in the face of what seem to be impoverishment.

Welcome,
Freshman
and Transfers!

from:
The Blue Stocking

PC student feels 'lucky' to have survived the wrath of Andrew

by Paula Warren
STAFF WRITER

It was just after midnight when the first waves, lightning, thunder and rain came and winds of 50-75 miles-per-hour began. The "screaming winds" sent shivers up the spines of those waiting through the twelve hours of the storm. All one could do was listen to the sound of the objects being thrown against houses. The only thought was "we're going to die," as the last thing heard on a walkman was that the eye of Hurricane Andrew ripped through South Dade County, Florida, home of Cher Sadler.

Sadler, a junior at PC, and her parents were at their home when Hurricane Andrew hit Florida in the early morning hours of August 24. Mandatory evacuation had been called for North Miami, Miami Beach, Biscayne, and coastal-lying residential areas. Sadler's home is in the Cutler Ridge area, about ten miles north of Homestead.

"The only preparations my family had made were to fill our two tubs and the washing machine with water, to have candles and matches ready, to make sure the torches were working, and to fill our vehicles with gas," said Sadler. "The wait at the gas station the Sunday before the hurricane was over two hours. The lack of plywood and the expensive cost of the plywood left our windows unboarded. Then, the only thing left to do was sit and wait."

The Sadlers first began their wait in the living room, until pebbles and tiles began crashing through the front windows. After the power went out, they moved to the kitchen, where they sat together by candlelight.

"My father was unusually calm during

the storm. However, my mother hid her face throughout the hurricane," commented Sadler. "The scariest part of the storm was hearing our possessions being ripped away and not being able to do anything about it."

Around 9:00 am, the last bands of the storm came through the city. There was enough light to view the tremendous damage done around the neighborhoods. It was also at this time that yells were heard. Neighbors were yelling for other neighbors, making sure everyone was alive and needed no assistance.

"My family was really lucky. The roof in my room and in the two bathrooms collapsed, and there was also extensive water damage. The house will need a new roof, ceiling, and walls. My family feels luckier than most, as we have half a roof and some walls," said Sadler.

Sadler said that the area looked like a post-nuclear war movie. Complete blocks or entire communities no longer exist. Homestead and Florida City were blown away. Even though most possessions were ruined or blown away, people were able to find some sense of humor. For example, one sign in the Sadler's neighborhood read, "Home is where your roof landed!"

Houses built before 1968 survived the hurricane better than those constructed after that date. Luckily, the Sadler home fell into the first category. Whole communities of prefabricated houses fell. Unlike some of the homes in the Charleston area during Hugo, Dade County, Florida had building codes which said houses had to be constructed to sustain winds up to 120 miles per hour.

"I feel my house sustained less damage because it was a corner house and was not facing the winds. There were two sets of wind directions. The hurricane moved from east to west, but the circular rotation of winds around the storm went north to south. Those houses facing north and south were demolished," said Sadler.

"Homestead and the surrounding areas were the hardest hit. The people in these areas were angry because the first news reports were about the city of Miami, where there was some flood and tree damage. The news media and rescue teams did not come to see the real damage - homes, if a home was left, and areas with no electricity, running water, or telephone service - until four days after the hurricane," commented Sadler.

It took the Sadler family four days to get water again. It may take four to six months to get telephone and electricity lines replaced. Sadler recently contacted her mother and there has been no change in the area.

"Immediately after the hurricane, the victims' primary worry was where to find their next meal. The fear of looters was also very great. While the water is now on again, it is still unfit to drink," said Sadler.

Items needed in the area are charcoal, canned goods, non-perishables, hygiene items, candles, bottled water, and related items. Feelings of sorrow and pity are not needed. Sadler will be going home in about two weeks to take supplies. Anyone would like to donate items such as those listed above please contact her at 8883.

Cher Sadler's truck bears witness to her hurricane experience of just a few weeks ago. Sadler is a PC junior and a resident of Dade County, Florida.

photo by Kim Gibson

ROTC combines leadership, excellence and excitement

by Christie Grant
STAFF WRITER

Until the Vietnam War, PC required all able-bodied freshmen and sophomores to take ROTC as part of the required core curriculum. As a result, PC students excelled on campus as military leaders and abroad as valiant fighting soldiers.

"It's been around for seventy-three years," said Capt. Paul DeFluri, Assistant Professor of Military Science. "It's a part of the college's history - a strong part of its history - and a lot of people don't want it to go away."

The college's ROTC program is off to a strong start this year with large enrollment and several exciting activities planned. Over one hundred freshmen are enrolled, and sixteen sophomores are currently participating in the program. Students may elect to take ROTC all four years and strive to achieve higher military ranks and a possible army commission. A beginning cadet will learn customs and traditions of the Service, national defense, leadership development, ethics, management, fitness programs, and professionalism.

On September 26, the corps will go white water rafting down the Nantahala River in North Carolina. Then on November 13-14, confidence levels will be high as the corps travels to Fort Jackson for a field training expedition.

DeFluri also commented that the rifle club will be expanded to a rifle team this year. He hopes to have a rifle match with Wofford at PC's rifle range that is located behind Templeton. In addition, a Ranger Platoon that will focus on extra training, more survival skills, and adventures will enable students to do more things outside of class.

According to DeFluri, "The short term advantages of taking ROTC are helping students get some required hours and helping boost their GPA's. The course is not academically taxing, and it helps expose you to different things. Leadership principles and organizational skills are gained because you are placed in an environment that fosters leadership."

And he adds quickly, "The long-term advantage is a lifelong opportunity to serve."

ROTC scholarships are available for two or three years. Each scholarship pays most of tuition and on-campus expenses as well as allowing for textbooks, classroom supplies, and equipment. Students who receive an award must attain an undergraduate degree in the field in which the scholarship is awarded. If interested, contact

Captain DeFluri or Captain Deborah Conley.

BOING! It is a long way down for students as they take part in ROTC's open rappelling day. Rappelling is just one of the many adventures awaiting ROTC participants.

photo by Steve Owens

Honor and Ethics:

'It matters more than anything else'

by Martha Lynn Smith
FEATURES EDITOR

extent in at least ten incidents of lying, cheating, stealing, plagiarizing, and tolerance of an offense.

"It matters more than anything else," Socrates said referring to honor and ethics.

"Ethics has always been studied theoretically," said Dr. Sissela Bok, renowned ethicist from Harvard University, "but, ethics can tell us nothing unless applied."

If ethics "matters more than anything else" but no one knows how to apply them, then Presbyterian College students living in a community governed by a strict code of honor and in an imperfect world are faced with a great challenge.

The Knight Grant

However, Presbyterian College is embracing an opportunity to face that challenge. PC is an honored Knight Foundation grant recipient and will use the $237,000 received from that grant to fund an applied ethics lecture and curriculum program. The next three years will show a pronounced effort to incorporate practical ethics into the curriculum.

The first series of this effort is called "Medicine, Ethics, and Society," leaving open the possibility for ethical debates on topics such as euthanasia, abortion, AIDS, confidentiality, healthcare, and more.

Not only was Presbyterian College one of eight institutions to receive a grant from the Knight Foundation, but it was also specially selected to compete for this honor.

Philosophy professor Richard Baker is coordinating the applied ethics program at PC. He illustrates an example of applied ethics in the PC Report.

"We read 'Huckleberry Finn' in one

The Spirit of PC: Traditional bagpipers lead the processional of faculty and seniors to begin the 113th academic year. This year's convocation address inaugurated the Knight Program of Applied Ethics.

photo by Kim Gibson

The Honor Code

Modeled on a successful honor code at Davidson College, the present code was modified by student initiative in 1989 to be separate but not divorced from the Code of Conduct and to include stiffer penalties. PC and The Citadel are the only institutions in South Carolina to have an Honor Code, and as many who have traveled will testify, many schools up North do not abide by any such code.

In the past three years, the Judicial Council has enforced the honor code to the full of my classes, and when Huck decides that he is willing to go to hell to save his friend Jim, the runaway slave, then I want those students to see and feel that as a noble and courageous decision on Huck's part," said Baker.

"I want them to feel the importance of ethical issues and to see the beauty of certain actions."

To feel the importance of ethical issues and to apply them in daily life - that is the challenge - because "It matters more than anything else."

Little Known Facts

In the history of PC, there have been a few attempts to change the institution's name. It was previously called Clinton College and then the Presbyterian College of South Carolina before its name was eventually shortened to Presbyterian College. Other name change suggestions throughout the years have included Poinsett College, Pickens College, Pinckney College, Palmetto College and Douglas College.

The PaC SaC got its name from the acronym for the Presbyterian College of South Carolina. It was first published under that name in 1914, but the first yearbook, the Garnet and Blue, was published in 1900.

a new regular feature in The Blue Stocking

Good news in one hundred words or less

Provided by SVS
as a new weekly feature for
The Blue Stocking

I suppose I finally realized what it means when people say that in giving we receive. When I went with Habitat for Humanity to the house in Greenville to work alongside the family which consisted of an elderly man and his grandchildren, I was surprised to find out how grateful they were for what they had - each other. The little boys made the most of things as they showed off their hand springs and other acrobatic feats. We laughed together in the face of what seem to be impoverishment.

Welcome
Freshman
and Transfers!

from:
The Blue Stocking

Political experts bring presidential campaign to Presbyterian

Press Release
Office of Public Relations

To most South Carolinians, the 1992 Presidential Campaign is a far-removed event. Although residents of the state will cast their votes for George Bush or Bill Clinton - and be directly affected by the results - they are denied access to an insider's view of the campaign.

This fall, three renowned political experts who have been sharing their views with national audiences will bring the election and its implications closer to home for South Carolinians when Presbyterian College hosts a three-part series on the race for the White House. Gergen, who has also served as editor-at-large for U.S. News and World Report and as news analyst for The MacNeil/Lehrer Newshour on PBS, will focus on "The 1992 Elections: A Republican Perspective."

At 11:00 am on Tuesday, Oct. 13, in Belk Auditorium, former Assistant Secretary of State Bob Beckel will address "The 1992 Elections: A Democratic Perspective." Beckel served as the director of Walter Mondale's 1984 presidential campaign, and is currently hosting the Fox Network's public affairs show, Off the Record. He is also serving as the political analyst for CBS This Morning during the 1992 campaign.

Completing the series on Tuesday, Nov. 17, will be Pulitzer-prize winning columnist David Broder, who will present an overview of the campaign during his talk, "The 1992 Elections: A Post-Mortem." Broder, recognized as one of the nation's top political analysts for his work with The Washington Post, will speak at 11:00 am in Belk Auditorium.

The series is being co-sponsored by Presbyterian College's Russell Program and the Lectures and Fine Arts Committee. Each event is free and open to the public.

TAKE THE KEYS.
CALL A CAB
TAKE A STAND.

Ever Get Somebody
Totally Wasted?

FRIENDS DON'T LET FRIENDS DRIVE DRUNK

PIZZA NIGHTS!

Monday & Thursday in the Springs Center
Domino's Monday 7-10pm
Pizza Inn Thursday 7-10pm

TAKE THIS COUPON
AND GET A FREE
DESSERT WITH YOUR MEAL AT...

Terry's

Expires 9-30

Bush, Clinton discuss education NAFTA treaty will boost economy

by Leigh Hearnburg
STAFF WRITER

In a Business Week poll (Sept. 14, 1992), when asked how they would rate the quality of American schools, only 3 percent of the public responded with "excellent," while 36 percent said "only fair," and 23 percent rated them "poor." With those kinds of numbers it is obvious that public education in America is in trouble, at least in the eyes of the public. As the presidential election draws near, people are turning to the "education president" and his opponent to see what the future of education in America could be.

While Bush's Secretary of Education, Lamar Alexander, has received high praises from both sides of the political spectrum, Bush himself has been another story. His "America 2000" plan for education has gotten much hoopla and press, but critics are still skeptical. It proposes education improvement efforts to center in on "four trains" or "four tracks." Those tracks are Bush's education aims for the coming decade. They are: today's students, tomorrow's students, workers out of school, and families/communities. In addition to this somewhat ambiguous proposal, the Bush camp is quick to point out that funding for education has increased 40 percent, in inflation adjusted dollars, since 1982. (Perhaps this is an indication that throwing money at the school system isn't the answer, since there has been no improvement in basic math and language skills.)

Now that education has become an important issue in this election, Bush has begun to show more interest in the subject. His opponent, however, is also turning to this issue. Clinton, in his criticisms of Bush's efforts, has begun to talk about the more serious issues that need addressing. Regardless of all the mudslinging, he has zeroed in on America's need to be able to compete on an international level. He has also emphasized the need for a great deal more attention and funding to go toward improving the system as it now stands. Clinton said, "If you had the chance...to decide the course of your country, which one would you choose? Anybody who knows anything about the world would choose education."

Clinton has also proposed a National Trust Fund with an initial cost of $20 billion, divided over a four year period. Its purpose would be to provide financial aid to college students, and would be paid back either by payroll deductions or community service.

While both sides are throwing out plan after plan, proposal after proposal, and criticism after criticism, Americans are beginning to look at education in a new light—and are beginning to decide which man really would be "the education president."

According to the Business Week poll, Clinton is clearly the candidate of choice in this regard. Forty-nine percent of those polled thought he would do the best job of improving education, while only 35 percent said Bush would. Still, the election is another month and a half away, which leaves a lot of pandering room for both candidates.

by Ted Carmichael
POLITICS EDITOR

It has been shown, theoretically and historically, that free trade between countries is beneficial, in the long run, for the economies of all the countries involved. Since tariffs and quotas artificially raise the costs of goods, consumers aren't able to buy as much. But when you remove that artificial cost, demand rises and the buyer gets more for his/her money. Furthermore, producers expand to meet the increase in demand, which in turn creates jobs. This then puts more money into people's hands and demand goes up again and...well, you get the point.

That's why so many economists are excited about the North America Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA). Creating a market of 363 million consumers with a combined GNP of $6.4 trillion can only help the economies of Canada, the United States, and Mexico. It would also speed up the process of dividing the world into three major trading blocs, giving us an important edge in competing against Asia and the European Community.

Labor unions, however, worry that under this agreement many manufacturing jobs would be lost to Mexico. Since hourly wages there are roughly one-eighth that of the US, it's not very difficult to imagine American industries moving their plants south of the border. Still, many plants are already being moved to Asia or going under to foreign competition. Therefore, keeping the manufacturers in this hemisphere translates into more business for American suppliers. What's more, Mexicans already spend about $40 billion a year on American goods. As their per-capita income goes up, our exports to Mexico are sure to increase as well.

As things stand now, tariffs between the three countries average from about five to ten percent, although some individual ones are much higher. For example, products such as cocoa are increased by as much as 20 percent in Mexico. American apparel manufacturers are protected by a 33 percent tariff, and tequila is hit by a 183 percent duty in Canada. If NAFTA is passed, however, these and other restrictions will be rolled back over the next 15 years.

Not everything will be unregulated, of course. Car imports to America must have at least 65 percent local content, and Mexico has refused to allow foreign ownership in its energy industry, as stipulated by their constitution. Canada is also pushing for protection of its television and publishing industries, similar to that allowed for in the free trade agreement between them and the US. Nevertheless, under NAFTA, many major industries will be open to competition, and key non-tariff barriers will be removed as well. For example, dairy and cotton quotas will be reduced in Canada and the US, and Mexico has agreed to let American companies invest in their banks and securities firms.

Passage of the treaty isn't expected to meet any difficulty in the US. President Bush is strongly in support of it and is pushing for its passage through the Congress. He has been criticized, however, for pushing the negotiations to an early release, just before the GOP convention. Some critics contend also that certain environmental concerns have been overlooked because of the rush. Clinton, on the other hand, has advocated free trade in principle but is stalling his support for the treaty, as it is written, in order to keep from losing support from organized labor.

Despite the politicking, most people are in favor of the agreement. And surely nobody will complain about the boost all three economies are sure to get.

Democratic presidential candidate Bill Clinton (left) recently made a campaign stop in Columbia, South Carolina. A group of PC students (right) braved the crowd to hear the candidate's message. Clinton faces President George Bush in the November general election.

photos by Jason West

Blue Hose edged by Fairmont State Falcons, 12-10

by Everett Catts
SPORTS EDITOR

In a battle of defenses, the Blue Hose Football Team started the 1992 season on September 5 against Fairmont State College in the first meeting between the schools. In the hot and humid Fairmont, West Virginia, the Blue Hose came up short. Fairmont State took the lead with a first quarter touchdown. PC came back with a 44-yard field goal in the second quarter by Alex Horton. The Blue Hose defense, led by John Dow, shut down the Falcon offense for the remainder of the half. PC took the lead 10-7 near the end of the second quarter, when quarterback Tim Davis connected with wide receiver Todd Sims for a 30-yard touchdown. At halftime the score remained 10-7.

Neither team could score in the third quarter, thanks to the excellent play of both defenses. But Fairmont State tightened the score 10-9 when a punt snap went out of the endzone for a safety with 5:15 remaining. After receiving the free kick, the Falcon offense drove down the field and kicked the winning field goal with 1:07 left in the game. Unfortunately, the Blue Hose offense was unable to score on their final possession, losing the ball on downs with 33 seconds left.

Head Coach John Perry commented on the game, saying, "We didn't have nearly the consistency we wanted. We didn't execute as well as we wanted to. The quarterback was pressured a lot, and we were out of sync."

Despite the loss, many positives came from the game. When asked about the defense, Coach Perry said, "Our defensive effort was very good, and I hope that trend continues." Perry added, "The defense kept us in the game."

Perry also announced the players of the week. The offensive player was wide receiver Todd Wofford, who had three catches for 48 yards. The defensive player was defensive lineman John Dow, who had nine tackles (two for losses) and a sack. Coach Perry also pointed out freshman linebacker Antonio Merriwether, who had four tackles. The outstanding special teams player was Alex Horton, who accounted for four of PC's ten points with a field goal and an extra point.

Coach Perry commented on the team's week off and upcoming game against Furman tomorrow. Perry said, "We used the week to work on overall execution." Regarding Furman, Perry said, "They haven't changed a great deal in the last ten years. We've been watching film, and we know what to expect."

PC's Eric Byrd (22) attempts to pull away from a Fairmont State defender during PC's season opener.

photo by Steve Owens

Men's soccer shuts out opponents

by Everett Catts
SPORTS EDITOR

Coming off last year's 15-3-2 record, the 1992 Blue Hose Soccer Team opened the season in quick fashion against High Point on September 5. Twenty-nine seconds into the game, John Mairs scored the first goal. Jason Woodall got the assist. Both Will Lindstrom and Norman DeWart later scored to give the Blue Hose a 3-0 win. DeWart's goal was assisted by Dan Walbot.

On September 9 PC defeated long time rival Erskine College, a team the Blue Hose defeated for the first time last year, 2-1. Will Lindstrom scored the first goal, with an assist by Robert Goding. Chris Bruno added two goals, the first on a penalty kick and the second from a Chris Napier assist. Thus the final score was 3-0.

The Blue Hose squad opened conference play with a 1-0 win over Wingate. Chris Napier scored PC's only goal. More importantly, the team got their third shutout of the season, which is a good sign following last year's eight shutouts.

Even though they have played well at the start, the Blue Hose have a long season ahead. The opponents to come include Clemson, Wofford, Lenox Rhyne, Catawba, and USC. Head Coach

Ralph Polson commented on the team's schedule, saying, "By far this is the toughest schedule we've ever played." PC, ranked 17th in the nation and fourth in the South last year, plays teams in the top twenty in the NCAA Div. I and II and the NAIA.

When asked about this year's team, Assistant Coach Bret Boulware said, "I think overall the team is better than last year. The team speed has improved along with the caliber of the sub players, who have performed well coming off the bench." Coach Polson added, "It's a good team. We started out with two solid wins, the third less glamorous, but still a win."

When asked about the freshmen on the squad and the team's level of play, Polson said, "The freshmen-seventeenth is one of our largest, all have a lot of potential. Some have contributed right away, while others take time to develop. I'm excited about where we are now and where we can go, but we're not close to the level of playing we should be. We hope to peak at the end of the season just like last year." The Blue Hose won the '91 SAC Tournament. After playing Carson-Newman, Clemson, and Mars Hill on the road, PC returns to play Wofford on September 30.

Women's soccer team remains undefeated after five games

by Amanda Bowers
STAFF WRITER

Saturday, September 5, marked the beginning of the 1992 season for the women's soccer team. After only five games, the Lady Blue Hose have scored a total of 42 goals and have had only two scored against them.

Coach Brian Purcell is very excited about this season. "The freshmen are fitting in well, and the upperclassmen are playing the best soccer I've ever seen them play. This year's team is very solid," he said.

The Lady Blue Hose won their first game 9-0 against High Point and their second match 10-0 against Agnes Scott. Then on September 9, they defeated long-time rival Erskine College 9-0. Coach Purcell said that while he was optimistic about the game, he had no idea it would be so one-sided. Goals for the Hose were scored by Missy Butler (3), Stephanie Smith (2), and Nicki Soderberg (2), with one goal each contributed by Charity Brazeal and Elizabeth Wellborn.

According to Co-captain Nicki Soderberg, "This is the first time in the history of PC women's soccer that we've beat Erskine, who is a big rival of ours. To beat them 9-0 makes it even better because they have beat us in the past."

With no seniors on the team this year, the Lady Blue Hose are led by their four juniors: Missy Butler, Stephanie Smith, and Co-captains Nicki Soderberg and Kathleen Dowd. Coach Purcell is pleased with their work.

"They are not only the leaders in age, but they are also the best players," he says.

Some of the goals he has set for the team include having a winning season, making it to the conference finals, and being one of the top four teams qualifying for the District 26 tournament.

Co-captain Kathleen Dow also wants to make it to the conference finals. She feels they have the potential to win it all.

She comments, "We have a lot of talent this year that is pulling together and should take us far. We are a young team and have a lot of potential. I am very excited!"

The Lady Blue Hose posted their most recent victories this weekend, defeating Wingate 6-0 and Lenox Rhyne 8-2.

Spirit abounds on cheerleading squad

by Brian Sacco
STAFF WRITER

Often overlooked by fans at football games, the PC cheerleading squad provides enthusiastic support and promotes school spirit on a weekly basis. This year's squad, coached by Susan Polson, practices two hours every day on their routines, which require a great deal of concentration. During the summer, they attended cheerleading camp at East Tennessee State University and earned a superior rating for their efforts. The 1992-93 squad is composed of seniors Shelley Eidson, Andrew Smith, and John Noble; juniors Boyd Morris, Laura Pate, Bryan McGill, Jeanie Kim, Keith Walker, and Lori Randall; and sophomores Tabitha Stokes, Craig Streetman, and Mary Beth Brumelow.

Few people realize the extent to which cheerleading requires a student-athlete to have a diligent work ethic and a great deal of commitment to the teams. The squad must prepare for every football game and a majority of the men's and women's basketball games. Cheerleaders must also maintain a 'C' average to remain eligible and can earn varsity letters by cheering for two consecutive seasons. This year's captains, Shelley Eidson and Andrew Smith, would like to see this year's fans become more involved and more enthusiastic at the games; nevertheless, they are grateful for the fans who consistently support Blue Hose athletics.

Few people realize the extent to which cheerleading requires a student-athlete to have a diligent work ethic and a great deal of commitment to the teams.

Junior Laura Pate cheers at the Fairmont State Falcon Game. photo by Steve Owens

Bill Nave saved these

kids from drowning,

but he's not

a lifeguard.

Verleeta Wooten found

several new stars,

but she's not an astronomer.

These are teachers. But to the kids they reach,

they're heroes.

BE A TEACHER.
BE A HERO.

Call 1-800-45-TEACH.

A Public Service of
This Publication
Photo by Robert Naylor

Reach for the Power
TEACH
Education with Real Goals

Volleyball team starts season

by Ed Kirkland
STAFF WRITER

The 1992 Lady Blue Hose volleyball team's season is already underway, and the team, ranked 22nd in the preseason, has gotten off to a 2-0 start with wins over Newberry on September 4 and Columbia on September 8. Head Coach Beth Couture commended the play of Lisa Kimbrell and Kristy Tarallo. The squad was also runner-up in the 8-team Catawba Tournament, September 11-12. In the opening round, the Lady Blue Hose defeated St. Andrews. On the next day, the team lost to Catawba in the second round but rebounded to beat Queens in round three. In the semi-finals, the Lady Blue Hose defeated USC-Spartanburg. Unfortunately, the team lost to Catawba again in the finals.

After last year's amazing 42-4 record, this year's squad is trying to make its own mark. While it would be hard to forget about the accomplishments of the '91 team, this year's group is working hard to find its own identity. With three returning starters and others with playing experience, the Lady Blue Hose have a good nucleus upon which to build. Captains Ashley Jenkins, Lisa Kimbrell, and Christi Wynn should provide leadership and experience for the team's newcomers, who include seven freshmen. The starters for the squad are: Ashley Jenkins, Lisa Kimbrell, Christi Wynn, Dee Dee Williams, Jennifer Smith, and Kristy Tarallo.

Captain Lisa Kimbrell commented on the team's play, saying, "We have a long way to go, but we're improving every game. As the season progresses, so will our team's level of play."

The Lady Blue Hose played at USC-Spartanburg on September 16 and host Francis Marion on September 22.

GENE'S CAFE

GOOD HOME
COOKING

MON.-FRI.: 3am - 2pm
SAT: 3am - 10am
207 W. PITTS ST.

The Presidency and the Environment

by Kristina Pruitt
STAFF WRITER

There are many factors that influence a voter's decision. An issue of major importance in the 1992 election is the environment. Both presidential candidates have different ideas about how far the government should go to ensure a safe and healthy environment; however, both agree that some measures must be taken.

Obviously, the environment factored into Clinton's decision to choose Gore as his running mate. Gore is one of Congress' foremost experts on the environment. Most environmental groups feel Clinton has the most active hand on the environment.

Bush claims to be "the environmental President", but he has concerns about the economy and lack of jobs. He feels that during this time of high unemployment and recession, increased regulation on industries will result in fewer jobs and add to the unemployment rate.

The following is a comparison of some of the environmental views held by the 1992 Presidential candidates.

BUSH/ QUAYLE

- * Plans to lower taxes for the oil and gas industry and producers.
- * Supports plans for drilling in the Alaskan National Wildlife Refuge.
- * Does not support auto-efficiency laws.
- * The National Energy Strategy (NES) approved Bush's plan to increase the number of nuclear power plants.
- * 1990 Clean Air Act was weakened by the Council of Competitiveness headed by Vice-President Quayle.
- * He forced EPA to end a proposal for local governments to be required to recycle 25% of solid waste in areas that had incinerators; this caused an increase in incineration.
- * Bush's redefinition of "wetlands" caused the campaign pledge "no net loss of wetlands" to mean basically nothing; now half of the wetlands in the United States have no protection.
- * Energy and fuel alternatives such as ethanol will be researched.
- * Opposed attempts to weaken acid rain control law.
- * Doubled EPA's (Environmental Protection Agency) enforcement budget.

CLINTON/ GORE

- * Suggests auto-efficiency law of 45 miles per gallon.
- * Supports research of alternative fuel and renewable resources.
- * Supports carbon dioxide emissions tests.
- * Supports plans to ban offshore drilling.
- * Proposes mandatory recycling of a percentage of recyclable products.
- * Proposes rebates for fuel efficient cars that would be paid for by a tax on "gas guzzlers".
- * Achieved tougher anti-pollution laws in Arkansas in 1991.
- * Clinton backs the poultry industry, which pollutes the rivers badly; however, in 1988 he developed Clean Water Regulations.
- * Seeks both protection for ancient forests and protection for the workers.
- * Supports the 1990 Clean Air Act.
- * Supports a tax on carbon.
- * Supports a decrease in the use of nuclear power.

MEMBERS OF THE PC RECYCLING BOARD

Heather Moncrief, Recycle PC

Chairperson

Todd Love, Recycle PC Secretary

Margaret Barfield, SEF Representative

Quin Bynum, President of Men's Council

Shelly Carson, President of Women's Council

Benjamin Jones, IFC Representative

Mr. Skip Zubrod, V.P. of Finance

Mr. Jack Robertson, Director of the Physical Plant

Dr. Jerry Slice, Faculty Representative

Mrs. Charlotte Slice, Staff Representative

Student Pick Up: Men's Council members, Women's Council members, and SEF members.

Any questions concerning the program can be directed to any of the board members. Anyone interested in volunteering his or her time assisting with the weekly pick up is encouraged to call Heather Moncrief at 833-9515. Positions on the board are available for the 92-93 school year; contact Heather at the above number if interested. Those interested in joining Students for Environmental Education should contact Bill Wright at ext. 8088. (SEF meets on Wednesdays at 5:00pm, Richardson Hall, room 207.)

RECYCLE PC encourages everyone to recycle their soda cans, plastic containers, cardboard boxes, newspaper and ledger paper. Recycling is found in the dormitories and academic buildings.

One of these is a college expense you can live without.

South Carolina National knows that along with college comes a lot of necessary expenses. But checking account service charges shouldn't be one of them.

That's why we've created our Bargain Checking Account. It gives students a checking account with all the extras — without a monthly service charge.

There's no limit to the number of checks you can write. So you can use your Bargain Checking Account to buy all of the essentials shown above.

And Bargain Checking comes with an ATM card that you can use free at over 160 TouchMate Banking locations all over South Carolina. Including those at our beaches. (That can really come in handy during spring break.) Plus, you can use the card in thousands of Relay and Cirrus machines across the country.

What's more, only SCN offers Flex Response — a special telephone service that lets you call for your bank balance and transactions anytime — free of charge.

Bargain Checking from South Carolina National. One essential a college student should never do without.

FLEX BANKING
South Carolina National

Bush weakens Endangered Species Act and threatens existence of old growth forests

by Ted Carmichael
POLITICS EDITOR

The 19-year-old Endangered Species Act is one of the nation's most powerful pieces of environmental legislation. Species are listed as endangered based upon biological considerations; economic factors are weighed in as a "recovery plan" for the critical species is established. Only the Endangered Species Committee, which is appointed by the President, has the power to exempt a listed endangered species from protection if the economic consequences are too great.

President Bush is presently campaigning against this act, specifically as it relates to the old-growth forests of the Northwest. Only approximately 5 percent of these ancient forests—forests that were in existence prior to colonization—remain today. Estimates vary, but it is clear that these forests will be gone in as few as 5 years if Bush succeeds in overturning this legislation.

The timber industry is fighting for the rights to continue cutting down these forests. The problem centers around their being the only habitat for the spotted owl, as well as other less publicized endangered species. These inhabitants help to establish the forests' position under the Endangered Species Act. In speeches given at two sawmills this past week, Bush displayed his support for the workers and his lack of support for the forests and endangered species. Bush is trying to protect the jobs of the loggers and sawmill workers, but has no agenda for what will happen when the forests are completely destroyed. When the forests are gone, the jobs and the endangered species will be gone also; therefore, the jobs which are being protected are not long-lasting positions.

The logging of the old-growth forests is not essential. The amount of forested land in America has remained constant over the last hundred years (about 600 million acres), and according to Forbes magazine (Sept. 14, 1992), all the wood America needs can be grown on about half the land now used for timber. Such figures do not include the old-growth forest.

Peter Segal to perform CEP concert

by Kim Rabon
STAFF WRITER

Peter Segal, a distinguished guitarist and soloist, will be performing a program entitled "The Spanish Guitar from the Old World to the New" in Edmunds Hall on September 21 at 8:15 pm.

Segal has studied under such masters as Alirio Diaz, Oscar Ghiglia, and Jose Tomas at the Accademia Chigiana and Spain's University of Santiago. He holds a Master's Degree in Musicology and currently teaches at both Temple University, where he is completing his doctoral studies, and at the Philadelphia University of the Arts.

Segal has played in almost every state in the union, including Alaska. In 1974, he made his successful European debut in London, and in 1983 he made an equally acclaimed New York debut. Recently, he performed in recitals in both Spain and Hong Kong.

Segal will be playing an arrangement of Spanish and South American songs. He will premiere a piece entitled "Man with a Blue Guitar." The work, based on the poetry of Wallace Stevens, is composed by Robert Capanna.

Jerry Biebesheimer, PC's Cultural Events Coordinator, is looking forward to Segal's performance.

"This is the first time I've been to a concert since I arrived at PC. I'm anxious to see the turnout of students, as well as listen to the acoustics in Edmunds," he says.

September 15 through October 15 is Hispanic Heritage Month. Show your interest in another culture and enjoy.

Peter Segal will be performing on September 21 in Edmunds Hall.

file photo

Fried Green Tomatoes to be shown in Springs

by Tonya Snead
STAFF WRITER

Rumbling in the distance, rails creak and leaves swirl as the train passes through the small, dusty town of Whistle Stop, Alabama. In Whistle Stop, two young women grow up to become best friends, sharing everything from the grief and sorrow of death to adventures like those of Robin Hood. This is the setting for the hit movie Fried Green Tomatoes, which plays tonight in Springs Campus Center.

The two characters, Idgy Threadgoode and Ruth Jameson, played by Mary Stuart Masterson and Mary-Louise Parker respectively, complement each other perfectly. While Idgy is a somewhat wild and untamed tomboy, Ruth is just the opposite, a young lady always doing the "right thing," acting the "right way," and even marrying the "right man."

The narrator, Ninny (Jessica Tandy), is a nursing home resident who befriends Evelyn (Kathy Bates), a confused, highly self-conscious, middle-aged house wife. After Evelyn is rudely dismissed by her "not so dear" Aunt Vesta, she finds herself passing the time listening to the adventures of Ruth and Idgy. During the following weekly visits, Ninny tells her stories of humor and tragedy to a very eager listener. These visits deal not only with the friendship of Idgy and Ruth, but also with the difficulties Evelyn is having controlling her weight, her marriage, and the "inability to grasp her femininity."

Slowly, Evelyn begins to make changes in her lifestyle, giving up some of the "Ruth" characteristics and adopting some of the personality of Idgy's character.

Fried Green Tomatoes is an intelligent, heart warming film that is beautifully written and superbly acted. In my opinion, the entire cast shines.

You can catch a peek at the film yourself tonight at 7:00 pm in Springs Campus Center. The film is being sponsored by the Student Union Board and will be free of charge.

Campus and Clubs

Beta Beta Beta

Beta Beta Beta welcomes the new officers for the 1992-93 school year and looks forward to a productive year. The new officers include: Lara Collier, President; Leiv Tackle, Vice President; Jessica McCullough, Secretary; Melanie Kimbrell, Treasurer; and Heather Moncrief, Historian. The officers and members welcome and congratulate the new members on their achievement. New members include: Ashlee Benjamin, Chris Coker, Leigh Cummings, Kimberlee Gibson, Jessica McCullough, Heather Moncrief, Kimberly Stancil, and Shannon Trammell. Beta Beta Beta is the biological honor society on campus.

SAM

The Society for the Advancement of Management will hold its organizational meeting Monday, September 21, at 7:00 pm, in Chapman Conference Center, Jacobs Hall. Any student of any year and any major is invited to attend.

Westminster Fellowship

WF wants to welcome all of the first year students to PC and to welcome everyone else back as well! WF is the group on campus which is affiliated with First Presbyterian Church here in Clinton, and we also have many other denominations represented every semester! We welcome everyone to our meetings on Tuesday nights at 9:00 pm in Crossroads. Come and join us because we would love to have you.

Omicron Delta Kappa

The Presbyterian College chapter of Omicron Delta Kappa is pleased to announce that the following seniors were inducted into the organization: Celeste Bowers, Lara Collier, David Dixon, Craig Gilstrap, Jennifer Gordon, Brad Hawley, LeJeanna Maddox, Michael Martin, Frank McKay, Malorie McRae, Aaron Miller, Heather Moncrief, Cynthia Seeliger, Laura Smith, Kathryn Spearman, Chris Wingard, Christi Wynn. Omicron Delta Kappa is the National Leadership Honor Society for college students that recognizes and encourages superior scholarship, leadership, and exemplary character. Congratulations to these new members for their achievements.

Kappa Alpha

The Brothers and Pledges of Kappa Alpha Order welcome all upperclassmen back to campus. A special welcome goes out to the freshmen. We hope that your year is off to a good start and will be the beginning of a great four years. Please feel free to come by the house anytime. We have some great parties lined up this semester, and we hope you will be a part of them. Thanks to all of you who made last weekend fun. We will have many more cookouts, guitarists, and band parties for those of you who could not make it to last weekend's festivities. Good luck to the football team this weekend vs. Furman.

THE BLUE STOCKING

"Give the people the light, so they may find the way."

Volume LXXXVII Number 2

PRESBYTERIAN COLLEGE

Clinton, South Carolina 29325

Friday, October 9, 1992

Dean Thompson selected as SC's Professor of the Year

Press Release
OFFICE OF PUBLIC RELATIONS

Dr. Harold Dean Thompson, assistant professor of English at Presbyterian College, has been named the 1992 Professor of the Year for South Carolina by the Council for the Advancement and Support of Education (CASE). He was selected for the award from ten nominees from nine different colleges and universities in South Carolina. Dr. Thompson is the second member of the PC English department to claim the honor in as many years, as professor of English Dr. James Skinner received the award in 1991.

"All too often, the ego of the professor becomes a blinding sun against which the self-esteem of the student evaporates into airy nothingness," Dr. Thompson said. "I don't want to use my scholarship as a club to beat my students into unquestioning submission; I want them to go beyond anything I may say, to ask questions again and again, as together we explore the grand tradition of thought with which the present is to keep continuity. Understanding the purposes of our lives is my first priority."

A native of Spartanburg, SC, the 33-year-old professor joined the Presbyterian College faculty in 1988. He was a Spartan Mills Scholar at Wofford College, where he received his BA in English. He earned his MA from the University of South Carolina, and his PhD from Vanderbilt University in 1987.

During his four years at PC, Dr.

Dr. Harold Dean Thompson lectures to his English 111 class. Thompson was recently selected as the South Carolina Professor of the Year. photo by Kim Gibson

Thompson has developed a reputation as a disciplinarian who cares as much about the personal success of his students as their professional success.

"During a lecture in the winter months, I have often seen him suddenly disappear from the classroom and reappear with a steaming cup of hot tea topped with lemon which he would give to a student suffering from a terrible cough. He would then as quickly proceed with his lecture," said Gene Brooks of Clinton, a 1992 graduate. "He has urged me always to push my horizon wider. One characteristic question comes from his lips to nearly every student he meets, including me: 'What is your dream, boy? If you could lay aside all hindrances, what would be your dream? You must dream. Without a dream, you have no starting point. Boy, dream big."

Robert Thomas, Jr., a junior from Columbia, has also been touched by Dr. Thompson - his former advisor.

"As his advisee, I was subject to intensely personal discussion on not only academics, but also family, friends, and the actions which define me as a person. He seemed to know all about me," he said. "I will never forget receiving my first test back in second semester English. The comment was short and simple: 'Good. That's my boy. Now, what is this sixty-something in physics?' I honestly do not believe I did anything my freshman year which escaped his hearing."

And, as the students prepare to graduate, Dr. Thompson also has a good idea about the quality of the person who has passed through his midst.

"If my students leave my classes with improved writing skills, well and good. If they leave with an increased passion for reading, great! What I hope is that they come to care about the things that make life worth living, receive joy from the curiosity that pushes our horizons onward, and be determined to make a difference for someone - whether that difference be through smoothing a brow furrowed with pain, educating the unlearned, or giving direction and purpose to the confused and stumbling," he said.

On The Inside

Page 3 . . .

Senior Audit: Who is responsible - the Registrar or you?

Bob Beckel to visit PC campus.

Page 4 . . .

Joe Nixon relives his fraternity days at PC.

Page 11 . . .

PC's Homecoming Court.

Public Safety considering 24- hour security for female dorms

by Tobin Turner
STAFF WRITER

If PC's Chief of Security Grey Mason gets his way, women students on campus may be using a 24 hour security access system to get into their dorms.

Mayson has proposed this new system to help in providing a safe and secure campus. "I realize that I am dropping a bomb by recommending this proposal because many students find this policy unpopular," he said. "However, I must emphasize the importance of staying ahead of the game."

Already this year two rapes have occurred in residence halls in Charlotte, North Carolina, and Mayson wonders if it is not just a matter of time before PC adds its name to the list of schools that have had violent crimes committed on campus.

Some female residents see a round-the-clock security system as more of a hassle than a boost to campus safety.

"One of the reasons I chose PC was because of the small, contained campus and the sense of security," said Shelley Phipps. "I don't see a need for the doors to be locked 24 hours a day."

Another PC student suggests that safety is the responsibility of the individual. "If you're worried about security, lock your door," said Heather Jones.

At present, each female resident hall is equipped with a card access system. The doors lock automatically at 12:00 am, and a resident must use her card to gain entry after that time. However, the doors of the female dorms are unlocked from 7:00 am until midnight.

There is a concern among some female residents that using a 24-hour security system in the dorms would result in some women leaving the dorm without their card or losing the card altogether.

The decision to implement a 24 hour security system for female residents will fall on the desk of Andy Altizer, director of residence life. Altizer says that decision is not one he will relish making.

"I agree with Chief Mayson that we need to be proactive and always think of the safety of our students," Altizer said. "On the other hand, I believe the policies need the support of the student body."

"In my opinion, the subject needs to be addressed by the Women's Council and female residents. I hope the female residents choose to keep the hall locked during the evening hours, but again, it should be their decision," added Altizer.

One person can still make a difference

by Jason West
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

When you are a college student, summer vacation is the time when you find a good part-time job, make a little money, and relax.

This past summer was anything but relaxing for me. Instead of getting a job as a counselor at a camp or waiting on tables in a restaurant, I decided to run for public office.

After returning from campus last semester, I began to throw around the idea of running for a seat on the Kershaw County School Board. I was not very happy with the way things were going in my county's school district, and I thought it was time for something different. I thought it was time for some "new blood," and I believed that a student would have a better understanding of the school system than any career politician.

I discussed with my parents and friends the idea of running for office. None of them were too encouraging. In fact, some of my friends thought I was crazy, and they thought that electing someone who wasn't even 20 years old to a seat on the school board would be a mistake.

Needless to say, I didn't take their advice. I sincerely believed that I could make a difference and that my youth was a plus, not a handicap. After a great deal of soul searching, I made my announcement and started my campaign.

I thoroughly enjoyed campaigning. Every day, I went from one house to another, telling anyone who would listen who I was and what I wanted to do. My travels led me to meet some interesting people and some interesting animals. (I was chased by three or four dogs and barely escaped being bitten.)

I will always remember one lady I met in particular. She was an elderly woman who lived alone. After inviting me into her house, she proceeded to tell me her entire life story. This lady was a tremendous storyteller, and I enjoyed her company. Before I left her house, she told me there was something she wanted me to always remember. "If you get elected," she said, "don't think about what the office can do for your personal gain; think about what you can do for the office and the people." I promised this lady that I would never forget, and I hope that I never do.

On August 25, 1992, the voters of Kershaw County saw fit to elect me to the school board. On that same day, the voters of Kershaw County also elected another young person to the board, as an 18 year-old USC freshman named Wesley Herndon became the youngest elected official in are all excellent examples of youth making a difference.

However, you need only to look across the PC campus to find young people who are contributing to society. People such as Laura Smith, who serves as the intern for the SVS program; Frank McKay, who brightens the lives of many elderly people; or former PC student Mary Ellen Vernon Hoyt, who started the Laurens County Habitat for Humanity Chapter, are great assets to the community.

I ran for the school board because I believed that a young person could make a difference. I still believe that! This nation's greatest resource is not oil or gas - it is youth.

This November, the youth of this nation can make a difference by voting. The experts tell us that the group of people who votes the least in this nation is the youth. The experts believe that young people are slack, unconcerned, and incapable. You and I both know that is not true.

I urge all of you to be involved, informed, and interested. I believe that we, as young people, could do a much better job running the Congress, the state legislatures, and the school boards of this nation than those who currently find themselves in power.

South Carolina.

Herndon is one of many youth who has proven that young people have something to offer. The youth of America are not all drug heads, alcoholics, or TV zombies. The vast majority are willing to help make the world a better place. Young people, such as Ryan White, a longtime AIDS victim and victim's rights advocate; Kim Zmeskal, a 16-year-old athlete who represented the United States at the Olympics; and Corrie Ten Boom, who was only a teenager when she faced persecution for defending the rights of her fellow human beings,

"Don't think about what the office can do for your personal gain, think about what you can do for the office and the people."

The Blue Stocking staff encourages students to express their concerns by writing letters to the editor. The next deadline for submitting letters to the editor is October 23, 1992.

The Blue Stocking of Presbyterian College
Clinton, South Carolina, 29325
Volume LXXXVII, Number 2
October 9, 1992

Editor-in-Chief.....Jason West
Managing Editor.....Lelanna Maddox
News Editor.....Ricky Dill
Politics Editor.....Ted Carmichael
Sports Editor.....Everette Catts
Entertainment Editor.....Camisha Clarke
Features Editor.....Martha Lynn Smith
Environment Editor.....Heather Moncrief
Photography Editor.....Kim Gibson
Layout Editor.....Angela Richardson

Advertising Editor.....Ann Mayfield
Subscriptions Editor.....Ron Mixon
Artist.....Michael Christensen

Photography Staff
Kimberlee Gibson Todd Love

Staff Writers
Elizabeth Cunard Amanda Bowers
Leigh Hearnburg Katherine Bonner
Kristina Pruitt Cher Fulbright
Paula Warren Michelle Caney
Brian Sacco Shelly Phipps
Kim Rabon Jamey Pate
Tobin Turner Tonia Sneed

The Blue Stocking is a biweekly student publication of Presbyterian College. The paper serves as a forum of news and opinion of regional and national concern. For advertising, contact The Blue Stocking, Presbyterian College, Box 1061, Clinton, SC 29325. The Blue Stocking welcomes letters to the editor from all members of the PC community. Signatures are required. Letters are printed on a space available basis. The Blue Stocking reserves the right to edit all letters for proper grammar and punctuation. The final deadline for submitting letters is Friday at 12:00 pm on the week before publication.

Students express dissatisfaction with Registrar's office over senior audit

by Shelley Phipps
STAFF WRITER

As a requirement for graduation, all PC seniors must meet with the Registrar to complete a senior audit. Yet PC students say they are surprised to find out what the audit involves, and many claim they were never informed of such a requirement.

The senior audit policy began years ago as a double-checking procedure to confirm that all requirements for graduation would be completed by the anticipated graduation date.

Assistant Registrar Flo Dowdle says that, ideally, the audit should be completed during the spring of the student's junior year to avoid last-minute panic in adding required courses.

"The Registrar's Office is only a clearinghouse," explained Dowdle. "The students are expected to take some of the responsibility to keep up with their records and requirements."

Senior Ellen Mercer says she is glad she kept a record of her coursework at PC. "The Registrar's Office didn't have any of the classes I took last fall in their records, but they had one class that I've never taken. I had to correct the records myself. As I understood it, completing the senior audit was the Registrar's job, not mine," said Mercer.

Mercer was not the only senior who expressed dissatisfaction with the audit process. Kerri Pynne discovered during her audit that she must take a class next spring that has not been offered at PC in over five years. She was able to exercise a policy waiver option.

During the audit, seniors are surprised to learn that they must pay a $25 diploma fee which covers the cost of the diploma, its simulated leather cover, and cap and gown rental.

"As I understood it, completing the senior audit was the Registrar's job, not mine."

Ellen Mercer

Scott Rice finds the policy absurd. "After four years of hard work to achieve senior status, a $25 fee stands between the student and graduation," he said.

Rice points out that all students receive the PaCSaC every year, which is paid for in their student activities fees. "Why isn't the diploma fee taken from the same account?" asked Rice.

Dowdle explained that PC does not charge the student for the diploma fee with tuition costs because the school would have to distribute refunds to all students who transfer to other schools. "PC serves as the middle man between the student and the company who charges the fee," she added.

For students who are working towards a double degree, the fee is increased to $40.

"You'd think that after paying over $50,000 we'd get our degrees for free," commented Senior Ted Carmichael.

Dowdle advises students to complete their major cards early and to pay the audit fee as soon as possible.

Beckel to present 'democratic perspective' on election

Press Release
OFFICE OF PUBLIC RELATIONS

During the opening program in Presbyterian College's "Election '92 Series," political analyst David Gergen painted Bill Clinton as the favorite to win the presidential election in November.

On Tuesday, October 13, former Deputy Assistant Secretary of State Bob Beckel will add his views when he covers "The 1992 Elections: A Democratic Perspective" in Belk Auditorium at 11:00 am.

Beckel is the moderator on Fox Television's weekly public affairs program "Off the Record," a guest host for CNN's "Crossfire" and "Larry King Live," and is serving as political analyst and commentator for "CBS

This Morning" during the 1992 campaign. In addition to writing a syndicated column for The Los Angeles Times, he has appeared on television news shows on each of the major networks, and is a frequent guest on such shows as "Face the Nation," "Meet the Press," and "Nightline."

After a political baptism in Robert Kennedy's 1968 campaign, a tour of duty in the Peace Corps, and a successful stint heading up his own consulting firm, Beckel joined the government in 1977. As the youngest Deputy Assistant Secretary of State in history, he steered the controversial Panama Canal Treaties through Congress. He moved into the White House as head of an Administration effort to press Congress into passing the Mideast and Salt II Treaties.

Beckel returned to his career as a political consultant for a short time, then was asked by Walter Mondale to manage the candidate's 1984 presidential campaign. As national campaign manager, Beckel oversaw Mondale's successful race for the Democratic nomination.

In 1985, Beckel formed National Strategies and Marketing Group, Inc., a consulting firm specializing in grassroots campaigns for some of this country's leading corporations, trade associations, and non-profit organizations. In 1989, he also formed BBA, Inc., a political analysis company which monitors trends and developing issues in American politics for its clients.

Homecoming events slated for weekend

Press Release
OFFICE OF PUBLIC RELATIONS

The presentation of the top alumni awards will highlight Presbyterian College Homecoming activities October 9 through 11, as hundreds of alumni are expected for the weekend activities which will include class reunions, a barbecue lunch, a golf tournament, and the crowning of the Homecoming queen during halftime of the PC football team's game against Catawba.

Three alumni awards will be presented on October 10 during the PC Alumni Association program scheduled for 1:00 pm in Edmunds Hall. Those to be honored are Dr. Edward Walter Burke, Jr. (Class of '47) of Bristol, Tennessee; Elwood Gray Lassiter III (Class of '69) of Norcross, Georgia; and Dr. Jonathan Robert Davis (Class of '76) of Baltimore, Maryland.

Presbyterian College's Homecoming Weekend will begin on October 9 at Lakeside Country Club with a golf tournament sponsored by the Walter Johnson Scotsman Club.

Later that evening, students will present skits and entertainment for alumni and friends during the annual Blue Sox Festival. Blue Sox will get underway at 7:00 pm at Belk Auditorium. In addition, Holiday Inn, Darlington House, and the Inn on the Square will host special class reunion dinners.

Saturday's schedule includes departmental reunions, a picnic lunch, the alumni association program, the football game, and additional class reunion dinners. A special Sunday brunch is planned at 9:00 am on October 11, with worship services to follow.

The Campaign to Improve Child Care in South Carolina

When selecting a child care facility, make sure it offers each of the following:

- ☐ Frequent, warm interactions between adults and children.
- ☐ Nutritious meals and/or snacks.
- ☐ A variety of learning activities appropriate to children's ages.
- ☐ Enough adults to respond to the individual child.
- ☐ Stable group of specially trained teachers.
- ☐ A healthy and safe environment for children.
- ☐ A policy that welcomes parents to drop in unannounced anytime.
- ☐ An atmosphere that lets "kids be kids."

To find out more, call 1-800-763-ABCD

What a difference a house makes. . . A glance at fraternity history

photo courtesy of Tom Stallworth

This 1970 Alpha Sigma Phi picture was taken next to the old Judd Dining Hall building that stood in between Richardson and Neville. This building burned down in December 1973.

by Christie Grant
STAFF WRITER

Imagine being a student at Presbyterian College in the early 1960s. At that time, the campus was a different place altogether, with different buildings and different faces.

Greenville Dining Hall (GDH) was not in existence in the '60s; instead, Judd Building was the dining facility and it was located behind Neville Hall. Thomason Library had not yet been constructed, so Smith Administration Building served as the campus library. In addition, there was a 300 seat auditorium in the back of Neville Hall, where the language labs are presently located.

This was the way Presbyterian College was when Joe Nixon began his college career here. Nixon currently serves as Dean of Students.

In addition to the dining hall and library being located in different places, PC fraternities had no court in which to meet. Instead, fraternities met randomly in Neville Hall, the dining hall, and in maintenance shops.

Pi Kappa Alpha, Pi Kappa Phi, and Alpha Sigma Phi met on the third floor of Neville. Kappa Alpha met at the maintenance facility, which was located behind the Judd Building. Sigma Nu met in the house that is presently located behind GDH on 5th Avenue. Theta Chi had a second floor set of rooms in the building located between Ramage's Texaco and McDonalds.

According to Nixon, who was a Pi Kappa Alpha, the lack of an official fraternity court did not prevent frat parties. "We used to rent the Legion Hut and had musical groups like the 'Hot Nuts' perform. We would also have record parties at our meeting locations," said Nixon.

During Nixon's student years at PC, less than 50 women attended the college. "Needless to say, we did a lot of road tripping," he said.

Nixon also added that when his fraternity met in Neville Hall, he didn't have use of an elevator. "There was no elevator in Neville back then, so we had to climb wooden steps to get to the third floor," he said.

In the 1960's more than 50 percent of the men on campus were involved fraternally. Today, 44 percent of PC males are Geeks.

PC's Fraternity Court is only as old as most of the present students. The court was completed in 1971 for a price of $220,000, with six houses on seven acres.

Little Known Fact

PC became residentially coeducational in 1965 with the construction of Clinton Dorm. Before then all women students were commuters.

The unwritten rules of Presbyterian College

by Dennie Lynn Hill
STAFF WRITER

As the freshmen get settled into their new homes in the metropolis of Clinton and the upperclassmen return, we begin to notice, once again, the rituals of PC students.

I am sure that everyone has caught on to the acts, which some may classify as bizarre; nevertheless, they are patterns that define us as Presbyterian College students. We can identify an "import" right away by merely watching or conversing with them for only a few moments. Some of the rituals, such as carrying a purse, are, of course, dead giveaways. Never, never, ever carry a purse. I think there is some cruel act such as cutting off a female student's arm if she is caught. Or even worse, you might be mistaken for a Converse girl. Non students may also commit another dreadful crime on campus. It is overlooked by some, of course, but there is a huge seating chart categorized by campus organizations at the entrance to GDH. You don't make the mistake twice of sitting at someone else's table. Other things that classify non-students and PC students include rules about eating. Roberts for example, is not a fast food, drive in type of restaurant. To us it is a fine eating establishment much like the Graystone. And for the best tea in the southeast, you don't go home to mom; you go to Whiteford's. Mom doesn't have shaved ice. Other things include our obsession with driving to class (even if it is quicker to walk) and, of course, gossip. Gossip, gossip, gossip, and more gossip. You know the underground gossip magazine that is produced on campus that reports anything and everything that you wouldn't want someone to know about yourself? It is my understanding that even the administrators receive a copy. PC students know everything there is to know about other people's lives, including their most embarrassing moments. You know, those moments that no one lets you live down. Like when you slip in the cafeteria and spill all of your food on the first day of school, or when you dance and sing on stage with a band on Friday night and you can't go into GDH because of a humiliation sentence of at least one week. And oh, how you appreciate your friends for not driving it into the ground. It is not forgotten, but talked about at every meal for days, weeks, or even years. For example, the first night of my freshman year still rings in my head as one of the most embarrassing moments of my life. My friend Ann and I had been invited to an upperclassman party the first night of our freshman year. We had connections, you see. Her sister was a senior. Well, we were excited beyond words. We primped, went to our FOB meeting, and then off to the first party of our college career. We were both nervous and excited, but we had been invited; everything would be fine. Then, suddenly, out of nowhere a voice said "Wait a second!" We had been stopped by an upperclassman as we were walking into the party. He then proceeded to pull on the top corner of my shirt and say, "Aren't you going to take this off?" I turned to Ann and, with knees knocking and tears in my eyes, I told her the fatal news. "Ann, we have to take off our shirts to go in. What are we going to do?" The upperclassman broke in and said, "No, freshman, you have on your FOB nametag." Well, to and behold, there I stood, a true undeniable freshman with my FOB nametag and all. If you are thinking to yourself, "Gosh, I bet she did want to die of embarrassment," you hit the nail on the head.

There are many traditions at PC, and most of them won't be found written about in the school catalogue or the knapsack. But as we all know, some of us too well, these ideas and rituals certainly do exist.

Dr. Thompson: 'On test day, he is an Atilla'

by Martha Lynn Smith
FEATURES EDITOR

Chalk up two for Presbyterian College. As the 1992 South Carolina Professor of the Year, Dr. Dean Thompson, assistant professor of English, is the second PC faculty member in as many years to be given that honor by the Council for the Advancement and Support of Education (CASE).

This is no joke, although the recipient is one of the most famous comedians on campus.

Dr. Thompson's visage is a familiar one on campus; who else would hold an 8 o'clock class on the Neville Hall front steps in sub-zero temperatures? But he is glad to interrupt his lecture to go get a hot cup of lemon tea for a coughing student. And his students love him for it.

Is he a tough teacher? Ask his students and listen to them moan. He revels in his nicknames, or in his eyes, accolades: "Dr. Death" and "DDT." He isn't trying to be mean; he just wants his students to reach their potential and to realize the beauty of the written word.

Thompson is inspired by Whitman, moved by Wheatley, enlightened by Donne, amused by Chaucer, appalled by Poe, and daily pays homage to the genius of Fitzgerald and Welty.

"Don't you see what this passage means," he says as he teaches, leaping and flying among the group hovering on the Neville front steps. The students are taken in by his enthusiasm and drenched with the knowledge spilling forth.

"Look, there's nothing special about me," Thompson growls about the award. "I'm privileged to teach alongside the Holy Trinity of Prater, Skinner and Stewart. I love to teach and I love my students. It's that simple."

Dr. Dean Thompson photo by Steve Owens

Gene Brooks, a 1992 PC graduate and a Thompson protégé, described Thompson in grand metaphorical style: "On test day, he is an Atilla; . . . in spirit, a Mahalia Jackson; . . . at a dream, a deCrevoeur; . . . in charity, a Teresa; . . . in easy-going attitude, a Hank Snow; . . . as a gentleman, a veritable Lee."

But Thompson is humble. He says, "I'd love to know what put me over the top. The committee must have seen the Elvis calendar." Only Dr. Thompson would dress up as Elvis, complete with sideburns and bellbottoms, and pose for last year's SUB calendar. It seems only fitting to conclude a Thompson article with a joke.

The girl potato said to the mother potato, "I'm in love with Dan Rather."

"You can't be," the mother potato replied. "He's only a common later."

Dr. Dean Thompson, CASE South Carolina professor of the year, is no "common later."

Good news in one hundred words or less

by Alicia Perry

Every Monday, a group of about five PC students and I head out to Laurens Memorial Home in the legendary SVS van. We usually stay for about an hour. Although an hour is not an extraordinary amount of time, it makes a world of difference in the lives of the residents as well as the volunteers. When the residents see us walk through the front door, their eyes light up and smiles cover their faces. Whether we have planned a game of bingo or a song and dance, the residents are just happy that we are there. Before we leave, Ms. Hedgepath usually fills us in on all the gossip, and Ms. Wallace leads us in a song or two. The volunteers are supposed to be the ones to enrich the residents' lives, but we usually manage to break even.

Springs Canteen at night

Take-out pizza on Mondays and Thursdays

Regular canteen menu on Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Fridays

Habitat: 'Helping build simple, decent housing with God's people in need'

by Martha Lynn Smith
FEATURES EDITOR

The epitome of "Dum Vivimus Servimus"

On Sunday of last week, the Presbyterian College Habitat for Humanity chapter and the Laurens County Habitat affiliate chapter held a ground breaking for the first Habitat for Humanity house in Laurens County.

The recipient family, a mother and her two young children, were very appreciative, and soon they will move into the house that was specially designed for them.

"Helping to build simple decent housing with God's people in need" is the national motto for Habitat for Humanity, and that is just what these two chapters are doing for this family.

"There is room for everyone in America."

Is there? That's how J. Hector St. John de Crevecoeur, a Frenchman who settled as an American farmer, described the American Dream, in his 1782 essay, Letters from an

American Farmer

"Welcome to my shores, distressed European," he wrote, "I will give thee fields to feed and clothe thee, a comfortable

fireside and

and tell thy children by what means

thou hast prospered, and a decent bed

to repose on."

Two hundred and ten years later, what has become of the American dream?

Washington D.C., the nation's capital, is second only to New York in the number of homeless people. There, the homeless sleep on the U.S. Capitol steps, in front of the White House, in front of every government building, and literally on every corner.

During my study there last semester, I encountered about twenty homeless people each day, and I became accustomed to being asked for money at least that many times.

"A little help, please ma'am."

"No, I'm sorry, not today"

"Thank you, anyway. God bless you."

"God bless you."

That was the kicker. There were so many; it was hard to do something every time.

There were also a few of what my friends and I called, using a horrible pun, "the resident homeless." These were the people that we passed every day as we went about our business.

There was the woman at the metro stop who cursed and shouted horrible things at people who wouldn't give her money. There was another man who did acrobatic flips for people as they walked by. And there was Charles Tyler Cavanaugh.

He lived right on the corner near my dorm. He had a little table and a chair, and he kept all of his belongings right there with him. He made a little fire to keep himself warm and to cook himself a meal of flour and water. On Sundays, as church bells rang all around him, he read his Bible. "He used to be a priest," a friend of mine told me. But now he is homeless, and every day he greeted me with a toothless grin.

"There is room for everybody in America"

Habitat for Humanity is working to realize that goal as much as it can. The chapter should be praised for its efforts.

PC's chapter has work trips approximately every Saturday on a go-when-you-can basis. Anyone wishing to be a part of PC's Habitat chapter should contact chapter president LeJeanna Maddox at 8847.

Environmental products to be made available

by Heather Moncrief
ENVIRONMENT EDITOR

An environmental "general store" is on the horizon for Greenwood, S.C. Bob Coleman, a native of Greenwood, is behind the plan. Coleman wishes to offer alternatives to the prominent nonbiodegradable and nonrecyclable products that are produced by companies who do not care about protecting the environment.

Choosing the items to be sold is the difficult task and continues to require much research. Coleman plans for all of the items as well as their producers to be both environmentally sound and health conscious. He is looking for companies that do not test on animals, do not pollute as a result of their manufacturing process, and do care about protecting the environment. Products produced by companies that also produce components for nuclear weapons for the defense industry will not be carried by the store.

Coleman wishes to make shopping in his store an educational process. "Consumers must learn to differentiate between companies and products," Coleman said. "It is each individual's responsibility to learn the effects of the products he or she is purchasing." If a product is carried by his store, he wants his shoppers to know why. Tentative plans are to have some form of explanation for each item visible in the store explaining why an environmentally conscious consumer should purchase it. The information will be there; people will just have to take the time to read it.

Coleman, an ex officio member of Greenwood's Solid Waste Advisory Council, is taking part in researching ways to reduce the amount of waste being landfilled. He hopes that through the Council's efforts and better public education, reduction will rise above the Council's initially set goal of 25% reduction. Greenwood is currently spending approximately 5.5 million dollars to build a new landfill; this sum is higher than that being spent on police protection or parks and recreation. "Individuals can no longer look at throwing things away as costless. It is very expensive."

Coleman explained. "Individuals and communities not recycling are throwing money and the future away."

The percentage of wastes kept out of this new landfill will determine its lifespan. Coleman believes stronger efforts should be made to extend this lifespan so funds will not have to be used in the near future to replace it. He is playing his role in this effort by offering consumers products which contain less packaging. For example, Shalee products which he carries are highly concentrated; a one-quart bottle of Basic H equals 6900 bottles of Windex or 270 bottles of Fantastic. He realizes that all of the containers he sells will not be recycled, but at least there will be fewer of these to be placed into the landfill when they are emptied. Coleman thinks very strongly that "If you're not buying recycled products, you're not recycling."

While his goal is to have the store open in the spring, he may have a small version open prior to Christmas. The project remains in its planning stages and will definitely be small-scale at first. He has chosen some of the items which he plans to carry. These include such items as biodegradable, organic cleaning products; water filters; 100% recycled paper products including toilet paper, paper towels, and Christmas cards and wrapping paper printed with soy ink; clothing made from organically grown cotton; environmental books and t-shirts; vegetarian cookbooks; and alternative CDs. ecoWorks lightbulbs which are manufactured in South Carolina and are advertised as lasting three times longer than regular incandescent bulbs and using ten percent less energy will also be available. Future large-scale plans include a possible cafe and the sell of such products as solar panels. "Companies will not make environmentally sound products until people stop buying those that are not environmentally sound. Economics is the determining factor," said Coleman. He hopes that his store and others like it will assist in creating the needed demand for such Earth friendly goods.

If there is an interest on the part of faculty, staff, and/or students, Mr. Coleman has offered to come to Presbyterian College to display his products and to explain why he believes them to be environmentally sound. A fund raising project involving the sell of a cleaning kit is also available through him at this time. Any individuals and organizations who are interested in either of these should contact Heather Moncrief at 833-9515 as soon as possible. Such items as lightbulbs, books, recycled paper products, and Shalee cleaning products are currently available; if interested in ordering or in learning more about what is available, call either Heather at the above number or Mr. Bob Coleman at 803-229-3336.

Environmentally Responsible Products For Our Future

P.O. Office Box 791

Greenwood, South Carolina 29646

Bob Coleman

(803) 229-3336

"If you're not buying recycled products, you're not recycling."

Trash in space?

by Heather Moncrief
ENVIRONMENT EDITOR

Trash problems exist not only on the Earth but also in space. An estimation made by the U.S. Office of Technology Assessment reveals that as much as 900,000 pounds of manmade debris at a diameter of 4 inches, as well as much more smaller debris, is presently in orbit around the Earth. Not only does the debris pose an environmental problem; it also endangers the lives of astronauts and hinders the success of their missions. In fact, in 1983 the space shuttle Challenger received extensive damage to a cockpit window when a very small chip of paint from a previous mission struck it. As unbelievable as that may sound, one must realize that when a piece of debris as small as one-half inch in diameter traveling at 22,000 miles per hour collides with something it carries with it the impact of a 440-pound safe traveling at 60 miles per hour on Earth's surface.

Predictions made by scientists reveal that the proposed U.S. space station would be at a 36-percent risk of suffering a critical collision with debris within the first ten years of its operation. The funds may be found to build the station but not to continuously repair it. The problem is serious, yet any attempts to solve it have been few in number. While the U.S. National Academy of Sciences has been asked to study the dilemma, few policymakers are responding to this newly publicized problem.

Political analyst David Gergen speaks on the election

photo by Kim Gibson

David Gergen spoke at the September 22 CEP in Belk Auditorium.

by Ted Carmichael
POLITICS EDITOR

The first installment of the Russell Program election special was a huge success. David Gergen spoke in Belk Auditorium on Tuesday, giving a republican perspective of the upcoming presidential election. Many students have since commented on what a good speaker he was, and some said that this was one of the best CEP's they have ever seen. A few people, however, criticized his view as being non-partisan, rather than "A Republican Perspective," and felt that it should have been billed as such. Nevertheless, Mr. Gergen made some good points about government, the economy, and of course the presidential race. Here are some excerpts.

President Bush. Gergen has known George Bush for over 20 years and has a very high regard for him as a person. According to Gergen, Bush sees the presidency as a kind of stewardship, a managerial approach to government. He is not there with set goals or a purpose, but deals with things as they come up. "He's not a very conceptual or philosophical person, but rather defines life through people. When someone talks about housing, he thinks of Jack Kemp; if they mention France, he thinks of Mitterand." He also has an uncanny memory for names and writes 30 to 40 notes per day to people with whom he works. Gergen was impressed with Bush when he spent a weekend with him in 1979. "George Bush and his wife both drove out to the airport to pick me up, instead of just sending a college kid or something." When he had to get up at 5:30 in the morning to catch his flight, Bush was at his door with a cup of coffee and said, "I thought you might need this to get started."

Gergen did express disappointment with Bush's first term, saying how he had walked away from Reagan's ideals. "In politics there's an old expression—'You always dance with the girl that brung you.' But when Bush took office, the Reagan people were shoved out the door and forgotten."

Jim Baker. The current Secretary of State has been friends with Bush for years. They have what Gergen calls "the most unique relationship in the twentieth century" between a president and his advisor. Gergen described Baker as an extremely honest man who has tried to keep his record clean. He got his experience in foreign affairs at Bush's urging. Bush himself got his foreign affairs experience through the encouragement of former president Richard Nixon, and he considers the experience invaluable. While Bush acts more like a manager, Baker is more goal-oriented. He recognizes and ignores what cannot be done, then focuses only on the obtainable goals. "You always know where you stand after talking to Jim Baker." What the Republicans need to do is get Baker's name substituted for Quayle's in the press "so it would be Bush/Baker versus Clinton/Gore. Then they could make the argument, 'We spent the last four years fixing the world; the next four will be spent fixing the country.'"

The Campaign. "In most elections, each side starts off with about 40% of the electorate and is fighting for the last 20%." But this year will be an "uphill battle" for George Bush. "This morning Clinton was 21 points ahead, and Bush hasn't broken 42% in a national poll yet." Gergen goes on to explain that in modern campaigns, strategists look at a map of the US and ask "how can we get 270 electoral votes?" In recent elections, the republicans could count on the South and California, which gave them a base of about 200 electoral votes. But this year California is decidedly on the Democrat's side and the South is shaky, which gives Bush a much smaller base. This makes the heartland crucial for the Republicans. Gergen compares winning enough of those states to "drawing an inside straight—you can do it, but it's hard."

Governor Clinton. "Bill Clinton is very smart—very well read." He reads about 300 books a year, according to Gergen, and has been good on both education and welfare reform. "He also has 'a commitment that is very deep and firm on bringing the races together.'" But Gergen is unsure what kind of president Clinton would be. "He has gone around telling people what they want to hear, [but] is he willing to take the heat to be a good president?" He also expressed a desire for Clinton to take a stand on an issue, "to show that he can say no."

In this election, Bush knows he will lose on his record from an economic standpoint; therefore, he needs to "change the subject. [Bush will] turn our attention to the question, 'Can we trust Clinton to be president?'" He will also concentrate on the draft issue and will try to plant seeds of doubt about Clinton's record in Arkansas and the rumors of his infidelity.

In Closing. "Whoever wins this election, the most important thing is that the people stay in the arena. [The citizens] must be willing and able to make changes and to make sacrifices and to make this a better country. We owe it to the next generation." Gergen went on to say that he believes there is now a growing spirit in the American people, "and a desire to pull together and solve the problems regardless of race, religion, or political ideas." His final note was a quote from Winston Churchill: "You can always count on America to do the right thing, after she has exhausted all of her other options."

Radio PC

PC's radio station moves on campus this year!

Broadcasting will begin at 3:00 pm on October

21 on the PC information channel (32)

INTERVIEW SUITS
STARTING AT $200

PUBLIC SQUARE LAURENS

Men's soccer team continues to dominate its opponents

by Brian Sacco
STAFF WRITER

After shutting out their first three opponents, the Blue Hose soccer team continued their domination as they rolled to victories against Limestone, USC-Aiken, Carson Newman, Mars Hill, and Wofford, with their only loss coming against NCAA Division One power Clemson.

Coach Ralph Polson attributes a great deal of the team's success to the group's willingness to work together. "The team's work ethic has made it fun," he said.

The soccer team traveled to Limestone on September 14, coming away with a 5-0 victory in a game in which every player saw action. Will Lindstrom began the scoring with an assist from Robert Goding. Dan Walbolt followed with an assist from Shannon Brown; and then John Mairs, assisted by freshman Tyler Boulware, added the third goal. Boulware added his own goal with an assist from Todd Chandler, and fellow freshman Chris Napier closed out the scoring with an assist from Rob Clarke.

The Blue Hose team returned home two days later to face USC-Aiken. The Blue Hose dominated the game, as eight different players scored and the entire team played. Napier and Chris Bruno each had two goals while Jason Woodall had two assists.

In their second SAC game of the season, PC traveled to Carson Newman and pulled out a 3-1 victory in double overtime. On a field described as a "mudbath" by Coach Polson, the game remained scoreless for over an hour until Carson Newman scored to lead 1-0. PC tied the game on a Will Lindstrom goal, assisted by Goding and Walbolt.

After one scoreless overtime period, Napier scored with seven minutes remaining in the final overtime on an assist from Woodall. Bruno secured the win when he scored on a penalty kick.

On September 23, PC travelled to Clemson University where, after playing an even first half, the Hose team fell 5-0. The Blue Hose held the Tigers to one goal in the first half, but in the second half the home team turned up the intensity and scored four unanswered goals to put the game out of reach for PC.

Two days later, the soccer team traveled to Mars Hill for their third SAC game of the season. PC recorded their sixth shutout of the season with a 3-0 victory. Brown scored the first goal of the game with an assist from Lindstrom and Napier. Woodall added a penalty kick goal and Norman De Waart was unassisted in the final score for the game.

On the last day of September, PC hosted rival Wofford and pounded its way to a 6-2 victory. The Terriers scored first, but the Blue Hose responded with four unanswered goals. Michael Martin scored first for PC, followed by Boulware, assisted by Bruno; Brown, unassisted; and a second by Boulware, who was assisted by Lindstrom. De Waart, assisted by Walbolt and Napier, added the final score for PC.

In the first half of the season, the Blue Hose have gone 8 and 1 overall and 3 and 0 in the conference. Two events have highlighted the team's success so far this year.

PC's Chris Napier (#11) takes on a Wofford defender.

photo by Kim Gibson

Chris Napier was named SAC Player of the Week for September 14-20, and Coach Ralph Polson earned his 100th victory as Blue Hose soccer coach with the win over Carson Newman.

When asked about the overall play of his team, Polson responded, "I am excited about the balanced attack of our four front runners, and having our best organized midfield ever has been the key to our success."

"I am pleased with the outstanding play of the defense, which has compiled six shutouts so far this season," added Polson.

The Blue Hose host SAC opponent Catawba at 12:00 pm tomorrow.

Intramural Football Standings through 9/30

Division I	W	L
PKΦ	3	0
ΣN I	2	0
Bad Boy Bombers	2	1
Bludgeon Few	1	1
Bailey Half Holes	0	3
Rising Phoenix	0	3

Division II	W	L
ΠKA	3	0
ΘX	2	0
BBB Tigers	2	1
ΣN II	1	2
Hair Club for Men	0	2
KA	0	3

New assistants join football staff

by Everett Catts
SPORTS EDITOR

The Presbyterian College Football Team has added three new assistant coaches to its staff. Following the departure of Kevin Catlett, Harold Nichols, and Chuck King, Head Coach John Perry acted quickly to find the best replacements.

Filling in where Kevin Catlett left is Reuben Mendoza, who coaches the defensive line. Mendoza, a Crystal City, Texas native, played offensive line for Wayne State College in Nebraska. Graduating in 1985, Mendoza was an NAIA All-American in both his junior and senior years. He was also named to the Kodak All-America Team his senior year. After graduation, Mendoza moved on to the professional level, playing for the NFL's Green Bay Packers, Miami Dolphins, and Phoenix Cardinals, 1986-88. In the offseason, Mendoza coached the offensive line and ran the Strength and Conditioning Program at his Alma Mater until 1989. He was subsequently hired at USC, where he served for two years as the Strength and Conditioning Coach.

Replacing Chuck King as offensive line coach is Jack Yelton, who played tight end at The Citadel and Catawba until he graduated in 1989. Yelton, originally from Florence, helped coach the defensive line, H backs, and tight ends at Western Carolina University from 1989 through 1990. Yelton then moved on to coach the offensive line-men and tight ends from 1991 through the spring of 1992.

Replacing Harold Nichols is Richie Mallard, who coaches the running backs. A native of Dalton, Georgia, Mallard played kicker and punter for Lenoir Rhyne College and graduated in 1991. At L. R Mallard was All-Conference his freshman year and District 26 High Jump Champion on the L-R Track Team. After coaching the tight ends in 1991, Mallard joined the PC Football coaches this past summer.

Head Football Coach John Perry commented on his new additions, saying, "They offer a varied background to our program to give us new ideas and a new perspective." When asked about how the players have adjusted to the new coaches, Perry added, "The players have responded well to their coming. We're proud of them."

Cally Gault, PC Athletic Director, also commented on the new coaches, saying, "I think that there's an excellent mixture of youth and experience. We're pleased to have them. I think this experience will show in the players."

Blue Hose football team wins two games in a row

by Everett Catts
SPORTS EDITOR

The 1992 PC Football Team is 2-2, following back-to-back wins over Lenoir Rhyne and Wofford. On September 26, the Blue Hose won their home opener against the Bears of Lenoir Rhyne, 14-8. The PC defense dominated, as Lenoir Rhyne, previously ranked seventh in the nation in NAIA, was unable to score a single touchdown. The Bears' only points came from two field goals and a safety. Two touchdowns were all that the Blue Hose needed in a game which had outstanding performances by the special teams and defense.

PC's domination of the Lenoir Rhyne offense was quickly noticed by The State. Linebacker Antonio Merriwether and defensive tackle Lee Morgan were named Co-Players of the Week for Defense. Morgan, who had 10 stops, was named State Defensive Player of the Week, while Merriwether was also named State Freshman of the Week.

Although there were no Offensive Players of the Week from PC, two PC players were announced as Special Teams Players of the Week. Jason Sellars, who plays on all special teams, had two tackles on kickoffs and another stop on a punt. Rodney Lightsey, who had a blocked field goal, was also named.

Head Coach John Perry commented on PC's defense, saying, "We had a bend but don't break defense. We kept them backed up by field position."

"Offensively, we didn't move the ball with the continuity we wanted, but we did move the ball into the endzone after getting it," Coach Perry said.

On a rainy October 3 night in Spartanburg, the Blue Hose offense exploded for five touchdowns, en route to a 41-27 victory over Wofford. Down 14-7 after the first quarter, PC scored 14 points of its own and held the Terriers scoreless in the second quarter. At halftime the Blue Hose were up 21-14 and never looked back, scoring 20 points in the second half. In the second and third quarters, PC amassed 24 unanswered points. Wofford lost the ball three of the five times they fumbled, and the Blue Hose scored after all three turnovers.

The PC squad had a balanced offensive attack, rushing for 187 yards and passing for 195. Blue Hose errors were limited to nine penalties; PC had no turnovers whatsoever.

Offensively, tailback Mason Gordon rushed 19 times for 133 yards, scoring touchdowns of five and four yards. Fullback Steve Gorrie had 15 rushes for 67 yards and four catches for 34 yards, giving him 101 all-purpose yards. Gorrie, a freshman, had two 2 one-yard touchdowns, one receiving and one rushing. Tight end Brad Jones was named Co-Player of the Week in offense, with four catches for 83 yards. One of Jones' receptions was a touchdown for 17 yards. Also announced Player of the Week for offense was John Bradley, a tackle who made many key blocks which opened holes for the running backs and protected the quarterback on passes. Quarterback Tim Davis was 12 for 22 in passing, with 161 yards and two TD passes.

On defense the Blue Hose had a total effort, with five players contributing six tackles or more. The leader was linebacker

PC player John Dow rejoices in the Blue Hose victory over Lenoir-Rhyne.

photo by Steve Owens

Kelly Andreucci, who had 10 stops. Defensive backs Tyrone Phillips and Jeff Wilson were named Co-Players of the Week on Defense. Phillips, a sophomore, had eight tackles and deflected a pass. Wilson, a senior, made six tackles. The defense held Wofford, who leads the nation in rushing offense, below their average. The Blue Hose defense also held Shaun Graves, one of the nation's top rushers in Division II, to only 110 yards.

On special teams PC had excellent effort by both Chris Griffin and Alex Horton. Griffin, a sophomore, had numerous blocks which helped protect the punt and field goal teams. Griffin was named Special Teams Player of the Week. Horton, a senior, kicked five extra points and two field goals which helped put the game out of Wofford's reach.

When asked about the defense's play, Perry said, "We slowed them down and did not give up the big play. We did an excellent job containing Graves."

Coach Perry commented on the Blue Hose offense, saying, "When you're capable of moving the ball you feel good. The defense put the offense in great field position. We did not make many mistakes. We had good balance between rushing and passing."

The Blue Hose host Catawba tomorrow in the 1992 Homecoming game.

Volleyball team wins Alabama-Huntsville tournament

by Everett Catts
SPORTS EDITOR

Following a first-place showing in the Alabama-Huntsville Tournament, the Lady Blue Hose Volleyball Team is 19-4 (1-0 in SAC). In the tournament, the Lady Blue Hose had victories over Tusculum, Mississippi University for Women, and Christian Brothers in pool play. In the semi-finals the squad defeated host Alabama-Huntsville. PC was tournament champion after defeating the University of North Alabama in the finals.

The Lady Blue Hose's only loss in the tournament came against Jacksonville State in pool play. Senior Lisa Kimbrell was named Outstanding Player of the tournament for her performance. Kimbrell was also announced SAC Player of the Week for September 21-26.

Two days after the tournament, PC hosted SAC rival Wingate College. The Lady Blue Hose won in three straight games. On September 28 the team defeated Converse. Two days following that win, PC beat Erskine.

On October 26 the PC squad competed in the Wofford Invitational. After beating both Wofford and Limestone, the Lady Blue Hose lost to Elon. Junior DeeDee Williams was named to the All-Tournament Team and was SAC Player of the Week.

Head Coach Beth Couture commented on the lineup's recent shuffle and overall play, saying, "We've been really up and down. This past weekend gave us the confidence to play better. We've made some changes to improve and get the freshmen in. They finally getting experience has made them comfortable. Kristy Tarallo is a leader among the freshmen, and Lori Suit and Joanna Frieeling are playing well in the back. Senior Ashley Jenkins is a quiet role player whom we need."

Senior Co-Captain Lisa Kimbrell commented on the team's level of play, saying, "The level of play is great. There's always room for improvement, but it's coming together. They're (the freshmen) doing a good job, doing what they have to and handling pressure situations."

The Lady Blue Hose played Wofford last night and host SAC foe Garner-Webb on Monday, October 12.

Lori Suit (#12) spikes the ball against Erskine.

photo by Kim Gibson

'Far and Away' to be shown in Springs

by Katherine Bonner
STAFF WRITER

Green, rolling hills, breathtaking blue skies and foamy waves breaking on the rocks stimulate your vision as distinct Irish accents make your ears tingle. The Irish countryside is brought to life. No, this is not the Discovery Channel; this is one of the top movies of the summer of '92.

"Far and Away" stars Tom Cruise as Joseph, the common tenant farmer determined to have land of his own, and Nicole Kidman as the strong-willed Shannon, bent on leading her own life away from her family.

Shannon saves Joseph from certain death, while he saves her from certain marriage to another. Running together to America to claim some free Oklahoma land, they encounter a few sights quite unworthy of the Discovery Channel.

Upon their arrival in America, they find themselves trapped without money or a place to live. Taking up a brothel in the slums of Boston, they find work, his of the "glamorous" kind and hers of the "lowly" kind.

Claiming to be brother and sister, and at first fighting as such, they battle the feelings they have for each other as Joseph prize-fights his way to the top. However, he doesn't quite make it there. In the confusion following his fall, he and Shannon become separated. At first thinking they've lost each other forever, they meet again in Oklahoma and ride in the action-packed marathon for land, this time on opposing teams. But will we be fooled yet again into believing that love cannot conquer all?

Director Ron Howard does a marvelous job and manages to make the ending as breathtaking as the beginning, with the beautiful scenery of America and the soulful music of Enya.

"Far and Away" will be shown by the Student Union Board in Springs Campus Center on October 23 at 7:00 pm.

Kim Hill brings music to Columbia

PRESS RELEASE

Christian recording artist, Kim Hill, will be in concert at the University of South Carolina campus Friday, October 16.

Sponsored by the College Ministry at Shandon Baptist Church in Columbia and the USC Baptist Student Union, the outdoor concert will be held on Field A at USC.

Hill's current album, "Brave Heart," delves into such topics as death and hypocrisy, to hope and satisfaction. "You have to have a brave heart to live in our crazy world," explains Hill. "But even the bravest of heart needs help sometimes, and that is what I have tried to address on this album."

Hill is a familiar voice to the college students and has toured a number of campuses across the United States and Europe.

"Going to Europe reminded me of the powerful impact sharing your life through music can have on people," said Hill. "It let me know that I really didn't have to limit myself with boundaries--geographical, musical or ideological. As long as the songs are real, honest and from my heart, people will be touched."

The concert will begin at 8:00 pm, with gates opening at 6:30 pm. Since the concert will be held outside, students are invited to bring a blanket or lawn chair to sit on. There is a $3.00 suggested donation at the gate, and Pepsi and pizza will be sold during the show. In case of rain, the concert will be located at the Booker T. Washington Auditorium at USC.

For more information about the Kim Hill concert, call Shandon Baptist Church at (803) 799-0652.

Military band strengthens historic values

by Camisha Clark
ENTERTAINMENT EDITOR

The drums sounded in Belk Auditorium on Tuesday, October 6 as the United States Air Force Heritage of America Concert Band of the Air Combat Command (ACC) presented a memorable evening of rousing marches, patriotic music, traditional classics, and contemporary selections.

As an integral portion of the Lectures and Fine Arts Series, this program allowed 60 professional musicians to entertain the Presbyterian College Community in a free concert. With regular performances in South Carolina, North Carolina, Virginia, Pennsylvania, and Maryland as well as occasional performances in Florida, Oklahoma, Nevada, Texas, and West Virginia, this highly honored concert band has made cultural contributions to many other communities. Having an audience of over one million people annually, this band was the first recipient of the Colonel George S. Howard Citation of Musical Excellence for Military Bands, "having demonstrated particularly significant high standards of excellence in concert band performance." It has rapidly become the standard by which many other military bands are judged.

Conducted by Lieutenant Colonel Lowell E. Graham, the band played an inspiring variety, including selections from "West Side Story," "The Battle Hymn of the Republic," and an overture to "Merry Wives of Windsor."

Bill Nave saved these kids from drowning,
but he's not
a lifeguard.

Verleeta Wooten found

several new stars,
but she's not
an astronomer.
These are teachers. But to the kids they reach,
they're heroes.

BE A TEACHER.
BE A HERO.

Call 1-800-45-TEACH.

Ad
A Public Service of
This Publication
Photo: Robert Smith

Reach for the Power
TEACH
in homes and schools

1992 Homecoming Court of Presbyterian College

Angie Akins
Chester, South Carolina
Sponsored by Alpha Delta Pi

Shelley Eidson
Monroe, Georgia
Sponsored by Zeta Tau Alpha

Erin Fox
Anderson, South Carolina
Sponsored by Pi Kappa Phi

Rachel Marcum
Greer, South Carolina
Sponsored by FCA

Laura Meyers
Columbia, South Carolina
Sponsored by Sigma Nu

Amy Owen
Atlanta, Georgia
Sponsored by Kappa Alpha

Meg Oxford
Griffin, Georgia
Sponsored by Theta Chi

Melynda Ray
Thomasville, Georgia
Sponsored by SUB

Gina Robinson
Winnboro, South Carolina
Sponsored by Pi Kappa Alpha

Laura Smith
York, South Carolina
Sponsored by SVS

Leigh Stokes
Kingsport, Tennessee
Sponsored by Westminster Fellowship

Conchita Woodruff
Kissimmee, Florida
Sponsored by MSU

Campus & Clubs

Sigma Sigma Sigma

The sisters of Sigma Sigma Sigma would like to welcome our new pledges: Laurie Fleming, Kim Frampton, and Betsy Walgren. Congratulations to Perrin Powell who won our Freshman Fantasy! Thanks to Mason Maynard, Chip Hill, Jeff Kundrat, Kevin Lindler, and Jeremy Campbell for helping out with this fund raiser.

Pi Kappa Alpha

We would like to congratulate the following brothers for the 1991-92 school year awards and honors: Brothers of the Year - Brad Palmer and Warren Blanchard, Athlete of the Year - Justin Grow, Otis Award - Pat Shearer, Pledge of the Year - John Broadway.

We received 10 new members into the Brotherhood earlier this year. They include: Jamie Smith, Lance Dauby, Ryan Brown, Brian Inman, John Broadway, Tommy Hamey, Blake Stansell, Gary Smith, Ben Biggar, and Robbie Stargel.

We encourage everyone to come out and celebrate Homecoming on Saturday at the Pi Kappa Alpha house. Good luck to the Blue Hose football team against Catawba. Goat of the Week award goes to Gary Smith.

Chaplain's Office

The following is a list of days, times, and places where the campus religious organizations meet: Canterbury Club (meets every Sunday, 6:00 pm at All Saints Episcopal Church), Baptist Student Union (meets every Monday, 8:00 pm at Douglas House), Westminster Fellowship (meets every Tuesday, 9:00 pm at Douglas House), Newman Club (meets every Wednesday, 7:15 pm at Douglas House), Fellowship of Christian Athletes (meets every Wednesday, 8:58 pm at Douglas House).

Are you interested in Ministry or Graduate Theological Education? Contact the Chaplain's Office, ext. 8476 or come by for more information.

Pi Kappa Phi

The brothers of Pi Kappa Phi would like to congratulate our two new pledges: Dallas Oleson and Bill "Woody" Wright. We would also like to welcome all of our Fall '92 Rush Girls. Thanks to everyone who attended the Furman game. Welcome Alumni! Come out to the house at 9:00 pm and hear Simon Sez, our Homecoming band.

Alpha Sigma Phi

We would like to thank those who came out for Rush. We have five new pledges. They are Eric Robinson, Mike Weaver, Dove Arthur, Brad Williams, and GDH's Ray Bell. Congratulations Pledges!

If you haven't seen our new furniture, we urge you to come on out to the house and take a look.

Alpha Delta Pi

We would like to congratulate our new Alphas - Holly Vanover and Laura Hearnburg. We are so proud of you! We would also like to thank KA for letting us use their house for our Bid Day party, and we would like to thank Avery Cheves for her great planning for the party.

PC tradition continues Blue Sox Festival set for tonight

by Elizabeth Cunard
STAFF WRITER

Can you imagine a Homecoming that consisted of only a football game?

Many years ago, Homecoming at Presbyterian College was just that - a one day event consisting of a few activities planned for Saturday outside of the traditional football game.

"Up until 1974, Homecoming was a one day event," said Mary Lehman, PC Alumni Office secretary. "In 1975, the college added an alumni tennis tournament and a student concert to the homecoming festivities."

"In 1976, Ben Hay Hammett, the director of alumni and college relations, added the Blue Sox Festival to Homecoming activities. Blue Sox consisted of performers from various campus organizations acting out skits before their peers," added Lehman.

The Blue Sox tradition continues tonight in Belk Auditorium, beginning at 7:00 pm. Performers this year include Alpha Delta Pi, Sigma Sigma Sigma, Zeta Tau Alpha, Pi Kappa Phi, Pi Kappa Alpha, Sigma Nu, Alpha Sigma Phi, and the Blue Hose Varsity Cheerleaders. In addition, Jay Nicholson and Jay Whitney will perform a rap. PC Senior Frank McKay will emcee the show.

Each of the performers will be judged, and the top three will receive prizes of $100 for first place, $50 for second place, and $25 for third. This year's theme for the Blue Sox Festival is "Hose Down the Indians!"

Tom DeLuca will be returning to the PC campus on November 2.

file photo

Tom DeLuca reschedules PC show Performance date moved to November 2

by Shelley Phipps
STAFF WRITER

Mark your calendars now! Hypnotist Tom DeLuca will not be coming to PC on October 21. Instead, he will bring his show to Belk Auditorium on Monday, November 2, at 8:30 pm.

"Unusual" may be the best way to describe DeLuca's performance. DeLuca begins his show with a magic act; however, that's not the reason most people come to see him.

DeLuca's presentation of hypnosis is the phenomenon that draws the crowds and has twice earned him the recognition as College Entertainer of the Year.

DeLuca says his one-of-a-kind program is an exploration of the imagination. "I get the volunteers to use their imaginations in ways they never have before. The results vary from acting out childhood fantasies to serving as an interpreter for an alien," he said.

Senior Elizabeth Bryan volunteered to be hypnotized during DeLuca's performance at PC last year. She admits that though she was skeptical, DeLuca's power of suggestion worked on her. The audience watched as memories of Bryan's childhood were brought to the surface - and the stage.

Bryan remembers the night as if it were a dream. "I was aware of what was happening, but I was unable to control what I was doing. He had total control."

Old traditions raise new questions

by Ricky Dill
NEWS EDITOR

Presbyterian College mandates two stipulations in order for a person to be a full-time voting professor. First, the college requires individuals to have a graduate degree in their particular field of study. Second, the college requires that the individual be a member of a Christian church.

The first requirement is widely accepted and used by most colleges and universities throughout the country. The second requirement, which has been embraced by many church-related colleges and universities, has been questioned recently due to greater emphasis on academics rather than traditional religious ideologies.

Despite the fact that many institutions have dropped the religion requirement, PC, by vote of the Board of Trustees, has chosen to only hire professors who are members of a Christian church.

According to Dr. William Moncrief, vice president for academic affairs, the faculty religion requirement is based on the mission of the college, which states, "Presbyterian College exists to provide an education in the arts and sciences within a distinctively Christian context."

"Society is always in a state of evolving," says Moncrief. "Many years ago, the culture was based on religion and almost all our institutions of higher learning were church-related. The modern era has become more secular and, as a result, our institutions have become more secular."

"Presbyterian College has chosen to address a secular world while still maintaining a religious basis," adds Moncrief.

Questions are beginning to appear among PC faculty members and staff as to whether the college should continue to enforce the religion requirement. It has been suggested by some that PC should become more tolerant and less discriminatory by allowing a professor of another religion to teach. It has been suggested by others that PC stick to the foundation and identity that has allowed it to be both secular and Christian.

According to Moncrief, before an objective decision can be made concerning the religion requirement, one must first know the history and evolution of church-related colleges, and one must know what has happened to other colleges who have rid themselves of the requirement.

"There is no contradiction between liberal and religious conviction. Christianity is liberalism in action," says Moncrief. "It is not an accident that most of the liberal arts colleges in this country were founded by churches."

Presbyterian Church-related colleges began appearing in the 19th Century due in part to Presbyterians being among the leaders in the nation's higher education. The goal of these colleges was to care for the spiritual side as well as the intellectual side of their students while training them with a positive, biased Christian view in all subjects. The social regulations included punishment for alcohol and tobacco use, card playing, dancing, and profanity. The emphasis was on rules and regulations guiding the students' behavior as opposed to allowing freedom of discretion as the secular universities were doing.

As time moved on, an erosion of the religious ideas began to take place. In 1943, the Presbyterian Church, along with the presidents of the affiliated colleges, decided to drop the requirement of mandatory worship for students. In addition, faculty were allowed to teach without having to incorporate Christian ideas into their teachings.

The window in the Chapel stands as a reminder of PC's church heritage.

photo by Kim Gibson

In the 1950's, Christianity was fighting a losing battle on most campuses. College presidents and catalogues continued to insist on the Christian nature of church-related schools, but their statements reflected more hope than reality.

Robert McAfee Brown, a professor of theology at Union Seminary in New York, argued in 1958 that "unless a Christian college has an open policy about hiring on the basis of academic qualifications rather than piety, then the school is neither Christian nor a college."

During the moral revolution and campus turmoil of the 1960's, Presbyterian College virtually eliminated all behavioral regulations that set them apart from the other schools. Alcohol, smoking, and dress code rules were abolished by student and faculty protest.

In 1963, the Presbyterian Church changed the guidelines for faculty at its schools. Rather than requiring the faculty to be active members of an evangelical Christian church, the professors must instead be dedicated to the college's declared institutional purposes. During the 1970's and '80's, many colleges left the Church in order to keep up with secular colleges and universities.

By 1990, the presidents of the 69 Presbyterian schools, which form the association of Presbyterian Colleges and Universities, were indicating that the Presbyterian Church could be close to losing its involvement in higher education.

"The religion requirement at PC was put into place by the Board of Trustees in order to maintain the college and church relationship," says Moncrief. "The Board fears that the college could become more secular, and many members of the faculty and staff fear a religious tightening by the Board."

"PC believes that encouraging the spiritual side of life is an important ingredient in the education of students," adds Moncrief.

"It is the college's responsibility to provide an education in a Christian context. It is the college's responsibility to protect the students against fundamentalists who would favor dictating religious policy to PC and to protect the students against those who favor a totally secular institution," says Moncrief.

On The Inside

Page 2 . . .

The Blue Stocking Editorial Board endorses the candidacy of Bill Clinton.

Sigma Nu t-shirt criticized for use of stereotypes

by Ricky Dill
NEWS EDITOR

The 1992 Homecoming t-shirt of Sigma Nu fraternity caused many people to take a second glance, especially some faculty members who were offended by the characters depicted on the back of the shirt. Many of the faculty claimed that they did not see the humor in the shirt but instead saw only the negative stereotypes of PC students and alumni.

When the issue was brought to President Orr's attention, he responded, "I believe this was done in poor taste and does not reflect the class that PC has."

Members of Sigma Nu were shocked at response to the shirts and believe that the entire issue was blown out of proportion. The characters on the t-shirt, according to the fraternity, were simply a conglomeration of all the characters on various t-shirts designed and used throughout the last few years.

The fraternity also cited that they basically intended to copy the Student Union Board shirts which depict a football player with a hose wrapped around his lower body and that they had no intention of creating offensive controversy.

Dean Nixon defended Sigma Nu's right to print the t-shirt but also stated that he hoped "organizations would use their best judgment to reflect a positive image of the group as well as PC."

Editorial

Rebuttal

It is time for a positive change

* (Editor's Note: By a vote of 6 to 3, the Editorial Board of the Blue Stocking decided to endorse the candidacy of Bill Clinton.)

On November 3 of this year, we will be casting our ballots for the next president of the United States. We must decide who is the best man to lead the most powerful nation on earth for the next four years. And the next four years will not be easy ones. The president, whoever he is, will inherit tough problems that will require tough decisions. He will have to be a man with backbone, with leadership, and with a clear vision for the future of this country. We, the Editorial Board of the Blue Stocking, believe that man to be Bill Clinton.

When you are trying to decide whether or not to vote for an incumbent president, you should first look very carefully at his record. President Bush says he is the "environmental president," but his policies tell another story. He is now trying to gut the Clean-Air Act. He wants to change the definition of wetlands, which will allow half of them to be destroyed. And he has allowed the timber industry to cut down the old growth forests of the Northwest in order to save a few short-term jobs.

Bush says he is the "education president." Yet our nation's students continue to lag far behind other industrial countries in international comparisons. He has given the schools of our nation vague goals that lack any support. And President Bush did not start talking about "school choice" until an election year demanded it.

Bush claims to be an expert on foreign policy. Yet he coddled the regime in China even after they shot protestors in Tiananmen Square, and still gives China "Most Favored Nation" status. Bush was very slow to accept and support Boris Yeltsin's democracy movement in the former USSR. He went to Japan, not to remove barriers to fair trade, but to try to strong-arm the Japanese into buying more of our products. Finally, he supported Saddam Hussein's ruthless regime right up until the day Iraq invaded Kuwait.

Perhaps the worst result of the Reagan and Bush presidencies is the prolonged recession through which we have suffered. Thanks largely to the enormous deficit that financed the growth of the 80's, the economy has remained stagnant rather than posting the large gains of typical post-recession periods. Bush has left things so that PC graduates have to struggle to find jobs. And once again, he proposed no plan until an election year dictated it.

Not so with Bill Clinton. The Governor of Arkansas has been proposing the same plans all along -- ideas he has formulated after careful study, and ideas that have worked in his home state.

The very things for which Bill Clinton

Bush is the only candidate I trust

by Jason West
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

After months and months of campaigning, an endless sea of political commercials, and countless polls, the American presidential campaign will finally be over next week. Hallelujah!

In my opinion, the 1992 presidential campaign has been too long and too drawn out. Like you, I too will be glad when it is all over. However, before going into that sacred booth to mark your ballot, I would like than most Americans realize, and thanks to George Bush, it is beginning to show some signs of recovery. Inflation has been cut, companies are becoming more productive, and America is exporting more. These are signs of improvement, not signs of impending disaster.

Bill Clinton says that he has the answers to America's economic woes and has promised us that he will do for America what he has done for the state of Arkansas. Well, I don't know if that is such a good idea. Consider the facts. Of all the 50 states, Arkansas is ranked 48 in the percentage of people living in poverty, 17 in highest tax burden, and 47 in per capita income. I don't think I would like an America with higher taxes, less income, and more poverty.

There has also been a great deal of talk in this campaign about America spending less time in matters abroad and more time on matters at home. President Bush has been unfairly criticized for the time and energy he places on international issues. The time in history has come when there is no such thing as separate international issues and separate domestic issues. Everything is "intermestic," and what happens in Russia, China, and Saudi Arabia has a dramatic effect on what happens in Atlanta, Charlotte, Chicago, and Clinton, South Carolina.

George Bush has played a vital role in the world-wide spread of democracy, the reduction of the threat of global nuclear war, and the ending of tensions between the United States and the former Soviet Union. He is an international player who has provided leadership for America and all free people around the world.

What experience does Bill Clinton have dealing with Boris Yeltsin, John Major, or Francois Mitterand? He has none. Because of this lack of experience, the thought of Bill Clinton calling the shots in the White House Situation Room frightens me. It should frighten you.

The choice of who is going to lead America belongs to all of us. We should all thank God every day for that choice.

This election year, I stand behind George Bush because he is the only candidate whom I trust to do what is right for America.

Actually, the economy is doing better

Clinton vs. Bush

is criticized will make him an effective president. He is young and energetic; he understands the important issues and can speak coherently about them; he appeals to people on both sides of an issue and brings them towards the common ground.

It is this last characteristic which is the most important. We are tired of the divisiveness that has defined the Bush administration. From the first "Willie Horton" ad to the LA riots, race relations have been severely strained under President Bush. He has also been extremely partisan, blaming Congress for all our country's ills while refusing to work with its members.

A Clinton administration, on the other hand, would strive for the best plan, regardless of the source. Bill Clinton will bring together the best and the brightest in the nation, who will work together to make this country great once again. They would make taxes more fair, control the spiraling costs of health care, and stimulate the economy in the short term while investing for the long term. Clinton is a man who would attack problems before they turn into crises, from the inner cities to education. We want a president who will prevent, not react; a president who will lead the country, not bicker and point fingers; a president who runs on hope, not on fear. Bill Clinton will be that President.

The Blue Stocking of Presbyterian College
Clinton, South Carolina, 29325
Volume LXXXVII, Number 3
October 30, 1992

Editor-in-Chief.....Jason West
Managing Editor.....LeJeanna Maddox
News Editor.....Ricky Dill
Politics Editor.....Ted Carmichael
Sports Editor.....Everette Catts
Entertainment Editor.....Camisha Clarke
Features Editor.....Martha Lynn Smith
Environment Editor.....Heather Moncrief
Photography Editor.....Kim Gibson
Layout Editor.....Angela Richardson

Advertising Editor.....Ann Mayfield
Subscriptions Editor.....Ron Mixon
Artist.....Michael Christensen

Photography Staff
Kimberlee Gibson Todd Love

Staff Writers
Elizabeth Cunard Amanda Bowers
Leigh Hearnburg Katherine Bonner
Kristina Pruitt Cher Fulbright
Paula Warren Michelle Cantey
Brian Sacco Shelly Phipps
Kim Rabon Jamey Paie
Tobin Turner Tonia Snead

The Blue Stocking is a tri-weekly student publication of Presbyterian College. The paper serves as a forum of news and opinion of regional and national concern. For advertising, contact The Blue Stocking, Presbyterian College, Box 1061, Clinton, SC 29325. The Blue Stocking welcomes letters to the editor from all members of the PC community. Signatures are required. Letters are printed on a space available basis. The Blue Stocking reserves the right to edit all letters for proper grammar and punctuation. The final deadline for submitting letters is Friday at 12:00 pm on the week before publication.

Letters to the Editor - Letters to the Editor - Letters to the Editor - Letters to the Editor - Letters to the Editor - Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

I chose this college over others for multiple reasons; the most prominent being the beauty of the campus and the dedication of the students to numerous causes: Habitat for Humanity, Amnesty International, and various projects through SVS.

I have never seen such beauty in the combination of trees, flowers, buildings, and weather as I view it here. It creates a pleasant atmosphere to enjoy life, study diligently, and grow personally.

I am disturbed when I walk around campus and view posters for events held a week ago and writing on the sidewalks for elections long since gone. This makes the campus look dilapidated and presents a poor impression for returning alumni and prospective students.

It ought to be part of the process of making signs and hanging them up to also take them down. All it takes is a little time and effort to apply the dedication of the students to the campus and make everyone's lives more enjoyable.

Sincerely,
Jason D. Lee

Dear Editor:

This letter is in response to the environmental page in the September 18 issue of the Blue Stocking.

I feel that the article entitled "The Presidency and the Environment" reflected a blatant bias in favor of the Clinton/Gore ticket. In the article, the writer outlines the environmental policies of the Republican and Democratic nominees. It is highly peculiar that the article only elaborates on negative aspects of the President's policies without presenting his reasons for the actions taken, while the only negative thing mentioned about the Governor from Arkansas' record was quickly followed up by a vague rebuttal about clean water regulations.

Allow me to set the record straight. President Bush not only "claims to be the environmental President," as the writer points out, but his record proves that to be the truth. I seriously wonder if the writer even researched the President's record, or if so did she care to present the whole story.

George Bush pushed for the 1990 Clean Air Act which received bipartisan support. In 1990-91, the Bush Administration obtained a record number of convictions for environmental crimes. The Bush Administration has collected more fines in the last three years than in the last 20 years combined. George Bush established a National Marine Sanctuary, covering almost 5000 square miles where drilling will be permanently banned. President Bush proposes to plant a billion trees a year in his "America the Beautiful" program and to end clear-cutting as a standard practice in our national forests. During his first term, George Bush added more than 1.5 million acres to America's national parks and other public lands. President Bush led a United Nation's effort to stop drift net fishing on the high seas by the end of this year. How did these facts escape the attention of the writer?

The Governor from Arkansas, on the other hand, has not been quite as successful with the environment in his own state. It may surprise the author to find out that after 12 years of Clinton leadership, Arkansas ranks 10th highest in per capita ozone depleting emission, 42nd in percentages of clean rivers and streams, 50th for lack of government action to protect the environment, and a dismal 48th in overall environmental quality.

I was disappointed to find such irresponsible journalism in the Blue Stocking. I hope that such articles don't frequent the pages of the Blue Stocking. Thank you for your attention to this matter.

Sincerely,
Bill Wright

* (Editor's Note - The Blue Stocking Editorial Board appreciates Mr. Wright's letter and opinion; however, we stand behind Kristina Pruitt's article. The Editorial Board believes that Ms. Pruitt's article was well researched and unbiased.)

The Blue Stocking staff encourages students to express their concerns by writing letters to the editor. Letters for the next edition must be turned into the Blue Stocking office by Friday, November 13.

PC student killed in car accident

Marcus Miller played an integral role in PC Baseball. Miller was killed in an automobile accident last week.
file photo

Presbyterian College Senior Marcus Miller died on October 20 as the result of injuries sustained in a car wreck. Miller was returning to campus from fall break when the accident occurred.

Miller was the son of Mr. Robert Lee and Mrs. Nannie Posley Miller and was a member of Dunn Creek Baptist Church.

Members of the Presbyterian College baseball team served as pallbearers and honorary escorts at the funeral service. Senior Jay Reeves reflected on Miller's contributions to the team.

"Marcus was the biggest silent leader we had. In the way he played the game and lived his life, he was never looking for prestige. That's the way every player should be."

Miller, a native of Donalds, South Carolina, was scheduled to graduate from Presbyterian College this May.

Williamson elected to national office

Press Release
OFFICE OF PUBLIC RELATIONS

A member of Presbyterian College's administrative staff has been selected to serve as President-elect of a national admissions association.

Margaret Williamson, PC's vice president of enrollment and dean of admissions, will take office in January as president-elect of the National Association of College Admissions Counselors (NACAC). Her election came at the fall meeting, held earlier this month in Los Angeles.

She will serve as president of the association in 1994, the first PC administrative officer ever to head a national organization.

NACAC boasts a membership of 5,367 college admissions officers, secondary school counselors, and independent counselors. The national organization, which focuses on issues dealing with students' transition from secondary to post-secondary education, includes 22 state and regional associations and one international association.

"I am very honored to be elected to this position," Williamson said. "As an officer of this association, I'll be addressing issues that affect admission counseling on both the secondary and post-secondary levels."

NACAC, with headquarters in Alexandria, Virginia, focuses on education legislation and conducts workshops and programs for members and non-members all across the country.

"We are also constantly evaluating the ethical issues involved in our field," Williamson said, "such as what the admission officer and secondary school counselor should and should not do, and what the students' rights are."

Margaret Williamson

Williamson, a native of Blacksburg, Virginia, earned her undergraduate and master's degrees from Winthrop College in Rock Hill, South Carolina. She came to PC in 1982 as director of admissions and in 1991 received the college's Distinguished Service Award.

As an active member of NACAC, she has served on numerous committees and held a variety of leadership positions, including serving as president of the Southern ACAC in 1989-90.

Beckel predicts that Bush will be 'unemployed' in January

by Ted Carmichael
POLITICS EDITOR

The second installment of the Russell Committee's "Election '92" series was held in Belk Auditorium on October 13. Bob Beckel spoke that morning to a full crowd, giving a democratic perspective on the U.S. elections this year and the media's role in them. Beckel is a national political consultant and the moderator of Fox TV's Off the Record. He also is a guest host for CNN's Larry King Live, and often appears on news programs of the three major networks.

Beckel opened his talk lightly, joking about Republicans in the back with weapons and commenting that it is "nice to be in such a bastion of liberal Democratic values." He also said of his running Walter Mondale's presidential bid, "At least I got him the nomination; someone else ran the general election."

Beckel then spoke about President Bush, saying, "I'll try to be kind to someone who is about to be unemployed." Actually, he stopped short of predicting the election, but said that if George Bush wins, it will be by "the barest of margins," and also that Bill Clinton may get as many as 400 electoral votes. He said he doesn't know why people "turned on [Bush] as quickly as they did," but he did talk about some possible reasons for Bush's low approval rating.

Beckel said that people look at three primary things before they vote: "Character; their wallets; and who is the best person as Commander-in-Chief, who can have his finger on the button." In 1988, all three things worked for George Bush, Beckel said. Now, however, they are not. "There's no button anymore. The fear is gone. There will be hotspots every now and then, but the average American doesn't care about that."

Bob Beckel visited the PC campus to give students a "democratic perspective" on the upcoming election.

photo by Steve Owens

He also said that Bush's character was called into question when he broke his tax pledge. About the economy, Beckel's view is, "Expectations went way up because of the Gulf War," but then Bush failed to come up with a domestic agenda that would address the recession.

He stated that, in politics, there are cycles of 20 to 30 years. Jimmy Carter's presidency was a "fluke dependent on Watergate," which was in the middle of a Republican era. Beckel thinks that we are at an end of a cycle now, and that "people want a change" in the presidency.

"For the Democrats it has worked out," Beckel said. "A lot of things are propelling this cyclical change...and [Clinton] is smart enough to get in front of it." He describes Clinton as "a better opponent than Bush expected" and says he is not a typical democrat in the public's eyes. Two differences, according to Beckel, are Clinton's belief in capital punishment and his work/fair program. "The old liberal tax and spend tag doesn't work because he is not like other Democrats."

"And then," Beckel adds, "you have Jug Ears," referring to independent candidate Ross Perot. "Perot has something I wish I had — a billion dollars." He said that Perot is paranoid and has a large ego. The two reasons, according to Beckel, that Perot got back into the race were the newspaper headline that said, "Another wimp bites the Dust," and the cover of Newsweek that labeled him a "quitter."

As far as the press is concerned, Beckel said that they are too "driven" by polls but have done a better job of covering this election than past ones. They are more cautious in their reporting, ask harder questions, and report more on negative advertising.

Aside from his work managing Mondale's campaign, Beckel was also very active in working with Robert Kennedy. Under the Carter Administration, he was a member of the White House staff and worked with Congress on the Midwest and Salt II treaties. Beckel closed his lecture by urging everyone to vote, saying that the right to vote "took us too long to get...[and] is too precious a commodity" to give up.

Make Your Vote Count

The following is a list of candidates for Congressional seats in the state of South Carolina.

Congressional District #1

(Includes Charleston, Hilton Head, and Myrtle Beach)

Arthur Ravenel (I) - Republican
Bill Oberst - Democrat
John Peebles - American

Congressional District #2

(Includes Lexington and parts of Columbia)

Floyd Spence (I) - Republican
Geb Sommer - Libertarian

Congressional District #3

(Includes Anderson and Aiken)

Butler Derrick (I) - Democrat
James Bland - Republican

Congressional District #4

(Includes Greenville and Spartanburg)

Liz Patterson (I) - Democrat
Bob Inglis - Republican
Jo Jorgensen - Libertarian

Congressional District #5

(Includes Rock Hill, Chester, and Camden)

John Spratt (I) - Democrat
Bill Horne - Republican

Congressional District #6

(Includes Orangeburg, parts of Charleston, and parts of Columbia)

John Chase - Republican
Jim Clyburn - Democrat

College Republicans and Young Democrats active on campus

by Neely Loring
STAFF WRITER

Many students at PC have been active in this year's political arena. Each major party, both Democrats and the Republicans, have had active student groups on campus. One noticeable absence, however, has been any organized support for Ross Perot.

The College Republicans have had a number of speakers this semester, such as Eddie McGee, who is the Laurens County republican nominee for sheriff. The group has also offered an information table in Springs Campus Center and is in the process of organizing a phone bank for the Bush campaign. A group of College Republicans attended a South Carolina strategy meeting in Columbia earlier this fall and has been active in the local Republican Party.

The Young Democrats have involved themselves with the South Carolina Clinton/Gore campaign. David Agnew, a member of the state campaign, spoke to a group of faculty and students in September. Young Democrats sponsored "A Man from Hope," a video mini-biography on Bill Clinton, which was shown on the PC cable channel.

Other events included organizing a group to see Bill Clinton speak last month in Columbia, distributing leaflets at football games, weekly meetings, and working on a county wide phone bank.

Many members attended a local fund raiser for their national ticket and acted as pages. Guests at the fund raiser included Senator Hollings, Congressman Butler Derrick, and former Governor Dick Riley.

The Young Democrats and College Republicans jointly sponsored two debates this fall. A local debate was held at Bethany Presbyterian Church with Ted Carmichael representing the Young Democrats and Brian Benenahley representing the College Republicans. The debate was held for the Clinton Boy Scouts and their parents.

A second debate for the PC community was held in Edmunds Hall this past Monday. That debate featured Barry Wynn, South Carolina's Republican Party Chairman, and Don Fowler, a member of the Democratic National Committee. This event was videotaped and is slated to be shown on the PC Cable Network.

The two political groups are also planning to organize trips to Columbia on the eve of the election, in order to join their party's state organizations for the returns.

Both groups are hoping that members will maintain their enthusiasm after November 3.

"A lot of people have gotten involved in this year's elections that may not have otherwise," commented Kelly Reiser, president of the College Republicans.

According to Reiser, the College Republicans are hoping to keep the number of active members near 50.

Katherine Spearman, a member of the Young Democrats, said, "I have been very encouraged by the wide response to the Democratic ticket at such a conservative school."

Spearman reports that the Young Democrats are hoping to keep their membership around 15 active members.

Regardless of party affiliation, members from both clubs agree that the most important purpose of the political activities on campus has been to encourage students to be educated on the candidates and to exercise their right to vote.

College educators endorse Clinton

by Shelley Phipps
STAFF WRITER

With the 1992 Presidential election just a few days away, the South Carolina College and University Educators for Clinton/Gore held a press conference in Columbia yesterday to release the names of college professors and faculty who openly support the democratic nominees.

The original plan of the group was to buy ads in three South Carolina newspapers listing Bill Clinton and Al Gore's supporters. However, federal election laws complicated that effort. The press conference provided a forum during which a list of the supporters could be released.

The organization of educators was initiated by Presbyterian College President Kenneth B. Orr. With the assistance of political science professor David Gillespie, Orr conducted the formal correspondence with college professors across the state to identify those who were Clinton/Gore supporters.

Dr. Kenneth B. Orr file photo

"The purpose of the organization was to stimulate interest in the candidacy of Clinton and Gore by encouraging educators to enlist support on their own campuses for the Democratic ticket," said Orr.

Orr has received some criticism for showing his partisanship in this election year. He acknowledges that criticism is to be expected.

"This is a season of endorsements. I wasn't willing to sit on the sidelines for this campaign," said Orr.

According to Orr, the list of South Carolina College and University Educators for Clinton/Gore is simply individual support of the candidates. "It is in no way an endorsement by any college or university," added Orr.

Parents Day Special!

20% off to all students and parents!

Tapestry
"Ladies Boutique"

316 E. Carolina Ave., Clinton

INNOCENT BYSTANDER.

A Public Service of the USDA Forest Service and your State Forester

ONLY YOU CAN PREVENT FOREST FIRES

PC community joins nationwide movement 'Into the Streets'

by Martha Lynn Smith
FEATURES EDITOR

The motto on the Presbyterian College seal reads simply, "Dum Vivimus Servimus." Translated, the motto means, "While we live, we serve," and the college's students, faculty, and staff will put that motto into action on November 7 when the college community goes into the streets of Laurens County to join a nationwide community service project.

The "Into the Streets" program, designed to heighten volunteerism among young people and to provide a learning experience that will challenge them to volunteer on a regular basis, is a national program sponsored by the Campus Outreach Opportunities League (COOL), of which PC is a member. A three year grant from the W. K. Kellogg Foundation made funding for this event possible.

"In keeping with one of the national goals of the 'Into the Streets' movement, we are proud to have a diverse group of college and community volunteers working together toward a common service goal," said Chon Glover, coordinator of Student Volunteer Services (SVS) at PC.

On November 7, PC students, faculty, staff, and community representatives will spend five hours serving Laurens County residents in a variety of service areas that include:

Homelessness: Volunteers will work to build houses on Habitat for Humanity work sites.

Hospice: Participants will canvass the county, visiting the home-bound, making necessary repairs on private and public homes.

Literacy: Volunteers will work to make Laurens County residents aware of literacy opportunities and needs.

Senior Citizens: Groups will assist the elderly by making necessary repairs to private and public homes.

Environment: Volunteers will pick up trash along Laurens County roadsides.

"We are challenging each campus organization to have at least 50 percent participation. Some groups have already reached that goal," said SVS Intern Laura Smith.

For more information about the program, contact Chon Glover.

PC Peer Connectors are ready to listen

by Kim Rabon
STAFF WRITER

Have you ever had a problem and needed someone to listen to you? Peer connectors do just that. The Peer Connection program at PC is a way for PC students to express feelings about individual problems or everyday concerns confidentially to another caring person.

"The goal of Peer Connection is to establish a network of visible, trained, and trustworthy students to assist their peers with personal concerns, issues, and conflicts," said Assistant Dean of Students Resa Walch.

"Peer connectors will listen and help students make decisions about what to do as well as refer students to appropriate resources," added Walch.

The Peer Connection program began last year when a group of PC students suggested that it would be a good idea to have a peer counseling program on campus. The Office of Student Affairs agreed and implemented the program, which is now in its second semester of operation.

"Last year I had a few problems of my own and PC didn't have this program yet. I think that the peer connectors could have really helped me sort out and understand some of my feelings," said Selina Patrick, one of the peer connectors.

"I wanted to be a part of the program because I know that there are students at PC who have problems and need someone to listen," added Patrick.

"We are all very excited about the program. The peer connectors are ready and willing to help the students at PC. We can only hope that the students will use the program when they do need to talk," said Julie Nielsen, a peer connector.

According to Walsh, 13 PC students are serving as peer connectors. The students have gone through extensive training to ensure that they handle situations in the best possible way. If anyone is interested in becoming a peer connector, applications will be available next semester.

PC's Peer Connectors include Leigh Stokes, Jenny Goodwin, Julie Jacques, Jennifer Elliott, (Back Row) Lee Maynard, Patrick Long, Cynthia Seeliger, Julie Neilsen, Cher Fulbright, and Helen Moore.

file photo

The Episcopal Church Especially Welcomes Students
+ ALL SAINTS' EPISCOPAL CHURCH
One Block North of Greenville Dining Hall

Sunday Schedule

8:30 am Holy Eucharist
9:45 am Christian Education
10:30 am Coffee (in Parish Hall)
11:00 am Holy Eucharist
6:00 pm + CANTERBURY — for College Students

Need someone to talk to?

The Rev. Nancy J. Allison, Rector (833-1388)
The Rev. Levison Pearson, Priest-in-Charge (833-8295)

Ever Get A Pal Smashed?

TAKE THE KEYS
CALL A CAR
TAKE A STAND

FRIENDS DON'T LET FRIENDS DRIVE DRUNK

What's cookin' at PC: Springs Canteen at night

George Brooks loves to cook. "There's nothing better," he proclaims. As a gourmet chef, Brooks has had years of practice. He has cooked for Presidential outfits, Mamie Eisenhower, five star restaurants, cooking schools, and more. However, he is at home now with his wife Rhudene, whom many will recognize from her work in Neville Hall.

His specialty is Cordon Bleu. Unfortunately, the Springs canteen is not equipped for that. But students may order from the regular menu on Tuesdays, Wednesdays, and Fridays or have take-out pizza on Mondays and Thursdays.

During halftime at the PC/Catawba football game, senior Laura Meyers was crowned the 1992 Homecoming Queen. Meyers, a resident of Columbia, South Carolina, was sponsored by Sigma Nu. She was escorted by Matthew Gruhn.

photo by Jason West

Little Known Facts

During the first academic term at PC in 1880, tuition was $25 for freshmen and sophomores and $30 for juniors and seniors. With room and board, the cost for one year was $100.

Although PC was not residentially co-ed until 1965, PC has had female students since the beginning. In fact, the entire 1883 graduating class consisted of three women.

Source: The Spirit of PC
Hammett, 1982.

Good news in one hundred words or less

by Mary Brockman Pressley

Seeing a smile on a child's face can make anyone smile. But knowing that you put it there makes you smile inside.

Every other Wednesday, 15 kids from Baily Elementary come over to PC to "play." About five volunteers along with Dean Sheorn and me play games, do crafts, and do other things of interest with these elementary school children.

Each time we meet with the kids, we read them a story, make a craft, and play different games. From making tambourines out of aluminum cans and pinto beans to seeing who can make the scariest Halloween mask, each child takes pride in what he or she makes. Their faces definitely show it!

The time that we spend with our "Baily Buddies" may be short, but the difference we make in their lives will last forever.

Diversity Week promotes interaction Events planned at PC from Nov. 1 - 8

by Paula Warren
STAFF WRITER

November 1 through 8, Presbyterian College will be one of many colleges and universities throughout the nation celebrating Cultural Diversity Week. The week's purpose is to promote multicultural interaction and develop lasting ties throughout the year.

Local activities for the celebration are being sponsored by the Office of Minority Affairs. On Sunday, November 1, a talent show will be held at 7:30 pm in Edmunds Hall. Students will be able to show their talents in the areas of singing, dancing, and rapping in a relaxed and non-threatening atmosphere.

The campus can sample other cultures through food tasting, music, books, and more at the Multicultural Fair. The fair will be held from 2:00 pm to 4:00 pm on Monday, November 2, at Springs Campus Center.

A series of videos will be shown on cable channel 33 on Tuesday, November 3. On Wednesday, November 4, at 7:30 pm, Dr. Jerman Disasa will discuss changing challenges into opportunities. Disasa, a lecturer at USC-Columbia in Higher Education and International Education, is a native African from Ethiopia. The event is a CEP and will be held in Edmunds Hall.

There will be programming in the residence halls on Thursday, November 5. On Friday, November 6, at 4:30 pm, Cropwalk will be held. Also, SUB will be sponsoring a ReggaeFest for Fall Fling. From 8:00 am to 1:00 pm on Saturday, November 7, "Into the Streets" of Laurens County will be held.

The final activity of the week will be the Gospel Extravaganza. The event will feature PC's Student Fellowship Choir and other college and church choirs. The Extravaganza is a CEP event and will be held at 7:30 pm in Edmunds Hall on Friday, November 8.

Blue Hose men's soccer team captures SAC - 8 title

by Brian Sacco
Staff Writer

Finishing the season with outstanding play, the Blue Hose men's soccer team rolled to the regular season South Atlantic the season."

On October 3, the Blue Hose hosted Lenior Rhyme College on the pond in a must-win SAC game. The game was PC's Shannon Brown takes on two Wofford defenders.

file photo

Conference title. The team finished the regular season with a 6-0-1 conference record and a 14-2-2 record overall.

Senior Richard Eckardt stated, "We were always optimistic that we would win, but it was stretched out to the end of important not only in the Blue Hose quest for the SAC title but also because PC was seeking vengeance against a team they had never defeated. PC posted a 4-1 victory as Chris Bruno, Will Lindstrom, Chris Napior, and Norman de Waart scored goals for the Blue Hose. Richard Wright, Lindstrom, and goalkeeper Mark Albertus assisted on the goals.

The following Wednesday, PC travelled to Columbia to tackle the University of South Carolina, an NCAA division one team. The Blue Hose had several opportunities to score but were defeated 2-1. Chris Napior scored on a penalty kick after Chris Bruno was fouled in the goalkeeper's box.

Coach Polson stated, "Although we were disappointed by the final score, we had our best performance against them ever."

In another important SAC game, the Blue Hose hosted rival Catawba College on October 10 during Homecoming. Tyler Boulware scored PC's only goal from a Lindstrom assist. The game ended in a 1-1 tie, which enabled PC to remain in a favorable position in the SAC with a 4-0-1 record in the conference.

The following day, PC hosted Savannah College in a non-conference match-up. The Blue Hose played their way to a 6-0 victory, as Bruno led the team with two goals and an assist. John Mairs, Michael Martin, de Waart, and Napior added goals for PC, while Jason Woodall, Dan Walbolt, Napior, and Wright contributed assists in the game for goals.

Two days later, the Blue Hose travelled to Gardner Webb for a must-win SAC game. Bruno scored two goals and de Waart added one as PC chalked up another victory, 3-2.

Lindstrom and Bruno both had assists in the game. Goalkeeper Mark Albertus was named SAC player of the week for October 3-10, the second individual conference award given to a PC player this season.

Over fall break, the soccer team travelled to Panama City, Florida, for the Panama City College Soccer Classic. On Saturday, October 17, PC took on Birmingham Southern and was victorious with a score of 3-1. Woodall scored a "hat trick" with three goals, while Bruno and Lindstrom each had assists. Sunday's meeting with Berry College ended with neither team scoring, but PC did tie a school record with their eighth shutout of the season.

On October 21, PC tangled with Lander College and pulled out a 4-3 victory in overtime. Lindstrom led PC with two goals, while Bruno and Walbolt each added a goal. Bruno, Napior, and Walbolt contributed assists in the well-earned victory. The win, making the team's record 13-2-2, tied a second school record for regular season wins.

In order to capture the conference title, the Blue Hose had to defeat tough foe Elon College. PC rose to the challenge and defeated the Fighting Christians on the road last Saturday. Bruno led off the scoring with an assist from Robert Goding. Boulware assisted de Waart on the second goal, and Lindstrom finished out the scoring with an assist from Shannon Brown.

Football team rips Mars Hill

by Everett Catts
SPORTS EDITOR

Following two straight losses, the Blue Hose football team improved its record in the SAC to 2-2 (3-4 overall) by defeating Mars Hill on October 24, 19-6. In a game influenced by special teams and defense, PC scored all of its points in a second quarter explosion.

Four seconds into the second quarter, Alex Horton kicked a 26 yard field goal to make the score 3-0. With 13:42 remaining, the Blue Hose's Brett Turner intercepted a pass at the Mars Hill seven yard line and returned for a touchdown. Horton's extra point gave PC a 10-0 lead. That lead was lengthened to 13-0 with a 46 yard field goal by Horton with 8:58 left in the half. After Rodney Lightsey blocked a Mars Hill field goal attempt with 1:08 remaining, Tony Robertson picked up the loose ball and ran 73 yards for a touchdown. The two-point conversion was unsuccessful, and PC left the field at halftime with a 19-0 lead.

Although the Blue Hose were unable to score again, they won 19-6, thanks in part to the play of the defense and special teams. Although no Offensive Player of the Week was announced, Ron Palmer sparked the PC offense. Palmer, a wide receiver, caught four passes for 68 yards.

Named Defensive Player of the Week was defensive end Brett Turner, who had nine tackles to go along with his interception and touchdown. Defensive back Tyron Phillips had three interceptions, along with Robertson's single pick. Linebacker Antonion Merriwether had another great game, with 10 stops.

Three people were named Special Teams Player of the Week. First, kicker Alex Horton was honored for his kickoffs and his field goals, which gave PC the lead. Rodney Lightsey and Quincy Eigner, both defensive backs, were recognized for blocking kicks. Lightsey blocked a field goal which was returned for a touchdown, and Eigner blocked a punt, giving the Blue Hose offense good field position. In addition, the special teams had a total of 198 return yards on the day.

Head Coach John Perry commented on the team's defense, saying, "They were sturdy, making big plays. The defensive line batted down passes and had some tackles for losses, forcing them (Mars Hill) out of a rhythm."

On PC's special teams, Perry said, "If you add up all of the yardage on everything (kickoffs, punts, field goals, and all returns), it helps with field position tremendously."

The Blue Hose host Wingate tomorrow for Parents' Day and are also home against Gardner-Webb on November 7.

Midnight Madness at PC Blue Hose to hold first b-ball practice

by Everett Catts
SPORTS EDITOR

The 1992-93 men's basketball team begins its season in Templeton Gym on Halloween, and they want everyone to join. At Midnight the Blue Hose will hold a 30-minute intrasquad scrimmage. Before the scrimmage, the PC will have a warm-up dunk session.

People attending the event are encouraged to either have group costumes or wear their own. Prizes will be awarded for both group and individual costumes. A $100.00 prize will be given to the group with the most spirited and creative costume.

A $25 prize will be awarded to the person with the best individual costume. All costumes must be in good taste.

At halftime of the scrimmage, three people will have a shot at a $5000.00 giveaway. There will also be free Pepsi and popcorn during the event. The coaching staff and players encourage everyone to come.

oooooooooooo

The Men's Shop

PUBLIC SQUARE LAURENS

INTERVIEW SUITS

STARTING AT $200

Intramural ----- Notes

The intramural office would like to congratulate the 1992 intramural football champions: Men's-Pi Kappa Phi and Women's-Alpha Delta Pi. Jason Humphries and Matt Glenn led Pi Kappa Phi to a 42-20 win over Theta Chi in the men's championship game.

In the women's championship game, Amy Latiff and Margaret Davis starred as Alpha Delta Pi upset defending champ Zeta Tau Alpha, 26-8. Some upcoming dates to remember are: Oct. 30-volleyball rosters are due and Nov. 16-sports trivia contest.

PC's Dee-Dee Williams spikes the ball in a recent confrontation in Templeton Gymnasium. The Lady Blue Hose have compiled a record of 27 - 5 so far this season.

photo by Todd Love

Women's soccer team finishes season

by Amanda Bowers
STAFF WRITER

The PC women's soccer team finished its regular season on October 28 with a 4-1 victory over Queens college. Junior Missy Bulter scored two goals for the Lady Blue Hose, while sophomore Christi Flack and freshman Chanty Brazel contributed one goal each.

Over fall break, the team travelled to Boca Raton, Florida, to play Florida Atlantic University and Lynn University. They suffered losses to both schools by a score of 2-0.

Junior co-captain Kathleen Dowd commented about the weekend, saying, "We dominated a lot of the play, but we just couldn't finish. Overall, it was a good trip. We got a lot of kinks worked out before the post-season and raised our level of play, which is what we went to do."

Dowd went on to say that she would really like to end the post-season by winning districts and going on to the regionals. But she adds, "We are taking it one game at a time."

Radio PC

PC's radio station moves on campus this year!

Broadcasting will begin at 3:00 pm on October

21 on the PC information channel

World Hunger...
You can make a Difference!

CROP WALK / RUN

November 6th

4:00-5:30

in front of Richardson-East Plaza Pick up a sponsor sheet in GPH the week of October 26-30 or from a recruiter.

ACULTY-STUDENTS-STAFF

Raising money and awareness for

World Hunger.

P.C. Student

10% Discount

Everyday

Must Show I.D.

(Excluding Beer)

111 Jacobs Hwy, Clinton

833-5800

Delivery

5pm - Closing

P.C. Night!

Every Wednesday

20% Discount

Must Show I.D.

(Excluding Beer)

American Wetlands threatened by new definition

by Kristina Pruitt
STAFF WRITER

The destruction of the wetlands in the United States is one of our country's largest environmental concerns. "Wetlands" is a term given to a broad group of areas where the land meets water-swamps, marshes, floodplains, estuaries, barrier beaches, and prairie potholes. Each low lying area performs a different task that is critical in keeping the environment clean, protecting low lying areas from flooding, and protecting inland soil and beaches from erosion. This complex system also provides diversity among many species of plants and animals that are dependent upon the wetland habitat for survival.

Environmental experts feel that these areas are threatened as a result of the Bush Administration's new definition of the term "wetland." According to section 404 of the Clean Water Act, in order to dredge or fill a wetland, a permit must be obtained. In 1989, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers along with the EPA defined wetlands as follows:

"Those areas that are inundated or saturated by surface or duration sufficient to support, and that under normal circumstances do support, a prevalence of vegetation typically adapted for life in saturated soil conditions. Wetlands generally include swamps, marshes, bogs, and similar areas."

This definition brought about protests from angry farmers and developers who felt that many of the areas included were dry nearly all of the time, and that the rules infringed on property rights. The Bush Administration proposed that in order for a site to be considered a wetland it must meet the three original requirements: soil, plants, and saturation. The area must be saturated to ground level for 21 consecutive days during the growing season or completely under water for 15 consecutive days.

Environmentalists say that this new requirement will be difficult for many wetlands to meet. An example of this is the Apalachicola River's floodplain in Florida. This floodplain is created by the floods that occur six or seven times a year. The flooding, which flows downstream to the Apalachicola Bay, provides the perfect environment for shellfish. The river flood plain falls under the general term "wetlands," but since the floods do not stay for 15 consecutive days, they are not "wetlands" in the political sense of the word. Under the current requirements, 35,000 acres of the Apalachicola's floodplain is unprotected.

The Apalachicola is one example of how much of the wetlands in the United States continue to be unprotected. Annually, 250,000 to 500,000 acres of wetlands are lost due to dredging and filling by farmers and developers. The effects of these losses are beginning to be felt by society. Some examples of major problems caused by wetland loss are polluted streams and rivers, the loss of wildlife (the wetlands are home to 150 species of birds, 200 types of fish, and 1/3 of the plants and animals on the U.S. endangered and threatened species list), and flooding due to the destruction of floodplains by developers and farmers. Environmentalists hope that some actions will be taken to ensure the protection of the wetlands in the future. This is an issue which voters should keep in mind on November 3.

Recycle PC
would like to welcome
new members
Kristina
Pruitt and Suzanne Jowers to the board.

Recycling Notice

by Heather Moncrief
ENVIRONMENT EDITOR

Due to decisions made by K&W Alloy, recycling on the PC campus is being changed. K&W Alloy, the company which markets our recycled materials, has recently taken over the recycling programs of Laurens and Clinton. Items which will be accepted by them now exclude ledger paper. The container in Springs Campus Center will be removed on October 30 and placed in a computer lab on campus to facilitate recycling of computer paper which will still be accepted. While the Recycle PC board continues to research other possibilities, the items which can be recycled on campus now are as follows:

Soda cans
Plastics
Glass
Corrugated Cardboard

Your participation in the recycling program is appreciated. Any suggestions are gladly received; direct them to Box 974 or 833-9515.

Newspaper
Computer paper

WASTED YOUTH.

A Fiddle Service of the USDA Forest Service
Save and your State Forest

ONLY YOU CAN PREVENT FOREST FIRES

'It's time to elect politicians who really care about the environment'

Seventh Generation 1992

On November 3rd, the environment needs your help. The 8,600 species of birds, 6,000 species of mammals, 20,000 species of fish, and 250,000 species of plants that live on earth can't decide who controls their fate. But you can.

At every level of government there are politicians running for office who support strong environmental legislation... and those who don't. It's up to us to recognize the difference (which isn't always easy!) and elect people who know that a healthy environment goes hand in hand with a strong economy.

The future of environmental legislation is in your hands.

This fall the Endangered Species Act will come up for reauthorization. Two bills have already been introduced that will dramatically affect the Act. One bill would strengthen this important piece of legislation. The other would undermine it completely. The future of this and other environmental legislation depends entirely on who we put in office on November 3rd.

Your vote really does make a difference.

Perhaps you don't think your one, single vote matters. It does.

The earth is still a nice place to live... let's keep it that way.

Despite human interference, the earth's natural environment is still beautiful and wondrous. As the most influential species on the planet, we have the power to destroy what's left... or take steps to preserve and restore it.

As the most influential species on the planet we have the power to destroy what's left... or take steps to preserve and restore it.

Our elected officials have more influence than most of us about which way the pendulum swings. Keeping the earth healthy takes many kinds of action. Using environmentally responsible products is one of them. Voting for leaders who give a damn about the environment is another. This November 3rd we encourage you to use your influence to elect City Council Members, State Representatives, Congressional and Senatorial Representatives who will vote for our environment... not against it. Confused about which politicians are really green?

The League of Conservation Voters is a non-profit organization whose mission is to identify and support environmentally responsible candidates. They look beyond the rhetoric at voting records and other actions that are a real gauge of just how "green" these women and men really are. The League is here to help you decide who deserves your vote. We encourage you to tap their resources... and to give them your support:

League of Conservation Voters
1707 L St., Suite

550
Washington, D.C. 20036
(202) 785-8683

Seventh Generation offers over 300 products for a healthy planet including environmentally safe cleaners, unbleached 100% recycled paper goods, energy saving equipment, untreated cotton clothing in classic designs, and personal care items. For a catalog, send $2 to Seventh Generation, Catalog Requests, Cold Chester, Vermont 05446-1672.

The Blue Stocking staff called the League of Conservation Voters on October 26. The following statistics for South

Carolina's incumbents were received:

Congressional District 1: Arthur Ravenel (R)- 69%
Congressional District 2: Floyd Spence (R)- 6%
Congressional District 3: Butler Derrick (D)- 44%
Congressional District 4: Liz Patterson (D)- 38%
Congressional District 5: John Spratt (D)- 56%
Congressional District 6: Robin Tallon (D)- 25%
Incumbent Junior Senator from SC: Ernest F. Hollings- 42%
Incumbent Senior Senator from SC: Strom Thurmond- 0%

These percentages are based upon a scale of 100 and ranking was based upon the individual's support or lack of support for environmental legislation. The only South Carolina incumbent candidates to have received endorsement from the League of Conservation Voters are Arthur Ravenel, District 1, and John Spratt, District 5. When asked which presidential ticket the League supports based upon environmental issues, the response was the Democratic ticket, Bill Clinton and Al Gore.

They're Back!

Michael "The Paleo Kid" Rischbieter

"Indiana John" Inman

Flexicourse May 10 - May 30 (approximate dates)

Join us in an expedition in time, back to 65 million years ago in the Northern Great Plains. Camp in the Badlands, search for and dig fossils, explore the plant and animal ecology of the shortgrass prairie, drink "cowboy" coffee! This trip will change the way you look at time, the way you look the land and this country, and perhaps, the way you look at yourself. Three hours credit. Open to all students, although the faint-hearted are encouraged to look at other, less thrilling courses.

Organizational/information meeting - November 5, 7PM R-207

American Wetlands threatened by new definition

by Kristina Pruitt
STAFF WRITER

The destruction of the wetlands in the United States is one of our country's largest environmental concerns. "Wetlands" is a term given to a broad group of areas where the land meets water-swamps, marshes, floodplains, estuaries, barrier beaches, and prairie potholes. Each low lying area performs a different task that is critical in keeping the environment clean, protecting low lying areas from flooding, and protecting inland soil and beaches from erosion. This complex system also provides diversity among many species of plants and animals that are dependent upon the wetland habitat for survival.

Environmental experts feel that these areas are threatened as a result of the Bush Administration's new definition of the term "wetland." According to section 404 of the Clean Water Act, in order to dredge or fill a wetland, a permit must be obtained. In 1989, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers along with the EPA defined wetlands as follows:

"Those areas that are inundated or saturated by surface or duration sufficient to support, and that under normal circumstances do support, a prevalence of vegetation typically adapted for life in saturated soil conditions. Wetlands generally include swamps, marshes, bogs, and similar areas."

This definition brought about protests from angry farmers and developers who felt that many of the areas included were dry nearly all of the time, and that the rules infringed on property rights. The Bush Administration proposed that in order for a site to be considered a wetland it must meet the three original requirements: soil, plants, and saturation. The area must be saturated to ground level for 21 consecutive days during the growing season or completely under water for 15 consecutive days.

Environmentalists say that this new requirement will be difficult for many wetlands to meet. An example of this is the Apalachicola River's floodplain in Florida. This floodplain is created by the floods that occur six or seven times a year. The flooding, which flows downstream to the Apalachicola Bay, provides the perfect environment for shellfish. The river flood plain falls under the general term "wetlands," but since the floods do not stay for 15 consecutive days, they are not "wetlands" in the political sense of the word. Under the current requirements, 35,000 acres of the Apalachicola's floodplain is unprotected.

The Apalachicola is one example of how much of the wetlands in the United States continue to be unprotected. Annually, 250,000 to 500,000 acres of wetlands are lost due to dredging and filling by farmers and developers. The effects of these losses are beginning to be felt by society. Some examples of major problems caused by wetland loss are polluted streams and rivers, the loss of wildlife (the wetlands are home to 150 species of birds, 200 types of fish, and 1/3 of the plants and animals on the U.S. endangered and threatened species list), and flooding due to the destruction of floodplains by developers and farmers. Environmentalists hope that some actions will be taken to ensure the protection of the wetlands in the future. This is an issue which voters should keep in mind on November 3.

Recycle PC
would like to welcome
new members
Kristina
Pruitt and Suzanne Jowers to
the board.

Recycling Notice

by Heather Moncrief
ENVIRONMENT EDITOR

Due to decisions made by K&W Alloy, recycling on the PC campus is being changed. K&W Alloy, the company which markets our recycled materials, has recently taken over the recycling programs of Laurens and Clinton. Items which will be accepted by them now exclude ledger paper. The container in Springs Campus Center will be removed on October 30 and placed in a computer lab on campus to facilitate recycling of computer paper which will still be accepted. While the Recycle PC board continues to research other possibilities, the items which can be recycled on campus now are as follows:

Soda cans
Plastics
Glass
Corrugated Cardboard

Your participation in the recycling program is appreciated. Any suggestions are gladly received; direct them to Box 974 or 833-9515.

Newspaper
Computer paper

WASTED YOUTH.

A Public Service of the USDA Forest Service
and your State Forester

ONLY YOU CAN PREVENT FOREST FIRES

'It's time to elect politicians who really care about the environment'

Seventh Generation 1992

On November 3rd, the environment needs your help. The 8,600 species of birds, 6,000 species of mammals, 20,000 species of fish, and 250,000 species of plants that live on earth can't decide who controls their fate. But you can.

At every level of government there are politicians running for office who support strong environmental legislation... and those who don't. It's up to us to recognize the difference (which isn't always easy!) and elect people who know that a healthy environment goes hand in hand with a strong economy.

The future of environmental legislation is in your hands.

This fall the Endangered Species Act will come up for reauthorization. Two bills have already been introduced that will dramatically affect the Act. One bill would strengthen this important piece of legislation. The other would undermine it completely. The future of this and other environmental legislation depends entirely on who we put in office on November 3rd.

Your vote really does make a difference.

Perhaps you don't think your one, single vote matters. It does.

The earth is still a nice place to live... let's keep it that way.

Despite human interference, the earth's natural environment is still beautiful and wondrous. As the most influential species on the planet, we have the power to destroy what's left... or take steps to preserve and restore it. Our elected officials have more influence than most of us about which way the pendulum swings. Keeping the earth healthy takes many kinds of action. Using environmentally responsible products is one of them. Voting for leaders who give a damn about the environment is another. This November 3rd we encourage you to use your influence to elect City Council Members, State Representatives, Congressional and Senatorial Representatives who will vote for our environment... not against it.

Confused about which politicians are really green? The League of Conservation Voters is a non-profit organization whose mission is to identify and support environmentally responsible candidates. They look beyond the rhetoric at voting records and other actions that are a real gauge of just how "green" these women and men really are. The League is here to help you decide who deserves your vote. We encourage you to tap their resources... and to give them your support:

550
Washington, D.C. 20036
(202) 785-8683

Seventh Generation offers over 300 products for a healthy planet including environmentally safe cleaners, unbleached 100% recycled paper goods, energy saving equipment, untreated cotton clothing in classic designs, and personal care items. For a catalog, send $2 to Seventh Generation, Catalog Requests, Cold Chester, Vermont 05446-1672.

The Blue Stocking staff called the League of Conservation Voters on October 26. The following statistics for South

Carolina's incumbents were received:

Congressional District 1: Arthur Ravenel (R)- 69%
Congressional District 2: Floyd Spence (R)- 6%
Congressional District 3: Butler Derrick (D)- 44%
Congressional District 4: Liz Patterson (D)- 38%
Congressional District 5: John Spratt (D)- 56%
Congressional District 6: Robin Tallon (D)- 25%
Incumbent Junior Senator from SC: Ernest F. Hollings- 42%
Incumbent Senior Senator from SC: Strom Thurmond- 0%

These percentages are based upon a scale of 100 and ranking was based upon the individual's support or lack of support for environmental legislation. The only South Carolina incumbent candidates to have received endorsement from the League of Conservation Voters are Arthur Ravenel, District 1, and John Spratt, District 5. When asked which presidential ticket the League supports based upon environmental issues, the response was the Democratic ticket, Bill Clinton and Al Gore.

They're Back!

Michael "The Paleo Kid" Rischbieter

"Indiana John" Inman

Flexicourse May 10 - May 30 (approximate dates)

Join us in an expedition in time, back to 65 million years ago in the Northern Great Plains. Camp in the Badlands, search for and dig fossils, explore the plant and animal ecology of the shortgrass prairie, drink "cowboy" coffee! This trip will change the way you look at time, the way you look the land and this country, and perhaps, the way you look at yourself. Three hours credit. Open to all students, although the faint-hearted are encouraged to look at other, less thrilling courses.

Organizational/information meeting - November 5, 7PM R-207

Company to perform in Edmunds Hall

The Chestnut Brass Company will be performing in Edmunds Hall on November 19 at 8:15 p.m.

file photo

Philadelphia band to perform at PC

by Brian Sacco
STAFF WRITER

Described as "versatile and unpredictable" by the Philadelphia Inquirer, the Chestnut Brass Company from Philadelphia will perform at Edmunds Hall on November 19th at 8:15 p.m.

The Chestnut Brass Company performs with 150 different instruments and plays music from the Middle Ages to Contemporary Jazz. Their musical diversity should provide the audience with a sample to appeal to every taste. This musical quintet has been featured on National Public Radio's "Performance Today" program, "Voice of America," and Bavarian State Radio.

The Chestnut Brass Company tours throughout the United States, while participating in over one hundred workshops during the year. Selected as "Outstanding Young Artists to Watch" by Musical America, the Company is composed of musicians Bruce Barrie and Thomas Cook on the trumpet, Marian Hesse on the French horn, Larry Zimmerman on the trombone, and Jay Krush on the tuba.

Reviewer Dr. Earle L. Louder of the Morehead News said of the Chestnut Brass Company, "The ensemble performed not only a very musically satisfying concert, but one that was educational and entertaining."

The group, founded in 1977, mixes its own innovative music with standard sets of music and is culturally enriching because of its experience and diversity.

Comedian to bring show to campus

Jonathan Solomon's act called 'fast moving'

by Camisha Clarke
ENTERTAINMENT EDITOR

"If men could have babies, you could get an abortion at Woolworth's by now. Women should pass laws about what men could do with their bodies," says comedian Jonathan Solomon while imagining a law limiting where men can scratch themselves.

From the moment Solomon steps onto the stage and takes the mic, the cleverness of his material is the powerful force that makes the audience laugh. Some comedians lower themselves by using obscenities to get easy laughs, and some others even attack their audience with rock-hard punch lines and "dry comedy." Then there's Solomon, who simply takes his time and delivers thoughtful comedy while trusting that cleverness in his material.

The range of subjects in his material even offers advice on everything from how to make a fortune in cash by just visiting your Grandmother to how to look cool at the mall when you are fourteen.

Ahhh...fourteen. Those were the days when "you're starting to worry about the way you look and at the same time you're starting to look really bad," reminisces Solomon. He recalls how he used to be agonizingly embarrassed by his parents as a teenager, but now "they're cute. They're like hamsters." His comedy act humorously incorporates how our view of our parents changes over time.

Solomon handles the more serious subjects with the same thoughtfulness. He uses humor to bring attention to these subjects by delivering sharp commentary without sounding shrill. Homelessness, AIDS research, and abortion laws are only a few examples of this subject matter.

Although Solomon's name is not yet a familiar one, many have faith that Solomon will get the recognition he deserves in the future. He continues to headline many major comedy clubs all over the country and to make television appearances on some popular comedy specials, including VH-1 Showtime, The MTV Half Hour Comedy Hour, Star Search, and, MTV's Comedy Special from Pepperdine University. He has also hosted MTV's ship video morningshow, "Awake on the Wild Side."

Wait! He may have entertained the audiences of television, but can he satisfy a live, college audience? Well, the Student Activities Board of the University of Wisconsin says that Solomon has a genuine interest in the students on campus.

Gary Koenen of this university exclaimed, "Not only was his show hilarious, but he was able to transform a potential technical disaster into an entertaining part of his show."

Joy Hopkins, advisor of the Student Activities Board of the University of West Florida, also promoted Solomon's talent: "He played to a packed house and was on stage for almost two hours. It was unbelievable that an audience would sit for that long and listen to one person. I think it's a definite statement about the talent of Jonathan Solomon."

There is no question why the New York Post calls Solomon "one of the hardest working and best comedians around."

Jonathan Solomon will be performing live in Springs Campus Center at 7:00 pm on Tuesday, November 10. Don't miss this "fast moving show."

SUB to feature Lethal Weapon 3

by Kim Rabon
STAFF WRITER

Sequels. The sight of the word is enough to make some people cringe. Most sequels fail at trying to extend the storyline and keeping the viewers' attention. As for being another dull, boring repetitive sequel, "Lethal Weapon 3" is a definite exception.

As seen in "Lethal Weapon 1" and "Lethal Weapon 2," Riggs (Mel Gibson) and Murtaugh (Danny Glover) are detective partners that have found themselves in one predicament after another. The duo's adventures continue in "Lethal Weapon 3," directed by Richard Donner. At the beginning of the movie, Murtaugh decides he will be retiring and Riggs begins to plan ways to get Murtaugh to reconsider. Murtaugh is hesitant to enter any case because his retirement date is fast approaching, but Riggs gets involved in an accident on the street and ultimately volunteers them both for a case. The case on which the movie is based addresses the problems of gang violence and the distribution of illegal weapons. These themes are portrayed in an emotional scene when a friend of Murtaugh's son is killed in a gang raid and again in the destruction of the fortress city the warlord built. "Lethal Weapon 3" brilliantly displays action and humor, while at the same time it sends the viewer a message.

Leo Getz (Joe Pesci) returns again in "Lethal Weapon 3" and continues to add undeniable humor to the big screen. The cast come together to form the ultimate movie with 3 times the excitement, 3 times the action, and 3 times the laughs! "Lethal Weapon 3" is by far the best of the three movies and stand out in my mind as one of the best movies ever.

The Student Union Board will be showing "Lethal Weapon 3" in Springs Campus Center on Friday, November 13th at 7:00 p.m. As always, the movie is free of charge, so come out and enjoy a night at the movies.

THE BLUE

STOCKING

"Give the people the light, so they may find the way."

Volume LXXXVII Number 4

PRESBYTERIAN COLLEGE

Clinton, South Carolina 29325

Friday, November 20, 1992

Senior Bret Turner (57) leads the PC defense in a battle against Garder-Webb. The Blue Hose will be taking on the Newberry College Indians on Thanksgiving Day in the final holiday edition of the Bronze Derby.

photo by Kim Gibson

Disturbance at MSU party leads to 5 arrests

by Tobin Turner
STAFF WRITER

A Minority Student Union party, held on November 7 at Douglas House, turned out to be anything but a time of social fellowship, as Public Safety and the Clinton Police Department were forced to make five arrests within an hour. None of those arrested, however, were PC students.

The trouble began at approximately 10:00 pm when Willie Payne of Clinton and three juveniles were refused admittance to the party. They were subsequently asked by the security officer at the door to leave the party. Ten minutes later the officer reported being hassled by the males and called for assistance.

Two additional Public Safety officers arrived at Douglas House, again asking the four individuals to leave the premises and informing them that failure to comply would result in their arrests for trespassing.

After leaving for several minutes, the officers returned to the party and found the group loitering around Bailey Dorm. The four individuals were apprehended by Clinton Police and transported to jail.

An hour later Public Safety was again called to the party. The officer working the door of the party was notified of a disturbance inside Douglas House. Christopher Peake, also of Clinton, was seen breaking out a window. As the party cleared, several small altercations involving shouts and abusive language occurred outside the building.

Emmett Stroud of Benton, Louisiana, then proceeded to break a second window. Peake was charged with disorderly conduct and malicious injury to personal property. A warrant has been issued for Sidney Speaks of Cross Hill, SC, for his part in the episode.

The judge hearing the cases came down sternly on both Payne, who received the maximum fine of $248, and Peake, who also received the maximum fine along with a $100 restitution fee for the broken windows. The three juveniles will appear in Family Court at a later date.

Chief Grey Mayson was in full support of the court's stiff penalties, stating, "MSU itself wasn't guilty of anything but trying to have a nice party."

SC tuition grant cuts expected

by Jason West
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

If you are a PC student from South Carolina and depend on the South Carolina Tuition Grant to help with the cost of college, you can expect changes next year.

According to Judi Gillespie, PC's financial aid director, the South Carolina Tuition Grant Commission has approved plans that will restructure the way grants are distributed to students - a decision that will effect 85 percent of PC's South Carolina students.

"The tuition grant program was originally designed to help offset the cost of private college to citizens of South Carolina by providing a family with 41.5 percent of tuition cost of any private school in the state," said Gillespie. "The grant program was based on a first come, first serve basis. In other words, there was only so much money available, and the first people to apply were the ones to receive the grants. Students could receive any amount from $3850 on down."

However, in recent years, Gillespie reports that the grant program has found itself with less and less money and more and more demands. In fact, the funding for this academic year was depleted as of March 5, 1992.

"There has been a great deal of concern about the grant program funding less students. As a result, the Commission has decided to extend the application deadline for the tuition grant for the next academic year to June 30, 1993 and all who apply by that date will be funded," said Gillespie.

According to Gillespie, this new policy will probably result in a "watering down" of the tuition grant program. "The purpose of the tuition grant was to give students a choice. It was designed to be an equalization grant to equalize private and public education," she said.

Gillespie indicates that some students may find that their grant could be reduced by $1000 or more. In addition, students and parents will not know the exact amount of their grant until September or October.

"A lot of students will lose money and some are going to have to go to public schools because they can no longer afford private education," added Gillespie.

"My biggest fear is that the state will revert to giving a grant to every student in South Carolina, whether they attend private or public schools," said Gillespie.

On The Inside

Page 4 . . .

Accusations against Food Lion could result in trouble for SAC-8 tournament sponsorships.

Page 6 . . .

Bronze Derby Thanksgiving tradition comes to an end at Presbyterian College.

Page 11 . . .

SUB's Reggae Fest proves to be another success.

Professor proposes a 'freshman to senior care' grading policy

by Jody Lipford
GUEST WRITER

At long last the election is over and Bill Clinton is our new president. His presidency marks the end of Republican dominance of the White House, a dominance that lasted twenty-four years. (Pardon me for overlooking the Watergate-induced fluke of 1976.) Will Mr. Clinton be a "typical" Democrat in the tradition of Roosevelt, Kennedy, and Johnson? I don't know. But in keeping with the spirit of the new Democratic regime, I propose the following policy for Presbyterian College: a points tax and redistribution scheme.

As all of us know, teachers and students alike, there is a wide disparity of ability and performance among students. This inequity is most unfair and unfortunate, doubtless creating class strife between poor students and "curve-blowers." My proposal would carry us some distance in rectifying these problems by providing a more egalitarian grade distribution. By taxing passing students and redistributing these points to failing students, we could provide a "safety net" and "freshman to senior care" for all students.

Consider my two Econ 201 classes. Although I have been impressed with the quality of these students, especially as evidenced by their questions, comments, and effort, the (combined) class average was only 68.2 with a number of "F"s. In an effort to aid the less fortunate stu-revise all students' grades to at least a 60.

With a little work on a spreadsheet, I found that this scheme would yield 61.6 taxable points to redistribute. I immediately subtracted 1.6

"All 'A's, equality, and harmony among students and faculty alike. Wouldn't PC be a happy place?"

points, I propose adjusting the grades in the following way. A progressive tax schedule that taxes points between 60 and 70 at a 10 percent rate, points between 70 and 80 at a 20 percent rate, points between 80 and 90 at a 30 percent rate, and points in excess of 90 at a 40 percent rate would be used to raise points for redistribution. Failing students would, of course, not be taxed. Then, these taxed points could be used to points from this total to cover the administrative costs of redistribution. I then began allocating points to failing students, giving each failing student enough points to reach a grade of 60. This tax and redistribution program eliminated all "A"s and reduced the standard deviation in the class from 13.9 to 9.7, a marked movement towards equality!

Nevertheless, because of a few very low grades, I was not able to raise every student to a grade of 60. While lamenting this situation to a colleague, I was reminded of the Republican legacy: deficit finance. But why borrow the few points needed to raise my weakest students' scores to a mere 60? By borrowing 763 points from future students yet to enroll at PC, I could give everyone an "A." What could be better! Oh yes, I know that one day I'd have to stand before my students and tell them that they must all pay, say, a 20 point surcharge to finance the "A"s of previous graduates. But maybe that day can be deferred. Who knows, maybe with a little luck we could defer this day indefinitely by borrowing points from Wolford, Newberry, or some other neighboring school.

Who could object to this proposal? Poor students would graduate with high GPA's. "Curve-blowers" need not fear the envy or disdain of poorer students. Faculty need not face the lobbying efforts of students arguing for extra points on discussion questions. All "A"s, equality, and harmony among students and faculty alike. Wouldn't PC be a happy place?

The final edition of the Blue Stocking this semester will be published on December 4, 1992. Anyone wishing to write a letter to the editor must do so by Monday, November 30, 1992. Letters to the editor must be signed by the author. The editor reserves the right to edit for grammatical purposes and space limitations. The staff encourages students to express their opinions.

The Blue Stocking of Presbyterian College
Clinton, South Carolina, 29325
Volume LXXXVII, Number 4
November 20, 1992

Editor-in-Chief.....Jason West
Managing Editor.....Leleanna Maddox
News Editor.....Ricky Dill
Politics Editor.....Ted Carmichael
Sports Editor.....Everette Catis
Entertainment Editor.....Camisha Clarke
Features Editor.....Martha Lynn Smith
Environment Editor.....Heather Moncrief
Photography Editor.....Kim Gibson
Layout Editor.....Angela Richardson

Advertising Editor.....Ann Mayfield
Subscriptions Editor.....Ron Mixon
Artist.....Michael Christensen

Photography Staff
Kimberlee Gibson Todd Love

Staff Writers
Elizabeth Cunard Amanda Bowers
Leigh Hearnburg Katherine Bonner
Kristina Pruitt Cher Fulbright
Paula Warren Michelle Cantey
Brian Sacco Shelly Phipps
Kim Rabon Jamey Pate
Tobin Turner Tonya Snead

The Blue Stocking is a tri-weekly student publication of Presbyterian College. The paper serves as a forum of news and opinion of regional and national concern. For advertising, contact The Blue Stocking, Presbyterian College, Box 1061, Clinton, SC 29325. The Blue Stocking welcomes letters to the editor from all members of the PC community. Signatures are required. Letters are printed on a space available basis. The Blue Stocking reserves the right to edit all letters for proper grammar and punctuation. The final deadline for submitting letters is Friday at 12:00 pm on the week before publication.

Faculty and staff express opinions concerning religion requirement

by Ricky Dill
NEWS EDITOR

In a previous issue of the Blue Stocking, an article appeared on the history of church-related colleges and the reasoning behind PC's faculty religion requirement. Presbyterian College has long followed a policy of only hiring faculty members who profess to be a member of a Christian church.

In this issue, current faculty and staff members offer their opinions on the matter of a faculty religion requirement.

In support of the requirement for professors to be members of a Christian church, President Kenneth B. Orr said, "It is in harmony with the mission of the school" and with "the foundation set up by members of the Presbyterian Church, who dedicated their entire lives to the college."

Senior Vice-President of Academic Affairs Bill Moncrief agreed with Orr. "I don't feel that it is a destructive requirement, and it is necessary to still maintain the same identity (of PC)," he said. "There are arguments for both sides, but we have a strong faculty from various situations and experiences who are liberal in the best sense of the word, who know what they believe and are knowledgeable."

Peter Hobbie, professor of religion and philosophy, also supports the requirement, believing that it stresses "a community sense of Christianity by a desire to do things for students and others in a sense of kindness."

"The college does not limit or restrict my teaching. I am allowed to give a liberal, unbiased view to my class. I am not limiting my students in any way," added Hobbie.

Though professors are not restricted in their teaching at all, Orr, the Board of Trustees, and a select group of professors do not agree with having a Mormon, Jew, or any other non-Christian on the faculty.

"With 800 liberal arts colleges, there is a wealth of choice; this is what is great about America. This institution is unique because of its liberal education within a Christian context. It is not all things to all people. If this is offensive to you, then you ought to go elsewhere," said Orr.

Moncrief expressed his belief that PC is set apart from ordinary liberal arts colleges by its main goal. "PC is in both worlds and understands the realities of the real world yet maintains positive Christian ideas. This is what bridges the gap," he said.

In opposition to the Christian requirement, many professors cite the need to be more tolerant of other religions.

Booker Ingram, professor of political science, says, "This separation is somewhat problematic and too narrow of a definition of Christianity."

Tom Weaver, professor of political science and the first Catholic permitted to teach at PC, agrees and stresses that the requirement could be much better written. He suggests revising it to require "an appreciation of Christian values" but not necessarily mandating one to be a Christian.

He continues, "This would rule out, for example, an atheist who could possibly come in and do harm to the students and college," he said.

Terry Barr, English professor, also expressed his reservation about the requirement. "I find it hard to believe that my father, who is hardworking, open-minded, and has a wonderful heart, and whom I respect very much, would not be able to get a job (teaching) at PC because he is Jewish."

"PC is much more tolerant than a Bob Jones," added Barr. "We should still continue to become more and more tolerant to better understand other viewpoints. One atheist in our midst could in no way undermine such a strong foundation."

The individuals who are in favor of the requirement believe it is in line with the history of Presbyterian College and that the removal or revision of the requirement could demise the uniqueness of PC's goal to provide a liberal education within a Christian environment.

Those who oppose the requirement believe that changing the policy would be a step forward for Christianity, in that Christians need to continue being more open-minded and tolerant of all people. In the process, it would improve PC by allowing more diverse professors who were experts in their fields and who would help students learn to accept views and visions of all people, as we move into a less restrictive, more tolerant world community.

FEED A HERD OF PARTY ANIMALS.

Make your bash a smash with a Subway Party Sub or Party Platter. You tell us how long you want your Party Sub — and we'll make it.

And we'll stuff your Party Platter with your favorite subs — sliced in tasty 4" portions. Call Subway and make plans for your party Big plans.

988 E. Carolina Ave., Clinton, SC 29325
833-2582

Building From Strength Campaign Board celebrates $38 million success

Press Release
OFFICE OF PUBLIC RELATIONS

The ambitious "Building From Strength" fund-raising campaign at Presbyterian College, begun in March of 1988, came to an official close Thursday night with the announcement that the $30 million goal had been exceeded by nearly 30 percent.

PC trustee Wilson Wearn, chairman emeritus of Multimedia Inc. in Greenville, SC, who served as chairman of the five-year fund drive, revealed to a celebration banquet audience that the campaign had raised $38,495,697.

"While the impact of this fund-raising drive has been much more dramatic than dollars alone, we certainly don't want to minimize the extraordinary importance of these new funds for Presbyterian College," Wearn said. "Someone once said, 'A team that doesn't keep score is only practicing.' Well, believe me, this campaign team has not just been practicing, and we've kept score all along the way. This final score indicates that Presbyterian College is indeed a winner."

The Building From Strength Campaign touched every constituent group of PC, including the Board of Trustees, which raised $6 million from within its 40-member board; the Board of Visitors, which raised $1 million; faculty and staff; the Presbyterian Church (USA) congregations in South Carolina and Georgia; the 6,000-plus alumni; and friends in the local Laurens County community.

By the time the campaign had concluded, 722 volunteers had received gifts from 6,818 different donors. Included in the contributions were 74 gifts over $100,000, 21 gifts over $500,000, and 11 gifts over $1 million. During the past five years of the campaign, PC has constructed six new buildings, has added nearly $14 million to the scholarship fund, has doubled the overall endowment of the college to more than $36 million, has increased the faculty by 25 percent, and has increased enrollment by 23 percent, including this year's record student body of 1,167.

"We have much to celebrate and be thankful for today at Presbyterian College," President Kenneth B. Orr said during the celebration banquet, which brought together members of the Board of Trustees, the Board of Visitors, the Alumni Board of Directors, and campaign volunteers. "These have been extraordinary years by any measure."

Keynote speaker for the landmark meeting of the college's boards was C.D. Sprangler, president of the University of North Carolina system.

Food Lion's problems could spell trouble for SAC-8 sponsorship

by Kim Rabon
STAFF WRITER

Food Lion, Inc., America's fastest growing supermarket chain and the corporate sponsor for the South Atlantic Conference, has been trying to recover from allegations of unsanitary conditions in their stores and allegations of child labor law violations.

Last week, ABC's Prime Time Live ran a story in which one of the show's producers gained employment at a Food Lion store in Salisbury, North Carolina and obtained footage bringing a total of 14 charges against the corporation. Charges included uncleanness in the meat and deli departments, improper procedures handling meat, and ineffective scheduling of workers.

Food Lion President Tom E. Smith responded, "Food Lion stores are clean. We meet all food cleanliness and handling laws in all 14 states where we do business. Prime Time Live has created phony charges without facts in an effort to embarrass us, scare our customers, and drive us to a wall. It is not fair to a good company which provides 60,000 American jobs, and we resent it."

Food Lion is also being charged by the United States Department of Labor with child labor law violations. The charges are related to 16 and 17 year-old workers placing cardboard in non-operating bailers, which is illegal. The company claims that these charges are false because no one under 18 is allowed to place cardboard in the machines and younger employees are made aware of this policy before starting work.

"We have always been concerned with the safety of our young workers. We have considered not hiring workers under 18, but we believe teenagers should have the opportunity to grow and learn while on the job," said Smith.

Smith indicates that Food Lion has prepared a list of charges made by ABC and a list of responses to each charge. Consumers are being urged to call or write for a copy.

Since Food Lion is the corporate sponsor for SAC-8 athletic conference tournament championships, and since Presbyterian College is a member of the SAC-8, the allegations of child labor violations and uncleanness have the potential to affect the college.

"Food Lion has definitely helped out PC as well as the other teams in the conference," said Cally Gault, athletic director. "Everyone should hear both sides of the story before making up their minds."

Food Lion officials have assured SAC-8 members that the allegations have not yet affected their corporate sponsorship of tournament championships. However, officials warn that if consumers believe these allegations, stocks could drop and spending cuts by the company could result.

Big Opportunities Come From Small Colleges.

PROUD SPONSOR FOR ALL FOOD LION/SOUTH ATLANTIC CONFERENCE TOURNAMENT CHAMPIONSHIPS!

Residence halls to shut down during break

Thanksgiving Break officially begins at 1:00 pm on Wednesday, November 25, and classes will resume the following Monday, November 30. Greenville Dining Hall will serve the noon meal on November 25 and will be closed until the dinner meal on Sunday, November 29.

The residence halls will close at 7:00 pm Thursday, November 26, and re-open at 2:00 pm, Sunday, November 29. The women's residence halls and houses will be electronically locked on Wednesday, November 25 at 5:00 pm. If you would like to stay in your room over the Thanksgiving holidays, you must see Andy Altizer or Mrs. Burris in the Student Affairs Office. Women staying must ensure that their key card is added to the computer system; otherwise, their card will not let them enter their residence hall. Men requesting to stay must pick up a front door key to their residence hall and sign a special contract regarding the use of this key.

Holidays are frequently times when items are stolen out of student rooms, so make a conscious effort to lock your room and bathroom if you live in a suite. It is also a good idea, if you have not already done so, to participate in Project ID.

Project ID is a citizens' burglary prevention program. Students mark property with an identifying number and then list the make and serial number of those items. Marking property discourages theft because easily-identified property is hard for a burglar to sell. An inventory provides easy access to the make and serial number to assist law enforcement in recovery. Contact PC's Public Safety Office for more information. Have a safe Thanksgiving holiday!

The Blue Stocking staff wishes everyone a Happy Thanksgiving!

Sex...
IS NOT A GAME
DON'T turn it into a game of chance

Broder address concludes Russell Program's 'Election '92' series

by Ted Carmichael
POLITICS EDITOR

The third and final installment of the "Election '92" series was given this week in Belk Auditorium. David Broder spoke to a crowd of PC students and faculty, as well as local residents, at 11:00 on Tuesday. He gave what was described as a "post-mortem" on the national elections: his evaluation of them and some themes on the current political landscape.

Broder spoke about a pair of articles to which he contributed which were published last year in the Washington Post. For these articles, six reporters went to various parts of the country in order to interview people about the election. Broder said that there were two prevailing themes in the people's responses. One was that "the voters took the '92 election very seriously." The voters knew by that point, according to Broder, that the Cold War was over. He explained, "The American people finally said, 'This enormous confrontation... is finally over. We won. Our values prevailed, and now we finally move on to another period.'" In this new era, the voters also understood that "something more basic and more frightening was taking place" in the economy, Broder said.

The second major theme expressed by the people interviewed was that there is a "deep dismay and distrust of political institutions." Therefore, he concluded that "the voters are the ones who really... were in control of the dynamics of this election." As an example of this fact, Broder mentioned the candidacy of Sen. Paul Tsongas. Tsongas had written a book about his plans - "something substantive" about the economy - and "the people, to our surprise, snatched them up."

Brogan said that the voters "wanted to hear it straight," and that it "was not an accident that this was the year of the talk show." He also said that the "Perot Phenomenon" was an indication of "the voters leading the election."

Broder said there were four important facets of this year's election. "The first and most important thing is that the voters showed up in record numbers," he said, reversing the "downward trend" in recent years. He added that this reversal shows that the people believe "there is still some importance and credibility in the political process."

Broder pointed out that, since President Eisenhower, "only Ronald Reagan has served out two full terms." He also said that every president since Eisenhower served in World War Two. "Now we have entrusted the leadership of this country in two men - Bill Clinton and Al Gore - who were not shaped by World War Two and the post-war period."

The third important result of this election is the "changed Congress. There are 110 new members of the House of Representatives, the largest freshman class since before the war, he went on to point out that "now 53 women are in the House," as are a much larger number of minority representatives and the first Native-American. The voters, Broder said, have "ended the deadlock in Washington" by but finally predicted Governor Clinton. "Bill Clinton quickly became a leader of the National Governors' Conference, which meets twice annually," Broder said. "He key to making this nation strong." Broder also said that he thought the Clinton Administration "is going to be an interesting administration and - with fingers crossed - a hopeful one."

Broder then opened the floor for a few questions. The first one was from a student who asked what problems, and what benefits, can result from a Democratic Congress and President. Broder replied that "the biggest benefit is knowing that one set of politicians can be held accountable... for the problems of the next administration." Anything they did would be tempered by the fact that they have the responsibility, he said. "The federal budget deficit is one thing that no one took responsibility for," he added. "Now all of them come to Washington with the knowledge that they are there on probation. They have to improve upon the work of the people who came before them," or they will not be able to return.

Another person asked about the role of the "Religious Right" in the GOP. Broder said that was "something we have to do more reporting on," before a good answer can be given. However, he did say, "I think over the next four years we will see an intense - and I think a pretty healthy - debate on the direction of the Republican Party." He said that the definition of conservatism will be reformed to accommodate the various factions within the party.

When next asked if he thought that Bush's negative campaigning brought about his defeat, Broder replied, "My own sense is that President Bush's cause was lost over the last two years rather than over the campaign."

George Bush," he said, "was, in my view, a very effective leader in the closing of the Cold War, up to, and including, the Gulf War." He then said that Bush did not use his "commanding political position" with the Congress, "and opportunities were lost." Broder added, "The inability to change from the Cold War to domestic policy cost George Bush the election."

When asked about the effects of term limits for Congressmen, Broder said that they "could change the whole seniority system" of Congress. He also said, "I have very serious doubts about term limits as the solution to the problems [in Washington]." He finished by saying that perhaps it would be better to change the campaign financing laws or to install "a system of public financing that would give incumbents and challengers roughly equal amounts of money."

Broder is an associate editor and national political correspondent for The Washington Post, and his bi-weekly column is picked up by over 300 foreign and domestic newspapers. He has also worked for the Congressional Quarterly, The Washington Star, and The New York Times, and in 1973 he was awarded the Pulitzer Prize for Distinguished Commentary. Broder came to PC as a result of the work of Dr. Jim Skinner and the support of the Russell Program, in cooperation with the Cultural Enrichment Program.

Washington Post columnist David Broder speaks at Tuesday's convocation. Broder offered his perspective on the recent presidential election. photo by Kim Gibson electing a Democratic president along with a Democratic congress.

The fourth major result of this election, according to Broder, is how the voters took control of the election process. He said, "Fourteen states voted on term limits, and they passed in all 14. And one out of five voters said no to both parties." This election, he said, had the strongest showing for a third party candidate since 1912. "The voters are saying, 'You are there on probation; we are keeping an eye on you.'"

On President-elect Bill Clinton, Broder said that he first met him in 1978, when Clinton was 32 and the newly-elected Governor of Arkansas. Broder did a story on the "New Generation" of elected officials. Later, when Parade Magazine interviewed Broder, they asked him who would be the first President of the US out of this new generation. He tried to avoid the question was never in his seat for more than a minute at a time. Clinton was working that group of politicians harder than I've ever seen a politician work. He became a real player in changing not only state policy but national policy as well." Broder added that Clinton is "wonderfully skilled at building coalitions." As an example, he cited the Democratic National Convention, during which Clinton successfully "brought together the different factions of the Democratic Party."

Broder said that he would "venture two principles" for which he believes Clinton will work the hardest. The first deals with race-relations. "The idea of racial equality and desegregation is very important to him," Broder said. The second is "something that I have heard him talk about with passion; that is, education itself." Broder added, "I think that [Clinton] believes education is the

Blue Hose fans bid farewell to Thanksgiving tradition

Blue Hose Head Football Coach John Perry shows off the coveted Bronze Derby. The final Bronze Derby Thanksgiving game will be next Thursday.

photo by Kim Gibson

by LeJeanna Maddox
MANAGING EDITOR

For the past 47 years, PC Athletic Director Cally Gault has scheduled his Thanksgiving Day festivities around a different kind of tradition. And although it is often painful to watch a tradition drift into the recesses of memory, he'll have to do so this Thanksgiving Day, as PC faces Newberry in the final Thanksgiving Turkey Day Bronze Derby Classic.

The Thanksgiving Day rivalry began in 1943, and since that time three generations of upstate SC football fans have placed football at the top of their holiday agendas. Last year, the PC-Newberry match-up was one of only four games to be played in the entire nation on Thanksgiving Day.

The end of the tradition comes in the wake of PC's transition from NAIA athletic standing to NCAA Division II status. The NCAA regular season ends the second week in November. A Thanksgiving Day game could, therefore, interfere with NCAA playoff games and would, in any case, make the season too long.

"Most of us don't want to move the game," explained Gault, "but we realize the necessity. You just don't limit any team's playoff chances."

The PC-Newberry rivalry will always be unique, however. Erase "Thanksgiving Turkey Day" from the title, and you are still left with "Bronze Derby Classic." What, after all, is a bronze derby, and why do we name a football game after it?

The term originated as a result of an incident during a PC-Newberry basketball game in January of the 1946-47 season. A number of PC students travelled to Newberry for the game, carrying with them a banner bearing the message, "Beat the Hell Out of Newberry."

"They put the banner across the back of the gym over the student cheering section," explained Gault, who was a student at PC at the time. During the game, however, a group of Newberry students obtained a ladder, climbed up the outside wall of the gym, reached through the window, and pulled the banner out. Once the game ended and the PC students realized what had happened, they were determined not to return to Clinton without their stolen banner.

Scuffles and earnest searching ensued. In the midst of the chaos, a Newberry student reached through a car window and snatched a derby - a type of hat - from the head of a PC student. Everyone then forgot about the banner and concentrated all efforts on reclaiming the beloved derby.

"The derby had been worn at some time or another by every resident of Smyth Dorm. We took turns wearing it to class," explained Gault, who was sitting in the car from which the derby was stolen.

All searches proved futile, and the Blue Hose fans returned to Clinton without their banner or their derby. Incidentally, they did return with a 51-47 victory in the game, if that was any consolation.

Although some of the names and events of the ensuing two weeks remain undisclosed, we do know that PC's athletic publicity director and assistant professor of English, Charles MacDonald, sent a letter to Frank Kinard, the editor of the Newberry College newspaper. MacDonald proposed that the derby be instituted as a symbol of the athletic rivalry between the two schools. Kinard presented the idea to the Newberry student body, who enthusiastically lent their support of the idea.

"The derby was returned and bronzed," added Gault, "and has since served as a symbol of sports supremacy."

For several years, the trophy was up for grabs at every athletic confrontation between the schools. Then it was decided to award it only once each year to the winner of the annual Thanksgiving Day contest.

So while the Thanksgiving Turkey Day Bronze Derby Classic will bid farewell next week, the Bronze Derby Classic will live on. In the future, the game will likely be played near the beginning of the season. The schools will continue to battle for possession of the trophy.

This year's game will begin at 2:00 pm on Thanksgiving Day here at Bailey Stadium. The coveted Bronze Derby will be delivered to the field by the Golden Knights, a US Army Parachute Team.

The Episcopal Church Especially Welcomes Students
+ ALL SAINTS' EPISCOPAL CHURCH
One Block North of Greenville Dining Hall

Sunday Schedule

8:30 am	Holy Eucharist
9:45 am	Christian Education
10:30 am	Coffee (in Parish Hall)
11:00 am	Holy Eucharist
6:00 pm	+ CANTERBURY — for College Students

• Need someone to talk to?

The Rev. Nancy J. Allison, Rector (833-1388)
The Rev. Leticia Pearson, Priest on Campus (833-8295)

Good News in a hundred words or less

by Jenny Douglas

When I signed myself up to tutor in a lower-level, special education class at Martha Dendy Middle School, I was not exactly thrilled with the idea. Some people are gifted enough to work in a special education department; however, I did not think that I was one of those people. Yet, even from my first day in class, I knew that I was in the right place.

Timmy, Roger, Raichell, Kim, and Scott - they have really touched my life. Working with them, I know that I'm making a difference. Whether I am calling out spelling words or explaining a math problem, they appreciate my taking the time to come from PC to help them. Too many people forget about middle schoolers because they are no longer cute and little. But they, too, need and want your help.

PC accepts challenge to help world hunger

by Cynthia Seeliger
Guest Writer

Lately, the PC community has been noticeably concerned about world hunger. During the month of November, the Crop Walk/Run for Hunger, the Oxfam Fast, the world hunger poetry contest, and Church World Service representative Francis Daniel's sermon at chapel have all been attempts to raise campus awareness about world hunger.

On November 6, PC students, faculty, and staff gathered to walk around the intramural complex track, raising money for Church World Service's efforts against world hunger. SUB's Reggae Fest band entertained the walkers and runners. Crop Walk organizers rated the walk as a success, with 38 walkers and over $600 raised. The Crop Walk committee consisted of coordinator Cynthia Seeliger, Kelley Murphy, Jason Greer, Liz Foster, Chris Wingard, and Tonya Sneed, who raised $250 in pledges.

The topic of world hunger came to light at PC again when PC's Oxfam Fast kept nearly 400 students from their GDH suppers on November 18. Dining Hall Director Vernon Powell agreed to give half of the cost of each faster's would-be supper, which amounts to $2.25 per person, to Oxfam. Kim Gibson, coordinator of the fast, was pleased with the number of participants who refrained from eating for the sake of the starving.

Both Oxfam and Church World Service are organizations which seek not only to feed the hungry but also to prevent the causes of world hunger. They work in countries around the world to build economic self-reliance, to meet human needs through programs of social and economic development, and to help people organize and change the conditions that keep people poor.

A poetry contest at PC also raised awareness of the world's impoverished situation. Two faculty members and two students judged Richard Harris' "Pigeon Claws" as the best submission. Harris read his poem aloud from the bandstand during the reggae concert. Several students remarked that the reading challenged them and affected them profoundly.

The last event in PC's hunger awareness effort will be the visit of Francis Daniels, Church World Service's regional director. He will deliver the sermon at PC's chapel service at 11:00 am on Tuesday, November 24. During the service, the money raised during Crop Walk will be dedicated to Church World Service. All Crop Walk participants are heartily invited to come.

PC students walk in the 1992 Crop Walk for hunger at the PC Intramural fields.
photo by Lauren Owens

PC students speak Bluehosian

by Dennie Lynn Hill
Staff Columnist

I was recently talking with my brother about what was going on at school, when I realized that I spoke a foreign language. No, I didn't suddenly start speaking in tongues and anyone in my Spanish class could tell you it definitely wasn't Spanish, or the entire conversation would have been, "hola, adios, hola, adios," You get the idea. The language which I speak is what I have fondly named Bluehosian. But, don't think to yourself, this girl has lost it, because most of you speak it too. If you don't believe me, let me give you a sample of a PC conversation.

"Hey man, wassup?"

"nuttin'"

"jete!"

"yeah, GDH, jou?"

"No, man. Think we'll hit WalHo tonight."

"Gettin' Lost in the Supermarket at the house tonight."

"Oh, awesome, I'll run to Earl's and pick up some beast."

Next morning

"I swear I am never going to get that schnokered and do the Pondo-Shuffle again."

"Did you shack?"

"No, just a hook."

For the few of you that did not understand this conversation, let me interpret it for you.

"hello, my friend, what all is happening in your life?"

"Nothing to speak of."

"Did you eat?"

"yes, I dined at the Greenville Dining Hall, and you?"

"No, friend. We will be eating at the local Waffle House later this evening."

"The fraternity house will feature the band that originated at Washington and Lee, Lost in the Supermarket, tonight around 9:00."

"Golly, that sounds super. I think that I will go to the small market by the railroad tracks, Earl's E-Z Mart, and buy some Milwaukee's Best beer."

Next Morning

"I declare that I will never consume as many alcoholic beverages as I did last night and walk through a dew stung soccer field in the dead of night, stumble over dirt mounds, and run into stone cold bleachers ever again."

"By the way, my young collegiate friend, did you coerce any of your fellow classmates of the opposite sex to spend the night in your dorm room against the college's code of conduct that is clearly stated in your knapsack?"

"No, I decided to adhere to all college rules and just kiss the co-ed at the fraternity houses where all could see (i.e. she said no)."

So, do you speak Bluehosian?

Working to fight hunger in partnership with poor people around the world

Oxfam
America

Little Known Facts...

The Blue Hose were originally named the Blue Stockings. Coach Walter Johnson compared the nickname with the Chicago White Sox or Boston Red Sox. But others say the name comes from the term a "blue-Stocking Presbyterian" or "blue-Stocking Parliament" to mean someone with Strong puritan Learnings.

Source - The Spirit of PC
Hammett, 1982

The PC defense surrounds a Gardner-Webb ball carrier.

photo by Kim Gibson

Hose football taken down by Gardner-Webb, Carson-Newman

by Everett Catts
SPORTS EDITOR

On a warm Halloween day, in front of 3500 students, parents, and friends of PC, the Blue Hose football team crushed Wingate, 34-13. The PC offense, which has been inconsistent at times, exploded for 514 total yards, with 354 of them in rushing yards. Mason Gordon's six-yard run with 6:07 remaining in the first quarter made the score 6-0. Alex Horton's extra point made it 7-0.

In the second quarter, the scoring continued. With 10:59 left in the half, Chris Yonce ran the ball 11 yards for a touchdown. Horton's PAT made the score 14-0. With only 2:28 remaining in the half, Horton kicked a 40-yard field goal to give the Blue Hose a 17-0 lead. Wingate scored with 46 seconds to make the score 17-6. PC came back before halftime, with Horton's second field goal of the game—a 25-yard kick with one second remaining before halftime. The halftime score was 20-6.

After a scoreless third quarter by both teams, PC's Steve Gorrie scored on a three yard run with 13:50 remaining in the game. Horton's extra point made the score 26-6. Wingate scored with 10:58 left in the game, narrowing the Blue Hose lead to 26-13, but Wingate would be shut down for the rest of the game. PC increased its lead when Chris

Yonce ran for 57 yards to score with 6:38 remaining. Instead of kicking an extra point, the Blue Hose squad attempted a two-point conversion. Tim Davis' pass to Steve Gorrie made the score 34-13, which was the final.

Leading the way for PC was Mason Gordon, who had 19 carries for 151 yards rushing. Another triple-digit rusher was Chris Yonce, who had 110 yards on only 12 carries. Eric Byrd ran the ball 13 times for 69 yards. Brad Jones turned in a fine effort with four catches for 76 yards receiving.

The PC defense, which held Wingate to two touchdowns, was not overlooked in the game. Linebacker Tony Robertson, who had seven tackles, an interception, and a quarterback sack, was named both PC and State Defensive Player of the Week.

Two other awards were announced for the Wingate game. For his blocking, which opened holes for the Blue Hose rushing attack, center Tim Williams was named Offensive Player of the Week. Kicker Alex Horton, who had two field goals and extra points, was named Special Teams Player of the Week.

On November 7 PC lost to SAC rival Gardner-Webb, 46-13. Gardner-Webb, ranked third in the nation, took advantage of six Blue Hose turnovers. Tyrone Phillips, who returned an interception for a touchdown, and Todd Shearer, who also intercepted a pass, were the Defensive POWs. Steve Gorrie was Offensive POW.

Last weekend the Blue Hose travelled to Carson-Newman, another conference foe, but lost 34-17. Carson-Newman, ranked fifth in the nation, kept PC in poor field position throughout most of the game. The Blue Hose did have a 10-0 lead but could not hold off the Eagles. Jon Dow and Trent Smith were Defensive POWs, while the Offensive POW was John Edwards. Quincy Eigner, who blocked a punt for a touchdown, was announced Special Teams POW.

Head Coach John Perry commented on the team's level of play, saying, "We've made progress in a lot of areas. Our defense is much better, and our offense, even though sporadic, has improved. We've gotten better with every game."

When asked about the importance of winning the final game of the season, which is the final Thanksgiving Turkey Day Bronze Derby Classic, Perry said, "Always winning the last game is important to the off-season and recruiting. The tradition is a big rivalry and a big game for our team and has usually the biggest crowd of the year."

When asked about the importance of winning the final game of the season, which is the final Thanksgiving Turkey Day Bronze Derby Classic, Perry said, "Always winning the last game is important to the off-season and recruiting. The tradition is a big rivalry and a big game for our team and has usually the biggest crowd of the year."

Basketball team prepares for '92-'93 season

by Everett Catts
SPORTS EDITOR

The PC men's and women's 1992-93 basketball seasons are just around the corner, and both programs are excited. The men's team, last year's SAC tournament runner-up and ranked first in the pre-season conference poll, hosted the Kentucky Sports Crusaders in an exhibition game last night. Their first regular season home game is at 7:30 on Tuesday, November 24 against Lees-McRae. The Blue Hose men's team, which had a record of 18-13 last year, have all five of their starters back from last year. Junior center John Lloyd, senior forward Bret Jones, junior forward Derrick Lovelace, junior guard Andrew Wellman, and sophomore guard Mike Camacho will be starting for the Blue Hose.

When asked about the kinds of goals the team has set for the season, Head Coach Gregg Nibert said, "The only goals we've set are to go out there and play the absolute best we can. We did finish second last year and are not satisfied with being second."

After being asked how far the team can go, Nibert replied, "I think the key to this basketball team is how hungry, intense, and focused they are. It doesn't come down to the team that has the most talent but to the team that wants it the most and plays hardest. If they play well, they can control their destiny."

Finally, Nibert commented on the student support, saying, "The fans are the most important group of people. They are our sixth man on the team. I want the students to have a good time and enjoy the game. The more we have, the better."

The women's squad, with a 16-11 record in the 1991-92 season, is ranked fourth in the pre-season conference poll. The Lady Blue Hose played at Converse on November 24 and host the Little Four Tournament on December 2-3. On December 2 Newberry plays Wofford at 6:00 and PC will play Erskine at 8:00. The winners of the 6:00 and 8:00 games will play each other in the championship game on the following day.

After losing four seniors, the women's team has three returning starters: junior center Shannon Trammel, sophomore forward Melanie Johnson, and junior guard Jennifer Hilliard.

single one of his teammates. And he smiled all the while.

Off the field as well as on, Marcus was very much a "stand up guy." That is, he took responsibilities upon his own shoulders and never had an excuse for anything. He never needed one. He was a person who did things his own way, never seeking the approval of anyone and never ceasing to flash that smile.

Marcus was one of the few people that I have ever met whose positive attributes I wish I could better imitate and whose loss I could grieve as the loss of one of the best and truest friends that I have ever had. But since the odds were not in my favor that my life would bring me one thousand miles from my home in Massachusetts to Clinton, where I would meet a Black person from Donalds, South Carolina, who would become the only person within my age group that I have ever looked up to, I have reason to do as Marcus would do, and smile.

Men's soccer falls short in SAC-8 finals

by Brian Sacco
STAFF WRITER

After capturing the regular season SAC title, the Blue Hose soccer team rolled into the tournament with another title in mind. PC defeated Wingate in the first round and Elon in the semi-finals but was defeated for the title in a double overtime game against Lenoir-Rhyne.

Coach Ralph Polson stated, "We accomplished more this season than anyone could have expected."

In the opening round of the SAC tournament, the Blue Hose defeated Wingate 4-0. Shannon Brown, Todd Chandler, Dan Walbolt, and John Mairs scored for PC, while Christ Napior, Will Lindstrom, Richard Wright, and Chris Bruno added assists. The Blue Hose controlled the game with 38 shots, allowing the regular starters to sit out the second half. With the victory, PC set a new school record with nine shutouts.

The Blue Hose tackled Elon College in the semi-finals and came out victorious 4-3 in double overtime. Mark Albertus saved one PK for the Blue Hose in a thrilling game. In the finals, PC took on Lenoir-Rhyne, who shut down the Blue Hose and scored with six minutes left in the second overtime to defeat PC.

By virtue of their SAC regular season title, PC advanced to the District 26 semi-finals and confronted Belmont Abbey College. PC fell to Belmont Abbey 3-0, finishing the season with a 15-4-3 record.

"Belmont Abbey was possibly the best team we have played all season," commented Polson.

The Blue Hose have accomplished many noteworthy achievements this season. Along with being named first team All-SAC and All-Tournament team members, Lindstrom and Napior were also named to the first team All-District. Lindstrom was named SAC Player of the Year and Tournament MVP.

Jason Woodall, Michael Martin, Norman de Waart, and Albertus were named to the Second Team All-SAC, and Brown and Jason Beuchler were named to the All-Tournament Team.

Polson was pleased with the outstanding play of the seniors and their commitment to the success of the program. He cited that the seniors were responsible for fifty-four of his victories at PC. The Blue Hose finished the season ranked 21 in the nation and 3 in Area 8.

Women's soccer completes season

by Amanda Bowers
STAFF WRITER

The Presbyterian women's soccer team ended its 1992 season with a winning record of 14-7. After winning their last regular season game against Queens College, they went on to play four post-season games. Winning the first round of the conference playoffs against Wingate by a score of 6-0, the Lady Blue Hose defeated Catawba in the conference semi-finals, 5-1.

The team then suffered a 3-0 loss to Elon College in the conference tournament finals. Advancing to the Districts because they were conference co-champions, the squad played its last game of post-season on November 3 at Coker College. The Blue Hose were defeated, 1-0.

Nevertheless, Head Coach Brian Purcell was pleased with his team's performance. He commented, "We outplayed Coker throughout the game, but we had a difficult time scoring."

Several players received awards this season, and Coach Purcell was named both Conference and District Coach of the Year. Christi Flack, Charity Brazeal, and Missy Butler were named to the first-team All-Conference, and Nicole Druse and Kathleen Dowd were second team All-Conference selections. The SAC Freshman of the Year award went to Charity Brazeal, while the Conference Player of the Year award went to Missy Butler. PC players that were named to the All-District Team include Flack, Brazeal, Butler, and Dowd. Butler was also named District Player of the Year.

Reflecting on the season, Coach Purcell said, "I am a little disappointed about the way it ended, but I'm excited about the program." He went on to say that all twenty players will be returning next season and the team should be equally as good as it was this year, if not better.

Purcell also commented on the final record of 14-7 by saying, "Of the seven games we lost, only two of the teams we played were significantly better than us: Mercer and Lynn University, the number one team in the country."

Co-captain Nicki Soderberg also commented on the season by saying, "Even though the season ended sooner than expected, overall it was a positive season because of how far we came."

Intramural News

by Brian Sacco
STAFF WRITER

The Intramural Department would like to congratulate this year's intramural soccer champions: Men's A-League - KA, Men's B-League - Theta Chi I, Men's C-League - Chicos Malos; Women's League - Beatty House.

The Sports Trophy standings are as follows:

Men's A-League - Pi Kappa Phi (180)

Theta Chi (140)

Men's B-League - Theta Chi (120) Org. Jack (80)

Women's League - Theta Chi Rush

Girls (140) ADP (100) ZTA (100) Beatty House (100)

The First Annual Intramural Sports Trivia Tournament took place Monday night in Springs Campus Center. Over seventy participants took part in the contest that consisted of one hundred questions from all facets of the sports world.

The champions were the "7th Inning Stretch Marks," a team which consisted of Grant Vosburgh, Jim Morton, and Steve Owens. Some disgruntled students voiced the opinion that the "older" champions should be ineligible because they were alive when the trivia took place.

In any case, the contest was a success and the Intramural Department thanks all who participated.

Lady Blue Hose spike opponents for SAC-8 title

by Brian Sacco
STAFF WRITER

Playing on their home court, the Lady Blue Hose volleyball team captured the SAC tournament title after finishing second, with a 6-1 record, in the regular season SAC rankings.

Led by tournament MVP Dionne Williams and All-Tournament teammate Lisa Kimbrell, the team moved through the tournament unscathed and finished with a 32-6 post-tournament record.

Head Coach Beth Couture stated, "Key defensive plays carried us through the tournament, mainly by Senior Christi Wynn and Freshman Kristy Tarallo."

The following weekend, the Lady Blue Hose travelled to the District 26 Tournament. The Lady Hose defeated St. Andrews College (15-7, 15-7, 15-9) but fell short against Elon College in the finals (5-15, 9-15, 15-17). The loss ended the Blue Hose season, but Kimbrell and Williams were named to the All-District team.

The team ended the season with a 33-7 record, and Couture was extremely pleased with the players' efforts. "We weren't really sure about how successful we would be this season, but as our confidence grew we achieved our usual level of success."

Couture cited the great leadership and tradition that was displayed throughout the season. She also indicated that the consistent play of Jennifer Smith on sets and Kelly Brown and Lori Suit in the back was a strength.

Kimbrell and Williams were named to the first team All-SAC, while Ashley Jenkins was selected to the second team All-SAC.

PC Senior Christi Wynn prepares for an opponent's serve.

photo by Kim Gibson

Miller remembered as one who never ceased to 'flash that smile'

by Greg Desto
GUEST WRITER

When Marcus Miller passed away on October 20, the Presbyterian College community and the world lost more than a great athlete and more than a well-liked student. Lost was a quality person who was true to himself and to everyone who knew him, and lost was a rare human being who was never too busy to smile.

Though a .300 hitter and the steadiest fielder in the Blue Hose infield, Marcus's value went well beyond the physical. Marcus was a likely captain for the upcoming season, the player to whom others turned when a big hit or a big defensive play was needed, and a person who was looked to for instruction and advice.

His baseball ability, as well as his straightforward approach to the game, earned him the confidence and respect of every

Vegetarianism expresses care for the environment

by Heather Moncrief
ENVIRONMENT EDITOR

Evidence of humans eating other animals can be found for all periods of humankind. While a majority of Americans are raised believing that healthy eating is attained only by including animal products in the diet, such misconceptions have been frequently disproved. Millions of human beings lead long, healthy, and productive lives without eating animal flesh.

Not only is such a vegetarian diet healthy for an individual, it is also healthy for the Earth. Meat causes our entire environment to suffer; it suffers from such things as overgrazing, water pollution and waste, topsoil erosion, and rainforest deforestation. The production of animals for human consumption wastes energy as well as plant food resources.

The leading cause of water pollution in the U.S. is agriculture. A majority of these impurities are from livestock manure. The extensive system of feedlots in the United States is the main cause of this problem. A feedlot is a small space containing hundreds to thousands of domesticated livestock. While large amounts of energy are put into these feedlots, great quantities of animal wastes come out. Portions of these wastes are washed into surface water, contaminating it with excess nitrates and other plant nutrients as well as with disease-causing bacteria.

Water is also wasted in the production process. More than half of all water used in our country is used in livestock production. Two thousand five hundred gallons of water are required in the production of one pound of beef, and the amount of water needed to feed an animal-eater for one month could feed a total vegetarian for over a year. It should also be noted that fifty times more fossil fuels are required to produce an animal-centered diet than a vegetarian diet.

As American-based companies and companies from other developed countries seek cheap beef, forests around the globe are destroyed. Forty percent of all Central American rainforests were converted into pasture land for beef cattle between 1960 and 1985. The beef from these once-fertile rainforests is sold to our country for use in such items as hamburgers, pet food, baby foods, frozen dinners, and luncheon meats. Five cents wholesale on a hamburger is saved by fast-food chains using imported beef rather than domestic beef, and fifty-five square feet of rainforest are destroyed for each of these burgers made from Central American cattle. While companies claim not to purchase this imported beef, it is impossible to track the imported beef's course once it enters the domestic market. Claims can be neither proven nor disproven.

Many conservationists believe that a labeling system for the imported beef needs to be mandated. Five cents' savings and the loss of fifty-five square feet for a single burger seem monstrous when compared to a sparing of an acre of trees each year for each individual who converts to a beefless, animal-less diet.

While famine exists in lesser developed countries, livestock in the more developed countries are fed very well using high percentages of the world's food resources. Approximately half of the world's yearly production of grain and a third of the world's yearly fish catches are used by the more developed countries to feed livestock. The grains and fish which could feed human beings are rerouted to fatten livestock. Put into simpler terms, if Americans were to lower their consumption of meat by just ten percent, twelve million more tons of grain would be available to feed each of the sixty million humans who starve to death each year.

Large amounts of energy are used in the production of food. Seventeen percent of the annual commercial energy in the United States is expended on the country's vast agriculture system. A majority of the plant crops yield a greater amount of food energy than the amount of energy (mainly from fossil fuels) used to grow them. However, the process of raising animals for food requires much greater amounts of fossil fuel energy than is supplied by the animals as food energy. Despite this waste of energy, livestock graze on a third of the land in this country and more than half of the country's croplands are planted with feed for this livestock. Rather than focusing on less wasteful, high-yield food sources such as vegetables, the country focuses on wasteful, low-yield, and expensive animal sources such as cattle.

While land is disrupted, animals are domesticated and slaughtered for human consumption. The environmental care is there, but for most people the conviction is not. Until individuals learn to make sacrifices for the preservation of the environment and to look beyond national borders, the conditions around the globe will continue to worsen.

Vegetarianism: What is it all about?

by Heather Moncrief
ENVIRONMENT EDITOR

Vegetarianism can stem from concern for the environment, for animal rights, and for one's health as well as from religious beliefs. As a fourth-year vegetarian, my reasons are both environmentally based and animal-rights centered. After reading many books, articles, and magazines which focused on the waste of energy and the destruction of the environment caused by livestock production as well as on the cruel treatment of animals and the introduction of foreign hormones into their systems, I was able to easily alter my diet to exclude animal products. I now exclude such items as meat, eggs, and gelatin, which is derived from horse hooves.

I have done much research to ensure my own good health. Professional studies have revealed that healthier, longer lives are attained by a varied diet, adequate but not in excess of calories, high in complex carbohydrates and vegetables, and low in fat (especially animal fat) and salt. The traditional four food groups are being replaced by researchers with new nutritional guidelines that are understandable and easy to follow and which exclude animal products.

The guidelines which I tend to follow are from Laurel's Kitchen, a vegetarian cookbook and guidebook. The food families defined in this book are as follows:

whole grains, super-vegetables, high-carbohydrate vegetables, low-calorie vegetables, legumes, dairy foods (optional), nuts and seeds, fruit, and eggs (optional). To obtain adequate protein and other nutrients, a vegetarian's daily consumption should include four servings of whole-grain foods and three servings of vegetables, including one of the super-vegetables such as dark leafy greens, pea pods, brussels sprouts, broccoli, or okra. A serving of a super-vegetable, legumes (cooked dry beans, lentils, or split peas), or dairy foods should also be consumed daily.

Many do not realize that there are different degrees of vegetarianism. These are as follows:

*Semi-vegetarian- Diet consists of fruits, grains, legumes, nuts, seeds, vegetables, dairy products, eggs, chicken, and fish.

*Pesco-vegetarian- Diet consists of fruits, grains, legumes, nuts, seed, vegetables, dairy products, eggs, and fish.

*Lacto-ovo-vegetarian- Diet consists of fruits, grains, legumes, nuts, seeds, vegetables, dairy products, eggs, and fish.

*Lacto-vegetarian- Diet consists of fruits, grains, legumes, nuts, seeds, vegetables, and dairy products.

*Ovo-vegetarian- Diet includes fruits, grains, legumes, nuts, seeds, vegetables, and eggs.

*Vegan- Diet includes fruits, grains, legumes, nuts, seeds, and vegetables.

A vegetarian diet allows me to express my environmental convictions and my compassion for our neighboring inhabitants. I do not expect all of the Blue Stocking readers to throw down their papers and become die-hard vegetarians on the spot, but I do hope that more thought will go into an individual's eating habits.

The following list of restaurants in the Greenville area which offer vegetarian meals was received from the Greenville Vegetarian Society.

Annie's Natural Cafe downtown Greenville
Pita House Pleasantburg Drive, restaurant and market
Sophisticated Palate downtown
Spaghetti Warehouse East Broad St.
Tabu South downtown Greenville
Continental Cafe
Block House
Cafe St. John
McGuffey's
Olive Garden
Boston Pizza
Plaza Diner
Ruby Tuesdays
Applebees
O'Charlies
Subway

Vegetarian Potluck

The Greenville Vegetarian Society's next meeting is Tuesday, December 1. This meeting will be a potluck dinner. PC students, faculty, and staff members who are vegetarians or are interested in travelling to this meeting should contact Heather Moncrief at 833-9515 or Lauren Owings at ext. 8914.

Depending on the number of people interested, a carpool may be organized. It should be a fun evening and a good meal, too!

SUB's Reggae Fest stirs up interest among PC students

by Camisha Clarke
ENTERTAINMENT EDITOR

A week of haunting rain preceding an upcoming outdoor event would make any organization cringe, including the Student Union Board (SUB). On Friday, November 6th, SUB sponsored its 3rd annual Fall Fling with an added twist to attract even the least active members of the student body: a reggae band.

The days passed slowly as members of SUB began to wonder about the outcome and changes brought about from a damp Friday. Tuesday and Wednesday were not encouraging, considering the constant showers and chilling temperatures. Thursday was the last hope! Unfortunately, Thursday, too, was filled with disappointing rain and muddy shoes.

With the welcomed sunshine on Friday morning came dry land and the rebirth of hope. Fall Fling: Reggae Fest took place as scheduled on the Intramural Complex later that afternoon.

J. Warren Sloane, co-chair of the SUB Dance and Big Weekends Committee, which funded and organized the event, expressed his enthusiasm for using a reggae band. Sloane believes that reggae music "revived Fall Fling because it's been a failure for the past two years." Attracting approximately 200 to 250 people on the intramural complex, this event could easily be called a success.

"One Drop Plus," the popular reggae band out of Atlanta, Georgia, gave an outstanding performance. Freshman Heidi Gramling spoke highly of the performance.

even better.

In addition to using the traditional media for advertising, SUB took a few extra steps towards a successful event. Since the Campus Center office. Freshman Meg Whiten said, "The t-shirts were terrific. I think the bright colors caught everyone's attention and brought interest to them."

There was also a good response financially to the selling of Dominos Pizza and novelty items at Reggae Fest.

Also, spoons advertising Reggae Fest and the ever-popular Bob Marley song "Stir It Up" were placed in mailboxes. Sophomore Rebecca Babcock thought that the spoons were an effective and memorable means of advertisement.

"It was an original idea that really got people's attention. It made people remember the purpose of the message better, instead of a flier which people throw away without even reading," says Babcock.

In the future, Sloane feels that "lots of advertisement [and] a positive attitude" will improve the students' responses to future SUB events, which will likely consist of a variety of bands performing either reggae, jazz, dance, blues, or rock music.

Like all SUB events, Reggae Fest "[look] a lot of hard work and planning," according to Sloane. He is looking forward to Winter Formal, the next event sponsored by the Dance and Big Weekends Committee. Winter Formal, scheduled for Saturday, February 6, 1993, will include a well-known dance band and a DJ.

A group of PC students groove to the beat of One Drop Plus at the recent Reggae Fest.

photo by Lauren Owings

"I thought the band did a really good job," said Gramling. "One Drop Plus" performed some popular songs such as hits by the great Bob Marley and the Melody Makers and Ziggy Marley. Many song requests were made, which made the concert majority of the student body is "poster blind." SUB used eye-catching red, green, and gold posters which quickly disappeared from boards and walls all over campus. The t-shirts, which are similar in appearance to the posters, are being sold for $8 in the Springs

Into the night with Terry's!

15% discount on your next meal at Terry's.

Offer not good with other specials or coupons.
Must present coupon at the time of purchase
Expires 12-3-92

BURN VICTIM.

Madrigal Dinner-Concert marks 27 years of Christmas tradition

by Maxwell Vallotton
STAFF WRITER

If you are looking for a different way to celebrate the holiday season this year, you might want to experience the strolling minstrels, brass fanfares, jester's pranks, Morris dancers, instrumentalists, and the magic of the traditional style of "Merrie Olde England."

The 27th annual Madrigal Dinner-Concert will be held on December 4 and 5 at 7:30 pm in Greenville Dining Hall. The event will feature PC's Madrigal Singers as well as a dinner that will include roasted beef, native English cheeses, Yorkshire pudding, and plum pudding.

Tickets are available for both performances at a price of $15 per person. Tickets may be obtained by sending a check made payable to Madrigal Singers to Madrigal Singers, Presbyterian College, Clinton, SC 29325. A self-addressed, stamped envelope should be included so that tickets may be mailed back.

Reservations will only be acknowledged at the door. All reservations for both performances must be made by Friday, November 27. Table assignments for groups and parties wishing to sit together will be arranged provided reservations are made at the same time. No refunds after November 24 and no reservations will be made by telephone.

The Madrigal Dinner-Concert has become an annual Christmas tradition for the PC community. This year's performances are set for December 4 and 5 at 7:30 pm in Greenville Dining Hall.
photo courtesy of Public Relations

Upcoming CEP Events

Student Directed One-Act Play Series - November 20/21 at 7:30 pm
Douglas House Theater

PC Choir Fall Concert - November 22 at 8:15 pm
Edmunds Hall

PC Wind Ensemble Fall Concert - November 24 at 8:15 pm
Belk Auditorium

Convocation with Dr. James Leavell - December 1 at 11:00 am
(Dr. Leavell will speak on Japanese traditional values and their contemporary influence.)
Belk Auditorium

Madrigal Dinner-Concert - December 4/5 at 7:30 pm
Greenville Dining Hall

Convocation on International Studies - December 8 at 11:00 am (Presentation by PC students who have studied abroad.)
Belk Auditorium

PC Choir to present fall concert

by Elizabeth Cunard
STAFF WRITER

The forty-one voice Presbyterian College Choir will present a fall concert on Sunday, November 22, at 8:15 pm in Edmunds Hall. The performance is a CEP event.

The mixed choir will sing a wide variety of selections from the early Baroque Period to the present day. Featured composers will be John Amner, Johann W. Frank, Thomas Hastings, Charles Villiers Stanford, Pavel Tchesnokov, Laszlo Halmos, and Kenneth Jennings. Folk arrangements and spirituals will round out the mostly sacred program.

Soloists will include Senior Elizabeth Bryan, Junior David E. Long, Sophomore Catherine Hodges, and Freshman Brad Drake. Dr. Karen Eshelman, assistant professor of music, will accompany the Stanford "Gloria in Excelsis," and Christy Smitherman, a senior from Marietta, Georgia, will provide other accompaniments. Dr. Charles T. Gaines, Charles A. Dana Professor of Music, is conductor of the choir. Gaines has taught at Presbyterian College since 1965. He is also Director of Music at First Presbyterian Church in Greenwood and is the founder and director of the Laurens County Chorale. Gaines is a member of the American Choral Directors Association and recently was chair of the third annual South Carolina Intercollegiate Choir. Gaines is also Vice-President for Membership of the South Carolina Music Teachers Association.

The PC Choir is not solely composed of music majors but also incorporates students from several fields of study. The choir has performed in churches throughout the Southeast and has performed in Europe on several tours.

INTERVIEW SUITS
STARTING AT $200

The Men's Shop
PUBLIC SQUARE LAURENS

Need Papers Typed?

$1.50 per page.
Contact Neely at 8641

"Give the people the light, so they may find the way."

Volume LXXXVII Number 5

PRESBYTERIAN COLLEGE

Clinton, South Carolina 29325

Friday, December 4, 1992

PC students prepare for the holidays in different ways. Kathryn Elliot gets into the spirit by helping with Westminster Fellowship's Christmas gift-making workshop, which was held at First Presbyterian this past Wednesday. photo by Kim Gibson

PC Registrar resigns to take NC job Search begins for Gash's replacement

by Jason West
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

As of December 23, 1992, Presbyterian College will be without a Registrar and Assistant Dean.

Dr. Bill Gash, who presently holds those two titles, has announced his resignation in order to take the position of Assistant Vice Chancellor for Academic Affairs at Pembroke State University in Pembroke, North Carolina.

Gash's resignation was announced in a prepared memo by PC's Vice President for Academic Affairs Dr. Bill Moncrief. "Although I am sure all of us hate to see him (Gash) leave, I hope you will join me in wishing him well in his new position," said Moncrief in the memo.

According to Moncrief, a decision about how the search for a new registrar will be conducted has not been determined as of yet. "When an officer of the college leaves, we usually redefine the job description somewhat. As PC changes, the positions and responsibilities of the college's officers change," said Moncrief.

Presently, the registrar is responsible for keeping all official records of the college, including each student's records on courses, admissions material, and registration. In addition, the registrar is responsible for certification of transfer and transient work and conducts the foreign study program. The registrar's office is also responsible for conducting senior audits.

"We intend to move as quickly as possible in order to find a replacement for Dr. Gash. However, we will move with deliberate speed. We want to make sure we get the right person for the job," added Moncrief.

Dr. Bill Gash file photo

Until a replacement can be found, Assistant Registrar Flo Dowdle will take the primary responsibility for the office. Moncrief states that he is ultimately responsible for all action in the registrar's office and that he and Dowdle might have to "double up" with the work load.

Even though PC may have to function without a registrar for a while, Moncrief does not expect students to be inconvenienced. "I don't really see where there will be a problem. Registration will go smoothly, and most students will probably not notice," he said.

"However, students may have to be more understanding and patient since we might be having an extra work load in the registrar's office," added Moncrief.

On The Inside

Page 3 . . .

Blue Stocking Features Editor Martha Lynn Smith travels to Laurens, South Carolina, to visit with the "Doll Lady."

Page 3 . . .

PC students share their favorite Christmas traditions.

Press Release
OFFICE OF PUBLIC RELATIONS

When ancient Greeks gathered every four years for the Olympic Games, they vied for the thrill of competition in sports, music, and literature. The winner was awarded a crown made of wild olive branches.

When the world's best athletes compete in the modern Olympic Games, they are vying for much more than gold, silver, or bronze medals. To those victors go spoils such as lucrative endorsements, television offers, and fat professional contracts.

Renowned sports authors and media commentators like Frank Deford, John Feinstein, and Dr. Harry Edwards will attempt to bridge the gap between Mount Olympus and Atlanta during the 1993 Arnold Symposium of the Russell Program on "Sports and the Media," scheduled for February 15 - 17, 1993, at Presbyterian College.

Arnold Symposium to focus on 'Sports and the Media'

The symposium will open at 7:30 pm on Monday, February 15, when a faculty panel discusses "The Traditional Role of Sports: The Original Idea Before It Became a Media Obsession," in Edmunds Hall. Chairing the panel will be Assistant Professor of Psychology Dr. Diane Finley, a former college athlete and coach who has performed research in sports psychology.

Feinstein, author of the best-selling sports books A Season on the Brink and A Season Inside, will open events on Tuesday, February 16, when he addresses "What the Media Have Done to Sports," at 11:00 am in Belk Auditorium. Feinstein has appeared regularly on ESPN's acclaimed program "The Sports Reporters."

Topics ranging from how television contracts affect professional sports leagues to the relationship between athletes and the media will be fair game during a roundtable discussion featuring athletes and members of the media. Serving as moderator will be Deford, former editor of the now defunct all-sports newspaper The National, writer for Sports Illustrated, author, and commentator on National Public Radio. The discussion will begin at 2:00 pm in Edmunds Hall.

Dr. Margaret Duncan will present a slide lecture at 4:00 pm in Edmunds Hall on "Women, Sports, and the Media." Duncan is the author of Sports Images and Sexual Differences: Images of Women and Men in the 1984 and 1988 Olympic Games, written about how the media have depicted women Olympians.

Beginning at 7:30 pm in Edmunds Hall, Dr. Edwards will focus on "The Media's Effect on Racial Issues in Sports." Dr. Edwards serves as a consultant for Major League Baseball on minority issues and is the leading authority on minority-related issues of pro sports management and college academic-athletic reforms.

Spring Break trip offers chance for PC to make a positive difference

by LeJeanna Maddox
MANAGING EDITOR

Last Wednesday marked the official end of hurricane season for the Atlantic Seaboard and the Gulf Coast. But that end came only after a number of hurricanes wreaked havoc in several areas of the United States. Approximately 100,900 families were displaced from their homes as a result of Hurricane Andrew, and many of those people will spend the holidays in tent villages without the luxuries of indoor plumbing or electricity. By some estimates, it will take $22 billion and at least ten years to rebuild the devastated areas.

Such natural disasters leave us disillusioned, craving for some reassurance of a prevailing order. Perhaps the best way to respond to such a trauma is to attempt to find - or to create - some positive aspect. That's exactly what a group of PC students, faculty, and staff will be doing this March during Spring Break, as they travel to South Miami to participate in clean-up efforts organized by the Presbyterian Church.

Aside from having a number of students who were directly affected by the storm, PC has another coincidental connection with the Dade County area. Rev. Sally Campbell-Evans, who is a 1983 graduate of PC, has been hired by the Presbytery of Tropical Florida as the Project Coordinator for hurricane relief efforts.

On a recent visit to the area, PC's Dr. Bob Smith met with Campbell-Evans and discussed the possibility of PC's sending a group to aid in the clean-up efforts. He returned to campus and immediately formed a committee to organize the effort. Laura Smith, a student member of the planning committee, sees the trip as serving a dual purpose.

"The trip is one special way to exercise our motto of Dum Vivimus Servimus, especially since PC has various interests in the area," she said. "It will also be a good opportunity for students, faculty, and staff to interact in a different environment than their campus roles demand. What an opportunity! Where else can you get dirty with your fellow students and professors?"

The trip is open to anyone who is interested, and people from every aspect of campus life are encouraged to participate. The estimated cost is only $100, as the Presbyterian Church USA will provide a large percentage of the transportation and housing needs. Members of the PC group will be housed in a Presbyterian church in South Miami.

The group will leave PC on the first Friday of Spring Break and will travel approximately half of the distance that day. If the weather cooperates, they will spend Saturday on the beaches near Daytona and will make the remainder of the trip to Miami on Sunday. They will return to campus on the last Friday of the break.

One of the greatest advantages of attending a small, liberal arts college is undoubtedly the opportunity to interact in small group situations: to communicate intellectually; to develop a social consciousness; to grow through shared, though sometimes painful, experiences; and to learn from others who have diverse talents to offer. Are you interested in taking part in this unique opportunity to tap into PC's immense resources and to create something positive from apparent disaster? Contact Dr. Bob Smith, Laura Smith, LeJeanna Maddox, or Dr. Ron Burnside before you go home for Christmas.

Historic symbols often cause unnecessary racial misunderstandings

by Neely Loring
GUEST WRITER

There has been much controversy surrounding the Confederate Battle Flag as well as the "X" symbol many people are wearing today. It seems these issues have swirled their way into becoming a hot social and racial issue in the South. Opposing groups declare "Heritage, Not Hate," versus a single "X," which honors Malcolm X and his moves toward racial equality. Both of these symbols are tainted with racial history.

What are our social responsibilities, and how are we to be leaders in these issues of growing racial tension? I use the words "racial tension" carefully because I think that before a problem can be solved, one must first recognize what he or she is dealing with. The Confederate Battle Flag flew over a nation that held human beings forcibly in bondage, based only on their skin color. The "X" symbol commemorates a man who supported racial equality enforced "by any means necessary." In both symbols, we find that violence abounds.

What is really the point of these symbols? I see the Confederate Battle Flag as the flag that my forefathers fought under to protect their home. This flag has a symbolic, honorable meaning in fighting for home, in fighting for what it meant to be a Southern Gentleman, and in fighting for other lofty ideals. However, this view is not shared by all. Many people consider the Confederate Battle Flag not as a symbol of honor but as a symbol of barbarism; not commemorating attributes of a gentleman, but commemorating attributes of a tyrant; not beholding lofty ideals, but beholding shallow, self-satisfying, immoral positions against humankind. The cases are the same for the "X," except one must note that Caucasians were never slaves in this land, as some of our fellow Americans' forefathers were.

It is in the statement "not shared by all" that our social responsibility resides. Our First Amendment rights grant us the right to express ourselves, but is that expression socially responsible if it directly alienates segments of our great nation? I say no! We should find other symbols that embody the good aspects of what the Confederate Battle Flag and the "X" stand for without using symbols that have the taint of racism. Even the honorable Robert E. Lee said that he was opposed to slavery; he took a commission in the CSA army because he could not fight against his home state of Virginia. Malcolm X did not believe wholeheartedly in violence, for there was no violent revolution. I make no argument that the Confederate Battle Flag does not suggest some good ideals. The "X" symbol, too, has some good connotations of a just society of equality between the races. We do need symbols that stand for these ideas and which are symbols of our heritage. Maybe we could try the flag of the United States of America. It is time we unload the dark side of our past and present: slavery, violence, segregation, racism, discrimination, etc. It is our social responsibility to make moves to honor our fellow men and women, to dissolve issues of alienation to others, and to become people who are leaders of our generation in the fight against the ills imposed upon others. I have chosen not to fly my Confederate Battle Flag. If you choose to fly your flag or wear your "X" hat or shirt, think first of how it might make someone else feel. Maybe exercising these rights would be best if done in private.

Laurens resident 'dolls' up her house to celebrate Christmas season

by Martha Lynn Smith
FEATURES EDITOR

"It's beginning to look a lot like Christmas."

The sights and the sounds of the merriest time of the year are abounding. "People laughing, children clapping," and the most famous house in Laurens "is dressed in holiday style."

Those PC students who aren't familiar with Marie Snow's house in Laurens just haven't been very observant when driving to see a dollar movie or to buy boxers at Bargain Bucks.

Not that one would have to be very observant. When Marie Snow decorates her house for Christmas, she creates a spectacle of music, lights, toys, and DOLLS that is as festive as the season can possibly be.

"I set all this up at Thanksgiving," she told Ron Mixon and me when we interviewed her on Tuesday. It sometimes takes two days for her to put this ensemble together.

"This year I had my nephew come and help me with the wiring," she laughs, thankfully nodding her blond head with a hairdo that matches that of her dolls.

Ms. Snow's dolls stand proudly among a menagerie of lights, unsel, toy cats, Santa Clauses, and reindeer. Somewhere in there she has a small box for donations. She also permeates the night air with Christmas music.

dolls all of her 47 years. The most prized dolls of her collection are the ones that she received from her family when she was a angel on somebody's front lawn. I just took the idea from that," she said.

Laurens resident Marie Snow enjoys decorating her house for Christmas with a wide collection of dolls. Snow's decorative style has been featured on several local television stations and on the "Real People" show.

This year's selection is the Andy Williams Christmas Album.

"Boy," she said. "I'd love to play Elvis, though."

Ms. Snow has been collecting these child. Her inspiration for her yearly creation came from the times she would ride around Greenville with her family and look at the Christmas decorations.

"I saw a doll that looked just like an

It really is beginning to look a lot like Christmas.

PC students share their favorite Christmas traditions and customs

by Kim Rabon
STAFF WRITER

Amidst the unbearable stress of final exams, the writing of term papers, and end-of-year organizational Christmas parties, which always seem to come at one time, PC students are sustained by thoughts of special holiday events and traditions which give the season meaning.

Tracey Pierre admits that her favorite part of the holiday season is the preparation. "I enjoy baking Christmas cookies with my mom," she says.

John Threadgill also likes the "getting ready" part of Christmas. "Decorating the tree is my favorite activity of the season. Everyone gets ornaments that have been collected for years and puts them on the tree. The tree is beautiful when it's finished," he says.

A number of students indicated that being back home with family is their favorite part of Christmas. "Christmas is when our whole family gets together and it isn't a sad time," said Jonathan Robinson.

"I love being with my family and seeing friends that I have not seen in a while," says Kathym Elliott.

Todd Johnson also enjoys being with family. "The best part of the holidays is exchanging gifts on Christmas morning with my family," he says.

According to Keley Lucas, Grandma's house is the best place to have is having the whole family over at my Grandmother's house," he says.

"We always exchange gifts and see relatives that we haven't seen in a while," says Laurie Fleming.

Several students enjoy those traditions which occur on Christmas Eve. "The best part of Christmas for me is having my neighbor's family and my family together on Christmas Eve," says Ian Twombly.

"My favorite part of Christmas is the candlelight service at my church on Christmas Eve," said Charissa Cleckler.

Helen Moore adds that her family attends a Christmas service and then goes in search of lights. "After the service, my family and I ride around my neighborhood and look at the Christmas lights," she says.

No matter what you do this Christmas, whether you are with your family or friends, make sure that you enjoy your own special holiday traditions.

The Blue Stocking of Presbyterian College
Clinton, South Carolina, 29325
Volume LXXXVII, Number 5
December 4, 1992

Editor-in-Chief.....Jason West
Managing Editor.....LeJeanna Maddox
News Editor.....Ricky Dill
Politics Editor.....Ted Carmichael
Sports Editor.....Everette Catts
Entertainment Editor.....Camisha Clarke
Features Editor.....Martha Lynn Smith
Environment Editor.....Heather Moncrief
Photography Editor.....Kim Gibson
Layout Editor.....Angela Richardson

Advertising Editor.....Ann Mayfield
Subscriptions Editor.....Ron Mixon
Artist.....Michael Christensen

Photography Staff
Kimberlee Gibson Todd Love

Staff Writers

Elizabeth Cunard Amanda Bowers
Leigh Hearnburg Katherine Bonner
Kristina Pruitt Cher Fulbright
Paula Warren Michelle Cantey
Brian Sacco Shelly Phipps
Kim Rabon Jamey Pate
Tobin Turner Tonya Sneed

The Blue Stocking is a tri-weekly student publication of Presbyterian College. The paper serves as a forum of news and opinion of regional and national concern. For advertising, contact The Blue Stocking, Presbyterian College, Box 1061, Clinton, SC 29325. The Blue Stocking welcomes letters to the editor from all members of the PC community. Signatures are required. Letters are printed on a space available basis. The Blue Stocking reserves the right to edit all letters for proper grammar and punctuation. The final deadline for submitting letters is Friday at 12:00 pm on the week before publication.

SUB plans candlelight trip to Biltmore Estate

by Camisha Clarke
ENTERTAINMENT EDITOR

Nearly a hundred years ago, George Vanderbilt welcomed guests into his home on Christmas Eve to share the warmth and spectacular wonder of his grand Victorian vacation home known as Biltmore Estate.

Located in Asheville, North Carolina, the Biltmore Estate, with its traditional sights and sounds of the season, continues to extend the cordiality of a traditional Victorian Christmas.

Continuing the tradition of the past three years, the Student Union Board (SUB) Travel Committee is sponsoring an evening candlelight visit to the Biltmore Estate this Sunday. With a maximum of 15 spaces available for PC students, SUB will be accepting names in the Springs office at the special group rate of $12 on a first-come-first-serve basis. Those who are going will leave from the Springs parking lot at 1:00 pm and will return around 11:00 pm Sunday night.

Preceding the candlelight tour, the students will indulge in a Victorian holiday feast at the Deepark Restaurant. This full-course holiday meal recreates the elegance of fine dining in Victorian fashion.

Lee McAbee, SUB Travel Committee Chairperson, is expecting an enriching "cultural experience" with all the amenities of the season: the warm glow of candles, rich velvet ribbon, and evergreen garnish banisters.

Returning to Biltmore will be reminiscent of sweet childhood days for those who have already experienced its warmth. Senior Angela Mills, who visited the estate every year with her family as a child, said, "It was like a fairytale. I had expected to find a prince."

Although Senior Erica Durham has never visited the estate during Christmas, she does recall the "majestic" appearance of the estate and looks forward to returning.

Don't miss the dozens of flickering luminaries, the delicate, hand-made ornaments, and the aromas of fresh spices and flowers at the Biltmore Estate. Today may be your last chance!

Christmas service to be held

The annual Presbyterian College Christmas Candlelight Service will be held on Wednesday, December 9, at 7:30 pm in Belk Auditorium.

According to PC Chaplain Greg Henley, the addition of a live, outdoor nativity scene will make the service even more special. "This year, following the auditorium service, students will make their way to the plaza and form a concentric circle around the outdoor nativity scene and sing carols. This will also be the time we have our candlelight service," said Henley.

Following the candlelight service, a reception will be hosted by PC President and Mrs. Ken B. Orr. Everyone is invited to partake of Christmas cookies and cider.

"We always look forward to the annual Christmas Candlelight Service because it signals the end of the academic year, but more importantly it signals the beginning of Advent and the celebration of the birth of Christ," said Henley.

FEED A HERD OF PARTY ANIMALS.

Make your bash a smash with a Subway Party Sub or Party Platter. You tell us how long you want your Party Sub — and we'll make it.

And we'll stuff your Party Platter with your favorite subs — sliced in tasty 4" portions. Call Subway and make plans for your party. Big plans.

988 E. Carolina Ave., Clinton, SC 29325
833-2582

Merry Christmas

from

FCA

'May the God of hope fill you with all joy and peace as you trust in him, so that you may overflow with hope by the power of the Holy Spirit.' Romans 15:13

Holiday nails and holiday hair

"We do all kinds of nails"

FADAS

Copeland Plaza 833-5446

$5.00 off of new nails

INTERVIEW SUITS

STARTING AT $200

The Men's Shop

PUBLIC SQUARE LAURENS

The Episcopal Church Especially Welcomes Students
+ ALL SAINTS' EPISCOPAL CHURCH

One Block North of Greenville Dining Hall

Sunday Schedule

8:30 am	Holy Eucharist
9:45 am	Christian Education
10:30 am	Coffee (in Parish Hall)
11:00 am	Holy Eucharist
6:00 pm	+ CANTERBURY — for College Students

* Need someone to talk to?

The Rev. Nancy J. Allison, Rector (833-1388)

The Rev. Leutari Pearson, Priest-in-Charge (833-8295)

1993

THE BLUE

STOCKING

"Give the people the light, so they may find the way."

Volume LXXXVII Number 6

PRESBYTERIAN COLLEGE

Clinton, South Carolina 29325

Friday, January 29, 1993

1993 commencement set for outdoors

by LeJeanna Maddox
MANAGING EDITOR

After months of student exhortation and committee consideration, the officers of the college have approved plans for an outdoor graduation this May. The ceremony will take place on the west plaza between Neville Hall and South Broad Street.

Following a meeting of the Board of Trustees last semester, President Ken Orr established a task force to study the feasibility of the long-debated idea of outdoor graduation.

For years, complaints have been heard about the uncomfortable seating arrangements and heat which make graduation in the gymnasium an unpleasant affair. The committee, composed of three students and seven members of the faculty and administration, voted unanimously on January 11 to recommend that commencement be held outdoors. The following day, the officers of the college accepted the proposal, putting the wheels into motion.

"We deliberately selected committee members who represented various facets of the college community," said Margaret Williamson, vice-president for enrollment and dean of admissions, who served as the committee chair. "I think everybody was open and that we had honest discussions. Although the committee realizes that there are some details that need to be worked out, the overall consensus was that this is a good time to try outdoor graduation."

According to the provisions of the committee recommendation, the weekend festivities will begin on Friday afternoon at 5:30 with the senior barbeque in the dining hall. The traditional senior program will take place at 7:30 pm that evening in Belk Auditorium.

The ROTC Commissioning Ceremony will follow at 9:00 am on Saturday morning followed by the 11:00 am Baccalaureate Service. Lunch will be served in GDH from 12 to 2:00 pm, followed by an honor ceremony in Edmunds Hall at 2:30 pm, during which cords will be distributed to those seniors graduating with honors. Graduation will begin at 4:00 pm, and a reception will be held after the ceremony in front of Edmunds Hall.

In an attempt to ensure that parents and close family members will have access to prime seating, each senior will be issued four tickets for a reserved seating area. There is no limit, however, on the number of people who may attend.

In the event of rain, commencement will be moved to its traditional location in Templeton Gymnasium. The four-ticket policy would still apply, and the remaining seats would be open on a first-come, first-serve basis.

Presbyterian College has not held a graduation ceremony outdoors since 1960, until which time two decades of graduates had received their diplomas at the former campus landmark, Jock Rock.

Members of the Class of 1993, pleased about being the first class to revive the tradition, have applauded the decision of the officers.

"It's great that we're finally utilizing a campus we spend so much money beautifying," said Senior Christy Hermann.

Kathy Creech added, "I think it's great because more people can attend, and they won't be so cramped and hot."

Student members of the task force were pleased with the open-minded atmosphere of the discussions. "After being involved with these efforts for three years, I'm happy to see that the students' views are finally being heard by the administration," said SGA President Michael Martin. He credited Senior Class President Wendy Hubbard for the success of the proposal.

There will be a meeting of the Senior Class on Tuesday, February 2, at 4:30 on the second floor of Springs to discuss graduation details.

PC Junior Amy Latiff proves her strength by lifting Avery Cheves. Latiff and Cheves joined in the fun on Bid Day '93.

photo by Lauren Owings

On The Inside

Page 5 . . .

Ground Hog Day - What are you doing to celebrate?

by LeJeanna Maddox
MANAGING EDITOR

Several students have expressed concerns about encounters they have had with an unfamiliar, suspicious individual on campus in the past week.

The individual, described as a white male with dark hair, approximately 50 years old, 5'10", and weighing about 200 pounds, was first seen sitting in his car outside of Templeton Gymnasium last week. Because the car was illegally parked, a PC Public Safety officer approached the man, who then left the scene. The officer was, however,

able to ascertain the vehicle tag number.

Later that week, a female student reported seeing a man fitting that description outside of the women's dormitory complex, asking questions about the dorms.

He was spotted again by a female student this past Monday night at approximately 10:30 pm and has also been seen near the administration building, GDH, and the dorm parking lots. He reportedly has asked a number of female students about where they live and in what activities they participate on campus.

"We are aware of who this man is," said Public Safety Chief Grey Mayson. "My office sent a letter to the individual, informing him not to come on this campus again. He was warned that if he does, he will be arrested on sight."

Mayson reports that the suspected individual came to his office Wednesday to speak with him in response to the letter he had received. "The individual objected to our telling him not to come on campus any more. I made it clear to him that if he were to come on campus again, he would be arrested," Mayson said.

Although Mayson does not expect any additional problems from him, Public Safety has taken measures to heighten security.

1993 commencement set for outdoors

by LeJeanna Maddox
MANAGING EDITOR

After months of student exhortation and committee consideration, the officers of the college have approved plans for an outdoor graduation this May. The ceremony will take place on the west plaza between Neville Hall and South Broad Street.

Following a meeting of the Board of Trustees last semester, President Ken Orr established a task force to study the feasibility of the long-debated idea of outdoor graduation.

For years, complaints have been heard about the uncomfortable seating arrangements and heat which make graduation in the gymnasium an unpleasant affair. The committee, composed of three students and seven members of the faculty and administration, voted unanimously on January 11 to recommend that commencement be held outdoors. The following day, the officers of the college accepted the proposal, putting the wheels into motion.

"We deliberately selected committee members who represented various facets of the college community," said Margaret Williamson, vice-president for enrollment and dean of admissions, who served as the committee chair. "I think everybody was open and that we had honest discussions. Although the committee realizes that there are some details that need to be worked out, the overall consensus was that this is a good time to try outdoor graduation."

According to the provisions of the committee recommendation, the weekend festivities will begin on Friday afternoon at 5:30 with the senior barbeque in the dining hall. The traditional senior program will take place at 7:30 pm that evening in Belk Auditorium.

The ROTC Commissioning Ceremony at 9:00 am on Saturday morning will be followed by the 11:00 am Baccalaureate Service. Lunch will be served in GDH from 12 to 2:00 pm, followed by an honor ceremony in Edmunds Hall at 2:30 pm, during which cords will be distributed to those seniors graduating with honors. Graduation will begin at 4:00 pm, and a reception will be held after the ceremony in front of Edmunds Hall.

In an attempt to ensure that parents and close family members will have access to prime seating, each senior will be issued four tickets for a reserved seating area. There is no limit, however, on the number of people who may attend.

In the event of rain, commencement will be moved to its traditional location in Templeton Gymnasium. The four-ticket policy would still apply, and the remaining seats would be open on a first-come, first-serve basis.

Presbyterian College has not held a graduation ceremony outdoors since 1960, until which time two decades of graduates had received their diplomas at the former campus landmark, Jock Rock.

Members of the Class of 1993, pleased about being the first class to revive the tradition, have applauded the decision of the officers.

"It's great that we're finally utilizing a campus we spend so much money beautifying," said Senior Christy Hermann.

Kathy Creech added, "I think it's great because more people can attend, and they won't be so cramped and hot."

Student members of the task force were pleased with the open-minded atmosphere of the discussions. "After being involved with these efforts for three years, I'm happy to see that the students' views are finally being heard by the administration," said SGA President Michael Martin. He credited Senior Class President Wendy Hubbard for the success of the proposal.

There will be a meeting of the Senior Class on Tuesday, February 2, at 4:30 on the second floor of Springs to discuss graduation details.

PC Junior Amy Latiff proves her strength by lifting Avery Cheves. Latiff and Cheves joined in the fun on Bid Day '93.

photo by Lauren Owings

On The Inside

Page 5 . . .

Ground Hog Day - What are you doing to celebrate?

by LeJeanna Maddox
MANAGING EDITOR

Several students have expressed concerns about encounters they have had with an unfamiliar, suspicious individual on campus in the past week.

The individual, described as a white male with dark hair, approximately 50 years old, 5'10", and weighing about 200 pounds, was first seen sitting in his car outside of Templeton Gymnasium last week. Because the car was illegally parked, a PC Public Safety officer approached the man, who then left the scene. The officer was, however,

able to ascertain the vehicle tag number.

Later that week, a female student reported seeing a man fitting that description outside of the women's dormitory complex, asking questions about the dorms.

He was spotted again by a female student this past Monday night at approximately 10:30 pm and has also been seen near the administration building, GDH, and the dorm parking lots. He reportedly has asked a number of female students about where they live and in what activities they participate on campus.

"We are aware of who this man is," said Public Safety Chief Grey Mayson. "My office sent a letter to the individual, informing him not to come on this campus again. He was warned that if he does, he will be arrested on sight."

Mayson reports that the suspected individual came to his office Wednesday to speak with him in response to the letter he had received. "The individual objected to our telling him not to come on campus any more. I made it clear to him that if he were to come on campus again, he would be arrested," Mayson said.

Although Mayson does not expect any additional problems from him, Public Safety has taken measures to heighten security.

Outdoor graduation became a reality because the administration 'listened'

by Jason West
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

The other day I was breezing through Webster's Ninth New Collegiate Dictionary, and I came across an interesting word - listen. Listen is defined as hearing something with thoughtful attention and consideration.

There are times when I have been guilty of not listening to others. Often, I limit my focus and scope and just concentrate on the issues and concerns that are in front of me, never considering the views from the sides or the rear. I am sure that I'm not the only person in the world who doesn't listen. If the truth were told, I am positive that 100 percent of the world's population would find themselves in the same predicament.

As a student and a young person, I have frequently observed that not very many people over the age of 30 listen to my ideas or concerns. I find that I sometimes hold a certain contempt for administrators, teachers, and parents who tell me what to do, when to do it, and how high I must jump when I am instructed. However, there are those rare moments when adults do listen and pay close attention.

Recently, the administration of Presbyterian College agreed to the concept of an outdoor graduation.

Students have been unsuccessfully pushing for outdoor graduation for years, only to be disappointed that no one was willing to listen. This year, the administration decided to sit down with students and talk.

Under the direction of Margaret Williamson, PC's vice president for enrollment, a committee consisting of administrators, faculty, and students was formed to discuss the possibilities of outdoor graduation. The group met, pondered all the possibilities and the potential problems, listened to each other's ideas, and made a decision. The decision was to recommend outdoor graduation to the officers of the college. On Monday of this week, the officers of the college approved the concept.

"Eternal agreement, rubber stamping, and failure to ask questions are not a part of the listening process."

The administration is to be commended for its willingness to have dialogue with students. Sitting down and talking is always the best solution to any problem. The students successfully argued their case for outdoor graduation, presented well-researched facts and suggestions, and listened to the concerns and objections of some members of the faculty. In return, the administration and faculty presented their arguments, listened, made suggestions of compromise, and were apparently swayed by the students.

My beliefs about certain topics do not necessarily make my opinion the only one that is correct. Of course, in moments of heated debate, I doubt that I would make that claim. The fact that someone listens to you does not mean that you will always be correct. A person could listen intently and without prejudice to another's arguments for days and days and still come to the conclusion that the argument is wrong.

As students, we should not expect that every time there is a controversy or problem, the administration must agree with us. Eternal agreement, rubber stamping, and failure to ask questions are not a part of the listening process. However, it should be noted that the adult leaders of this campus should always listen objectively and fairly to student concerns.

Again, I congratulate the administration for listening and agreeing to outdoor graduation.

I also remind PC students that the next time we don't get our way, we should promise to refrain from pouting and throwing temper tantrums. They are also not a part of the listening process.

Letter to the Editor

Dear Editor:

I find something at this school very frightening.

In the first issue of last semester, the Blue Stocking reported the official crime statistics from last year according to the Administration and Public Safety. According to these statistics, a total of one, or if not one, some other ridiculously low number of robberies occurred last year. This of course had the desired effect of making us all feel warm and safe in our college environment.

Last semester I received a notice in my box reminding me to lock my door and windows before leaving for Thanksgiving break, or any break, for that matter. This notice also stated that around $15,000 worth of property was stolen from those who forgot to lock their rooms last year before leaving for break.

Then a revelation hit me. What one object, worth $15,000, mind you, could have been stolen from a dorm room in our one reported robbery?

I struggled long and hard with this question and finally came up with a few possible explanations:

- A) Someone parked their car in their room in an effort to protect it, forgot to lock an entrance, and it was stolen.
- B) Someone left their door unlocked and their daddy's Gold Card on the desk (Need I say more?).
- C) Someone reported 3 or 4 kilos of cocaine stolen.
- D) Someone lied to us.

I welcome and hope for an explanation.

Sincerely,

Jason Bundrick

The Blue Stocking of Presbyterian College
Clinton, South Carolina, 29325
Volume LXXXVII, Number 6
January 29, 1993

Editor-in-Chief.....Jason West
Managing Editor.....Leleanna Maddox
News Editor.....Ricky Dill
Politics Editor.....Ted Carmichael
Sports Editor.....Everette Catts
Entertainment Editor.....Camisha Clarke
Features Editor.....Martha Lynn Smith
Environment Editor.....Heather Moncrief
Photography Editor.....Kim Gibson
Layout Editor.....Angela Richardson

Advertising Editor.....Ann Mayfield
Subscriptions Editor.....Ron Mixon
Artist.....Michael Christensen

Photography Staff
Kimberlee Gibson Todd Love

Staff Writers
Elizabeth Cunard Amanda Bowers
Leigh Hearnburg Katherine Bonner
Kristina Pruitt Cher Fulbright
Paula Warren Michelle Cantey
Brian Sacco Shelly Phipps
Kim Rabon Jamey Pate
Tobin Turner Tonya Sneed

The Blue Stocking is a tri-weekly student publication of Presbyterian College. The paper serves as a forum of news and opinion of regional and national concern. For advertising, contact The Blue Stocking, Presbyterian College, Box 1061, Clinton, SC 29325. The Blue Stocking welcomes letters to the editor from all members of the PC community. Signatures are required. Letters are printed on a space available basis. The Blue Stocking reserves the right to edit all letters for proper grammar and punctuation. The final deadline for submitting letters is Friday at 12:00 pm on the week before publication.

Fallen tree limbs and branches from recent ice storm can still be seen on the streets of Clinton.

photo by Kim Gibson

Ice storm creates overtime for maintenance Weakened branches pose threat to students

by Tobin Turner
STAFF WRITER

Two weeks before PC students returned to campus from Christmas vacation, freezing temperatures and heavy precipitation resulted in an ice storm that enveloped the campus and the town of Clinton. Fallen tree limbs and other damages from the storm can still be seen around the campus and on the streets of town.

"In all my 79 years, I have never seen a storm like that one," said Clintonian and GDH receptionist Zona Dutton.

Power lines and cable lines were snapped by the weight of the sleet and freezing rain. The most obvious effect of the storm was the avalanche of fallen trees and limbs. On PC's front plaza, 12 truckloads of firewood and three truckloads of limbs were gathered as a result of the storm.

PC's maintenance crew has already put in nearly 700 hours of work in cleaning up after the storm. The maintenance department is also concerned about weakened branches that still remain in trees. These branches pose a threat to pedestrians, power lines, and buildings.

According to Mac Stewart, director of grounds, crews have been removing as many branches as possible with a "bucket" truck, but eventually a tree company will have to be called in to remove the limbs that are the highest and most difficult to reach.

"PC was certainly lucky that no major damage was sustained by any buildings on campus," said Stewart.

Stewart reports that the clean-up effort will certainly not be cheap. "It is too early to figure how much money will be spent on clean-up, but it will be really expensive," he added.

Fraternity rush numbers down from last year

by Ricky Dill
NEWS EDITOR

The 1993 fraternity rush for freshmen is close to completion. This year 89 freshmen signed up for rush; however, ten of these rushees were unable to pledge a fraternity since they did not maintain a 2.0 GPA last semester. The total number of rushees was 79, which is down from 88 last year.

Allen Jacobs, president of the Interfraternity Council (IFC) believes that deferred rush is responsible for the decline in rush participation. "The numbers are down due to deferred rush, because many freshmen are not making the grades. Others are becoming more involved with other school activities and organizations," said Jacobs.

Jacobs also credits deferred rush for IFC's adoption of new rules and its strengthening of others.

One new rule enforced by IFC this year was the banning of band parties at individual fraternity houses. Jacobs said that the council felt freshmen were given the opportunity to see the types of band parties each fraternity uses during the fall semester.

"There was really no point in spending the money for bands just to try and win freshmen over," said Jacobs. "This rule was needed to make rush more fair for all the fraternities on campus."

Shortening rush to three days was another rule change invoked by IFC. According to Jacobs, the council felt that many freshmen had had the opportunity to meet fraternity members during the fall, and a long rush would become monotonous.

One major change in rush this year was the enforcement of "dry" rush, which in the past has not been taken seriously. However, IFC chose to enforce the policies on alcohol violations this year. Jacobs reports that only one violation by a fraternity occurred during '93 rush.

"When rush is deferred and freshmen have already had a semester to see the party side of fraternities, it is necessary for them to see the service and brotherhood side. That is why the IFC pushed for a 100 percent dry rush," said Jacobs.

"Improvements can be made, but I was very happy with how rush went, and I believe most freshmen were too," added Jacobs.

Will Holmes, president of Sigma Nu, agreed with Jacobs that spring rush had been successful, but he did see problems. "I was disappointed with the turnout of freshmen, but I realize that this is due to deferred rush and the failure of freshmen to make the necessary grades. I do believe the new rules worked effectively for the benefit of all fraternities who followed the guidelines," he said.

Women's doors to be locked from dusk to dawn

by Jason West
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

Starting next week, PC's women's residence halls will be locked from dusk to dawn. That announcement comes after months of discussion and debate concerning the safety of women's dorms on the Presbyterian College campus.

Currently, all women's residence halls have an electronic security system which locks the doors at midnight and unlocks them at 6:00 am. Under the new system, the dorms will lock automatically at 7:00 pm and will unlock at 7:00 am. The only way to gain entrance into the female dorms during the hours they are locked will be with a dorm card. Each female student's dorm card will work in all of the women's residence halls.

"The decision to lock the doors earlier was primarily made with the safety and health of PC women in mind," said Joe Nixon, dean of students. "Every day across the nation a female student is assaulted in a residence hall. We don't want this to happen to our students."

Nixon cites that the primary reason for the dusk to dawn security system is for the safety of students; however, he admits that the liability of the college was another factor in the decision.

"We do have to consider liability issues. After all, what happens if the college is sued for millions of dollars over an issue that could have been prevented? Tuition would go up and admissions would have a more difficult time recruiting students," said Nixon.

Nixon states that it is important for female students to report if their dorm card is lost or is ever lost. "The loss of a dorm card should be immediately reported to the Residence Life Office or Public Safety," he added.

"I apologize for any inconvenience, but a slight inconvenience may someday save a student's life," said Nixon.

BURN VICTIM.

A Public Service of the USDA Forest Service
and your State Forester

ONLY YOU CAN PREVENT FOREST FIRES

Hickory Hills
Bar-B-Que

Old Laurens Rd.
Clinton, SC 29325
833-2690

"Carolina's Finest"

Attention All PC Students!
Take A Bar-B-Que Break!

All PC students receive a 10% discount on our dining buffet every Thursday night with valid ID.
"All You Care To Eat!"

PC— Tidbits

Group plans trip to Russia

A trip is being planned to the former Soviet Union for May 24 through June 8, 1993. Students from Presbyterian College and Samford University in Birmingham, Alabama are being invited to participate. The trip will include stops in Tallin, Estonia, St. Petersburg, and Moscow.

The cost of the trip is set at $2338 and will cover the following: air transportation from New York to Europe, three meals per day in Russian and Estonian cities, accommodations in tourist-class hotels, transportation between cities in Europe, group sight-seeing, transfers from/to hotels and portage of one suitcase per person, and all required taxes and tips. Cost does not include transportation to and from New York, passport, Russian visa, or the $21 US departure tax.

PC students may earn three semester hours by participating in the trip. The deadline for posting a $250 deposit is March 15. The balance will be due by April 1. Both schools are limited in the number of people they may include. PC's quota will likely be no larger than 10 to 11 students. For more information, see Dr. David Gillespie.

SCSL taking applications

The South Carolina Student Legislature (SCSL) is receiving applications for membership for next year. SCSL is a bi-partisan group which discusses and debates political topics and also spends time at the South Carolina State Capitol in the fall. Interested students should contact Leslie Chambers at 8769.

Peer Connectors open office

College is a time for exploration and change. It can also be a time of confusion and conflict of values. Sometimes, it helps to talk to another student about the problems that you face. Peer Connectors are trained and trustworthy students who are there to help. Peer Connectors can be reached in the basement of Douglas House (formerly the CIA room) from 8:00 pm to 10:00 pm, Sunday through Wednesday. Call 8424 or drop by for a visit.

HFH worktrips scheduled

Habitat for Humanity sponsors worktrips every Saturday in Laurens. Contact Ron Hull (8110) if you'd like to help. The first campus chapter meeting this semester will be Wednesday, February 3, at 7:00 pm in Crossroads.

Study seminar offered

The Office of Career Planning and Placement will be sponsoring a seminar offering tips on time management, study skills, and note-taking skills. The seminar will be held on Sunday, February 7 at 7:00 pm in Room 231 of Douglas House. For more information, call Extension 8379.

Presbyterian College begins search for new registrar

by Ricky Dill
NEWS EDITOR

The first semester of 1993 has been fairly hectic for the Registrar's office, due to the absence of Bill Gash. Gash, who was in his fourth year as the Assistant Academic Dean and Director of Student Records, resigned last month to take a job in his home state of North Carolina.

The vacancy left by Gash has not been filled. According to Bill Moncrief, vice president for academic affairs, PC has begun to advertise the job opening in such publications as the Chronicle of Higher Education, a national newspaper which lists virtually every job position available at colleges and universities throughout the United States.

Dr. Bill Moncrief file photo

Moncrief stated he would have liked for Gash's position to have been filled by now. "It would be nice to have a new registrar, but it is extremely important to choose the right person with the credentials necessary to fulfill the position," he said.

Due to PC's decision to upgrade the college's computer system for student records, applicants for registrar will be interviewed by Moncrief and a professor from the computer science department. The reviewing process for applicants will begin on February 1. Applications will continue to be accepted until the position is filled.

Semester of study in China offered to PC students

by Ron Burnside
GUEST WRITER

Presbyterian College students will have the opportunity to study in China in the fall semester of 1993 in a program offered by the South Atlantic States Association for Asian and African Studies. The program will be administered by Wake Forest University and will be based at Beijing Foreign Languages Normal College.

A student will earn 16 hours of credit, 10 of which will be in Chinese language. In addition to the language course, the students will take two other courses, which will be taught in English. China in Perspective is a survey course taught by Chinese scholars and is designed to increase the student's understanding of various aspects of Chinese culture. Problems in Contemporary Chinese Politics will be taught by a member of the faculty of Wake Forest University who will also serve as resident director of the program.

In addition to course work, there will be a variety of activities and excursions in and around Beijing. Students will have the opportunity to attend theatrical performances, films, and opera as well as to visit factories, museums, neighborhood communities, temples, the Great Wall, the Ming Tombs, and festival celebrations.

The cost of the program is approximately $6420 and includes orientation, room, board, tuition, organized cultural excursions, textbooks and other educational materials, visa fees, and round-trip airfare. The program will be competitive, and students must submit applications by February 8. Students should have a minimum GPA of 2.8, demonstrated ability in foreign language study, and serious interest in the study of Chinese culture.

Students should contact Dr. Burnside at extension 8358 or 833-0184 for more information or for application forms. Students may also contact the following students who have participated in the program: Sally Brady, Michael Martin, Ted Carmichael, Chris Adair, Price Timmerman, Josh Elrod and Jason Whittier.

The Great Wall of China is one of the sights PC students can visit if they choose to study in the People's Republic.

photo by Ron Burnside

Students get first-hand look at the 'bitter prejudices' of Middle East life

by Martha Lynn Smith
FEATURES EDITOR

Taking their education from the front seats of a political science classroom to the front lines of the divided West Bank, PC students Catherine Ray and Kathryn Spearman spent an eye-opening summer in the Middle East.

While taking classes at an International Summer Program at Birzeit University, Ray, a junior from Barnwell, South Carolina, and Spearman, a senior from Summerville, South Carolina, saw first-hand the stringent divisions between Palestinians and Israelis.

Since 1967 Palestinians have been trying to regain their homeland on the West Bank of the Jordan River from Israeli occupation.

Ray and Spearman were observant witnesses to the political strife. "The prejudices were bitter," Spearman said. "If there was a blank wall, it wasn't long before it was covered with graffiti."

In any territory under Israeli occupation, it is illegal to have the Palestinian flag, or to even display its colors together on a shirt or other article of clothing. Anyone found with any kind of PLO material risks imprisonment for 180 days without anyone being notified.

"The United States has a tendency to sympathize with the Israelis, but I think things are starting to shift," noted Ray.

Birzeit University is an independent Palestinian institution that has been under military occupation since 1967. According to some sources, the Israelis periodically close down the university to punish Palestinian student demonstrators, to hinder their education, and to destroy their morale. It was just reopened last summer after being closed for four years.

During their study, the PC students witnessed many demonstrations at the university; and in the University Campus Center, they saw pictures memorializing martyred Palestinian protestors.

The students took two classes: a political science course entitled "The Palestine Problem," and a sociology course entitled "Palestine Under Occupation." Two Arabic language courses were also available.

Dr. Tom Weaver, associate professor of political science at PC, did his dissertation research at Birzeit University. He is now negotiating for a possible student exchange program.

"You have to understand that this is not a typical study abroad opportunity," Weaver said. "It's a big step for two students to go to a Third World environment. Adding military occupation to the equation makes it an even greater challenge. I have the greatest admiration for them."

Kathryn Spearman (left), Irish student JoAnn Murphy, and Catherine Ray take in the sights at Qumran, where the Dead Sea Scrolls were discovered. photo by Ray

Fate of new season depends on groundhog

by Kim Rabon
STAFF WRITER

In a world of scientific technology, no one seems to place much credence in the ground hog's predictions these days. But after weeks of endlessly dreary weather, he may be our last hope.

The tradition of groundhog day was introduced to America by immigrants from Candlemas in England and Germany. However, the star of the show is a badger or bear instead of a groundhog. If the skies are fair and bright, winter storms will certainly come. But if the weather is rainy and wet, winter weather has come and gone.

The first observance of Groundhog Day took place on February 2, 1908. Each year since then, hundreds of dedicated groundhog watchers have gone in search of the groundhog's burrow in Quarryville, Pennsylvania to watch its reaction to the weather.

After watching the groundhog, the observers return to town and report their observations to the chairman of the Board of Hibernating Governors, who then announces to the world that the groundhog has or has not seen its shadow.

Different groups of groundhog lovers celebrate the holiday in different ways. Some start with groundhog banquets and breakfast and end with a celebration of the groundhog's reaction. So the question is, how will you celebrate?

According to legend, the groundhog awakens from its long winter sleep on February 2, at which time it comes out of its hole and looks around. If the sun is shining and the groundhog can see its shadow, it is frightened and goes back into its hole, signifying six more weeks of winter weather.

If the day is cloudy and the groundhog cannot see its shadow, it stays out of its hole, indicating that spring weather will arrive soon. Although the tradition has grown in popularity, scientific evidence has not confirmed the groundhog tale.

Groundhog Day is also celebrated as

Congratulations!

Beth Blair
Erin Davis
Cobi Shafe
Kelly Pope
Sally Moore
Clare Pofahl
Emily Meyers
Lynne Turman
Besty Brumby
Karen Frierson
Kathryn Massey
Laura Severinsen
Ree Waguespack

Kara Hemenway

Dee Wirt
Liz Dukes
Ami Pitts
Shanna Holt
Lauren Jones
Liz Whitfield
Allison Steen
Jennifer Ngale
Kathryn Jones
Suzanne Jowers
Alyssa Pinkerton
Christine Massey
Elizabeth Griffith

Zeta Tau Alpha

PC Tidbits

Group plans trip to Russia

A trip is being planned to the former Soviet Union for May 24 through June 8, 1993. Students from Presbyterian College and Samford University in Birmingham, Alabama are being invited to participate. The trip will include stops in Tallin, Estonia, St. Petersburg, and Moscow.

The cost of the trip is set at $2338 and will cover the following: air transportation from New York to Europe, three meals per day in Russian and Estonian cities, accommodations in tourist-class hotels, transportation between cities in Europe, group sight-seeing, transfers from/to hotels and portage of one suitcase per person, and all required taxes and tips. Cost does not include transportation to and from New York, passport, Russian visa, or the $21 US departure tax.

PC students may earn three semester hours by participating in the trip. The deadline for posting a $250 deposit is March 15. The balance will be due by April 1. Both schools are limited in the number of people they may include. PC's quota will likely be no larger than 10 to 11 students. For more information, see Dr. David Gillespie.

SCSL taking applications

The South Carolina Student Legislature (SCSL) is receiving applications for membership for next year. SCSL is a bi-partisan group which discusses and debates political topics and also spends time at the South Carolina State Capitol in the fall. Interested students should contact Leslie Chambers at 8769.

Peer Connectors open office

College is a time for exploration and change. It can also be a time of confusion and conflict of values. Sometimes, it helps to talk to another student about the problems that you face. Peer Connectors are trained and trustworthy students who are there to help. Peer Connectors can be reached in the basement of Douglas House (formerly the CIA room) from 8:00 pm to 10:00 pm, Sunday through Wednesday. Call 8424 or drop by for a visit.

HFH worktrips scheduled

Habitat for Humanity sponsors worktrips every Saturday in Laurens. Contact Ron Hull (8110) if you'd like to help. The first campus chapter meeting this semester will be Wednesday, February 3, at 7:00 pm in Crossroads.

Study seminar offered

The Office of Career Planning and Placement will be sponsoring a seminar offering tips on time management, study skills, and note-taking skills. The seminar will be held on Sunday, February 7 at 7:00 pm in Room 231 of Douglas House. For more information, call Extension 8379.

Presbyterian College begins search for new registrar

by Ricky Dill
NEWS EDITOR

The first semester of 1993 has been fairly hectic for the Registrar's office, due to the absence of Bill Gash. Gash, who was in his fourth year as the Assistant Academic Dean and Director of Student Records, resigned last month to take a job in his home state of North Carolina.

The vacancy left by Gash has not been filled. According to Bill Moncrief, vice president for academic affairs, PC has begun to advertise the job opening in such publications as the Chronicle of Higher Education, a national newspaper which lists virtually every job position available at colleges and universities throughout the United States.

Dr. Bill Moncrief file photo

Moncrief stated he would have liked for Gash's position to have been filled by now. "It would be nice to have a new registrar, but it is extremely important to choose the right person with the credentials necessary to fulfill the position," he said.

Due to PC's decision to upgrade the college's computer system for student records, applicants for registrar will be interviewed by Moncrief and a professor from the computer science department. The reviewing process for applicants will begin on February 1. Applications will continue to be accepted until the position is filled.

Semester of study in China offered to PC students

by Ron Burnside
GUEST WRITER

Presbyterian College students will have the opportunity to study in China in the fall semester of 1993 in a program offered by the South Atlantic States Association for Asian and African Studies. The program will be administered by Wake Forest University and will be based at Beijing Foreign Languages Normal College.

A student will earn 16 hours of credit, 10 of which will be in Chinese language. In addition to the language course, the students will take two other courses, which will be taught in English. China in Perspective is a survey course taught by Chinese scholars and is designed to increase the student's understanding of various aspects of Chinese culture. Problems in Contemporary Chinese Politics will be taught by a member of the faculty of Wake Forest University who will also serve as resident director of the program.

In addition to course work, there will be a variety of activities and excursions in and around Beijing. Students will have the opportunity to attend theatrical performances, films, and opera as well as to visit factories, museums, neighborhood communities, temples, the Great Wall, the Ming Tombs, and festival celebrations.

The cost of the program is approximately $6420 and includes orientation, room, board, tuition, organized cultural excursions, textbooks and other educational materials, visas fees, and round-trip airfare. The program will be competitive, and students must submit applications by February 8. Students should have a minimum GPA of 2.8, demonstrated ability in foreign language study, and serious interest in the study of Chinese culture.

Students should contact Dr. Burnside at extension 8358 or 833-0184 for more information or for application forms. Students may also contact the following students who have participated in the program: Sally Brady, Michael Martin, Ted Carmichael, Chris Adair, Price Timmerman, Josh Elrod and Jason Whitener.

The Great Wall of China is one of the sights PC students can visit if they choose to study in the People's Republic.

photo by Ron Burnside

Students get first-hand look at the 'bitter prejudices' of Middle East life

by Martha Lynn Smith
FEATURES EDITOR

Taking their education from the front seats of a political science classroom to the front lines of the divided West Bank, PC students Catherine Ray and Kathryn Spearman spent an eye-opening summer in the Middle East.

While taking classes at an International Summer Program at Birzeit University, Ray, a junior from Barnwell, South Carolina, and Spearman, a senior from Summerville, South Carolina, saw first-hand the stringent divisions between Palestinians and Israelis.

Since 1967 Palestinians have been trying to regain their homeland on the West Bank of the Jordan River from Israeli occupation. Ray and Spearman were observant witnesses to the political strife. "The prejudices were bitter," Spearman said. "If there was a blank wall, it wasn't long before it was covered with graffiti."

In any territory under Israeli occupation, it is illegal to have the Palestinian flag, or to even display its colors together on a shirt or other article of clothing. Anyone found with any kind of PLO material risks imprisonment for 180 days without anyone being notified.

"The United States has a tendency to sympathize with the Israelis, but I think things are starting to shift," noted Ray.

Birzeit University is an independent Palestinian institution that has been under military occupation since 1967. According to some sources, the Israelis periodically close down the university to punish Palestinian student demonstrators, to hinder their education, and to destroy their morale. It was just reopened last summer after being closed for four years.

During their study, the PC students witnessed many demonstrations at the university; and in the University Campus Center, they saw pictures memorializing martyred Palestinian protesters.

The students took two classes: a political science course entitled "The Palestinian Problem," and a sociology course entitled "Palestine Under Occupation." Two Arabic language courses were also available.

Dr. Tom Weaver, associate professor of political science at PC, did his dissertation research at Birzeit University. He is now negotiating for a possible student exchange program.

"You have to understand that this is not a typical study abroad opportunity," Weaver said. "It's a big step for two students to go to a Third World environment. Adding military occupation to the equation makes it an even greater challenge. I have the greatest admiration for them."

Kathryn Spearman (left), Irish student JoAnn Murphy, and Catherine Ray take in the sights at Qumran, where the Dead Sea Scrolls were discovered. photo by Ray

Fate of new season depends on groundhog

by Kim Rabon
STAFF WRITER

In a world of scientific technology, no one seems to place much credence in the ground hog's predictions these days. But after weeks of endlessly dreary weather, he may be our last hope.

The tradition of groundhog day was introduced to America by immigrants from Germany and Great Britain. They believed that it was a means of forecasting the weather for the subsequent six weeks.

According to legend, the groundhog awakens from its long winter sleep on February 2, at which time it comes out of its hole and looks around. If the sun is shining and the groundhog can see its shadow, it is frightened and goes back into its hole, signifying six more weeks of winter weather.

If the day is cloudy and the groundhog cannot see its shadow, it stays out of its hole, indicating that spring weather will arrive soon. Although the tradition has grown in popularity, scientific evidence has not confirmed the groundhog tale.

Groundhog Day is also celebrated as

Candlemas in England and Germany. However, the star of the show is a badger or bear instead of a groundhog. If the skies are fair and bright, winter storms will certainly come. But if the weather is rainy and wet, winter weather has come and gone.

The first observance of Groundhog Day took place on February 2, 1908. Each year since then, hundreds of dedicated groundhog watchers have gone in search of the groundhog's burrow in Quarryville, Pennsylvania to watch its reaction to the weather. After watching the groundhog, the observers return to town and report their observations to the chairman of the Board of Hibernating Governors, who then announces to the world that the groundhog has or has not seen its shadow.

Different groups of groundhog lovers celebrate the holiday in different ways. Some start with groundhog banquets and breakfast and end with a celebration of the groundhog's reaction. So the question is, how will you celebrate?

Congratulations!

Beth Blair

Erin Davis

Cobi Shafe

Kelly Pope

Sally Moore

Clare Pofahl

Emily Meyers

Lynne Turman

Besty Brumby

Karen Frierson

Kathryn Massey

Laura Severinsen

Ree Waquespack

Dee Wirt

Liz Dukes

Ami Pitts

Shanna Holt

Lauren Jones

Liz Whitfield

Allison Steen

Jennifer Neale

Kathryn Jones

Suzanne Jowers

Alyssa Pinkerton

Christine Massey

Elizabeth Griffith

Kara Hemenway

Zeta Tau Alpha

Rhudene Brooks: Neville Halls's best-kept secret

by Martha Lynn Smith
FEATURES EDITOR

Rhudene Brooks knows Neville Hall like no one else knows it. As custodian of that building, she travels from room to room, preserving the dignity of the place which serves as home to several of the school's social science and humanities disciplines. But Brooks herself is an example of dignity and discipline.

Brooks has a disease. "Reading is a disease, it really is," she reasoned. "It is just like an addiction."

Habits are hard to break.

She learns because she wants to. She has always loved to read. As a child she loved story hour at school. In her own childhood home, her grandmother was illiterate. Then and there Brooks vowed to make reading a part of her life. Now she is making a collection of her favorite books so that one day she can pass the tradition on to her six-year-old grandson. "He can already read books by himself," she said proudly. "Now, I'll buy him just a few toys, but books are the most important."

Brooks is reading two books now: Maya Angelou's Gather Together in My Name and a biography of John C. Calhoun. She never has to look hard for a new book. She spends many nights in the PC library while her husband George cooks for the canteen, and professors are constantly throwing books her way.

Brooks' self-education does not focus exclusively on English. She is also a student of psychology and religion — she often sits in on classes just so she can learn new things that she has always wanted to know about.

"If we could somehow infuse, graft, or knead in the PC student body Rhudene's joy of reading, commitment to writing, and awareness of literature's importance for living, I think that soon U.S. News would want to devote an entire issue to us," exuded English professor Dr. James Skinner.

"I think that English is very hard," she said. Brooks graduated from segregated Bell Street High School in Clinton where, in 1960, the books they used were very out of date. When she found reading difficult or felt like she was speaking incorrectly, she was concerned.

"But Dr. Skinner explained it all to me when he told me that standard English was not my language," she said. Brooks now realizes just how different Black English is from other spoken and written English dialects. Now she has taught herself to go back and forth with ease between the two dialects and between her two favorite authors, Zora Neale Hurston (Their Eyes Were Watching God) and Charles Dickens.

This semester Brooks is taking the African American Religious Experience class under Dr. Peter Hobbie. "I wanted to learn more about Africa," she says. In a poem that she wrote last month, "Six o' Clock Train" she makes use of African names, another topic that interests her.

The 6 a.m. Train

*Nalori's scarred hands gripped the chipped coffee cup.
Her bright eyes were transfixed on the damp outline his body had left on the bed.*

photo by Todd Love

Five years have passed.

The morning he said good-bye was the beginning of cool breezes and sad melodies.

Envision a remote ice-covered road where massive oaks loom on each side.

The staccato sound of her footsteps are heard long before a dark silhouette is seen in the pale moonlight.

*Nalori's sensual body moves as if by rhythmic compulsion
Her voice cuts through the cold night air singing the work songs her Malawi*

*grandmother taught her.
They brought comfort and chased the night shadows away.*

*She could hear the a.m. train whistle blowing in the distance.
The sound no longer tormented her.*

Words can take Brooks to places that she has never been. Dickens can show her the soul of humanity, and Hurston and other Black writers can connect her with her history. But fortunately for us, learning is a two-way street, and Brooks can inspire us to use our minds to make the most out of our lives.

Winter Conference addresses relationships

by Cynthia Seeliger
STAFF WRITER

Last weekend students and faculty gathered at Camp Bethelwoods near Rock Hill, SC, for PC's unique Winter Conference.

The conference, founded in 1970 to establish peace among feuding religious groups, provides the PC community with a chance each year to hear a distinguished Christian scholar and wrestle with new or challenging ideas.

This year Dr. Bill Arnold, professor of pastoral counseling at Union Theological Seminary in Richmond, Virginia spoke on "Relationship Issues in an Alienated World." "We as human beings are finite, gifted, sinful, relational, developmental, and redeemed," chanted Dr. Arnold throughout the weekend. He encouraged smaller groups to consider individually how each person's characteristics help or hinder personal relationships. The idea was that one's relations will improve after one has acknowledged one's personal limitations, gifts, sins, changing characteristics, and redeemed qualities.

Dr. Arnold grazed the topic of psychological gender differences, which often cause misunderstandings between couples. He emphasized that in order to have a good relationship, both parties must realize that each is to be a treasure, each is innately always different (conformity ought not be forced), and that both have the ability and duty to communicate.

The rest of the conference was full of the usual antics. Dr. Burnside, Dr. Hunter, Dr. Ramsey, and Mr. Stallworth performed their annual quartet harmonies with such favorites as "Swing Low" and "Goodnight Irene."

Every male was forbidden to wallflower during the square dance, so that even Dean Moncrief was jiving to "Elvira." After plentiful dosy-dosies, many braved the cold night to take part in a tractor pulled hayride. "In spite of the tone-deaf renditions of camp song, the stars shone brightly," commented one indulger.

The ice cream orgy on Saturday night speeded up the time preceding John Paul Walters' concert, which consisted of his own county and folk songs.

In retrospect, students attending the conference noted their pleasure in talking to faculty members without sensing academic stigmas.

Little Known Facts

Student Activities Director Randy Randall coached the first PC women's basketball team in 1977. Randy was also a star basketball player during his own illustrious college career.

A professor named Mr. Shakespeare used to teach in PC's English Department.

Clinton Cabinet selections easily approved by Senate

By Ted Carmichael
POLITICS EDITOR

By Christmas Day, President Bill Clinton had announced the members of his new Cabinet, meeting his self-imposed deadline. All of the appointees except for Zoe Baird (see related story) were approved by the Senate within two days of his inauguration.

The following is a short biography of the new secretaries of state, defense, treasury, education, and labor.

Secretary of the Treasury

Lloyd Benson has been named as the treasury secretary. He is a former senator from Texas and was the chairman of the senate finance committee. He was also the Democratic nominee for vice-president in 1988, running with Michael Dukakis.

Benson, 71, has been described as a "business-friendly millionaire" who has very strong contacts with the business community as well as the Senate. He, along with some other of Clinton's top people, was chosen not as much for his ideas on the economy as for his ability to get Clinton's economic plan through the Congress.

Secretary of State

Warren Christopher, 67, is the new secretary of state. He has been the head of Clinton's transition team and was instrumental in selecting Senator Al Gore as the vice-presidential nominee. He had previously served as Jimmy Carter's deputy secretary of state and also as the deputy attorney general under Lyndon Johnson.

Christopher believes that the day-to-day conduct of foreign policy belongs to the president and the State Department, not the Congress. He is an experienced diplomat and is known as a patient and persistent negotiator.

Secretary of Defense

The Defense Secretary is Les Aspin, 54, a former House Armed Services Chairman who also has experience working in the

Warren Christopher

Dick Riley

photos by Newsweek and Congressional Quarterly Review

Les Aspin

Lloyd Benson

Pentagon. His knowledge of the military is said to be extensive, and while in the House he was often instrumental in steering the debate on military matters.

Aspin plans to work to make the military "smaller, smarter, and faster" in the future. But according to some of the top people in the Pentagon, including Joint Chiefs of Staff Gen. Colin Powell, the cuts he wants would go too far. Aspin will also quickly have to get a handle on the situations in the Middle East, Somalia, Bosnia, and the former Soviet Union.

Secretary of Education

Former governor of South Carolina Dick Riley, 60, has been named as Secretary of Education. He, like Clinton, is considered to be in the forefront of educational reform and has received much recognition for his work in improving SC schools. A one-cent increase in the state sales tax paid for initiatives to raise academic standards, increase the amount of teacher training, and improve testing. He also gave more funding to state colleges and worked to improve working conditions in the school systems.

Although the federal government has limited power over the state school systems, Clinton has outlined what he expects from the Education Department, including setting national standards and helping to pull together resources in order to design schools that will "meet tomorrow's needs." Given Clinton's emphasis on education and the governor's record in SC, Riley will undoubtedly be instrumental in the president's major education reform initiatives over the next four years.

Secretary of Labor

Clinton's new Labor Secretary is the political economist Robert Reich. The 4'10" author and lecturer from Harvard's Kennedy School of Government has known the president since their days at Oxford. His discussions with Clinton on the economy have been going off and on for over 20 years.

The economic solutions on which Clinton ran his campaign were largely based on Reich's latest novel The Work of Nations. One of the main tenets of this book is that the new global economy requires a different role for the federal government. He maintains that it essentially does not matter whether a company is based in Tokyo or L.A., since an Oldsmobile may have less "domestic content" than a Honda built in Ohio. Therefore, says Reich, the government should not aid particular industries or give tax breaks to investors. Instead, we should invest in the two assets that will not leave the country: "human capital" with education and job training and infrastructure, such as roads, bridges, high-speed railways, and fiber optic communications networks. These types of investments, he concludes, would encourage both US and foreign companies to create jobs in America.

Baird nomination withdrawn

by Ted Carmichael
POLITICS EDITOR

When Zoe Baird was selected for the position of attorney general, it was hailed as a landmark decision. Baird was considered exceptionally qualified and would have been the first woman to hold that office. But instead, she turned out to be the only snag in Clinton's otherwise unanimously approved cabinet.

Baird withdrew her name from consideration Saturday after coming under increasingly harsh criticism from members of Congress and their constituents. The controversy came about because Baird had hired two illegal aliens — a husband and wife — to work in her household. The couple had worked for her about two years, starting in July of 1990, but did not have proper working papers. Baird had also failed to pay any social security taxes for them.

When she was told about the position of attorney general, she informed Clinton's team about the two workers and also paid about $15,000 in fines, back taxes, and penalties. Nevertheless, members of the Senate's Judiciary Committee felt that the incident called into question her credibility for highest US law enforcement job.

Baird will return to her former $507,000-a-year job as an attorney at the Aetna Life and Casualty Co., from which she had taken a leave of absence after her nomination.

The Episcopal Church Especially Welcomes Students
+ ALL SAINTS' EPISCOPAL CHURCH
One Block North of Greenville During Hall

Sunday Schedule
8:30 am 9:45 am 10:30 am 11:00 am 6:00 pm	Holy Eucharist Christian Education Coffee (in Parish Hall) Holy Eucharist + CANTERBURY — for College Students

• Need someone to talk to?
The Rev. Nancy J. Allison, Rector (833-1388)
The Rev. Lennox Pearson, Priest-in-Charge (833-8295)

Possible SC gubernatorial candidate visits PC's College Republicans

David Wilkins, a member of the SC General Assembly, speaks to a group of College Republicans. Wilkins is considering a run for governor in '94. photo by Kim Gibson

by Jason West
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

According to the Speaker Pro Tempore of the State House of Representatives, South Carolina is rapidly becoming a Republican-dominated state. Representative David Wilkins (R) of Greenville made this statement last week when he visited the PC chapter of the College Republicans.

"Based on the 1992 elections, it is clear that South Carolina is a Republican stronghold. This state was one of 18 that went for George Bush in the last presidential election and had the second highest percentage of support for Bush of all those 18 states," said Wilkins.

Wilkins also credits Republican gains in the General Assembly to South Carolina's tilt to the right. "This past election, the Republican Party picked up 7 seats in the House of Representatives, bringing our total to 50 members, or 40 percent," said Wilkins.

"In addition, the party picked up three seats in the Senate, creating the highest number of Republican senators in South Carolina since Reconstruction," he added.

"When I came to the House of Representatives in 1981, there were only 19 Republican members. We have come a long way, and I believe that in four years we will be able to take over the South Carolina House and elect a Republican Speaker," added Wilkins.

Wilkins reminded the group that it is imperative that the Republican Party hold on to the Governor's Mansion in 1994. Carroll Campbell has served as the state's Republican governor since 1986 and will step aside in two years. Wilkins is considered a possible contender for Campbell's replacement.

Wilkins is a graduate of Clemson University and of the University of South Carolina Law School. He is a practicing lawyer in Greenville. Wilkins was first elected to the House of Representatives in 1981 and has served as the chairman of the House Judiciary Committee. Earlier this month, Wilkins became the first Republican in the 20th Century to be elected Speaker Pro Tempore in South Carolina.

Other Republicans considering a run for the Governor's Mansion include Congressman Arthur Ravenel, Secretary of State Jim Myles, State Senator John Courson, and former Congressman Tommy Hartnett.

Some Democratic challengers who plan to run for governor include Attorney General Travis Medlock, Lt. Governor Nick Theodore, Charleston Mayor Joe Riley, and former Congresswoman Liz Patterson.

Wilkins reported to the College Republicans that government reform will be the major item of discussion in the General Assembly this year. He stated that there will be proposals to create a cabinet system of government for South Carolina, to improve the efficiency of existing state agencies, and to limit terms for state officials. In addition, Wilkins believes that school choice, the creation of a state lottery, the regulation or outlawing of video poker machines, and the Confederate Flag's flying over the State Capitol will be issues that will generate discussion among members of the General Assembly.

Wilkins stated that he has not definitely made up his mind about whether he will run for governor. "I hope to make a decision within the next 30 days. It is time to do something," he said.

Clinton administration faces a wide variety of challenges

by Ted Carmichael
POLITICS EDITOR

William Jefferson Clinton took office as the President of the United States last Wednesday, January 20th. He is second only to John Kennedy as the youngest American to be elected to that position.

Clinton's administration will face many tough challenges in the next few years, not least of which are the gaping fiscal deficit and the health care crisis. Exactly what he will do to correct these problems and still "grow the economy" is a question on many people's minds. Also, as Clinton settles into the White House, a number of his campaign promises are evolving into "goals" or being scrapped altogether. For example, the projected deficit for fiscal 1993 has increased substantially, which makes it nearly impossible to reduce the deficit by half in four years and still have money to invest in the infrastructure or make health care available to everyone.

Nevertheless, Clinton is acting quickly. With the exception of the position of Attorney General, all of his cabinet positions have been filled. The Secretary of State, Secretary of Defense, and Secretary of the Treasury were approved less than 45 minutes after Clinton took office, as one member put it, "to ensure an effective chain of command" due to the pressing international situation in Iraq. The other nominees including the two positions that Clinton plans to raise to cabinet status, the ambassador to the UN and the director of the Environmental Protection Agency were approved the following day.

Clinton has already issued an executive order lifting abortion restrictions that were imposed by Reagan and Bush. These overturned policies include the "gag rule," which prevented federally funded family planning clinics from discussing abortion as an option, and the 5-year ban on fetal tissue research, which could possibly benefit people with Parkinson's disease, Alzheimer's disease, diabetes, spinal cord injuries, and other ailments. Clinton also plans to revoke prohibitions of RU 486, a French "abortion pill," if it meets USFDA standards.

Clinton is also expected to sign a bill now working its way through the House which would strengthen Roe vs. Wade by giving women the right to abortion by federal law. But first on the agenda will be a bill that will give pregnant women an unpaid leave of absence from businesses that have more than 50 employees. A similar bill was vetoed by Bush last year.

Clinton will probably lift the ban on gays in the military next week, against the wishes of most members of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, who argue that such a move would demoralize the troops. Also high on his list are his plans for Congressional finance and lobbying reforms.

Clinton is also expected to define what role Hillary will play in the new administration. She is setting up an office in the west wing of the White House, and, according to a recent Wall Street Journal article, will probably serve as the head of the group that will draft the plan for health care reform.

When asked about his wife's role, Clinton replied that he would be "derelict in my duty if I didn't... take advantage of the most talented people I can find. She certainly qualifies there." He also said that he plans to use her in some "major" way, but "within the confines of what is proper."

Backing off from his pledge to submit a plan for the economy "the day after the inauguration," Clinton has said that his plan should be ready by mid-February. He and his newly-created National Economic Council will be trying to decide what type of short-term stimulus is required in balance with a long-term investment plan. Any such plan will probably be tied together with spending cuts in other areas and with tax increases, including a possible levy on gasoline and a national sales tax.

On the back burner for now, but still a high priority, are his plans for major education initiatives and for a national service plan comparable to the Peace Corps. And, of course, there's still the international scene, with peace talks in the Middle East, possible aid to Russia, the NAFTA treaty and GATT talks, and the US commitments in Somalia. All told, it looks to be a busy term for our 42nd president.

At present, restrictions on smoking in the US are low. Smoking is not

BOOK REVIEW Earth in the Balance

by Katherine Spearman
STAFF WRITER

Vice President Al Gore's book Earth in the Balance is a book for anybody even remotely interested in the future of our world. It is written not merely from the environmental standpoint but also from a business, technological, social, and political standpoint. The book begins with an alarming account of Gore's trip to the Aral Sea in the former Soviet Union. Once the fourth largest inland sea in the world, it has been reduced to a fraction of its original size due to overuse in irrigation. The overuse has literally left strips stranded in a desert.

The book goes on to explore the environmental crises beyond the point of giving dry facts. In the excellent chapter Climate and Civilization: A short history, Gore gives an interesting and very plausible theory that many of history's major events such as the French Revolution and the Black Death were caused in large part by environmental crises.

He goes on to explore why we treat the planet the way we do. In the stunning chapter Environmentalism of the Spirit, he explores the background of our current relationship with the planet. He discusses how philosophers such as Plato and Aristotle and the church have shaped this view.

In a break from most other environmental books, Gore provides what he calls a Global Marshall Plan. This is a plan for ending our rapid destruction of the environment. In it he addresses such topics as technology and its role in saving the environment, the economic side, and the role of all countries, especially the United States, in this plan.

Perhaps the most important goal of this book is the message that the change must begin with you and me. All of the policies in the world can not make a difference unless we open our eyes and see that the destruction is real, and approaching rapidly is the critical point when nothing we do will stop our destruction. As Gore says at the close of the book, "For civilization as a whole, the faith that is so essential to restore the balance now missing in our relationship to the earth is the faith that we do have a future. We can believe in that future and work to achieve it and preserve it, or we can whirl blindly on, behaving as if one day there will be no children to inherit our legacy. The choice is ours, the earth is in the balance."

This book is a must-read for anyone interested in our planet, which should include everyone. It is a fascinating and fresh look at this life-threatening problem. The facts about what we have done and are doing to the environment will scare you. Hopefully, it will make you ask, "Why is this happening, and what can I do?"

Recycle PC would like to thank everyone for their support in 1992. We hope that 1993 will be even more successful. The items that can be recycled remain the same: aluminum, glass, plastics, cardboard, and newspaper. Questions should be directed to Heather Moncrief, box 974.

Recycle today for a better tomorrow!

EPA report may lead to stricter smoking restrictions for many

by Heather Moncrief
ENVIRONMENT EDITOR

The Environmental Protection Agency has concluded that secondhand smoke is a cancer-causing agent that will kill approximately 3,000 nonsmokers each year. The report issued this month also estimates that secondhand smoke causes hundreds of thousands of children to suffer from pneumonia, bronchitis, middle-ear infections, and asthma attacks. While there are both critics and advocates of the report, all believe that it could lead to stricter laws defining where, when, and around whom one can smoke.

It is speculated that OSHA (the Occupational Safety and Health Administration) will ban smoking in the workplace. Other organizations such as the American Heart Association, the American Lung Association, and the American Cancer Society have urged Congress to increase the federal excise tax on cigarettes from 27 cents to $2 a pack.

At present, restrictions on smoking in the US are low. Smoking is not banned in three-fifths of schools or two-thirds of businesses, and five states have no restrictions on smoking. These institutions may be forced to impose restrictions in the near future.

Critics of the report are pointing to weaknesses which the EPA may have to defend. The Tobacco Institute has questioned the lack of acknowledgment given to a 1992 study of the National Cancer Institute which concluded that there was no statistically significant increase in cancer among nonsmokers. However, the author of that report, Dr. Ross Brownson, commented that he did report a significant increase of cancer in women exposed to high levels of secondhand smoke.

The debate is far from over. Yet, it is predicted that the 55 million Americans who smoke will feel the results of this report, both at work and at play.

Several Presbyterian College students were asked to respond to the following question: "After becoming aware of the EPA report released this month, do you feel that there is a need for stricter regulations? Would you support such restrictions on smoking in the US are low. Smoking is not PC campus?" Their responses vary.

Brad Sims
PC Senior

"I think smoking restrictions on campus are already strong enough. You really can't smoke anywhere on campus now; there are not many places to take away. Stricter policies in some dorms have already resulted from complaints by students. However if they do impose stricter restrictions, I would feel obligated to follow them because it would be a violation of the Code of Conduct if I did not."

Lauren Heard
PC Sophomore

"I would be in favor of banning smoking in all public buildings, including buildings on campus. Not only are there long-term health risks linked with secondhand smoke, but there are also immediate effects of secondhand smoke we need to be aware of. People with respiratory disorders, such as asthma, and contact lens wearers are only a few of the people who are adversely affected by secondhand smoke."

Kelly Jernigan
PC Junior

"I think that in public places, smoke will somehow reach us all. Therefore, out of just common courtesy smokers should ask those around them if their smoke would bother them."

Stephanie Dowdy
PC Junior

"I believe that a person should be sensitive to others by not smoking if it is offensive. However, that should be their decision to make. Strict regulations would infringe on an individual's personal freedom. As far as not being allowed to smoke in the workplace, that is the decision to be made by each business as they see fit."

Ted Carmichael
PC Senior

Men's Blue Hose basketball ranked 15th in national poll

by Everett Catts
SPORTS EDITOR

With a 15-2 overall record (6-1 SAC), the 1992-93 Blue Hose Basketball Team has been recognized as one of the best squads in the nation. As of January 18, the PC team was ranked 15th in the NAIA poll, climbing six spaces from January 11's ranking. The Blue Hose are also ranked highly in the South Atlantic Conference. With a 6-1 record, PC is first in the conference, living up to their pre-season #1 ranking by the SAC coaches.

While many PC students were relaxing over the Christmas break, the Blue Hose were facing conference opponents. On Jan. 6 the team edged Catawba, 73-70. PC was led by John Lloyd's 22 points. Bret Jones, Bryan Franklin, and Derrick Lovelace followed with 14, 11, and 10 points, respectively. Lovelace added a team high 6 rebounds. Three days later, the Blue Hose crushed Elon, 68-52. Lloyd led the team with 20 points and 8 rebounds, and Jones added 11 points and hauled in 7 rebounds. Andrew Wellman had 14 points and Franklin chalked up 8.

The squad next faced Wingate, ranked second in the SAC at that time, on January 13. PC, led by Wellman's 22 points, demolished Wingate, winning 99-56 and playing all 15 players. The Blue Hose broke a school record by connecting on twelve three-pointers in the game, six of which were contributed by Wellman. Lloyd contributed 16 points, and Stephen West had 11. Guards West and Ernest Holiday hauled in 5 rebounds, while Bret Jones led the team effort with 8 rebounds.

For his contributions to that week's games, 6-10 center John Lloyd was named the SAC Player of the Week. Lloyd, a junior from Hilton Head Island, transferred from BYU last year and has been a starter in most games since.

Three days after the Wingate game, the Blue Hose drubbed Carson-Newman, 72-57. Jones led the team with 21 points and 7 rebounds. Lloyd added 15. On January 20 PC hosted Mars Hill, another team which had been second in the conference until playing the home team. In front of 1800 screaming fans, the Blue Hose won, 76-71, despite leading by only one point with 1:07

PC's Derrick Lovelace (44) goes up for a basket in a recent game with Mars Hill.

photo by Kim Gibson

left in the game. PC shot 58.5% from the field and 83% from the free-throw-line.

Bret Jones led the Blue Hose team with 27 points and 8 rebounds. Wellman added 15, and Franklin, Lloyd, and Lovelace each had 8. Fan support played a crucial role in determining the outcome of the game. In both the Wingate and Mars Hill games, the fans were terrific, giving the players, as Co-Captain Stephen West said, "...more momentum and an extra boost." Co-Captain Bret Jones added, "The fans have been great. They're a sixth man for us, and it's a great atmosphere."

After crowds of 1500 and 1800 at the Wingate and Mars Hill home victories, 1700

Unfortunately, Bret Jones' shot missed, and the game went to overtime.

During almost all of the five-minute overtime period, the Bears had the lead, with PC tying the score at 65 and 69 points each. With the score tied, 69-69, the Bears' Tyrone McDaniel missed a three-pointer. With only seven ticks remaining on the clock, the Blue Hose dribbled the ball past half court and called a time out. Only two seconds were left for the Blue Hose to win the game. John Lloyd passed the ball to an airborne Bret Jones, who tried a short bank shot but missed, sending the game to a second overtime. The score stood at 69-69.

PC tied the score four times in the second overtime. With the Blue Hose down by three, 80-77, Andrew Wellman hit a three-pointer to tie the score. Unfortunately, the Bears followed with six unanswered points, partially due to two crucial offensive fouls by the Blue Hose. The game ended with the score 86-80.

When asked about the team's overall play and goal fulfilling, Coach Nibert said, "We've been really pleased. After the loss to Belmont Abbey [in December], they've worked hard. Tony Grant and freshman Bryan Franklin have done a great job off the bench. Stephen West is shooting the ball well, and Jay Whitney and freshman Jonathan Bankhead have done well defensively and offensively."

Bret Jones added, "The loss to L-R hurt, but we're still number one in the SAC. We hope to finish 13-1 or 14-2 in the conference."

When discussing PC's five freshman players, Bret Jones said, "Franklin is playing very well for a freshman, and Jonathan Bankhead has been surprisingly good. He's a good 3-point shooter. All of them have been great."

West added, "They're giving us a lift off the bench, giving us crucial baskets and momentum."

Coach Nibert also commented on the team's national ranking, which remained at 15th in the NAIA poll this week. He said, "It's a real compliment to our players and coaches to be recognized. We should use and will use it as a motivating factor, but we try not to think about it."

The Blue Hose defeated Wofford on January 25, 82-70, and travel to Gardner-Webb tomorrow.

PC take on Lenoir-Rhyne, the third straight team ranked second in the SAC to visit the Blue Hose squad. PC started quickly, leading 10-2 just 4:45 into the game. The Bears of L-R narrowed the gap, but the Blue Hose pulled out to a 15-point lead with 6:13 left in the half. At halftime PC was up by seven, 32-25.

In the second half, the Bears came back and eventually tied the score at 40 points apiece with 12:59 left. From then on, Lenoir-Rhyne was ahead until Tony Grant's three-point play tied the score, 61-61, with 1:29 remaining. After getting the ball back on a Lenoir-Rhyne turnover, the Blue Hose had 40 seconds to score for the win.

In The Spotlight

Name: Will Lindstrom

Sport: Men's Soccer

Position: Midfielder

Class: Senior

Major: Psychology

Minor: English

Awards: four-time All-SAC; three-time All-SAC Tournament Team;

three-time All-District; 1992 NAIA

first team All-American; two-time

All-South; 1992 NAIA All-

America Scholar Athlete; two-time

NAIA Academic All-District; two-time SAC Academic Honor Roll;

1992 SAC Player of the Year; 1992

SAC Tournament MVP; 1993

Umbrro Senior Bowl.

Name: Lisa Kimbrell

Sport: Women's Volleyball

Position: Middle Hitter

Class: Senior

Major: Math Education

Awards: 1989, 1991 second team All-

SAC; 1992 first team All-SAC; 1992 All-

District; two-time Wofford Invitational

Tournament MVP; 1991 second team

Alabama-Huntsville Tournament; two-time SAC Tournament Team.

photos by Todd Love

Women's basketball team led by the 1 - 2 punch of Hilliard and Johnson

by Everett Catts
SPORTS EDITOR

Led by the one-two punch of Jennifer Hilliard and Melanie Johnson, the Lady Blue Hose Women's Basketball Team is 11-5 (4-4 SAC). Both Hilliard, a 5-9 Junior forward from Columbia, and Johnson, a 5-9 Sophomore forward/guard from Snellville, GA, are averaging over 16 points per game and are among the SAC leaders in scoring. Both players are also leading PC in rebounding, with over 6 per game for each. Not to be overlooked are Kaye Watts and Dionne Williams. At the guard position, Watts is averaging 11 points per game and is always an outside threat, making 28% of her three-pointers. Williams is a 5-9 forward who averages 6 points and rebounds per game.

Like PC's men's team, the Lady Blue Hose have been playing since the first week of January. On January 4 the women's squad travelled to Lenoir-Rhyne. Led by Hilliard's 24 points and 8 rebounds, PC crushed the Bears, 84-66. Two days later, the Lady Blue Hose visited Catawba. PC edged the Indians, 59-58, again led by Jennifer Hilliard, who chalked up 20 points and hauled in an incredible 14 rebounds. It was Hilliard's third double-double of the season.

In their third straight conference road game, PC took on Elon, losing by one point, 62-61. Johnson and Watts lead the Lady Blue Hose with 14 points apiece. Williams hauled in 11 rebounds to lead PC's attack on the boards. Two days later, the Lady Blue Hose hosted Erskine for their first home game of 1993. PC obliterated the Flying Fleet, 81-55. Johnson led the Lady Blue Hose with 25 points. Williams and Hilliard each had 8 rebounds.

With a win on January 13 against Wingate (then 6-0 in SAC), the Lady Blue Hose had a chance to move up in the SAC standings and knock off the #1 team in the conference. Despite getting 16 points from Melanie Johnson and 6 rebounds from Dionne Williams, PC lost by four, 76-72. Three days later, in a loss to SAC foe Carson-Newman, Jennifer Hilliard scored 12 points and added 8 rebounds.

Trying to snap their two-game slump, the Lady Blue Hose faced Mars Hill in a key home game. With a win, the team could improve their SAC record to 3-4. PC did just that, crushing the Lady Lions by 16 points, 72-56. Hilliard and Johnson once again shined. Hilliard's 22 points led all scorers, and Johnson hauled in 7 rebounds. Williams also had 7 boards.

The Lady Blue Hose next faced SAC rival Lenoir-Rhyne on January 23. The Lady Bears suffered a crushing defeat at the hands of PC, 80-63. The victory evened the Lady Blue Hose's conference record at 4-4 and improved their overall record to 11-5. PC is now fourth in the conference. Lenoir-Rhyne fell to 0-8 in the SAC. Johnson led PC with 19 points and 6 rebounds. Williams followed with 10 points and 8 rebounds, and Hilliard had 8 rebounds and 7 boards. Even more important was Chris Mitchum's 13 points. Mitchum, a 5-7 freshman guard, was three-for-eight at the three-point line and has hit 36% of her three-pointers to lead the team.

The Lenoir-Rhyne game was only one example of the dominant play by Johnson

Jennifer Hilliard (left) prepares to pass the ball against a Mars Hill defender.

photo by Kim Gibson

and Hilliard. Johnson had 40 points and 13 rebounds combined in the games against Mars Hill and Lenoir-Rhyne. In all 16 games, one or the other has led PC in scoring. Also, in 14 of the squad's 16 games, one of the two players has led the team in rebounds. Besides leading the Lady Blue Hose in scoring and rebounding, both players are among the team leaders in steals, assists, and freethrow percentage. Head Coach Beth Couture commented on the players, saying, "I'm really pleased with Melanie and Jennifer, but they have to play well for us to go far in the playoffs."

When asked about the team's playing, Couture said, "Being 10-5 (now 11-5) is good. We've had a lot of high points and a couple of lows, but I'm confident where we are."

Co-Captain Ashley Jenkins added, "I think we've done well to be so young, and when we can play really well, we're very hard to beat." Lavette Douglas, the other Co-Captain, added, "If we focus on what we need to, we can do better. I don't think our team realizes how good we are."

Coach Couture also commented on the three freshmen—Chris Mitchum, Kristy Tarallo, and Jennifer Mims. Couture said, "Chris is a good offensive threat, Kristy is good on defense, and Jennifer Mims has started and played well."

Commenting on fan support, Couture said, "The cheerleaders have been great in leading the crowd."

Jenkins added, "I love it. The last game (against Lenoir-Rhyne) was great with ZTA and the band."

Douglas also said, "I think our fans are great. Though we still don't get as much recognition."

The Lady Blue Hose's next home game is against Lander, at 6:00 on February 1.

Intercristo is always looking for job leads...

So you don't have to.

You're considering Christian service, are open to relocating, but don't know where to begin? Start with us! Our team uncovers new job leads daily. Our ministry jobs span 215 occupational categories. Your job skills are needed in ministry. We'll show you where. Call today, toll free:

1-800-426-1342

Or return the coupon below

The Christian Career Specialists
19303 Fremont Ave. N.
Seattle, WA 98133-3800

Name _____
Address _____
City _____ State _____ Zip _____

Intramural Basketball Standings

A League (Men)	W	L	B League (Men)	W	L	C League (Men)	W	L
Sigma Nu	2	0	New Guns	1	0	Bailey	0	0
BBB	2	0	Rising Phoenix I	1	0	RP Crickets	0	0
CMB	2	0	Pi Kappa Alpha	0	0	Sigma Nu II	0	0
Public Enemy	1	0	Kappa Alpha	0	1	Penthouse Players	0	0
Pi Kappa Alpha	1	1	Chicos Malos	0	1	C League (Div. II)
Theta Chi I	0	1	B League (Div. II)			Pi Kappa Alpha	1	0
Pi Kappa Phi	0	1	DGS	1	0	Sigma Nu	1	0
Fab 5	0	1	Org. Come	1	0	Balsax	0	1
Theta Chi II	0	2	Rising Phoenix II	0	1	Unwanted	0	1
Supreme Court	0	2	Trojans	0	1	C League (Div. III)
Women's League (Div. I)			B League (Div. III)			PC Staff	1	0
ICTHUS	1	0	Bailey	1	0	Judy Fly	1	0
U Lose	1	0	Run-N-Shoot	1	0	Rising Phoenix	0	1
Barron Dorm	1	0	Theta Chi	0	0	Spinners	0	1
ADP	0	1	Sigma Nu	0	1
Theta Chi Girls	0	1	Cooter's Crew	0	1

Alexander Peskanov file photo

Renowned Russian pianist to perform tonight at PC

Press Release
OFFICE OF PUBLIC RELATIONS

Alexander Peskanov may have nurtured and fine-tuned his piano skills in the Ukraine, but audiences in the United States and Europe are reaping the benefits of his performances.

Tonight, Peskanov will bring his talents to the Edmunds Hall stage, highlighting the 11th annual Presbyterian College Piano Clinic for teachers and students. The 8:15 pm concert is open to the public. PC students must bring their ID to gain admittance.

Peskanov, a graduate of the Stoliarsky School of Music in Odessa, Ukraine, received his degrees from the Juilliard School. He made his American debut as orchestral soloist with the National Symphony under Mstislav Rostropovich, who has since invited Peskanov to perform with the National Symphony at Wolf Trap and with the London Symphony Orchestra in Albert Hall.

He was a soloist on the entire six-week United States tour of the Polish Chamber Orchestra, performing at the Kennedy Center in Washington, D.C., and at the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York City. Peskanov has collaborated with such illustrious musicians as Yo-Yo Ma, Maurice Andre, and Jean-Pierre Rampal.

Peskanov, a successful composer of classical works, musicals, and film scores, was featured in a PBS television special entitled Odessa on the Savanna - The Music of Alexander Peskanov. He is the author of the six-book series on The Russian Technical Regimen for the Piano and is also the founder of The Piano Olympics, a program designed to stimulate progress in piano pedagogy, utilizing the benefits of the Russian Piano School.

SUB Winter Formal set for Saturday night at Clinton Armory

by Camisha Clarke
ENTERTAINMENT EDITOR

A Presbyterian College tradition continues tomorrow night as the Student Union Board (SUB) sponsors its fourth annual Winter Formal dance. With the bands Curiosity Shoppe and DJ Rolling Thunder providing the sounds for this evening of elegance, Saturday night should consist of a combination of quality entertainment and personal merriment.

Although the amount of student participation and enthusiasm for Winter Formal have decreased during the past two years compared to the first year, SUB is expecting a change in the response of the student body because of some of the changes that have been made this year. In an effort to comply with the requests made by some members of the student body, SUB changed the location of the dance from Springs Campus Center gym to the National Guard Armory in Clinton. Many students expressed a desire to have the formal off-campus so that the atmosphere would seem to be a formal rather than a typical social gathering.

SUB President Meg Oxford said, "I think [the Armory] will draw more people," but added, "It's not as convenient." Nevertheless, the enormous size of the Armory is an advantage because it allows for a unified dance floor and refreshment area.

In addition to the change of location, a cash bar will be available this year for those students who are above the legal drinking age. Sponsored in part and supplied by Springers Restaurant in Laurens, the cash bar will sell non-alcoholic beverages such as

Curiosity Shop will perform tomorrow night at Winter Formal. file photo

Coke and Pepsi as well. Those people who plan to purchase alcoholic beverages from this bar should bring proper identification. Of course, punch and hors d'oeuvres will be served.

In order to decrease the potential for drunk-driving situations, SUB will provide a shuttle running to and from the Armory during the hours of the formal, 9:00 pm to 1:00 am. The shuttle will pick up passengers from the Springs parking lot. Anyone willing to join in the fight against drinking and driving may do so by volunteering to drive the shuttle tomorrow night. All persons interested should contact Meg Oxford at 9-833-9578 or Randy Randall at Ext. 8486.

Upcoming CEP Events

January 29

Concert - Members of the PC Music Department faculty will present a recital as the opening event of the 11th annual Piano Clinic. 2:00 EH

January 29

Concert - Alexander Peskanov, pianist. Peskanov is an internationally known soloist, a renowned teacher of the Russian piano tradition, and the founder of the Piano Olympics. 8:15 EH

February 1

Concert - The American Boyschoir. The choir has performed in 48 states and over 25 foreign countries, including such venues as the White House, the Vatican and Westminster Abbey. Admission by PC student ID. 7:30 BA

February 2

Convocation - Parker Palmer, author, teacher, activist, and Quaker, will speak on issues in education, community, spirituality, and social change. 11:00 BA

February 7

Concert - Gospel Extravaganza/Black History Month. The PC Fellowship Singers will be joined by choirs from other colleges and choirs from area churches. 7:00 EH

February 9

Convocation - Dr. Bernita Berry, Professor of Sociology at John Carroll University, is an outspoken advocate for women and minorities. She is a frequent radio and television talk show guest. 11:00 BA

THE BLUE STOCKING

"Give the people the light, so they may find the way."

Volume LXXXVII Number 7

PRESBYTERIAN COLLEGE

Clinton, South Carolina 29325

Friday, February 12, 1993

SGA Representative raises questions about PC political machine Vice President and Secretary deny charges of wrongdoing and corruption

Elections for next year's Student Government Association Executive Council are scheduled to be held within two weeks. However, according to one member of SGA, plans are already being developed by certain members of the current Executive Council to create a political machine, ensuring the successful campaigns of candidates from particular fraternities on campus.

Landon Westbrook, a junior class representative, believes that certain members of SGA are plotting to control next year's student government. Westbrook stated that she has been contacted by several fraternity members who expressed concern about being approached to implement a political machine at Presbyterian College.

"I have spoken to different people around campus, and I believe that the creation of a coalition of three fraternities is being formed to vote in blocks and by proxy for a slate of candidates prepared by SGA Vice President Ron Mixon and SGA Secretary Jeff Garrison. The block voting would allow each of the involved fraternities to have at least one representative on the Executive Council," she said.

According to Westbrook's information, the three fraternities involved include Theta Chi, Sigma Nu, and Kappa Alpha Order. However, Westbrook points out that believe it would weaken SGA, because a machine defeats the entire purpose of a democratic organization," said Westbrook.

Landon Westbrook

Ron Mixon

not every member of the above-mentioned fraternities is involved in the creation of a machine.

"It is important to stress that not every fraternity member is involved," said Westbrook. "I have spoken to members of Theta Chi, KA, and Sigma Nu who are appalled at the suggestion of this plan. It involves just certain elements in each group who have shown an interest in creating a machine."

"Apparently, the group felt that a machine would make SGA a stronger organization on campus. I

Jeff Garrison

"I think the possibility of a machine is highly unethical, and it concerns me that so much power could be placed in the hands of such an inept few," added Westbrook.

SGA Vice President Ron Mixon denies that an organized effort to create a political machine at PC ever existed. "On a personal level, I was curious about a machine, but it was never pursued. It has become a dead issue," he said.

Mixon stated that the talk of a machine on campus has been generated by miscommunication. "I am sorry that my intentions were misunderstood. I am trying to further SGA, not hurt it," he said.

"I have talked to one or two people, asking them their thoughts about SGA and encouraging them to run for an office. I approached these people not because they were in a fraternity but because they were quality people who could help SGA," added Mixon.

SGA Secretary Jeff Garrison also denied that he had any part in the creation of a political machine. Garrison has been mentioned as a potential candidate for SGA President. "Rumors are pretty vicious. Ron Mixon mentioned to me that I would make a good candidate for SGA President next year because I have seen the inner workings of SGA," he said.

"It is absurd to believe that something like this, a 'machine,' could ever work its way out of a vicious cycle of rumors and into action at a school the size of PC," said Garrison.

"Nothing has ever been mentioned to me about a machine. I see this as an attempt to discredit me. I was not a main player in this thing. I was nowhere near the playing field," added Garrison.

On The Inside

Page 3 . . .

How safe is PC? Public Safety releases the latest crime statistics for the campus.

Page 4 . . .

Some PC professors share their fondest memories of Valentine's Day.

Page 6 . . .

Coaches Polson and Purcell do their best for PC soccer.

PC Freshman Carey Bailey works on the set for the Drama Department's production of A Midsummer Night's Dream. The play will highlight the opening of the Harper Center. (See related story on page 3.)

photo by Kim Williams

Postcards from Atlanta: A rural perspective of life in the big city

by Jason West
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

I guess you could say that I am just a country boy - a country boy at heart. I grew up and currently live in a rural community located in the northernmost portion of Kershaw County, South Carolina. My neighborhood consists of my house, a cow pasture, a couple of horses, and deserted country roads.

This past weekend, I had an eye opening experience. I visited, for the first time, the big metroplex of Atlanta, Georgia. (I know it's hard to believe that I have been a Southerner all my life and never visited the Empire City of the South.) Needless to say, the trip was an eventful one.

One thing that I found most disturbing about Atlanta was the traffic. I have never seen a highway that had 12 lanes and thousands of cars on it. We arrived in the Atlanta area at about 4:30 on a Friday afternoon - big mistake. Traffic was so congested that I got to know the people in the lanes next to me on a personal basis, especially the lady in the red Honda. I became extremely frustrated after only moving a mile in an hour's time span. I can't imagine having to put up with that type of traffic every day.

In Kershaw County, we do not have any 12-lane highways. Four-lane highways do exist in the county seat of Camden, but my community has only two-lane highways and dirt roads with potholes. The only traffic problems we have are when certain of our farming neighbors put their tractors on the road to get to their fields.

The most interesting place I discovered in Atlanta was a section of town called Buckhead. Buckhead had it all - clothing stores, restaurants, theaters (one of which happened to be an adult type business and was playing a feature entitled Treasure Chest), night clubs, a place called the Three Dollar Cafe, and an interesting shop called Condom Sense.

Condom Sense perplexed me. It was a store that sold only condoms and related accessories, and it appeared to be doing a pretty good business. We don't have any such businesses in Kershaw County, and I don't believe we will have one any time soon. What an eye-opener.

In addition, my trip to Atlanta took me downtown, where I got to visit the World of Coke Museum, the CNN Center, Underground Atlanta, and Peachtree Plaza. I also got to ride public transportation while on my trip. Atlanta has something called MARTA (Metro-Atlanta Rapid Transit Authority). The MARTA is a subway, and surprisingly, it is clean and seems to be safe. I have always pictured subways as dirty rat-holes where people get shot and stabbed. This was not the case in Atlanta.

Atlanta was and is an interesting place. It is truly a cosmopolitan city which thrives on diversity and is destined to have a bright future, especially with the Olympics coming in 1996. However, Atlanta did not swing me over to life in the big city. True, it has more material things to offer than a community like Kershaw County. There are more jobs available, more places to eat and shop, more museums and places of culture to visit, etc.

However, Kershaw County has something to offer also.

In Kershaw County, we don't have traffic problems. There is plenty of blue sky and green fields for everyone to enjoy, and we have no major crime problems. (Sometimes we even leave our windows open during the summer months.)

We are limited in the places that we can shop and eat. However, restaurants like the Rainbow Shop and Blackmon's Little Midget in Camden and Mama's Kitchen in Bethune do provide some good, down-home meals. We also have very few places to gather for socialization. Sometimes, church is the only real place people in the community can socialize with each other. I guarantee you that it's better to socialize at church than in an adult theater in Buckhead or a store like Condom Sense.

I appreciate Atlanta for what it is. I can even appreciate why some people would want to live there. However, Atlanta is not for me. It is a nice place to visit, but I'll take the green fields and lonely roads of Kershaw County any day. Sometimes, you just got to be true to the farm boy inside.

Letter to the Editor

Dear Editor:

This is in response to the letter in the January 29, 1993 issue and request for an explanation of PC's 1991 crime statistics. A robbery, in the Federal Student Right to Know and Campus Security Act of 1990, is defined as the taking or attempt to take anything directly from a person by force or threat of force or violence and/or by putting the victim in fear. There have been no robberies reported on this campus in the 19 years of record keeping. The writer appeared to be confused between a robbery and a burglary.

A burglary is defined in the same law as the unlawful entry to a structure to commit a theft. In 1991, there were 57 burglaries reported with a total of $15,400.00 in losses for the entire year. We do encourage students to lock their rooms to help cut down on thefts.

We welcome the opportunity to explain the statistics.

Sincerely,

R. Grey Mason, Sr.
Director of Public Safety

Letter to the Editor Policy

Any student wishing to place a letter to the editor in the Blue Stocking must turn in a signed letter one week before publication. Unsigned letters will not be printed under any circumstances. Questions concerning this policy should be directed to Jason West, editor-in-chief, or Dr. Neal Prater, staff advisor.

The deadline to have a letter in the next issue is Friday, February 19, 1993.

The Blue Stocking of Presbyterian College
Clinton, South Carolina, 29325
Volume LXXXVII, Number 7
February 12, 1993

Editor-in-Chief.....Jason West
Managing Editor.....LeJeana Maddox
News Editor.....Ricky Dill
Politics Editor.....Ted Carmichael
Sports Editor.....Everette Catts
Entertainment Editor.....Camisha Clarke
Features Editor.....Martha Lynn Smith
Environment Editor.....Heather Moncrief
Photography Editor.....Kim Gibson
Layout Editor.....Angela Richardson

Advertising Editor.....Ann Mayfield
Subscriptions Editor.....Ron Nixon
Artist.....Michael Christensen

Photography Staff
Kimberlee Gibson Todd Love

Staff Writers
Elizabeth Cunard Amanda Bowers
Leigh Hearnburg Katherine Bonner
Kristina Pruitt Cher Fulbright
Paula Warren Michelle Cantey
Brian Sacco Shelly Phipps
Kim Rabon Jamey Paie
Tobin Turner Tonya Sneed

The Blue Stocking is a tri-weekly student publication of Presbyterian College. The paper serves as a forum of news and opinion of regional and national concern. For advertising, contact The Blue Stocking, Presbyterian College, Box 1061, Clinton, SC 29325. The Blue Stocking welcomes letters to the editor from all members of the PC community. Signatures are required. Letters are printed on a space available basis. The Blue Stocking reserves the right to edit all letters for proper grammar and punctuation. The final deadline for submitting letters is Friday at 12:00 p.m. the week before publication.

PC Tidbits

SGA elections scheduled

The Student Government Association has set the dates for elections for next year's student council. Applications for membership on the Executive Council (SGA President, Vice President, Secretary, Treasurer, SUB President, and Judicial Chair) have been sent to all student boxes and are due Friday, February 19. Speeches for Executive Council will be held on February 22 at 7:00 pm in Springs. Elections for Executive Council are set for Monday, February 25, with a run-off set for February 26 if necessary.

Applications for class officers are due on Friday, February 26. Speeches will be made on March 1 at 7:00 pm in Springs. Elections for class officers are set for Tuesday, March 2, with a run-off scheduled for March 3 if necessary.

PC to participate in drill

Severe Weather Awareness Week will be observed February 21 - 27. On February 24, Presbyterian College will participate in a state-wide disaster drill, sponsored by the National Weather Service, the State Emergency Preparedness Division, and the Laurens County Emergency Service. During this drill, professors are asked to stop class and explain disaster procedures. Students who have questions regarding disaster preparedness should contact Public Safety.

Summer internship offered

For nine weeks during the summer, ten South Carolina rising college seniors will have the opportunity to learn first hand about key issues such as public power and the environment through the Santee Cooper Summer Internship Program.

In order to participate in the program, a student must be a resident of South Carolina and enrolled in a South Carolina college or university. A student must also have a 3.0 GPA for courses taken during the sophomore year and must have completed a minimum of 24 credit hours during that year as well as during the junior year. A completed application, accompanied by a college transcript, must be submitted to your state legislator. For an application and brochure, contact the Office of Career Planning and Placement, located in Room 215 of Douglas House.

HFH worktrips scheduled

Habitat for Humanity sponsors worktrips every Saturday in Laurens. Contact Ron Hull (8110) if you'd like to help. The next chapter meeting is set for Wednesday, March 17, at 7:00 pm.

PC Campus Crime Statistics

Crimes (Violent & Non-Violent)	1992	1991	1990
Aggravated Assault	1	0	0
Burglary	66	57	65
Disorderly Conduct	9	6	6
Fraud	4	2	4
Harassment	4	4	2
Obscene Phone Calls	11	7	6
Tampering with Fire Equipment	19	15	6
Sex Offenses (Indecent Exposure)	2	4	1
Simple Assault	7	5	1
Trespassing	28	14	0
DUI	1	5	8
Arrests	1992	1991	1990
Alcohol Violations	3	5	19
Drug Violations	0	1	0
Weapons Violations	2	0	0

Campus crime statistics show increase for last year

by Ricky Dill
NEWS EDITOR

The 1992 year at Presbyterian College, which ended this past December, saw a slight increase in criminal activity. Statistics released from the Public Safety office showed an increase in the number of burglaries, weapons violation arrests, obscene phone calls, disorderly conduct, complaints of trespassing, and simple assault cases on campus.

The numbers indicate that there were 66 burglaries at PC last year, which resulted in $18,866 worth of lost merchandise. Of that amount, $1,350 was recovered. In 1991, 57 burglaries were reported with a total loss of $15,400.

As far as alcohol violations on campus, three students were arrested last year. That is down from five students in 1991. Off campus arrests for alcohol violations numbered 15 in 1992, down from 18 the previous year.

Obscene phone calls were up in 1992. A total of 11 were reported, which is up from 7 in 1991. In addition, disorderly conduct violations were up by three last year, fraud cases were up by two, and charges of trespassing were up by 14.

Caldwell Harper Theater dedication slated for next week

by Steve Owens
GUEST WRITER

Aspecialtwinkle enters Dr. Dale Rains' eyes when he talks about the Harper Center - the same twinkle of anticipation and pride seen in children's eyes on Christmas morning when they are about to open that long-awaited present.

For Rains, Professor of Speech and Drama, the eager anxiousness is understandable, because the Harper Center is a present he has included on his wish list since joining the Presbyterian College faculty in 1967.

"I'm simply elated. This building is everything I hoped it would be, and it is the thing I have been looking forward to for 25 years," Rains said. "It really has given me new life as a professor. I'm more excited than I have been in years."

The facility, built at an approximate cost of $1.4 million, opened its doors to students beginning in January. Housing three faculty and staff offices and classrooms, it will be the new home for the college's theater arts students, Rains, and Assistant Professor of Theater Arts Lesley Preston. Overlooking the lake on the college's East Plaza, the Harper Center will replace the department's cramped quarters in Douglas House.

The move will allow the college's art department to assume use of the entire first floor of the Douglas House. The department will also benefit from a highlight of the Harper Center - a spacious art gallery which will allow Associate Professor of Art Mark Anderson and Associate Professor of Art Dr. Bob Hild to bring larger art exhibits on allow others to stay abreast of the action.

The massive project was made possible through the "Building from Strength" Capital Campaign and a major gift from Caldwell Harper of Greenville, SC, for whom the theater is named. The entire building is named in honor of the Harper family.

"I was on the committee when we renovated Jacobs Hall and moved the little black box theater to the Douglas House," Harper said. "It came to my attention that we could re-establish the theater and create a facility that would be of interest not only to the college but also to the community because it has so many uses. It was quite a challenge for us to accept, but I was absolutely delighted when we had the reception there (during the joint board meeting in November). I feel that it is going to be a real asset to the college."

It is the Harper Center, however, that excites Rains. Opening night for the Caldwell Harper Theater will be February 17, 1993, the first of five days of special events planned to celebrate the new facility. The Harper Center will officially be dedicated on Saturday, February 20. The opening performance will be William Shakespeare's A Midsummer Night's Dream, marking the third time Rains will have staged that play.

Love abounds on campus:

PC professors share their own special stories of love and romance

by Christie Grant
STAFF WRITER

While Cupid aims his arrows at various students around campus this weekend, several professors will also be struck by the loves in their own lives. The following article is a collection of memorable love stories told by members of the PC faculty.

Dr. Jim Skinner, an English professor, found the love of his life while attending military school at North Georgia College. "When breakfast time arrived at school, the girls on campus ate before the men. As the men arrived in the dining hall, the girls would be putting up their trays, getting ready to exit," he said. "One day, I saw this girl putting up her tray. I pointed over to her and told a friend that that was the woman I was going to marry."

Skinner's prediction proved to be true, as he did marry the girl whom he saw putting up her breakfast tray.

"When I proposed to her, I promised that I would be a loving and faithful husband. However, I told her that there would always be another woman in my life - Elizabeth Bennet, the heroine of Pride and Prejudice," added Skinner.

Other campus love stories offer insight into international Valentine customs.

Jim Wetzel, a PC biology instructor, met his wife while teaching an English class at a YMCA in Japan. "On the second night of the class, one of the students walked in, and it was love at first sight," said Wetzel.

"In Japan, women marry while they are very young. I was lucky, because this girl was close to my age and single," added Wetzel.

Japanese dating customs nearly got in the way of Wetzel's courtship. "In Japan, we were forced to first date in groups instead of the typical American one-on-one date. I waited until her thirtieth birthday and sent her 30 roses. It took 30 roses to get her to go out for a cup of coffee with me," said Wetzel.

He proposed to his bride-to-be at Christmastime, and the couple now has two three-year-old twin sons. One speaks fluent Japanese and the other son excels in English. Wetzel reports that the Japanese have a

Valentine's Day on February 14. On that day, women send men chocolate. In addition, doctors receive chocolate from their patients, and male teachers receive it from their students. On March 14, known as White Day, men give their sweethearts white chocolate.

Lu-ying Yang, a visiting professor from China, said that dating is treated more seriously in her country than in the United States. "When you are dating someone in China, you will marry them. In America, dating means nothing. But in China, dating means a lot," she said.

"There is no officially recognized Valentine's Day in China. However, there are a few young people who know about this day, so they exchange cards and gifts. Most people are not familiar with the holiday," said Yang.

Dr. Hudson's son, Noel, now ten years old, cuddles a rabbit in a picture submitted from the Hudson family album. Dr. Hudson and his family adopted Noel from the Philippines several years ago. photo by Hudson

Comments on love and our son Noel...

Love has many facets; however, when I think of "true love," I agree with C.S. Lewis and think of a love that is similar to loving myself. At times, I don't even like myself, but I do love myself anyway. When I truly love someone, it is not just during the times that the hormones are high, or my altruism is elevated because of some goodness that they have just done for me, but it is a consistent love that persists through all phases of life.

When Linda, our girls and I adopted Noel, it was not because we were infertile. We wanted to have a third child but thought we should help a child that was already in the world rather than add another member to the already exploding population. At that time, the Philippines had orphanages with over 600 children in them on one meal a day, which was nearly all rice. When Noel first arrived at our house, he would eat nothing but rice, which he would cram into his mouth until his cheeks bulged. Then when he knew that this amount of food was safely his, he would begin to try and chew and swallow.

Love is truly universal. Noel began to open up to us within thirty minutes after arriving at the airport. By nightfall, he would jump off the steps into my arms (a definite sign of trust... silly child!). He has brought so much joy to our family that we cannot imagine life without him. Although each child is an individual, Noel certainly has no major differences in response to us as parents than do either of our daughters. We wholeheartedly recommend overseas adoption as an alternative to having your own natural-born third child.

—by Dr. Bob Hudson
PC Biology Dept.

Proposal to allow gays in military causes division in Congress

by Ted Carmichael
POLITICS EDITOR

Homosexuals in today's society have become increasingly prominent in the news recently, from Colorado's "anti-gay" referendum to the continuing effects of AIDS. Now, in what is President Clinton's first political fight, the nearly 50-year-old ban on gays in the military is under fire.

Clinton's promise to remove the ban was a minor pledge during his campaign, wedged between reforms for health care and plans for the economy. But the gay ban issue has caused Clinton to expend some much needed political capital and has put him at odds with both the Joint Chiefs of Staff and Georgia Senator Sam Nunn, head of the Senate Armed Services Committee.

Clinton's problem, say some insiders, was his being unprepared to deal with the powerful military leaders and influential members of Congress as well as with the leaks that seemed to surface at every stage of the negotiations. When General Colin Powell, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs, spoke out against removing the ban, some gay activists became worried that Clinton was backing off his promise and leaked word to the press. The president was already under pressure for changing his stance on the gasoline tax and the middle class tax cut. However, he reaffirmed his commitment a few days later, saying, "Removing the ban is not an issue; only how and when it will be removed is."

Clinton's hard-line approach seemed to make the Joint Chiefs more resistant to any compromise on the ban. As Arizona Senator John McCain put it, "A smarter scenario would have been to ask [the Chiefs] down to Little Rock... and say, 'Look, I made this commitment, help me work my way through this.' Instead, the Chiefs were just told to do this and that." Clinton also had to deal with Senator Nunn, who recently gave a 25-minute speech in the Senate, raising over 40 questions on the issue.

In subsequent meetings, a compromise was worked out between Senator Nunn and the President. The practice of asking military recruits about their sexual orientation will be stopped immediately. In the coming months, Defense Secretary Les Aspin will work on the exact wording of the Executive Order, which will be signed on July 15th. Also, homosexuals who are in the service and come forward between now and mid-July will be separated from active duty and placed in a special reserve.

With Senator Nunn supporting Clinton, there is little doubt that the Republicans and some conservative Democrats will not be able to pass the ban into law, as they are now trying to do. Even if they could - and then override a presidential veto - the law's constitutionality would come under question. A judge in a California federal court recently ruled that a discharge from the armed services based on sexual orientation is unconstitutional, based on the equal-protection clause of the 14th Amendment.

The issue becomes more complicated when one looks at the details involved in lifting the ban. For instance, what should be done about sleeping quarters or shower facilities? Are there areas in the military where homosexuals would disrupt the unity, and therefore the effectiveness, of the various units? The safety of known homosexuals as well as methods to identify discrimination are issues that must also be addressed. As one Navy petty officer put it, "Your superiors will find ways not to promote you" if you "come out of the closet."

The more formidable task for Clinton will be changing the current anti-gay culture in the military itself. Many homosexuals will keep their secret hidden, even if the ban is lifted, to avoid insults and physical attacks. There are reports that known or suspected gays have been harassed by their fellow servicemen, with spray-painted signs on lockers or even "blanket parties," in which the victim is held under covers and then beaten. There are even reports that people have been forced into their wall lockers while the lights were out and then thrown out of a second or third story window. Those who know about such attacks usually keep quiet for fear of being next.

President Clinton and Les Aspin have until July to solve these problems in a way agreeable to everyone involved. Clinton is eager to get this situation behind him, so that he can work on other problems that were "central to the campaign." One aide said, in reference to the President's frustration, that the administration needs to "get the whole thing out of the way and get back to work." Still, if such a seemingly uncomplicated issue can take up so much time, one wonders what will happen when the President must face the complexity of, say, the deficit.

What do PC students think about allowing homosexuals in the military?

Senior Marlene Neal, psychology major — "I think the ban should be lifted. I don't think either sex goes to boot camp to find a date. Anyone who wants to fight for their country should have that right, no matter what their sexual orientation is. They are fighting for the same cause."

Cadet 2LT Brad Williams, 55B10, 450th ORD Co. — "I feel that a person's sexual orientation in most cases will not interfere with the performance of their duties. The Army's motto is 'Duty, Honor, Country'; therefore, I am of the opinion that if a soldier performs his or her duty to the standard which is set, sexual orientation should not be questioned. Having served with a homosexual, I have found that his sexual preference in no way affected his performance as a soldier, nor did it infringe upon my choice to be heterosexual."

Senior political science major Shelley Phipps — "I believe lifting the ban on gays in the military will be detrimental to the cohesiveness and the morale that is crucial to the success of our armed forces."

Sophomore Alicia Perry, Christian ed. major — "I believe that homosexuals should be allowed to serve their country, because they are not less human or capable than heterosexuals. To deny a homosexual his or her right to serve their country is discriminatory, which I believe to be immoral as well as being unconstitutional. To me, the whole issue boils down to respecting each other's differences, whether they be sexual orientation, race, or gender."

FLAG group seeks to promote diversity on campus

by LeJeanna Maddox
MANAGING EDITOR

According to a statement released to the Blue Stocking this week, an informal FLAG group has formed on the Presbyterian College campus.

In its statement of purpose, the group is organizing "in the spirit of enhancing diversity on the Presbyterian College campus." Friends of Lesbians and Gays was founded on the principles of educating both its members and non-members about the nature of and issues involved in sexual orientation, including homo-, hetero-, and bisexuality.

Through the educational activities presented by FLAG, members seek to "encourage others to learn about various ways of living in order to develop tolerance and understanding of all orientations." According to the statement, FLAG is not affiliated with any political organization; it is essentially an educational, support, and social group for everyone.

Several faculty members have expressed their support for the group. Dr. Terry Barr, assistant professor of English, said, "I respect and encourage any minority group's right to heighten awareness of sensitive issues and to educate people to become more open and tolerant. Therefore," he added, "I am completely supportive of the formation of the FLAG group as a means to fight hatred, discrimination, and ignorance."

Dr. Dave Gillespie, professor of political science, added his support, emphasizing that the group is composed of a variety of individuals, both homosexual and heterosexual. "According to most accounts, ten percent of President Bush's military, ten percent of President Clinton's military, ten percent of the student body is homosexual," he said. "In a FLAG group, the percentages may be different, but the same principle holds. In PC's FLAG, there are people of both sexual orientations. More to the point, they are among your friends and neighbors in the PC community. I admire their courage in setting up FLAG here."

If any student is interested in attending the group's meetings, please respond to Box 1097.

Love abounds on campus:

PC professors share their own special stories of love and romance

by Christie Grant
STAFF WRITER

While Cupid aims his arrows at various students around campus this weekend, several professors will also be struck by the loves in their own lives. The following article is a collection of memorable love stories told by members of the PC faculty.

Dr. Jim Skinner, an English professor, found the love of his life while attending military school at North Georgia College. "When breakfast time arrived at school, the girls on campus ate before the men. As the men arrived in the dining hall, the girls would be putting up their trays, getting ready to exit," he said. "One day, I saw this girl putting up her tray. I pointed over to her and told a friend that that was the woman I was going to marry."

Skinner's prediction proved to be true, as he did marry the girl whom he saw putting up her breakfast tray.

"When I proposed to her, I promised that I would be a loving and faithful husband. However, I told her that there would always be another woman in my life - Elizabeth Bennet, the heroine of Pride and Prejudice," added Skinner.

Other campus love stories offer insight into international Valentine customs.

Jim Wetzel, a PC biology instructor, met his wife while teaching an English class at a YMCA in Japan. "On the second night of the class, one of the students walked in, and it was love at first sight," said Wetzel.

"In Japan, women marry while they are very young. I was lucky, because this girl was close to my age and single," added Wetzel. Japanese dating customs nearly got in the way of Wetzel's courtship. "In Japan, we were forced to first date in groups instead of the typical American one-on-one date. I waited until her thirtieth birthday and sent her 30 roses. It took 30 roses to get her to go out for a cup of coffee with me," said Wetzel.

He proposed to his bride-to-be at Christmas time, and the couple now has two three-year-old twin sons. One speaks fluent Japanese and the other son excels in English.

Wetzel reports that the Japanese have a

Valentine's Day on February 14. On that day, women send men chocolate. In addition, doctors receive chocolate from their patients, and male teachers receive it from their students. On March 14, known as White Day, men give their sweethearts white chocolate.

Lu-ying Yang, a visiting professor from China, said that dating is treated more seriously in her country than in the United States. "When you are dating someone in China, you will marry them. In America, dating means nothing. But in China, dating means a lot," she said.

"There is no officially recognized Valentine's Day in China. However, there are a few young people who know about this day, so they exchange cards and gifts. Most people are not familiar with the holiday," said Yang.

Dr. Hudson's son, Noel, now ten years old, cuddles a rabbit in a picture submitted from the Hudson family album. Dr. Hudson and his family adopted Noel from the Philippines several years ago. photo by Hudson

Comments on love and our son Noel...

Love has many facets; however, when I think of "true love," I agree with C.S. Lewis and think of a love that is similar to loving myself. At times, I don't even like myself, but I do love myself anyway. When I truly love someone, it is not just during the times that the hormones are high, or my altruism is elevated because of some goodness that they have just done for me, but it is a consistent love that persists through all phases of life.

When Linda, our girls and I adopted Noel, it was not because we were infertile. We wanted to have a third child but thought we should help a child that was already in the world rather than add another member to the already exploding population. At that time, the Philippines had orphanages with over 600 children in them on one meal a day, which was nearly all rice. When Noel first arrived at our house, he would eat nothing but rice, which he would cram into his mouth until his cheeks bulged. Then when he knew that this amount of food was safely his, he would begin to try and chew and swallow.

Love is truly universal. Noel began to open up to us within thirty minutes after arriving at the airport. By nightfall, he would jump off the steps into my arms (a definite sign of trust... silly child!). He has brought so much joy to our family that we cannot imagine life without him. Although each child is an individual, Noel certainly has no major differences in response to us as parents than do either of our daughters. We wholeheartedly recommend overseas adoption as an alternative to having your own natural-born third child.

—by Dr. Bob Hudson
PC Biology Dept.

Proposal to allow gays in military causes division in Congress

by Ted Carmichael
POLITICS EDITOR

Homosexuals in today's society have become increasingly prominent in the news recently, from Colorado's "anti-gay" referendum to the continuing effects of AIDS. Now, in what is President Clinton's first political fight, the nearly 50-year-old ban on gays in the military is under fire.

Clinton's promise to remove the ban was a minor pledge during his campaign, wedged between reforms for health care and plans for the economy. But the gay ban issue has caused Clinton to expend some much needed political capital and has put him at odds with both the Joint Chiefs of Staff and Georgia Senator Sam Nunn, head of the Senate Armed Services Committee.

Clinton's problem, say some insiders, was his being unprepared to deal with the powerful military leaders and influential members of Congress as well as with the leaks that seemed to surface at every stage of the negotiations. When General Colin Powell, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs, spoke out against removing the ban, some gay activists became worried that Clinton was backing off his promise and leaked word to the press. The president was already under pressure for changing his stance on the gasoline tax and the middle class tax cut. However, he reaffirmed his commitment a few days later, saying, "Removing the ban is not an issue; only how and when it will be removed is."

Clinton's hard-line approach seemed to make the Joint Chiefs more resistant to any compromise on the ban. As Arizona Senator John McCain put it, "A smarter scenario would have been to ask [the Chiefs] down to Little Rock... and say, 'Look, I made this commitment, help me work my way through this.' Instead, the Chiefs were just told to do this and that." Clinton also had to deal with Senator Nunn, who recently gave a 25-minute speech in the Senate, raising over 40 questions on the issue.

In subsequent meetings, a compromise was worked out between Senator Nunn and the President. The practice of asking military recruits about their sexual orientation will be stopped immediately. In the coming months, Defense Secretary Les Aspin will work on the exact wording of the Executive Order, which will be signed on July 15th. Also, homosexuals who are in the service and come forward between now and mid-July will be separated from active duty and placed in a special reserve.

With Senator Nunn supporting Clinton, there is little doubt that the Republicans and some conservative Democrats will not be able to pass the ban into law, as they are now trying to do. Even if they could - and then override a presidential veto - the law's constitutionality would come under question. A judge in a California federal court recently ruled that a discharge from the armed services based on sexual orientation is unconstitutional, based on the equal-protection clause of the 14th Amendment.

The issue becomes more complicated when one looks at the details involved in lifting the ban. For instance, what should be done about sleeping quarters or shower facilities? Are there areas in the military where homosexuals would disrupt the unity, and therefore the effectiveness, of the various units? The safety of known homosexuals as well as methods to identify discrimination are issues that must also be addressed. As one Navy petty officer put it, "Your superiors will find ways not to promote you" if you "come out of the closet."

The more formidable task for Clinton will be changing the current anti-gay culture in the military itself. Many homosexuals will keep their secret hidden, even if the ban is lifted, to avoid insults and physical attacks. There are reports that known or suspected gays have been harassed by their fellow servicemen, with spray-painted signs on lockers or even "blanket parties," in which the victim is held under covers and then beaten. There are even reports that people have been forced into their wall lockers while the lights were out and then thrown out of a second or third story window. Those who know about such attacks usually keep quiet for fear of being next.

President Clinton and Les Aspin have until July to solve these problems in a way agreeable to everyone involved. Clinton is eager to get this situation behind him, so that he can work on other problems that were "central to the campaign." One aide said, in reference to the President's frustration, that the administration needs to "get the whole thing out of the way and get back to work." Still, if such a seemingly uncomplicated issue can take up so much time, one wonders what will happen when the President must face the complexity of, say, the deficit.

What do PC students think about allowing homosexuals in the military?

Senior Marlene Neal, psychology major — "I think the ban should be lifted. I don't think either sex goes to boot camp to find a date. Anyone who wants to fight for their country should have that right, no matter what their sexual orientation is. They are fighting for the same cause."

Cadet 2LT Brad Williams, 55B10, 450th ORD Co. — "I feel that a person's sexual orientation in most cases will not interfere with the performance of their duties. The Army's motto is 'Duty, Honor, Country'; therefore, I am of the opinion that if a soldier performs his or her duty to the standard which is set, sexual orientation should not be questioned. Having served with a homosexual, I have found that his sexual preference in no way affected his performance as a soldier, nor did it infringe upon my choice to be heterosexual."

Senior political science major Shelley Phipps — "I believe lifting the ban on gays in the military will be detrimental to the cohesiveness and the morale that is crucial to the success of our armed forces."

Sophomore Alicia Perry, Christian ed. major — "I believe that homosexuals should be allowed to serve their country, because they are not less human or capable than heterosexuals. To deny a homosexual his or her right to serve their country is discriminatory, which I believe to be immoral as well as being unconstitutional. To me, the whole issue boils down to respecting each other's differences, whether they be sexual orientation, race, or gender."

FLAG group seeks to promote diversity on campus

by LeJeanna Maddox
MANAGING EDITOR

According to a statement released to the Blue Stocking this week, an informal FLAG group has formed on the Presbyterian College campus.

In its statement of purpose, the group is organizing "in the spirit of enhancing diversity on the Presbyterian College campus." Friends of Lesbians and Gays was founded on the principles of educating both its members and non-members about the nature of and issues involved in sexual orientation, including homo-, hetero-, and bisexuality.

Through the educational activities presented by FLAG, members seek to "encourage others to learn about various ways of living in order to develop tolerance and understanding of all orientations." According to the statement, FLAG is not affiliated with any political organization; it is essentially an educational, support, and social group for everyone.

Several faculty members have expressed their support for the group. Dr. Terry Barr, assistant professor of English, said, "I respect and encourage any minority group's right to heighten awareness of sensitive issues and to educate people to become more open and tolerant. Therefore," he added, "I am completely supportive of the formation of the FLAG group as a means to fight hatred, discrimination, and ignorance."

Dr. Dave Gillespie, professor of political science, added his support, emphasizing that the group is composed of a variety of individuals, both homosexual and heterosexual. "According to most accounts, ten percent of President Bush's military, ten percent of President Clinton's military, ten percent of the student body is homosexual," he said. "In a FLAG group, the percentages may be different, but the same principle holds. In PC's FLAG, there are people of both sexual orientations. More to the point, they are among your friends and neighbors in the PC community. I admire their courage in setting up FLAG here."

If any student is interested in attending the group's meetings, please respond to Box 1097.

Polson and Purcell prove true dedication to sport of soccer

by Brian Sacco
STAFF WRITER

Less than a decade ago, many Americans had no idea what the sport of soccer was all about, and some considered it a game that only Europeans played.

However, in 1993, soccer has grown and continues to grow in popularity the soccer program at Presbyterian College has grown as well, thanks to the dedication of Ralph Polson and Brian Purcell.

Ralph Polson completed his tenth season as head coach of the Blue Hose men's soccer team this past year, compiling a record of 109-62-17. Since coming to PC in 1983, he has led the Blue Hose to nine consecutive NAIA post-season tournament appearances.

A 1980 graduate of Erskine College, Polson earned his B.S. in chemistry. While at Erskine, he was a four-year letterman at goalkeeper. In July of 1988, Polson completed his M.S.S. degree in sports management from the United States Sports Academy.

Throughout his career as a coach, Polson has been honored with numerous awards. In 1986 and 1988, he was named NAIA District 6 and Area 9 Coach of the Year. In 1992, Polson was named SAC Coach of the Year. He has also served as the NAIA District 6 and Area 9 Soccer Chairman as well as a member of the NAIA National Rating Board. In 1989, Polson was named assistant coach of the East Squad for the first NAIA Soccer Senior Bowl. He currently serves as State Coach for Boys for the South Carolina Youth Soccer Association Select Team Program and staff coach for the USYSA Region Three Olympic Developmental Program.

Polson contributes his success to the influence of his father. "My father always said that a person could do whatever he wanted if he put his mind to it. Once I chose my direction, he was always there to support me and encourage me or even console me,"

Coaches Polson and Purcell provide the leadership for PC soccer. photo by Todd Love

he said. "I feel successful as a coach when I have recruited the type of student-athlete that has been successful on the field and in the classroom," said Polson.

PC Athletic Director Cally Gault had high praise for Polson. "Coach Polson has done a splendid job in crafting one of the best soccer programs in the South. His dedication to his players, to PC, and to soccer is obvious. He has proven to be a valuable asset to Presbyterian College. He is an excellent coach and one who develops players who reach their highest capabilities under his direction," he said.

program. There have been so many wonderful memories, so many wonderful people. I hope that I mean as much to those people as they mean to me," said Polson.

Brian Purcell has completed his fourth season as the head coach of the women's soccer team, compiling a 37-31-2 record. A 1987 PC graduate, Purcell was a four-year letterman at midfield for the Blue Hose. Purcell earned a master's degree in sports management from the United States Sports Academy in 1989.

Purcell credits much of his success to Ralph Polson, a former coach and current colleague. Purcell was named the first head coach of the PC women's program in 1989 after serving as an assistant coach on the men's team for two years. "Most of what I know about soccer, I learned directly from Polson," he said.

"My greatest accomplishment at PC has been to oversee the development of the women's soccer team from its beginning to the place that we are right now," added Purcell.

Purcell was honored in 1990 and 1992 by being named SAC and NAIA District 26 Coach of the Year.

"Brian Purcell's patience in watching the women's program develop without losing his intensity plus his loyalty to PC have been his greatest contribution," said Athletic Director Gault. "His sincere interest in his players and their performances in the classroom, on campus, and in everyday life as well as in soccer is also a great attribute."

Blue Hose tennis looks to new season Both teams hope to build on past success

by Brian Sacco
STAFF WRITER

If past success is any indication of future success, neither the 1993 Blue Hose men's or women's tennis teams should have difficulty reaching post-season tournaments.

The men's team will be returning five of the top six singles players and the number two doubles team from last year's national tournament.

Mallory McRae, a 1992 tennis and scholar All-American, will anchor the top singles position, while juniors Mark Neease and Scott Ambrose will alternate at the next two singles positions for the Blue Hose. Seniors Glen Austell and David Freudenheim and freshman David Kemp will round out the singles positions.

McRae and Neease will be the number one doubles team while Ambrose and Freudenheim will play number two doubles. Senior Don Stilwell, Junior Paul Root, Sophomore Tyler Van Leuven, and freshmen Paul Farquharson and Jeremy Wood will provide the team with depth. The Blue Hose will be striving to reach the national tournament again while filling several vacancies on the squad.

The women's team will be faced with a rebuilding year after losing three starters from a team that won three consecutive conference championships. The Lady Blue Hose will be returning Senior Minda Griffin and juniors Dina Padgett, Stephanie Hunt, and Jennifer Miller, while freshmen Jennifer Brum, Stacie Buttorff, and Jessica Clark will be called upon to play competitively early in the season. The women would like to return as conference champions and maintain a national ranking.

"Although the team is inexperienced, the girls have been working hard to achieve success," said Coach Donna Arnold.

Women's basketball team wins four games in a row

by Everett Catts
SPORTS EDITOR

After a 73-67 loss to Wofford on January 25, the Lady Blue Hose basketball team won four straight games, defeating Gardner-Webb, Lander, Catawba, and Elon.

On January 30 the Lady Blue Hose crushed Gardner-Webb, 79-61. Melanie Johnson led all scorers with 24 points, and Jennifer Hilliard had 8 rebounds.

The Women's Team next hosted three games, beginning with Lander on February 1. PC defeated the Lady Senators, 80-65. Hilliard led the team with 18 points and 8 boards.

Two days later, the Lady Blue Hose edged Catawba, 83-81. Johnson's 27 points led the team. Hilliard, Chris Mitchum, and Dee Dee Williams each had 5 rebounds.

PC then was victorious against Elon on February 6, winning in overtime, 85-75. Johnson was 13 for 24 from the field and finished with 30 points and 8 rebounds. Hilliard added 8 boards. Mitchum and Kaye Watts had 14 and 13 points, respectively.

Dee Dee Williams, a junior who has improved over the season, had 4 rebounds in the victory. Against Gardner-Webb, she scored 16 points. During that week, Williams broke a team record by connecting on 27 consecutive free throws. The old record of 25 straight had stood for ten years.

Head Coach Beth Couture commented on her players' performance, saying, "They've (Johnson and Hilliard) been two keys for the team. Dee Dee's playing well and Chris Mitchum is improving with every game." Couture added, "Kaye Watts has been shooting better, and everyone has stepped up and done a better job for us."

When asked about the play of Johnson and Hilliard, the team's leading scorers, Couture said, "In the past five games Melanie and Jennifer have picked up the tempo and played a more complete game."

With the four wins, the Lady Blue Hose are 15-6 (7-4 SAC) and have moved up to third place in the conference, a position with which Coach Couture is happy. Couture said, "The third position is very important because the top three teams go to the district playoffs, and that is our goal."

The Women's team lost to Mars Hill 73-69 on February 8 and will host Carson-Newman tomorrow at 5:45. Their last home game of the season is against Converse at 6:00 on February 15.

PC's Jennifer Mims (50) looks to pass the ball to a teammate. photo by Kim Gibson

Hose basketball team ranked 12th in national poll

by Brian Sacco
STAFF WRITER

Success for PC basketball has not been easy to come by. But as the season has progressed, the Blue Hose have gained confidence and experience. They have rolled to a 19-2 overall record and a ranking of 12th in the latest national poll, the highest ranking in school history. The Blue Hose remained first in the SAC through last weekend's games, while improving to 9-1.

On January 30 the Blue Hose travelled to Gardner Webb College in an important SAC game. Andrew Wellman led PC to a 68-58 victory with 20 points, while Bret Jones pulled down eight rebounds.

On February 1 the Blue Hose hosted Lander College in a non-conference game. Wellman led PC to an 81-61 victory with 16 points, while Jones contributed eight rebounds.

On February 3 Catawba College visited Close Arena, looking for an upset against the highly ranked Blue Hose in a SAC game. PC did not falter and came away victorious, 72-61. Jones led PC with 17 points and nine rebounds, while Tony Grant also pulled down nine rebounds.

On February 6 PC hosted SAC rival Elon College and prevailed over the Fighting Christians, 73-61. Jones led PC with 21 points, and Grant pulled down 10 rebounds.

- Drinking and drugs cloud your mind and cause risky choices.
- Unsafe sex can lead to AIDS.
- If you're pregnant your baby can get AIDS too.
- Get help for a drug or drinking problem.
- If you have sex, use condoms. Or avoid taking the risk altogether.

FIND OUT ABOUT DRUGS, SEX
AND AIDS
CALL - 1-800-322-AIDS

Andrew Wellman (20) defends a Catawba player. photo by Kim Gibson

Baseball team prepares for '93 season

by Everett Catts
SPORTS EDITOR

Despite losing six starters from last year's team, the 1993 Blue Hose baseball team hopes to improve on 1992's record of 22-22 and a fourth place finish in the SAC.

With only five players with starting experience returning this year, many positions will be up for grabs. The captains—junior Joe Henry Berube and seniors Gregg Desto and Julius Prince—are the only definite starters on the team. While Berube is making the transition from right field last year to catcher this year, Desto, a middle infielder, and Prince, a centerfielder, will remain at their normal positions.

With the loss of All-SAC pitchers Ray Canady and Kris Kirkland, the Blue Hose's pitching staff is also inexperienced. Fortunately, seniors Robb Niles and Jay Reeves, along with juniors Jim Dudley and Darren Bane, will be back for PC. Also returning are sophomore Elton Pollack and senior reliever Chris Bass, last year's ERA leader.

Head Coach Tim Corbin commented on his team, saying, "Pitchers who help us out this year haven't had a lot of innings in the past. But I believe they're capable." Corbin added, "The freshmen will be pushed into starting roles."

When asked about the confidence he has in the team, Coach Corbin said, "As long as we're improving each week, we've got a chance to be in the thick of things, but we've got a long way to go."

Co-captain Gregg Desto, an All-Conference selection last year, commented on the team, saying, "I feel we have the potential to be a very good team."

The Blue Hose team will be dedicating their season to Marcus Miller, a player who died last semester in a car accident. The team is also planning to have Miller's jersey retired and a dedication with Miller's family in one game later in the season. That date has not yet been designated.

Desto commented on Miller, adding, "I think people who knew him want to play better and harder than before."

After playing tomorrow at Piedmont, PC will travel to Newberry and Furman. Their first home game is next Friday, February 19 at 3:00.

Suhrstedt duo to perform at PC

by Camisha Clarke
ENTERTAINMENT EDITOR

French music. Art. Poetry. Each element will be combined in the concert provided by the piano duet consisting of Barbara and Gerhardt Suhrstedt. The Suhrstedts' program, part of the Lectures and Fine Art Series, includes art slides of the French impressionists and poetry of Louys and Mallarmé from 1870 to 1920. Furthermore, the Suhrstedts will show how French painters, musicians, and poets inspired and influenced each other during one of the most culturally rich periods in history, while combining their performance of French piano duets from Bizet through Ravel.

Barbara Fetnow Suhrstedt is a native of Chillicothe, Ohio, and a graduate of the Oberlin Conservatory of Music. Gerhardt Suhrstedt, originally from Charleston, South Carolina, is a graduate of Furman University. The Suhrstedts met and married while completing graduate study at Boston University's School of the Arts.

The Gina Bachauer International Piano Foundation has called Barbara and Gerhardt Suhrstedt "one of the finest piano four-handed teams currently touring the nation."

Since their 1982 New York debut at Markin Concert Hall, the couple has performed for many concert series, including the Dame Myra Hess Memorial Concerts in Chicago and the Phillips Collection Sunday Series in Washington. They presented the opening concert for the 1992 Gina Bachauer International Piano Festival in Salt Lake City. Their interpretation of the French piano duet repertoire has received wide critical acclaim.

In addition to their formal concerts, the Suhrstedts regularly present lectures on the piano duet medium for high schools, colleges, and piano teachers' associations.

This innovative cultural enrichment program will be held on Tuesday, February 23, in Edmunds Hall at 8:15 pm. The concert is free and open to the public.

Broadway Cabaret set for this weekend

Press Release
OFFICE OF PUBLIC RELATIONS

The sights and sounds from several of Broadway's top hits will fill Presbyterian College's Belk Auditorium February 13 - 14, when the college's choir presents its tenth annual Broadway Cabaret.

Performances are planned for 8:15 pm on February 13 and 3:00 pm on February 14. Admission is free, although donations for the choir's projects will be accepted.

Included in the production will be performances from Broadway hits such as Fiddler on the Roof, Gypsy, Dolls, Oklahoma, Kiss Me Kate, A Chorus Line, Damn Yankees, Paint Your Wagon, and West Side Story.

"The material fits together well. We have some humor, some action, and some sentimental tunes from the Broadway stage," said Dr. Charles T. Gains, professor of music, who will direct the performance. "Our choreographer for the third consecutive year is Donna Whitmore, the associate director and choreographer at Theatre on the Green in Greenville. Someone with her imagination and talent adds a lot to the production."

Soloists in the production are Natasha Casada, Rhet Wilson, Laura Batten, Lawana LeRoy, Catherine Hodges, Ellie Smith, Wain Wesberry, Bennett Summey, and Jean Greenman.

Narrating the show will be Aaron Miller, while Gains and Davey Mills will provide accompaniment on piano and percussion, respectively.

"'RAISING CAIN' IS ONE OF THE MOST CINEMATographically SATISFYING MOVIES OF THE SUMMER!
It's Brian De Palma's return to the Hitchcockian genre."
—Lawrence Grobel, US MAGAZINE

"A BRILLIANT PSYCHO-THRILLER WITH JUST THE RIGHT AMOUNT OF LAUGHS!
'Raising Cain' is visual magic... A Brian De Palma classic!"
—Jeff Crisp, SIXTY SECOND PREVIEW

SUB will be showing the movie Raising Cain tonight at 7:00 in Springs Campus Center. The movie stars John Lithgow and Lolita Davidovich.

Points of Interest

from the Peer Connectors

- *76 million Americans reported alcoholism in their families according to a study by the US Dept. of Health and Human Services
- *75% of rape victims were assaulted by people that they knew well
- *20% of women questioned at Cornell University claimed that they have had sex forced upon them

Upcoming CEP Events

February 13 & 14

Concert - Broadway Cabaret. The Presbyterian College Choir presents its tenth annual program of tunes from Broadway shows. 7:30 BA

February 15

Panel Discussion - A faculty panel will discuss "The Traditional Role of Sports: The Original Idea Before It Became a Media Obsession." 7:30

EH

February 16

Convocation - John Feinstein, author of "A Season On the Brink" and "A Season Inside" and media commentator, will discuss "What the Media Have Done To Sports." 11:00 BA

February 17 - 19

Play - A Midsummer Night's Dream. Celebrating the dedication of the new Harper Center for visual and dramatic art, the PC Players present this Shakespeare classic in PC's newest theater. 7:30 HC

February 23

Concert - Barbara and Gerhardt Suhrstedt, piano duetists, present an innovative program which features four-hand piano duets from Bizet to Ravel. 8:15 EH

February 25

Concert - The PC Music Department will present staged productions by Bernstein and Barab. 7:30 EH

THE BLUE STOCKING

"Give the people the light, so they may find the way."

Volume LXXXVII Number 8

PRESBYTERIAN COLLEGE

Clinton, South Carolina 29325

Wednesday, February 24, 1993

SGA presidential candidates take their stands on campus issues

From Staff Reports

Elections for SGA Executive Council are set for tomorrow, with a run-off scheduled for Friday if needed. This year, three candidates are vying for the office of SGA President. They include Lauren Owings, a junior from Easley, South Carolina; T. Hagan Thompson, a junior from Milledgeville, Georgia; and Brian Wilson, a sophomore from Marietta, Georgia.

In order to give PC students an opportunity to see where the candidates stand on the issues before placing their votes in the ballot box, the Blue Stocking interviewed all three, asking specific questions.

Their responses are as follows.

Why are you running for SGA President?

Lauren Owings: "I am running for SGA President because I have a honest interest in the concerns of students, faculty, and administration. I am not doing this because I think it will look good on my resume. I want to give something back to PC, and I feel this is the best way. I want to be an effective instrument linking students and faculty and administration."

Hagan Thompson: "I think I could do a lot for the school. We need a better liaison between the students and the faculty, and the president should be more available to the students. There are people on campus who don't even know who the president is this year. We really need more of a communication link."

Brian Wilson: "I believe that SGA should be a true voice for students. In the past, I don't think that SGA has been an effective academic deans. I have also served as the editor-in-chief of the PaC SaC, which is a huge responsibility. In this capacity, I have managed a budget of over $44,000 and have had the opportunity to work with all types of variety of people and will be able to talk to them. I will be more in tune with the student body."

Brian Wilson: "First and foremost, I am concerned. I believe that I have something to offer this college and the student body. I have served in various leadership positions. I am a resident assistant, I have worked in leadership in high school, I have worked with SVS, I have worked with PC athletic teams, and I am familiar with student life and Greek life. I feel I am the most qualified candidate."

What do you see as the number one problem at PC?

Lauren Owings: "Students at PC tend to be apathetic towards what goes on at school. To a great degree, I think the students feel powerless. It is not that they don't care; many just don't understand how to make a difference, and this causes a great deal of miscommunication. Apathy can be changed."

Hagan Thompson: "The number one problem at PC is lack of unity. We're such a small college, and we are supposed to be a family. I see too many cliques, too many people being stereotyped. This school is too small for that. People come to this school thinking we'll all be together. We ought to promote more unity."

Brian Wilson: "I see the number one problem at PC being a slack SGA. There are (Story continued on page 3.)

Lauren Owings

Hagan Thompson

Brian Wilson

force on campus. It is time for SGA to address a number of important issues that concern students. As president, I would serve as a liaison between the student body and the administration of the college."

What qualifies you to be SGA President?

Lauren Owings: "In the past, I have served as a member of the Student Affairs Committee. I currently serve on the SGA Executive Council as the Judicial Council chairperson. This role has honed my leadership and delegation skills and allowed me to work with both the student and people. This position has been a tremendous learning experience for me."

Hagan Thompson: "I am qualified because I served on Student Council my first two years at PC. I was the freshman class president and sophomore representative. I am also the president of BACCHUS and of the Model UN. I am actively involved in Westminster Fellowship and South Carolina Student Legislature, and through them I have tried to improve my communication and leadership skills. Through these organizations, I can keep up with what's going on. I won't be isolated. I will see a

On The Inside

Page 2 . . .

SGA: Is there more to it than promoting dances and moving into a big office?

Page 3 . . .

Sample ballot for tomorrow's SGA elections.

Page 4 . . .

PC's production of A Midsummer Night's Dream receives high praise.

Men's basketball team brings home conference title

by Everett Catts
SPORTS EDITOR

On Saturday, February 20, the long-awaited rematch between PC and Lenoir-Rhyne, co-leaders in the South Atlantic Conference with 12-1 records, finally came. After losing to the Bears in double overtime on January 23, the Blue Hose sought revenge and the SAC-8 championship.

Since that home loss, PC has won nine in a row. The Blue Hose have won 19 out of their last 20 games.

PC sent three buses of fans to the game with Lenoir Rhyne. About 50 local fans were in one bus and about 100 PC students manned the two buses rented by fraternities. Approximately 50 more fans travelled in separate vehicles to the game in Hickory, North Carolina.

By halftime, the Blue Hose were down by seven points, 32-25. Bret Jones led all PC scorers with eight points in the first half. Midway through the second half, the Blue Hose were down by 12. Nevertheless, PC kept battling and tied the score with under two minutes left. Soon after the score was tied, the Blue Hose took the lead for good and won by five, 72-67.

Following the game, many PC players and fans piled on the center of the court in celebration.

Four of PC's five starters were in double figures in scoring. Leading all players was Jones, who had 24 points. John Lloyd followed with 22. Both players scored 16 points in the second half. Jones had two crucial three-pointers. Andrew Wellman and Derrick Lovelace each had 10.

The regular season SAC Championship guaranteed PC a first round bye and a home game in the District Playoffs on Saturday, March 6.

Before that game, the Blue Hose will compete in the SAC Tournament, which begins on Friday, February 26, and ends on February 28. The tournament will be hosted by Catawba College.

Coach Nibert strongly encourages PC students to attend (Story continued on page 3.)

SGA needs leaders who are sincere, not full of 'hot air'

by Jason West
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

One hot, summer day in 1787, after adjourning from a session of the Constitutional Convention in Philadelphia, Benjamin Franklin, a delegate to the Convention, was approached on the street by a farmer's wife. The woman was concerned about the activities that were going on in Independence Hall. She asked Mr. Franklin, "What type of government are you creating for us?" Franklin replied, "A republic, ma'am, if you can keep it."

Tomorrow is election day for PC students. Oh sure, it's not like we are voting for President of the United States or for some other high national office, but we will be voting for the leadership of next year's Student Government Association.

A lot of students probably could care less about voting for SGA officers. They don't really see what SGA does that is relevant to student life, and they don't really understand or care to understand what function SGA serves. In fact, many students, including myself at times, see SGA as a big joke, lacking respect and dignity. Well, there lies the problem.

The Student Government Association does serve as an important element in the life of Presbyterian College. SGA is the primary liaison between the students and the faculty and administration. It is supposed to serve as the voice for all students, the method by which our concerns and complaints are to be heard. Unfortunately, this has not been SGA's role in the past.

I can't really think of anything earth shattering that SGA has done since I walked onto the PC campus. Oh sure, SGA has been instrumental in organizing FOB activities, Shag-Fest (which was cancelled last year due to lack of funding and planning) and moving into its nice, new, plush, and big office. There is supposed to be more to SGA than moving into an office and sponsoring a dance.

Since SGA really doesn't do anything, it has become a necessary aggravation. The student body gives it no support or legitimacy, yet we are required by the college to have it. As a result, most of us could care less about who runs for SGA offices and about voting. This results in less than quality people being in charge, and it perpetuates the inaction of the organization that is supposed to be our voice.

The student body's lack of concern creates the "political machines" and the "machine organizers" that we have all read about and heard discussed recently. It creates a group of semi-honest people who are interested only in promoting themselves and their own personal agendas.

Maybe it is time for the students of Presbyterian College to develop an interest in their SGA. There are a number of candidates running for Executive Council slots this year who are sincerely interested in making a difference. There are also a number of candidates who are "big talkers," who have no interest in "acting" on all their talk. It is important for the student body to make a distinction between someone who will work and someone who is full of hot air.

In order to improve SGA, we need to vote and vote for someone who is experienced, knowledgeable, has a working relationship with the faculty and administration, has integrity, and will do more than move into an office and sponsor a dance.

Presbyterian College has suffered from impenetrable apathy for a number of years. This year could prove to be a miraculous recovery for SGA and the PC student body if the right people are elected.

Ben Franklin promised the farm woman a republic. In reality, he promised all of America a republic but warned that it would only last as long as the people were concerned and committed to its survival. It is up to our generation to see to it that the republic continues. As students, we can start by voting tomorrow for a slate of SGA candidates who will be concerned and committed.

Letter to the Editor

Dear Editor:

I have only been here at PC for a semester. However, in this short time I have failed to receive three letters that were mailed to me. I live in Spartanburg, and usually the mail takes one day to get here. Many of my friends have mentioned having the same problems with their mail.

I have been to boarding schools and never had this problem. My parents do not have this problem at their home address. Therefore, the problem lies in the Springs Mail Room.

The response from the "friendly" mail room workers when I ask is, "I can't do anything about it." So, what is the college saying? Are we to make sure we get our parents to pay the extra fee to have mail certified? That is absurd. I have no solution, and that is not my job. It is the responsibility of the college to see that the students receive their mail.

Sincerely,

Michael Thomas Myers

Any student wishing to place a letter to the editor in the Blue Stocking must submit a signed letter no later than one week prior to publication. The deadline to have a letter in the next issue is Friday, March 19.

The Blue Stocking of Presbyterian College
Clinton, South Carolina, 29325
Volume LXXXVII, Number 8
February 24, 1993

Editor-in-Chief.....Jason West
Managing Editor.....LeJeanna Maddox
News Editor.....Ricky Dill
Politics Editor.....Ted Carmichael
Sports Editor.....Everette Catts
Entertainment Editor.....Camisha Clarke
Features Editor.....Martha Lynn Smith
Environment Editor.....Heather Moncrief
Photography Editor.....Kim Gibson
Layout Editor.....Angela Richardson

Advertising Editor.....Ann Mayfield
Subscriptions Editor.....Ron Mixon
Artist.....Michael Christensen

Photography Staff
Kimberlee Gibson Todd Love

Staff Writers
Elizabeth Cunard Amanda Bowers
Leigh Hearnburg Katherine Bonner
Kristina Pruitt Cher Fulbright
Paula Warren Michelle Cantey
Brian Sacco Shelly Phipps
Kim Rabon Jamey Pate
Tobin Turner Tonya Snead

The Blue Stocking is a tri-weekly student publication of Presbyterian College. The publication is a forum of news and opinion on regional, national, and international concerns. For advertising contact The Blue Stocking, Presbyterian College, Box 5007, Clinton, SC 29325. The Blue Stocking will come letters to the editor from all members of the PC community. Signatures are not required. Letters are printed on a "space available" basis. The Blue Stocking reserves the right to edit all letters for proper grammar and punctuation. The final deadline for submitting letters is Friday at 12:00 pm the week before publication.

PC Tidbits

SGA Sample Ballot

Election for SGA Executive Council is scheduled for tomorrow, February 25. A run-off will be held on Friday, February 26, if necessary. PC students are voting in Springs Campus Center 11 AM and 6 PM. All candidates are encouraged to visit a table.

The following is a list of candidates for each Executive Council slot.

SGA President

Lauren Owings (Junior)

Hagan Thompson (Junior)

Brian Wilson (Soph.)

SGA Vice President

Tyler Van Leuven (Soph.)

Mark Hunt (Soph.)

Judicial Chairman

Leslie Chambers (Junior)

Bill Wright (Soph.)

Marie Youmans (Soph.)

SGA Secretary

Natasha Casada (Soph.)

Jason Winfield (Junior)

SGA Treasurer

John Dunn (Freshman)

Dallas Oelson (Soph.)

SUB President

Warren Sloan (Junior)

Applications for class officers are due on Friday, February 26. Speeches will be made on March 1, at 7:00 pm in Springs Campus Center. Elections for class officers are set for Tuesday, March 2, with a run-off scheduled for March 3, if necessary.

(SGA Election between Owings continued from page 1)
impressed that in 1787 Ben did not bring a republic to us. If you could keep it, it would be a great issue.

How can SGA become a more active organization on campus?

Lauren Owings: "SGA needs to be more active. The student body needs to work together, and we need to be more involved in SGA, and unity can be found in diversity. SGA's job requirement of having a liaison between students and administration needs to be followed more efficiently. This could be done by making SGA more visible and more open to the student body."

Hagan Thompson: "Each SGA member needs to make a firm commitment to themselves and to the student body. We are elected to represent a class or the whole student body. We have constituents and need to ask their opinions."

Brian Wilson: "SGA should have a greater responsibility than what it currently has. What has SGA done this year? The only thing I can remember SGA doing this year is helping to achieve outdoor graduation. There is more to be done. Change is needed."

What specific goals would you like to set for SGA next year?

Lauren Owings: "I propose that weekly meetings be held between the SGA President and the officers of the college to allow for more discussion and to address the concerns facing the students. I also would propose that once a month, SGA hold a "Town Meeting," which would be completely open to all students so that they could voice their concerns and receive direct answers to their questions. I would encourage more student forums, and I would encourage more faculty and administration to attend SGA meetings so that they could gain a better understanding of what the students are saying and thinking. Above all, it is important for SGA to gain a status of respect and legitimacy."

Hagan Thompson: "I'd like for SGA members to be better communicators. They need to be more active on campus and more inclusive. We ought to look more towards the concerns of MSU. Their concerns get pushed back sometimes. We need to act on all student concerns, not just the concerns of a few. We also need to be better liaisons between the administration and the students. Too often I hear the attitude that it's 'us against them.' The administration is there to help us. We're both trying to do what's best for the school."

Brian Wilson: "PC needs a 24-hour study area on campus. SGA needs an open door policy, and it needs to be a listening voice for students. I think we need to check into the Safe Ride Shuttle being manned by SGA, and I believe that we need to look into what the college is doing with its endowment fund. How could that money better benefit students?"

Recently, there has been considerable controversy concerning the establishment of a political machine at PC. What are your thoughts?

Lauren Owings: "I think there is a lot of truth to the rumors of a political machine being created at PC. I believe that someone thought of the idea, liked the idea, and thought that the student body would be too apathetic to notice. The idea of a machine defeats the whole purpose of SGA. It is not the job of SGA to secure power and prestige for a select few. It is SGA's responsibility to empower all students."

Hagan Thompson: "When I read the article, I thought it was a joke. I didn't think the person was serious. But when I really thought about it, I realized it was a major concern. If enough people were involved, a machine could be very detrimental. We need to have the best people in the SGA positions. I'm really glad Landon spoke up. It made me stop and think that it could really go on."

Brian Wilson: "I have heard many rumors concerning a political machine on campus, and those rumors probably started with some truth. I am running for SGA president because I am the best candidate for the job, not because I am a member of a certain social organization."

(Basketball story continued from page 1)

the playoff games, especially the Districts. The Blue Hose opponent for the Districts has not yet been determined. In the SAC Tournament, PC will be the number one seed and will most likely play Catawba.

Nibert commented on the support of the PC fans, both home and away, saying, "That type of atmosphere is exciting; to look up and play in front of your own peers is great, and it helps us play harder."

Co-captain Bret Jones commented on the season, saying, "More or less it's a relief to know we did it, being picked in the pre-season to win the conference."

Recyclables banned by city

by Heather Moncrief

ENVIRONMENT EDITOR

Recycling efforts on the PC campus have been limited due to a decision made by city officials this past week. Newspapers and plastics will no longer be accepted by the city's recycling collection site. Since Recycle PC channels its recyclables through the city site, they will no longer be able to collect these items on campus.

Officials said that means for accepting plastics may be developed in the future, but newspapers will most likely not be accepted by the site again. The inability to recycle newspapers will affect the PC campus the most since the library and the student mailroom generate large quantities of papers weekly. "We rake several truckloads of newspapers alone to the city site each month," said Todd Love, Recycle PC pick-up coordinator. "I hate to see all of those papers thrown away."

Recycle PC will continue to accept cardboard, aluminum cans, and glass and will restart acceptance of computer paper. Offices which generate waste computer paper should contact Heather Moncrief at 833-9515, so that a means of recycling it can be established. Recycle PC pick ups will be on Monday afternoons for the remainder of the spring semester.

PC Senior Bret Jones (right) led the Blue Hose with 24 points in the team's battle with Lenoir-Rhyne for the SAC-8 Championship.
photo by Kim Gibson

"We do all kinds of nails!"

$5 off of new nails.

FADAS

Wash, cut, and blow dry:

Guys: $7 Girls: $12
Copeland Plaza 833-5446

Harper Center exhibit features famous American artists

by Jennifer Rhodes
STAFF WRITER

If you were to tell a Presbyterian College student that Andy Warhol and Grandma Moses are sitting together on the Presbyterian College campus, you may receive a look of dismay or perhaps an expression of amazement. Many students are not aware of the sixty American paintings being shown in the new Harper Center.

One of the most culturally enriching shows ever held on the campus includes various paintings taken from different eras in American art history. Most of the works are small masterpieces the artists painted between their larger projects.

According to Associate Professor of Art Dr. Bob Hild, "Populists are familiar with the Baseball Hall of Fame or the Football Hall of Fame. Now Presbyterian College has the Butler Institute of American Art Hall of Fame."

Many of the works in the Harper

Center are self-portraits, as American artists had conformed to introspection. But not all the works are studies of the individual. Theodoros Stamos and Joan Mitzhell painted a picture of their worlds through abstractions. In his work "Durham Connecticut," George Inness shows the influence of French Impression yet encompasses his own individuality. Berninghaus brings the Old West back to life with his paintings of American Indians. In "Ship Oglethorpe" Samuel Walters brings the marine life from 1832 back to life.

The sixty paintings display a slice of American History and the influence of our culture on Art. From the early 1800's until the twentieth century, the paintings include realism, surrealism, abstraction and Andy Warhol's Pop Art.

The show will be on display at the Harper Center until March 8. Gallery hours are Tuesday through Sunday from 2:00 to 5:00 pm.

PC students LeJeanna Maddox and Dean Sheorn discuss the Grandma Moses painting in the art gallery of the Harper Center. Photo by Kim Gibson

PC production of A Midsummer Night's Dream deemed a 'huge success'

by Kim Rabon
STAFF WRITER

The Presbyterian College Theater Company created a magical and dramatic grand opening for the Harper Center with their performance of William Shakespeare's A Midsummer Night's Dream. The cast and crew presented a brilliant visual interpretation of the play before six sell-out audiences.

The technical and production crew and members of the theater production lab should be among the most highly commended for the outstanding performance. The theater was transformed into an enchanted forest with props consisting of a plexiglass stage, enormous columns, and an abundance of greenery.

The lighting crew enhanced the setting and created and maintained the specific moods of the play. The production crew also did a great job with costumes, which went along well with the setting and with the characters' parts. Without the hard work of the technical and production crew, the play would not have been nearly the success it was.

The play, directed by Dr. Dale O. Rains and designed by Leslie Preston, was nothing less than wonderful. The combination of the personalities of the characters and actors made the presentation of the play realistic.

While the entire cast did a magnificent job, the play did have its stand-outs. Both Aaron Miller (Theseus/Oberon) and Karen Wittenbrook (Hippolyta/Titania) are to be commended for their performances of their dual-roles.

Two other character standouts were Christopher Nichols and Stacie Richardson. Nichols, who portrayed Bottom, was the primary source of humor in the play. Richardson, who performed the role of Helena as her debut in the theater, also did an excellent job in expressing the emotions of her character.

The production of A Midsummer Night's Dream was a huge success. The direction, cast, and crew made the end product a joy to watch.

THE SQUARE ROOT OF WONDERFUL

by Camisha Clarke
ENTERTAINMENT EDITOR

Each month the Presbyterian College Mathematics Department presents a new mathematical challenge to anyone who dares to test his or her skills and knowledge. The challenge for February is to show by analysis and a minimal amount of case checking, that there is only one solution to the following cryptogram, and find it:

✓WONDERFUL = OODFFF

All entries should be submitted by February 28, and a prize is awarded to the person(s) with the correct answer. Please place all entries inside the white icosahedron (located between office number 229 and 230) on the second floor of Jacobs Hall. The winner and solution will be announced in the next issue of The Blue Stocking.

LET'S SKIP G.D.H.
AND EAT AT...
TERRY'S

TAKE THIS COUPON
AND GET A FREE
DESSERT WITH YOUR MEAL AT...

Jerry's

Expires 3-19-93

The Episcopal Church Especially Welcomes Students + ALL SAINTS' EPISCOPAL CHURCH

One Block North of Greenville Dining Hall

Sunday Schedule

8:30 am Holy Eucharist
9:45 am Christian Education
10:30 am Coffee (in Parish Hall)
11:00 am Holy Eucharist

Monday Evenings

+ 9:00 pm CANTERBURY
(at Crossroads) — Holy Eucharist

• Need someone to talk to?

Welcome to CANTERBURY
the Episcopal student group
on campus

The Rev. Nancy J. Allison, Rector (833-1388)
The Rev. Leonard Pearson, Priest-in-Charge (833-8295)

THE BLUE STOCKING

"Give the people the light, so they may find the way."

Volume LXXXVII Number 9

PRESBYTERIAN COLLEGE

Clinton, South Carolina 29325

Friday, March 26, 1993

Dr. David Gillespie teaches such diverse topics as American political parties, Constitutional law, and East Asian politics.

photo by Todd Love

Gillespie garners honor as top PC professor

by LeJeanna Maddox
MANAGING EDITOR

In keeping with its tradition of recognizing and honoring outstanding dedication among its faculty, Presbyterian College has selected Dr. Dave Gillespie as the 1993 Professor of the Year. Gillespie, professor of political science, has served as a member of the PC faculty since 1979.

Nominations for the professor of the year are made by academic departments and by Sigma Kappa Alpha, PC's honor society. The final decision is made by a committee composed of three faculty members, two students, an alumnus, and an administrator.

According to Dean William Moncrief, selection is based on such criteria as "extraordinary effort as a scholar and teacher," "service to the institution and profession," and "balance of achievement in teaching, scholarship, and service."

Dr. Booker Ingram, associate professor of political science, can attest to his colleague's qualification in these areas.

"Dave Gillespie is a caring person who displays character and integrity in a way that obviously reflects his commitment to the real essence of Christian values. He constantly shows concern for the welfare of his colleagues and students," said Ingram.

Gillespie has been integral in the process of establishing and strengthening the Political Science department at PC. When he arrived at PC in 1979, Political Science was a wing of the History department.

Ingram adds, "It was in large part due to Dr. Gillespie's initiative, drive, and foresight that today we can boast of a three-person Political Science department with a Political Science major that is one of the most popular and respected on campus."

Another criterion for selection is "evidence of impact and involvement with students," and it is in this arena that Gillespie's students give him the highest praise.

"Dr. Gillespie is one of those professors you'll always remember, not only because of his interesting stories but also because of his unique ability to inspire people," said Senior Kathryn Spearman. "His enthusiasm for both teaching and politics has influenced countless students."

His students especially note Gillespie's inclusiveness and unbiased teaching style. "He gives everyone's views the same attention, and he doesn't force anything on you. He lets you learn in an atmosphere in which you can develop your own opinions," said Senior Michael Bradshaw.

Senior Bill Graves adds, "Dr. Gillespie is diplomatic in how he listens to others' views. He is also unique in that he possesses the quality of being able to create discussion in class."

Gillespie's most recent and most significant achievement is the completion of his book, Politics at the Periphery: Third Parties in Two Party America. It is currently being published by the University of South Carolina Press and includes a history of third parties and their candidates through Ross Perot's 1992 bid for the White House.

As part of his honor as Professor of the Year, Gillespie will deliver the 1993 commencement address.

On The Inside

Page 2 . . .

The City of Clinton explains its cancellation of recyclables at its recycling center.

Page 3 . . .

Snowed in! PC students share their experiences in the Blizzard of 1993.

Page 4 . . .

Women in Leadership on the PC campus.

Cost of attending Presbyterian increases to $15,400

by Tobin Turner
STAFF WRITER

During its annual spring meeting, the Presbyterian College Board of Trustees approved an operating budget and fee schedule for the 1993-94 academic year.

A full-time boarding student can expect to pay $15,400 for next year—a 6.9 percent increase from last year ($14,394). Tuition will cost an additional $870, while room and board will increase by $136.

According to administrative officials, the extra $1006 will be used for increases in staff salary (38.5 percent), student financial aid (25 percent), staff health care and benefits (16 percent), and debt service (12.8 percent). In addition,

6.9 percent of the new money will be reserved for miscellaneous use.

PC President Kenneth B. Orr stressed the importance of comparing PC's cost to those of other quality liberal arts colleges. "In a survey of 15 liberal arts colleges within the Southeast, including Furman, Wolford, and Davidson, PC is $1423 below average total cost," said Orr.

Orr did foresee some good news concerning higher education costs in the years to come. "Over the last 15 years, the average increase in cost has been 9.14 percent. I believe that for the 90's, the average increase should be in the 5 to 6 percent range," he said.

Regardless of the statistics and comparisons, PC students still regret the increase.

"I am glad that PC is below the average, but I wish the average were lower," said Alicia Perry, a sophomore from Chattanooga, Tennessee.

"With the changes in the Tuition Grant Program next year, it is another slap in the face for PC to raise tuition," added Laura Hilton, a junior from Columbia, South Carolina.

According to the budget analysis, student fees will cover 77.8 percent of next year's $21.1 million operating budget. The other income will come from endowments, gifts, interest, and campus sales.

Presbyterian College must remain a small, liberal arts school

by Jason West
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

It has been nearly four years since I first set foot on the Presbyterian College campus. I remember that I was a junior in high school and was visiting PC because my parents had told me to start seriously looking for the place where I would spend my college years. Since I was only 16 years old, I had no idea what to look for in a college, what I wanted in a college, or what I wanted to major in. I still believed that my high school days would never end.

However, all that changed as soon as I walked around the front plaza and saw this beautiful campus and experienced the friendly, Southern atmosphere. I knew in a moment that Presbyterian College was the place for me and that there was no point in looking at any more schools. I had found my home.

I was attracted to PC because I could sense that this was an institution that had been built on a foundation of strength: a foundation which includes moral principles and a positive environment that encourages spiritual growth, a wide range of challenging academic work, a respect for the past, and the ability to look forward in order to always ensure success.

Recently, the college celebrated the successful completion of the Building From Strength Campaign. One of the original goals of this campaign was a promise that Presbyterian would remain a small, residential college with a stable enrollment between 1100 and 1200. In addition, a goal was set that the student-to-faculty ratio would be maintained at no more than 15 to 1.

After the last meeting of the Board of Trustees, it appears that these goals are in jeopardy.

PC's most impressive characteristic is its small size. PC is a community of individuals, each with his or her own character. This is not a college where a student becomes a number among many. PC is a college that has mastered the concept of the individual. It is an institution that promotes a unique one-on-one learning environment. I know for a fact that many of our state's large universities discourage students from asking questions in class. The classroom size at many of these universities is so large that questions just can't be tolerated.

We don't have that problem at PC, and we never should. Here, questions are encouraged because they are an important part of the learning process. Here at PC, the small size allows for personal interaction between faculty and students. That personal interaction allows PC not only to teach academics but also to teach the lessons of life: compassion, honor, integrity, and friendship.

Where else can you have your history professor teach you not only about the Roman Empire and World War I, but also take the time to teach the finer points of ballroom dancing? Where else can you go to have your English professor take time to tell you his latest "knock knock" joke in addition to discussing the writings of Robert Frost?

One of PC's trademarks is its "openness" between faculty and students, and the college community must ensure that the "openness" which exists here never fades and gives way to impersonality.

Presbyterian College is not a large school, and it never should be.

Letter to the Editor

Dear Editor:

To set the record straight, the City of Clinton was in the forefront of the recycling efforts in Laurens County. Both the cities of Clinton and Laurens began their recycling efforts in the 1990, well in advance of the 1990 passage of the South Carolina Solid Waste Management Act, which mandates recycling. Clinton opened the county's first recycling center, and Laurens began the operation of a limited curbside recycling plant.

The recycling center established by the City was begun with $6000 "seed" money by the City Council; money that the city knew would not be recouped. The City further placed a fulltime South Carolina Department of Corrections trustee at the site at an annual cost to the city of over $1500. The City has yet to make enough on its recyclables to cover the cost but is committed to still do its part in recycling.

The site is located at the corner of West Centennial and Gary Streets. With the aid of the Clinton Uptown Development Association and First Presbyterian Church, a theme contest was held, and a Clinton High class won the contest with the theme "Recycle Now, You May Need It Later." The said theme is on a banner at the recycling center. A special thanks should go to First Presbyterian Church, which was the catalyst for the opening of the City's recycling center.

The City at first secured individual markets for a number of recyclables; that is, glass, aluminum, cardboard, newspaper, office paper, magazines, and plastic. In fact, the City actually had to pay rent on trailers for the collection of the paper products; rent that was in excess of what the City was being paid for the paper. The City lost its original paper buyer and found another in late 1990; but had to restrict its paper collection to newspaper and cardboard to accommodate the new buyer. Again, rent of the collection trailer ate up any "profits."

In 1991, K & W Recycling of Laurens County approached the City and a deal was struck for K & W to act as the "middle man" for our recycling center. K & W was able to service cardboard, newspaper, plastic, aluminum and glass from the City's center. This arrangement continued until just recent months, when K & W informed the City that it could not profitably continue to take our newspaper or plastic; the newspaper because the bottom had fallen out the market for it and the plastic because we did not generate enough volume. Therefore, the City was forced to discontinue collecting these recyclables for the time being. However, we did add the collection of computer paper, as K & W does have a market for this.

The City of Clinton did not "ban" recyclables, but simply had to discontinue the collection of newspaper and plastics for the time being due to market conditions; a condition that the City cannot control. The recyclables' market for certain products is very volatile, but the City has always strived to overcome market problems.

The City never had any intention of never again taking newspaper at its recycling center. In fact, with K & W's help, help greatly appreciated, a market for newspaper has been found in Greenville; granted, a market that will not pay for delivered newspaper and will not transport it. However, the City is working with the City of Laurens and Laurens County to arrange some cost sharing to get the newspaper to this market in Greenville. Hopefully, this will be worked out in the next month or two.

The plastic is another story and will require a baling machine to be purchased and a countywide effort to produce enough volume to make the purchase of the baler viable. The two cities and the county are also working on this option in order to have a baler in place this summer, not only for plastic, but also for cardboard.

The City of Clinton is committed to resolving its solid waste problems. The City has agreed to work with the County in allowing its old landfill to be used for a composting operation when the County runs out of space at its landfill. Also, the City began purchasing recycled products for its use (i.e., office supplies) in its operations. In fact, some years back, the City purchased garbage carts manufactured with recycled automobile tires; but, the carts were ill-received by homeowners because of the carts' color, but, the City at least explored this innovative avenue.

Lastly, I am glad to have the opportunity to present the whole correct story as stated above; an exemplary story of the City in the area of recycling.

Sincerely,

Steven L. Harrell, City Manager
City of Clinton, SC

The Blue Stocking of Presbyterian College
Clinton, South Carolina, 29325
Volume LXXXVII, Number 9
March 26, 1993

Editor-in-Chief.....Jason West
Managing Editor.....LeJeanna Maddox
News Editor.....Ricky Dill
Politics Editor.....Ted Carmichael
Sports Editor.....Everette Catts
Entertainment Editor.....Camisha Clarke
Features Editor.....Martha Lynn Smith
Environment Editor.....Heather Moncrief
Photography Editor.....Kim Gibson
Layout Editor.....Angela Richardson

Advertising Editor.....Ann Mayfield
Subscriptions Editor.....Ron Nixon
Artist.....Michael Christensen

Photography Staff
Kimberlee Gibson Todd Love

Staff Writers
Elizabeth Cunard Amanda Bowers
Lugh Hearnburg Katherine Bonner
Kristina Pruitt Cher Fulbright
Paula Warren Michelle Caney
Brian Sacco Shelly Phipps
Kim Ralson Jamey Pate
Tobin Turner Tonya Snead

The Blue Stocking is a tri-weekly student publication of Presbyterian College. The paper serves as a forum of news and opinion of regional and national concern. For advertising, contact The Blue Stocking, Presbyterian College, Box 1061, Clinton, SC 29325. The Blue Stocking welcomes letters to the editor from all members of the PC community. Signatures are required. Letters are printed on a space available basis. The Blue Stocking reserves the right to edit all letters for proper grammar and punctuation. The final deadline for submitting letters is Friday at 12:00 pm on the week before publication.

SNOWED IN

PC students remember a strange weekend of wintry weather

by Martha Lynn Smith
FEATURES EDITOR

Sometimes Mother Nature works in mysterious ways. On Wednesday the majority of PC students were lying out in the sun, but on Saturday, in the middle of SPRING BREAK, a strange thing happened.

The Storm of the Century? Well, at least that is what the news said. But for those students who were not literally snowbound, getting back for classes became a historical-or rather, hysterical-event.

Some students were simply stuck. Interstates were impassable from Atlanta, Chattanooga, Knoxville, Birmingham and other areas up North. Mrs. Ann Martin in the Academic Affairs office signed "at least" two hundred excuses that listed being "snowbound" or trapped in "The Storm of the Century" or "The Blizzard of 1993" as the reason for the absence. She said that one student missed an entire week of classes.

We're not used to snow in Dixie, but it sure can make for a good story.

The Choir was in Nashville from Friday to Tuesday, and they weren't singing, either. Actually, only two to three inches of snow fell in Nashville, but the interstates to take them back to school were blocked.

According to choir member Catherine Hodges, the choir kept themselves entertained. She credited their bus driver, Joe, for driving them all around the city so that they could see bands, shop, see movies, and play basketball at local churches. "Even though we found lots of fun stuff to do together," she said, "we were all very ready to get out of Tennessee on Tuesday."

The group that went to Honduras for the Third World Seminar found that they had to do some maneuvering in order to get back for classes. Their flight to Charlotte had been cancelled, and the students, along with Chaplain Greg Henley and Sociology Professor Charles McKelvey, were stuck in the Miami airport. While Henley and McKelvey worked to find a way home, some students found innovative ways to bide their time. Lisa Arends and Jennifer Can "lived their spirits" by having a hotel shuttle take them to different hotel "restaurants," and Alice Leach got an airport porter to push her around in a wheelchair.

Henley and McKelvey solved the problem by renting a car and a van to drive back to school. Unfortunately, there was one problem: the vehicles had to be returned at the Florida border. Luckily, Dean Nixon saved the day and met the group halfway to take them all back to PC in school vehicles. Dum Vivimus Servimus.

PC Freshman Michael Myers' story may top them all.

Myers was visiting friends in Fort Lauderdale, Florida, when he found out on Sunday that the snowfall was going to cancel his Amtrak train back to Columbia. He quickly grabbed an available seat on a flight to Columbia through Charlotte so that he could get back to PC for classes. However, his plane was late to Charlotte, and he missed his connecting flight to Columbia.

While getting off the plane, Myers struck up a conversation with a woman and her husband. "I was reading John Grisham's novel, The Firm, and she was reading his new book. I mentioned that I really should be reading Oedipus the King for Dr. Skinner's English class." The woman's husband looked at me and asked, "Dr. Skinner from Presbyterian College?" When Myers told him that, yes, they were talking about the same professor, the man, a Dr. Jim Johnson from Columbia, offered him a ride back to Columbia so that he could make Dr. Skinner's class the next morning.

Myers drove to Clinton from Columbia, stayed up until three in the morning reading Oedipus the King, but then woke up late for Dr. Skinner's class. He ran across campus to Neville Hall, only to find out that Dr. Skinner was stranded in Atlanta.

About ten years ago, a similar snowstorm occurred. But that time classes were cancelled, much to the chagrin of many of the PC faculty. This year, PC President Dr. Kenneth Orr and Treasurer Skip Zubrod made the decision not to cancel classes because they had no real way to determine the situation in other areas. However, excuses were readily and understandably given for those students who found traveling unsafe. But, in the Presbyterian spirit of Calvin, life goes on.

Sensible Sexuality Week to focus on sexual issues and ethics

by Martha Lynn Smith
FEATURES EDITOR

Sensible Sexuality Week (March 29-April 5) is an effort sponsored by the PC Peer Connectors to heighten awareness of sexual issues facing college students today through open discussion and information.

The events for the week are as follows:
* On Tuesday, March 30, at 11:00 a.m. in Wyatt Chapel, Dr. John J. Carey will speak on "The Church of Yesterday and the Church of Tomorrow." Dr. Carey is a Religion Professor at Agnes Scott College. He is the chairman of a special committee on human sexuality, which provided a report to the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church.

* Later on Tuesday at 7:30 p.m., Dr. Carey will offer another address titled "Justice Love: What Is It? What Does It Mean for College Students?" This talk, also in Edmunds Hall, is for CEP credit.

* On Wednesday, March 31, at 4:30 p.m. in the Library Auditorium, Philosophy Professors Dr. Richard Baker and Dr. Sarah Brakman will lead a discussion on "Ethics and Human Sexuality."

* On Thursday, April 1, at 7 p.m. in Chapman Conference Center, Zeta Tau Alpha will offer a Breast Cancer Seminar.

* On Monday, April 4, at 7:30 p.m. in Edmunds Hall, Dr. Linda Berne asks the question, "AIDS and STD's - Are our Students Really at Risk?" This is a CEP event. Dr. Berne is a Professor at USC-Charlotte, and she is the author of 4 books and over 20 articles on sexuality. Two of her books are used for sex education textbooks for South Carolina public schools.

"What better and more appropriate place to address sexuality issues than a college campus?" asks Rosa Walsh, Assistant Dean of Students. "College students should be given the opportunity to openly discuss sexuality issues, since many of these issues directly affect their lives."

Some sexuality issues include AIDS and STD's, unwanted pregnancy, sexist language and attitudes, date and acquaintance rape, ethics, and human sexuality. According to Walsh, "It's obvious that students come face to face with these issues often."

The History of Women at PC

Women's History Week presents women in a new light

by Martha Lynn Smith
FEATURES EDITOR

Not many people know that, although PC was considered an "all-male" institution, its first three graduates were women.

Many students did consider PC to be an "all male" institution until the construction of Clinton Dorm made the school residentially co-ed in 1965. But during the second Women's History Week observance ever to be held at the college, a program titled "Revisiting the Past... Rewriting the Future" highlighted the historical role of the strength of women at PC.

Assistant Dean of Students Resa Walsh and the three sororities, Alpha Delta Pi, Sigma Sigma Sigma, and Zeta Tau Alpha, sponsored this event in the Harper Center last Monday night. Featured speakers were Marion Hill Weersing, PC's First Dean of Women; Martha Anne Green, Director of Career Planning and Placement; Beth Couture, Basketball and Volleyball Coach, and PC Alumna Jane McSweeney Jameson.

Other recognized alumna were:

*Dr. Clarice Johnson '41: Dr. Johnson ran the PC Counseling Center for ten years.

*Mrs. Marshall Brown: Mrs. Brown was the registrar at PC for 17 years and knew the names of each student. During World War II she wrote thousands of letters to PC soldiers. She received an honorary degree from PC.

*Mrs. Irene Dillard McSweeney '38: Mrs. McSweeney was the first woman to complete a Chemistry degree.

*Mrs. Dorothy Dillard DuBose '41: She was a commuter student and ran a kindergarten out of her own home.

*Mrs. Georgia B. Young Thomason '34: She was another commuter student who left Erskine to attend PC when the Board of Trustees voted in 1931 to re-open PC to women after a period of restriction. At that time she noted a problem with PC's motto, "Presbyterian College, where men are made." This motto did not change until 1938. Mrs. Thomason said, "Although those were the dark ages for women at PC, they were also glorious times in many ways."

Mrs. Weersing remembered that in 1963 the Board of Trustees made the decision to make the school residentially co-ed and that construction was begun on the East Plaza in 1964. She remembered that the transition to having female boarders made some male students uneasy. Once the girls were assimilated on campus, they prospered academically. However, the social life didn't change as rapidly. PC male students still dated primarily "imports," even going as far as asking PC female students to house their visitors.

Murphy Lane McSweeney Jameson also remembered the rough transition for women. Members of the Spencer Sports Club would sit on the steps and rank PC co-eds on a beauty scale they walked by. PC women ranked a maximum score of 3 while imports ranked a minimum score of 10. Jameson cited that one reason for the derogatory attitude toward the new female students was that the men didn't think that they were serious about education. Women soon dispelled these anxieties, and they worked to hold viable roles on campus.

Martha Anne Green highlighted the accomplishments of women at PC. "Dean Green," as she is affectionately called, was herself a member of that first class of freshman girls to live in Clinton Hall in 1965.

In the past there have been five female SGA Presidents, the first female ROTC commander in 1982 and a female Rhodes Scholar in 1989. Before 1982 the dorms and the Women's Council were the only social "organizations" available to female students. In that year Green and several women students formed the Women's Social Hall to provide such a outlet for women. The advent of sororities, begun by student initiative, offered women more opportunities. For the accomplishments of PC Women, Green said simply, "You've come a long way, baby."

Coach Beth Couture spotlighted the role of PC female athletes. She praised the late Jane Hammett as the "pioneer of female sports at PC." Most women's sports teams were started as club teams by Hammett and others, with tents beginning in 1971, volleyball in 1975, basketball in 1977, and soccer in 1986. She credited Randy Randall and Ralph Polson for their work in implementing the initial basketball and soccer teams.

Now PC women's sports teams have gained national prominence and esteem. "You have to respect the time and the effort put into these teams by both the players and the coaches," said Couture. She reminded PC students, "Support your female athletes."

information compiled by Kim Rabon photos by Kim Gibson

Spotlight on Two PC Women

Margaret Williamson

Job Title: Vice President for Enrollment, Dean of Admissions

Job Description: Oversees Admissions and Financial Aid Offices, works with student enrollment retention.

Education: Bachelor of Arts, Masters in Education, Winthrop University

Committees: Officer of the College, Admissions and Financial Aid Committees, Chairman of the Retention Task Force, Long Range Planning, Outdoor Graduation Planning, Public Relations and Marketing Task Force, Administrative Computer Steering

Professional Organizations: President-elect of the National Association of College Admissions Counselors

Also oversees Presbyterian College/South Carolina National Leadership Conference. PC/SCN is a week-long Leadership seminar for rising high school junior and seniors. The conference gives students the opportunity to interact and learn from other leaders and to experience the PC campus life.

Martha Anne Green

Job Title: Director of Career Planning and Placement (former Associate Dean of Students)

Job Description: oversees counseling, programming, life planning and assessment, learning skills, career counseling, personality types.

Education: Bachelors degree in Psychology, minor in Elementary Education, Presbyterian College. Masters in Education and Guidance and Counseling, Clemson University.

Committees: Faculty Secretary for Omicron Delta Kappa (leadership honor society), guidance committee, Review Board for the PC Report, Public Relations, Greek and Social Life, Russell Steering Committee, advisor for WSH, C.O.P.E., and Leadership: PC

Professional Organizations: member of American College Personnel Association, American Association of Women in Higher Education, College Placement Council WSH (advisor). At a time when women on campus wanted to form a nonselective group to address the social life for women on campus, "Dean Green" helped them form that group.

Carol Browner named head of EPA
by Kristina Pruitt
STAFF WRITER

During the presidential elections last year the environment was a highly debated and controversial issue. Clinton and Gore acknowledged the problems facing the environment and promised that changes would be made in order to ensure a healthier planet. Although the environment is a major thrust in the Clinton administration, a balance between industry and environment must be maintained. Clinton's EPA (Environmental Protection Agency) administrator, Carol Browner, will be expected to maintain the balance and manage a high profile Washington organization.

As the secretary for the Florida Department of Environmental Regulation, Browner exhibited an ability to negotiate until both sides were happy. When Hurricane Andrew struck Southern Florida last summer, she agreed to get permits for Florida Power and Light so that they could immediately begin laying power lines. The agreement hinged on the condition that the new power lines be constructed away from delicate areas and that platforms be placed by the road for bird nesting. As a result, both environmentalists and the power company were satisfied.

Another example of Browner's ability was revealed when Walt Disney World wanted to fill 400 acres of wetlands. Browner readily approved the proposal with the agreement that Disney "spend about $40 million to buy and restore 8000 acres of endangered wetlands outside of Orlando."

Browner was successful in Florida, and with her success she gained supporters. Browner also gained a reputation of being "abrasive" and "uncompromising" from her employees and co-workers. Regardless of these characteristics she gets the job done. She has been described as having the soul of an activist and the mind of a lawyer.

John Shebel, head of Florida's largest business trade association, described her style to The Washington Post. "She kicks the door open, throws in a hand grenade, and then walks in to shoot who's left. She really doesn't like to compromise." Shebel does recognize that she has done a good job, however.

On the other hand, J. Michael McCloskey, chairperson of the Sierra Club, told The Washington Post referring to Browner: "She is like a breath of fresh air after 12 years of choking smog. She will successfully implement the Clinton/Gore administration policies to protect public health and the environment from degradation." Both Shebel and McCloskey, although from different points of view, believe that Browner is capable of managing the EPA.

Not everyone feels confident about Browner's ability to handle the EPA. The fact remains that she has never held a position in a huge executive agency. People are wondering if she will be independent despite her close ties to Gore. No one knows what to expect from Browner, but all will find out soon enough. The environment is a major part of the Clinton administration, and if something happens—good or bad—it will be significant.

Environmental Conference planned
by Kathryn Spearman
STAFF WRITER

This Saturday, March 26, the SC branch of the Student Environmental Action Coalition will hold its first state conference. Entitled "SEAC'ing a Solution in South Carolina," it will unite statewide environmental groups. Many workshops will be held covering topics such as recycling and green consumerism.

The conference will be at the University of South Carolina in Columbia, begins at 10:30 a.m. and will conclude at 6:00 p.m. with music afterwards by guitarist Laura Williams. Everyone is invited to attend. For further information, contact Kathryn Spearman at 833-1010.

The Laurens County Health Department has available FREE CONDOMS. One only needs to ask at the front desk for a brown bag. Remember, safe sex helps reduce the risk of AIDS.

Baseball team to retire Marcus Miller's jersey on Sunday

By Everett Catts
SPORTS EDITOR

This Sunday will be a commemorative day for the Blue Hose Baseball team. Before PC plays Wingate, the #3 jersey of Marcus Miller, who died in a car accident last October, will be retired. The dedication ceremony will begin at 1:45, and Miller's parents will be in attendance to take part in the event. Head Coach Tim Corbin and the rest of the team strongly encourage all students, faculty, and staff to attend the dedication ceremony.

While many students were away over Spring Break, the Blue Hose baseball team remained at school to host the Spring Tournament. Besides PC, Greensboro, Belmont Abbey, and Piedmont Colleges participated in the three-day event.

On March 7 the Blue Hose defeated Greensboro College. With the score tied 6-6 in the bottom of the ninth, catcher Joe-Henry Berube hit a solo home run over the left field fence to win the game.

On the following day, PC played Belmont Abbey College. Despite gaining a 4-2 lead on the Crusaders, the Blue Hose lost, 6-5.

That afternoon, the PC squad hosted Piedmont College, a team that had beaten the Blue Hose 1-0 on February 12. But this time it was the Lions who were shut out. Behind the pitching of Darren Bane and back-to-back homers by Berube and leftfielder Paul Bushway, PC won, 10-0. Berube had a grand slam, while Bushway followed with a solo shot.

On March 11 the Blue Hose were in the Championship game against Belmont

Before the tournament, PC hosted Davis-Elkins on March 2. The Blue Hose got their first shut out of the season, winning 6-0.

The Blue Hose began conference play against Elon, March 6-7. After losing the game apiece, they lost the final game, 7-5.

After the Elon series and Spring Tournament, PC was scheduled to play Carson-Newman in another SAC-8 series on March 13-14. Because of the winter storm that hit Clinton, those games were postponed.

Following the snow storm, the Blue Hose played Ashland College in a two-game series on March 16-17. Although the Blue Hose won the first game 9-2, they lost the second one, 11-7.

Two days later, PC hosted non-conference rival Newberry College. Despite leading the game 3-2, going into the 8th inning, the Blue Hose lost, 6-3.

On March 21 PC travelled to Hickory, NC to play in a conference series against Lenoir-Rhyne. Although the Blue Hose had early 3-0 leads in the first and third games of the series, they could not hold on to their advantage, losing 6-3 and 10-3. PC was swept by the Bears, losing game two by an 8-0 mark.

Tomorrow PC will be hosting Wingate in the beginning of an important series. Following Saturday's doubleheader at 1:00, the Blue Hose play a single game on Sunday at 2:00, when Miller's jersey is retired.

PC's Elton Pollock scores a run in the Newberry game. photo by Kim Gibson

Abbey. Unfortunately, the PC team lost 7-5.

Both Bushway, who was 8 for 13 (.615), and Berube were named to the All-Tournament Team.

Mallory McRae leads PC netters

By Everett Catts
SPORTS EDITOR

The 1993 PC Men's Tennis Team is 9-3 this spring and 13-4 in both fall and spring matches.

After losing 7-2 at USC-Spartanburg on February 27, the Blue Hose edged Wolford on March 1, 5-4. PC then came home the next day to post their first conference win, crushing Mars Hill, 8-1. On March 4 and 6, the Hose posted shut outs against Augusta and Carson-Newman, respectively.

During Spring Break, PC went on the road to play against many ranked opponents. Following a March 8 loss to Coastal Carolina, the Blue Hose defeated Mobile College on March 10, 8-1. Two days later, PC shut out Spring Hill College, 9-0.

On March 18, the men's team returned from the road and defeated Huntington College, 8-1. The team went on to an 8-1 victory over SAC rival Catawba on March 20, improving the Blue Hose conference record to 8-1.

This past week, the Hose netters headed competition from Lincoln Memorial College and Elon College on March 24. In addition, the team hosted Kalamazoo College, last year's NCAA Division III National Champion, on March 25.

Head Coach Bobby McKee credits a part of his team's success to Mallory McRae, a senior from Bainbridge, Georgia. McRae is ranked 14th in the nation and won his 16th match on March 20 against Catawba. "Mallory is having a very good year and is leading the team in wins," said McKee.

McKee also credits his freshman players, specifically David Kemp, for their effort so far this year. "David is doing a good job at the number 6 spot, but he has not been pressed that much. I haven't seen everything he can do, but he will be pushed against our tougher opponents," added McKee.

After playing Queens and Barton today and tomorrow, the Blue Hose will compete in the Shorter Invitational on April 2-3.

Scott Ambrose concentrates on returning an opponent's serve. photo by Kim Gibson

PC— Tidbits

Part-time jobs available

The Office of Career Planning and Placement announces the following part-time job opportunities:

Job Description: Data Processor
Company: Parker's Furniture
Location: Laurens
Hours: 15 to 20 hrs. a week

Job Description: Office Assistant
Company: Clinton Hardwoods
Location: Clinton
Hours: 15 to 20 hrs. a week

Job Description: Nursery Worker
Company: First Baptist Church
Location: Clinton
Hours: Sunday - AM & PM

Job Description: Office Assistant
Company: Dial-Log Services, Inc.
Location: Clinton
Hours: 10 hrs. a week

Job Description: Waiter/Waitress
Company: Terry's Restaurant
Location: Clinton
Hours: Flexible

Job Description: Store Staff
Company: Tru-Value Hardware
Location: Clinton
Hours: Flexible

Job Description: Kitchen Staff
Company: Hickory Hills Bar-BQ
Location: Clinton
Hours: Flexible

Job Description: Bank Recon.
Company: Laurens Mental Retard.
Location: Laurens
Hours: 10 hrs. a week

If interested, students should stop by the Office of Career Planning and Placement and obtain more information.

SVS sets Special Olympics

PC's Special Olympic games are set for Friday, April 16. Students who have signed up to assist with the games must attend a workshop on Sunday, April 4. The workshop is necessary to be excused from classes on the 16th. Anyone needing additional information should contact SVS Coordinator Fanchon Glover.

Blue Hose women's tennis team on the ball

By Everett Catts
SPORTS EDITOR

The 1993 PC Women's Tennis Team is 4-0 in conference play and has an overall record of 5-3.

On February 19, the lady netters lost to Emory, 6-2, and were defeated by Berry, 6-1, on the following day. On February 23, PC shut out Lenoir-Rhyne, 9-0. Five days later, the Lady Blue Hose got their second win in the SAC-8, defeating Carson-Newman by a score of 7-2. On March 4, the Lady Hose shut out conference foe Mars Hill.

While many students were bathing in the Florida sun over spring break, PC competed in the Division II Southern Regional Tournament at Armstrong State. The Lady Blue Hose edged Berry University, 5-4. The team was later defeated 5-2 by Valdosta State. Two of the lady netter's matches were cancelled due to a winter storm.

"Overall, I thought there was a tough group of teams in the regional tournament. All of the teams were ranked either nationally or regionally," said Head Coach Donna Arnold.

"I thought we did very well against Valdosta State. We stayed with them but lost some close matches," she added.

On March 16, the Lady Hose came back to Clinton to host Gardner Webb. PC defeated the Lady Bulldogs, improving their conference record to 4-0.

Although her squad is undefeated in conference play, Arnold is not complacent. "With upcoming matches against tough SAC foes such as Catawba, Wingate, and Elon, the toughest competition is ahead," she said.

PC's Dina Padgett keeps her eye on the ball as she prepares to return a hit. photo by Kim Gibson

Blue Hose receive first national tournament bid Georgetown ends PC's dream season

By Brian Sacco
STAFF WRITER

After the men's basketball team rolled to the regular season SAC title and then fell short in the SAC tournament title game, anything was possible in post-season play. Following a first round bye in the District 26 tournament, PC defeated Mars Hill, 71-56, but was topped by its nemesis this season, Lenoir-Rhyne, 74-66, in the district finals. PC's accomplishments were not to go unrewarded, however, as they received an at-large bid to the NAIA Division I National Tournament in Kansas City. The Blue Hose fell short against Georgetown (KY) in the first round, ending PC's dream season. But as Head Coach Gregg Nibert stated, "The team has a lot to be proud of, because their hard play led to an extremely gratifying season."

In the semifinals of the District 26 playoffs, PC matched up against Mars Hill and came out victorious in a defensive battle. Bret Jones led PC with 16 points and nine rebounds, while Derrick Lovelace also contributed nine rebounds. In the finals of the district playoffs, the Blue Hose hosted rival Lenoir-Rhyne, but the outstanding play of the visitors overwhelmed the Blue Hose. Jones once again led scorers and rebounders with 18 points and seven rebounds.

In Kansas City, Georgetown controlled PC with a physical and perimeter-type game. Although the Blue Hose were defeated, Coach Nibert stated that the national exposure and experience would benefit the many returning players next season.

Coach Nibert also stated, "We had pressure from the pre-season number one ranking, and winning the SAC title was gratifying. I am extremely proud with the season and the accomplishments of the team."

The Blue Hose's final record of 27-5 overall and 13-1 in the SAC was the best in school history.

Bret Jones, a senior co-captain, was named SAC Player of the Year and was named to the SAC All-Tournament Team, First Team All-District 26, and District 26 Tournament Team.

Andrew Wellman was named SAC/Food Lion Scholastic Player of the Year and was also selected to the Second Team SAC and SAC All-Tournament Team. John Lloyd was also named to the District 26 Tournament Team.

In addition, Coach Nibert was selected by his colleagues as Coach of the Year for the SAC and for District 26.

The success of the team this year will only continue to benefit the team in the future and will allow the Blue Hose basketball program to gain national prominence.

Acappella group uplifts the soul

by Camisha Clarke
ENTERTAINMENT EDITOR

In 1982 the pursuit of one man's dream of a full-time music ministry led to the establishment of a group whose innovative sounds, congruent melodies, and sensational all-vocal arrangements have captured the ears of the Christian music community. Keith Lancaster, the arranger, songwriter, and former lead vocalist of this group produced Acappella with the unified goals of glorifying God, reaching the lost, encouraging Christians, and providing a positive musical and lyrical alternative to temporal pop music.

These goals of Acappella Ministries have focused the group and led it to a maturation of their all-vocal sounds. Lancaster says, "We have seen first-hand how God can change lives using Christian music as a tool. Our goal is to allow Him to use us in ministry through our concerts and recordings." What began as one man's dream is now a full-fledged music ministry committed to taking the message of salvation, hope, and encouragement around the world.

Acappella uses the power of music for influencing lives. Music is an effective way to break down barriers and draw people to the Lord. Coupled with the gospel, the music of Acappella ministries has inspired fans by its ability to uplift the soul, strengthen convictions, and lead people to the Lord. Acappella displays a full array of styles where all sounds are produced solely by human voices; this versatile performing group uses no instruments. In 1986 Acappella's first radio single, "Acappella," entered the CCM charts, followed by a second successful single, "More Than a Friend," in the top 40. With their 1989 album Sweet Fellowship, Acappella surpassed sales of 120,000 units; the 1990 release Rescue is quickly approaching that mark.

On March 31st Acappella will be performing in Belk Auditorium at 8:00 p.m. Tickets are $5, and seating is reserved. Some tickets are still available, and sales have been as widespread as Tennessee, Greenville, and Georgia. Contact Casey Ross at Ext. 8119 or Box 988 for tickets. All checks should be made out to the Fellowship of Christian Athletes.

Acappella is George Pendergrass, lead singer, from New York by way of Los Angeles; Gary Moyers, tenor, from Lubbock, Texas; Wayburn Dean, baritone, from Hobbs, New Mexico; and Duane Adams, bass, from Odessa, Texas. Acappella Ministries wants to provide enjoyable music with life-changing messages.

The group Acappella will be performing at PC on March 31 at Belk Auditorium. Seats are reserved, and tickets are still available at a price of $5.

Carolina Cup ushers in annual rites of a Southern Spring

by Tonia Snead
STAFF WRITER

Tomorrow thousands of people from all over the nation, including many PC students, will flock to historic Camden, the oldest inland city in South Carolina. Their destination will be the Springdale Race Track, home of the famous Carolina Cup.

For those of you who are from a foreign county, such as Massachusetts, the Carolina Cup is a series of six steeple chase events in which horses race around an oval track and jump hurdles. According to many college students, the horses and the racing are not the main reason for attending the Cup.

"Basically, the Carolina Cup is just one big cocktail party. In all the years I have attended, I don't ever remember seeing a horse," said one student.

The Carolina Cup is considered by many to be the premier social event of the season, since it is basically a celebration of the arrival of spring in the South. According to officials with the Cup, between 70,000 and 90,000 people attended last year's event.

the Cup falls before Easter, white shoes are not an option.

The right kind of clothes is always a concern for a big social event such as the Cup. "In my experience with the Cup, I have seen people wear everything from tuxedos to bluejeans. There is a real mix of people, and that is what makes the whole thing interesting," said Junior Jason West, who happens to be a Kershaw County native.

Tickets for the event are still available and can be purchased at the gate for $10. The gates open tomorrow at 8:30 a.m., and post time for the first race is set for 2:00 p.m. General parking costs an additional $5.00.

"The most fun I had last year at the Cup was seeing my friends from other colleges. I even saw some people there that I hadn't seen since high school graduation," said Sophomore Shealy Painter.

The same number is expected this year.

"I am looking forward to the Cup because it is a chance to see a large number of college students from across the Southeast," said Senior Martha Lynn Smith, who will be attending her first Cup this year.

Smith reminds everyone that because

Hickory Hills
Bar-B-Que

Old Laurens Rd.
Clinton, SC 29325
833-2690

"Carolina's Finest"

Attention All PC Students!
Take A Bar-B-Que Break!

All PC students receive a 10% discount on our dining buffet every Thursday night with valid ID.
"All You Care To Eat!"

RAISE A COOL
$1,000.00
IN JUST ONE WEEK!

For your frat, sorority, club
+ $1000 FOR YOURSELF!
And a FREE IGLOO
COOLER if you qualify
Call 1-800-932-0528, Ext. 65

Security to be installed in male dorms Entire campus to operate on card system

by Jason West
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

PC females will not be the only group buying dorm cards during room registration in the fall. According to Public Safety Chief Grey Mayson, a security system will be implemented in every male residence hall on campus during the summer, and the security system in the female dorms will also be upgraded.

"The security system we currently use is 10 years old and was originally designed to protect three female dorms. The college has outgrown that system. We need a new system that has more monitoring capability and will better secure students and their property," said Mayson.

During its last meeting, the Board of Trustees approved the spending of $80,000 to upgrade the college's dorm security. The college is currently looking at bids for the upgrading. Plans are to install a new security system during the summer and to have it operational by the beginning of the fall semester.

"We decided that while we were upgrading the security in the female dorms, it would be best to install a system in the male dorms. We are trying to plan for 10 years in the future," said Mayson.

Andy Altizer, PC's director of residence life, stated that security is needed in the men's dorms to reduce the number of thefts. "We have had a large number of thefts in the men's residence halls this year, especially in Georgia Hall. A security system is needed to prevent these thefts," he said.

"Security is there to protect the student and is designed to keep outsiders out," added Altizer.

Reportedly, the new system will operate similarly to the current system used by female students. All students will be given a dorm card which will give them access to their particular dorm. In addition, the system will have a feature on it that will automatically alert Public Safety when a door is propped open for more than 15 seconds.

"I know that there will probably be some opposition by male students concerning this new security system. Change is hard to get used to. However, this change is in the best interest of all PC students," said Altizer.

PC student Tony Grant congratulates a Special Olympics participant. Special Olympics was held in Bailey Stadium on April 16.

photo by Andy Altizer

On The Inside

Page 4 . . .

Public Safety closes classrooms in Neville Hall due to vandalism.

Page 5 . . .

PC seniors recall their favorite memories of college life.

Page 6 . . .

Andy Welch brings his own brand of talk to the air waves of Radio PC.

Personnel search ends in selection of new administrator

by LeJeanna Maddox
MANAGING EDITOR

After months of searching and sifting through over fifty resumes, Academic Dean Dr. William Moncrief announced on Thursday that a new assistant academic dean has been selected. Dr. Ronald Dempsey will officially take over in the capacity of assistant academic dean and director of student records on June 14, 1993.

Dempsey is currently the director of academic affairs at Southern Baptist Theological Seminary in Louisville, Kentucky, where he received a Master of Divinity degree as well as a PhD in the sociology of religion. He also holds a Bachelor of Arts in psychology from Wake Forest University and a Master of Arts in sociology from the University of Louisville.

According to Moncrief, Dempsey will hold a slightly modified version of the position formerly held by Bill Gash. "His primary areas of responsibility will be foreign study, the computerization of student records, academic program assessment, and other assorted duties in the registrar's office," said Moncrief.

Although the pool of applicants was narrowed to eight, Dempsey was the only candidate interviewed. "He was clearly the best qualified. We interviewed him first, and it was the last interview," explains Moncrief. "The other faculty members who met him were equally as impressed as I was. We saw no reason to go any further."

According to Moncrief, Dempsey stood out above the rest of the applicants because of his experience, personality, and interest in working in a liberal arts, church-related institution. "He was undoubtedly the most qualified applicant on paper and in person," adds Moncrief.

Dempsey will come to Clinton with his wife, Pam, and their infant daughter, Cason.

Two of the four new faculty positions for next year have been solidified, as well. Dr. Craig Hill will replace the retiring Dr. Lewis Hay as an assistant professor of religion. He is an ordained Methodist minister with a PhD from Christ Church College of Oxford University in England. In addition, Dr. Celia Fryer will join the Modern Foreign Languages Department as an assistant professor of Spanish. She holds a PhD in Spanish from UNC Chapel Hill.

Positions remain to be filled in the math and sociology departments. Applicants are currently being interviewed by members of those departments.

Security to be installed in male dorms Entire campus to operate on card system

by Jason West
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

PC females will not be the only group buying dorm cards during room registration in the fall. According to Public Safety Chief Grey Mayson, a security system will be implemented in every male residence hall on campus during the summer, and the security system in the female dorms will also be upgraded.

"The security system we currently use is 10 years old and was originally designed to protect three female dorms. The college has outgrown that system. We need a new system that has more monitoring capability and will better secure students and their property," said Mayson.

During its last meeting, the Board of Trustees approved the spending of $80,000 to upgrade the college's dorm security. The college is currently looking at bids for the upgrading. Plans are to install a new security system during the summer and to have it operational by the beginning of the fall semester.

"We decided that while we were upgrading the security in the female dorms, it would be best to install a system in the male dorms. We are trying to plan for 10 years in the future," said Mayson.

Andy Altizer, PC's director of residence life, stated that security is needed in the men's dorms to reduce the number of thefts. "We have had a large number of thefts in the men's residence halls this year, especially in Georgia Hall. A security system is needed to prevent these thefts," he said.

"Security is there to protect the student and is designed to keep outsiders out," added Altizer.

Reportedly, the new system will operate similarly to the current system used by female students. All students will be given a dorm card which will give them access to their particular dorm. In addition, the system will have a feature on it that will automatically alert Public Safety when a door is propped open for more than 15 seconds.

"I know that there will probably be some opposition by male students concerning this new security system. Change is hard to get used to. However, this change is in the best interest of all PC students," said Altizer.

PC student Tony Grant congratulates a Special Olympics participant. Special Olympics was held in Bailey Stadium on April 16.

photo by Andy Altizer

On The Inside

Page 4 . . .

Public Safety closes classrooms in Neville Hall due to vandalism.

Page 5 . . .

PC seniors recall their favorite memories of college life.

Page 6 . . .

Andy Welch brings his own brand of talk to the air waves of Radio PC.

Personnel search ends in selection of new administrator

by LeJeanna Maddox
MANAGING EDITOR

After months of searching and sifting through over fifty resumes, Academic Dean Dr. William Moncrief announced on Thursday that a new assistant academic dean has been selected. Dr. Ronald Dempsey will officially take over the capacity of assistant academic dean and director of student records on June 14, 1993.

Dempsey is currently the director of academic affairs at Southern Baptist Theological Seminary in Louisville, Kentucky, where he received a Master of Divinity degree as well as a PhD in the sociology of religion. He also holds a Bachelor of Arts in psychology from Wake Forest University and a Master of Arts in sociology from the University of Louisville.

According to Moncrief, Dempsey will hold a slightly modified version of the position formerly held by Bill Gash. "His primary areas of responsibility will be foreign study, the computerization of student records, academic program assessment, and other assorted duties in the registrar's office," said Moncrief.

Although the pool of applicants was narrowed to eight, Dempsey was the only candidate interviewed. "He was clearly the best qualified. We interviewed him first, and it was the last interview," explains Moncrief. "The other faculty members who met him were equally as impressed as I was. We saw no reason to go any further."

According to Moncrief, Dempsey stood out above the rest of the applicants because of his experience, personality, and interest in working in a liberal arts, church-related institution. "He was undoubtedly the most qualified applicant on paper and in person,"

adds Moncrief.

Dempsey will come to Clinton with his wife, Pam, and their infant daughter, Cason.

Two of the four new faculty positions for next year have been solidified, as well. Dr. Craig Hill will replace the retiring Dr. Lewis Hay as an assistant professor of religion. He is an ordained Methodist minister with a PhD from Christ Church College of Oxford University in England. In addition, Dr. Celia Fryer will join the Modern Foreign Languages Department as an assistant professor of Spanish. She holds a PhD in Spanish from UNC Chapel Hill.

Positions remain to be filled in the math and sociology departments. Applicants are currently being interviewed by members of those departments.

All I ever really needed to know I learned in the BS office

by Martha Lynn Smith
FEATURES EDITOR

Never say that Presbyterian College doesn't have its perks.

Because I have worked on the Blue Stocking staff for four years, I get to write this editorial thanking the people who have made my four years at PC more than memorable.

Don't you wish you could do it too?

Actually, I think that my words will speak for everyone. There are many different kinds of people here, but the memories of the graduating class will prove that the college experience is similar in many ways.

I estimate that the average number of all-nighters that a senior has pulled while studying would be somewhere from five to ten. Do you remember your most stressful late night, or more importantly, do you remember your study breaks?

Our freshman year Ami Davenport, Dennie Lynn Hill, and I spent our time studying for our biology test eating chips and french onion dip and standing on the desks singing Christmas carols. Ami made an A on her test, and Dennie Lynn and I were lucky if we made C's. You'd think that for the sake of my grades, I'd learn that I talk too much to study with anybody. Heck no! That's most of the fun.

Sometimes I'd study or work in the newspaper office late in the night. Invariably, Reeder or Nelson, God bless them, would bang on the window while I was concentrating on my work. Then they'd have to scrape me off the ceiling.

Those who are on SGA, The PacSac, or SUB know that strange things happen after midnight in Springs. Random things get placed in mailboxes, pictures get defaced, tantrums get thrown, friendships are made, stupid songs get sung (ask Jason West to sing Meli-kaliki-maka for you), professors get talked about, Lauren Owings married Bubba James Earl Buttaluco Fred Cromer in a moonlit ceremony, and people get really innovative when the doors to the main part of the building are locked. Many of my best memories and friends at PC have been a part of this rowdy, but responsible, group.

Of course, I must mention the people who threw all that stress upon us poor students. We all have our favorite professors. Friends come from every corner of this school. Going to visit Dr. Thompson at his house or learning from Dr. Skinner are two of the highlights of my college career. Some classes were—well, let's just say—difficult.

But the number of times I have laughed or been challenged in a Coker, Hobbie, Prater, Burnside, Beasley or Hudson class makes me know that I will never question my parents' investment. My professors were always supportive, not only in the classroom but also in personal situations as well. When my beloved Mr. Matt died, the support that Tom Stallworth and Dr. Skinner gave me proved the strength of the PC family.

Some among us have realized that Admin is not a haunted house of horrible administrative monsters. Paula Sanders always has a smile for anyone who enters the building, but beware, because Margaret Williamson has a bag of practical jokes up her sleeve. Dean Green comforts with her reassuring smile, and Dr. Orr always has a kind word to give. Chris, Randy, and Charlotte in Springs always give me candy, and they handle my crisis of the day quite well. The canteen staff and Mrs. Dutton in GDH are also wonderful. My hero, Tom Stallworth, and his beautiful, wonderful, sweet and charming wife, Mary, will always be my friends. And one day I will work like Grant, Jo, and Steve do in the Public Relations Office, and I will come up with a joke that is worse than one of Steve Owens's feeble attempts.

Needless to say, there are many facets to the learning experience. I'll tell you right now that I have learned more about dealing with people in these four years than I ever have in my life. Believe it or not, PC is a political institution, and there will always be someone whose opinion differs from yours. Look to develop your integrity. Lauren Owings has, and she will lead Presbyterian College well next year. Remember this quotation from William Blake: "Without contraries there are no progressions." The entire student body would do itself well to look at all things from all angles. It is the epitome of education.

My college years have been wonderful. I will never have friends again like the ones I have made at this school. I am not alone in saying this. I Jeanna Maddox, who has served the college faithfully during her four years as a student, was going to write this editorial. As we all do many times in our college careers, she has a busy night tonight; thankfully, she passed this opportunity on to me. I think I speak for her as well. Enjoy this time at PC. It won't come again, and we are all the better for having been here.

CONGRATULATIONS GRADS

The Blue Stocking of Presbyterian College
Clinton, South Carolina, 29325
Volume LXXXVII, Number 10
April 23, 1993

Editor in Chief.....Jason West
Managing Editor.....LeJeanna Maddox
News Editor.....Ricky Dill
Politics Editor.....Ted Carmichael
Sports Editor.....Everette Catls
Entertainment Editor.....Candisha Clarke
Features Editor.....Martha Lynn Smith
Environment Editor.....Heather Moncref
Photography Editor.....Kim Gibson
Layout Editor.....Angela Richardson

Advertising Editor.....Ann Mayfield
Subscriptions Editor.....Ron Mason
Artist.....Michael Christensen

Photography Staff
Kamberlee Gibson Todd Love

Staff Writers
Elizabeth Canard Amanda Bowers
Leigh Hearnburg Katherine Bonner
Kristina Pruitt Cher Fulbright
Paula Warren Michelle Cantey
Brian Sacco Shelly Plupps
Kimi Rabon Jauncy Pate
Tobin Turner Tonya Sneed

The Blue Stocking is a tri-weekly student publication of Presbyterian College. The paper serves as a forum of news and opinion of regional and national concern. For advertising, contact The Blue Stocking, Presbyterian College, Box 1061, Clinton, SC 29325. The Blue Stocking welcomes letters to the editor from all members of the PC community. Signatures are required. Letters are printed on a space available basis. The Blue Stocking reserves the right to edit all letters for proper grammar and punctuation. The final deadline for submitting letters is Friday at 12:00 pm on the week before publication.

Graduation activities set for May 7 and 8

by Lauren Owings
SOCIETY EDITOR

For the first time since 1960, Presbyterian College will hold its commencement outside. Graduation will be held on Saturday, May 7, 1993, and will take place on the West Plaza in front of Neville Hall.

Graduation festivities will actually begin on Friday afternoon, May 7, at 5:30 with the senior barbeque on the West Plaza. The traditional senior program will follow that at 7:30 pm in Belk Auditorium.

file photo
Saturday's activities will begin at 11:00 am with the Baccalaureate Service in Belk Auditorium. Speaking at the service will be Dr. Lewis Scott Hay, PC's retiring Cornelison Professor of Religion. Lunch will be served in the Greenville Dining Hall from 12:00 until 2:00 pm, followed by a ceremony for honor graduates in Edmunds Hall at 2:30 pm.

Commencement exercises will take place on the West Plaza at 4:00 pm. The Class of 1993 will be addressed by Dr. David Gillespie, PC's professor of the year, and Laura Smith, the 1992 outstanding Smith senior.

In an attempt to ensure that parents and family members will have access to prime seating, each senior will be issued four tickets for a reserved seating area. There is no limit, however, on the number of people who may attend the ceremony.

In the event of rain, commencement will be moved to its traditional location in Templeton Gymnasium. The four-ticket policy will still apply, and remaining seats will be available on a first-come, first-serve basis.

Following the ceremony, there will be a reception on the West Plaza in honor of the graduates.

National Guard promotes Nixon to brigadier general

Brigadier General Nixon, center, gets his stars pinned on by his wife, Mica, and Adjutant General T. Eston Marchant.
photo by MSG Philip Jones

Press Release
OFFICE OF THE ADJUTANT GENERAL

Joseph O. Nixon, dean of students at Presbyterian College, was promoted to brigadier general in the South Carolina Army National Guard last month. General Nixon commands the Guard's 228th Signal Brigade, headquartered at Spartanburg.

Nixon is a native of Georgia and a 1963 graduate of Presbyterian College. He also received a master's degree from the University of South Carolina in 1981.

The general served two years in the United States Army before joining the South Carolina Army National Guard in 1968. He took command of the 228th Signal Brigade in June 1992.

Nixon was pinned in a formal ceremony March 21 in front of many of his fellow Guardsmen and Guardswomen at the annual conference of the National Guard Association of South Carolina.

Students question why Safe Ride Shuttle will not stop off campus

by Heather Griffith
STAFF WRITER

It has become a familiar sight on Friday and Saturday nights: a grey mini van with a flashing yellow light taking intoxicated PC students from the fraternity court to the dorms. However, some students believe that the grey mini van should make trips to off-campus housing in addition to stopping at the dorms.

The Safe Ride Shuttle program was started two years ago by Bacchus, an organization designed to promote responsible drinking. Due to some internal difficulties, the shuttle was unable to run last semester. It has, however, been running every Friday and Saturday night this semester from 6:00 pm until 2:00 am.

According to Patrick Long, vice president of Bacchus, the Safe Ride Shuttle exists for the benefit of students. "The purpose of the Safe Ride Shuttle is to provide a safe and responsible way in which students can travel around campus on Friday and Saturday nights," he said.

In light of that purpose, many students have questioned why the Safe Ride Shuttle will not go to off-campus housing and apartments, where a number of PC students reside.

"Personally, I'm not really sure why the shuttle does not go off campus," said Long. "I would assume that it hasn't been approved by the administration because of the safety aspect involved. The apartments are outside of the city limits and out of Public Safety's jurisdiction. If a fight broke out on the van or something else went wrong, it would take a long time for the police to get there."

"Besides the problem of the shuttle's going off campus, I have gotten a lot of comments that people are glad it is running this semester. I think it is one of the most important student services that is on campus," added Long.

Long also stressed the fact that, for operation of the Safe Ride Shuttle to continue next year, the program needs responsible drivers who are willing to volunteer their time.

"If anyone is interested in helping out for the remainder of this semester or for next year, please contact me," said Long.

The Episcopal Church Especially Welcomes Students
+ ALL SAINTS' EPISCOPAL CHURCH
One Block North of Greenville Dining Hall

Sunday Schedule

8:30 am Holy Eucharist
9:45 am Christian Education
10:30 am Coffee (in Parish Hall)
11:00 am Holy Eucharist

Monday Evenings

+ 9:00 pm

CANTERBURY (at Crossroads) — Holy Eucharist

* Need someone to talk to?

The Rev. Nancy J. Allison, Rector (833-1388)
The Rev. Leonard Pearson, Priest-in-Charge (833-8295)

Welcome to CANTERBURY
the Episcopal student group
on campus

Hickory Hills
Bar-B-Que
Old Laurens Rd.
Clinton, SC 29325
833-2690

Attention All PC Students!
Take A Bar-B-Que Break!
All PC students receive a 10% discount on our dining buffet every Thursday night with valid ID.
"All You Care To Eat!"

PC Tidbits

Graduation practice set

Practice for graduation will be held on Wednesday, April 28, 1993, at 4:00 pm on the West Plaza. In case of rain, practice will be in Templeton gym.

All graduates should be aware that the following fees must be paid prior to graduation: diploma fee ($25) to Registrar and all outstanding debts (Business Office, library, security, etc.)

Caps and gowns will be given out at practice. If you are unable to attend practice, please notify the Office of Academic Affairs or the Registrar's Office.

Space deposit due May 1

Students planning to return to campus next fall must pay a $200 space reservation deposit by May 1, 1993. Failure to pay the $200 deposit will result in the loss of a student's placement.

The deposit should be taken to the Accounts Payable Office in the Smith Administration Building.

Publication editors chosen

The editors of next year's publications were selected by the Russell Program Subcommittee on Campus Communication earlier this week. Jason West, a rising senior from Kershaw, South Carolina, will continue to serve as editor-in-chief of the Blue Stocking. Dena Elliott, a rising junior from Marietta, Georgia, will serve as the editor-in-chief of the PaC SaC. Tonya Snead, a rising junior from Augusta, Georgia, will serve as the editor-in-chief of Figs and Thistles. In addition, the committee named David Hyers, a rising senior from Elizabethton, Tennessee, as the manager of Radio PC.

RA's of the Year selected

For the first time in the college's history, the Residence Life Office has selected two students to be honored as the Resident Assistants of the Year. Patrick Long, an RA in Bailey Dorm, and Laura Smith, an RA in Barron Dorm, were selected for the honor. According to Andy Altizer, director of residence life, the two will be presented with a plaque in recognition of their achievement.

Study area closed to students due to vandalism

PC students take time to study in Neville Hall.

photo by Kim Gibson

by Ricky Dill
NEWS EDITOR

According to PC's Director of Maintenance Jack Robertson, several incidents of vandalism within the past month have resulted in a change of policy concerning the opening of Neville Hall at night. The building is frequently used by students as a study area during the evening hours, but it appears that that privilege will have to be curbed.

"There have been numerous occurrences of vandalism in Neville Hall. The vandalism was nothing major but enough to cause a disturbance," said Robertson. "As a result, PC Public Safety has been forced to lock several of the newly renovated classrooms in the building."

According to Public Safety Chief Grey Mayson, the incidents of vandalism did not merit an investigation by his department. "No complaint was reported, so we did not investigate the incidents. I believe it is just one of those unfortunate things that tend to happen when you leave a building open," said Mayson.

The vandalism to Neville Hall included knocking out screens in windows, tearing down blinds, writing on walls, making footprints on walls, and defacing some of the new work just completed in certain rooms.

"Nothing in the building was torn up beyond repair, but Neville will definitely look like an old building fairly soon if this type of destruction continues to take place," said Robertson.

Robertson and Mayson report that since they began locking certain classroom doors, no more vandalism has taken place.

Skip Zubrod, vice president for finance, will decide this week whether the closed classrooms in Neville will be opened for evening study during exam week.

STUCK IN BURGER-TORY?

Tired of burgers? Aspire to something higher. Get a Subway sub. We'll pile your favorite meats on fresh baked bread topped with free fixin's. When you're stuck in a fast food rut, take a Subway out.

SUBWAY

PROTECT YOURSELF AND YOUR BABY
FROM AIDS

FIND OUT ABOUT DRUGS, SEX
AND AIDS
CALL 1-800-322-AIDS

Those were the days . . .

PC students remember their college years

by Christie Grant
STAFF WRITER

Whether it was the fun times at football and basketball games, the parties out at the fraternity houses, or those late night discussions at the Waffle House, PC's graduating seniors will not soon forget their college experience.

Leiv Takle: "I will always remember the times Dr. Dean Thompson taught my freshman English class on the front steps of Neville Hall. I'll also remember all of Dr. Thompson's funny jokes."

Becky Slagle: "My fondest memories of PC will include the bonding that went on when I was a resident of Bailey Dorm, the good socializing in the dining hall, and my semester studying abroad in France."

Jennifer Gordon: "I will always remember sitting around with all my close friends watching the World Series and eating pizza."

Beth Schlich: "My best memories of PC will be spending time getting to know the best friends I'll ever have."

Neri Hunter and Cal Wheeler: "Spencer 105."

Rob Clarke: "My freshman year, I lived on the first floor of Spencer. It was a nasty experience. I remember trying to catch a rat with a milk crate in my room and trying to hit it with a bat."

Erica Durham: "I will never forget the joys of Christmas with friends at the annual candlelight service. I'll also remember having fun at the Clinton Hall/Georgia Dorm Christmas Party."

Miki Rolader: "I finally got my driver's license this past year at the age of 21. All of my friends had a party for me, and all the Pikes brought balloons and made a big banner that said, 'Congratulations Miki.'" said Rolader.

Gina Robinson: "I will always remember the time I finished my senior seminar. To celebrate, my friends and I went to the Holiday Inn and sang every song with the karaoke machine."

Bill Graves and Lara Collier smile.

Paula Graham and Dot share a hug.

Kevin Smith reads in Springs.

Ed Kirkland finds a mailbox full of 'junk' mail.

photos courtesy of PaC SaC

If the shoe fits, wear it . . . If it doesn't, donate it Thornwell is collecting shoes for migrant farm workers. If you would like to help, bring your old shoes to the front desk at Springs.

Thank you for thinking of others.

Congratulations

to our  new Sisters!

ZETA TAU ALPHA

Andy Welch introduces PC to talk radio with the Mayberry Show

Andy Welch mans the microphone at Radio PC. Welch's show can be heard on Mondays from 7:00 to 9:00 pm.
photo by Kim Gibson

by Kim Rabon
STAFF WRITER

Larry King, Oprah Winfrey, and Rush Limbaugh are giant names when it comes to radio and television talk shows. However, if you ask a typical PC student to name his favorite talking host, you might be surprised at the answer. Instead of hearing King or Winfrey, you might hear the name Andy Welch.

Welch has become a talk show favorite on Radio PC with his popular Mayberry Show, which airs on Monday nights from 7:00 to 9:00 pm.

According to Welch, the Mayberry Show presents controversial issues and open campus telephone lines for discussion, comments, and criticism. Some issues that have been addressed on the show include abortion, gays in the military, female roles in society, and affirmative action.

In addition, the show has confronted local issues such as the recent SGA election controversy, the possibility of independent exams, and the arrival of the FLAG Friends of Lesbian and Gay group on campus.

Welch, a junior, says he became interested in radio during his sophomore year at PC. "Paul Root introduced me to Radio PC, and we started doing music shows together," he said.

Last summer, Welch came up with the idea of creating his own talk show. After listening to a few popular shows and improving his mannerisms and style, he was given permission to start with the production of his own brand of talk.

Welch considers the show to be an asset to the campus and to him. "The show keeps students informed and gives them the opportunity to communicate with other social groups. Communication allows the barriers to be broken down," he said.

In addition, the show keeps me informed. The topics that are presented are researched and thought out. Being the neighbor, I am ignorant about a few aspects," added Welch.

Welch reports a positive response to the Mayberry Show thus far. He has had an average of 11 people call in on any given episode.

I appreciate all the callers who participate on the show. It's only when we speak out that things can happen," said Welch.

The Presbyterian College Writers' Workshop

REGISTRATION FORM

Name _____
Address _____
City, State, Zip _____
Telephone () _____ Amount enclosed _____

Please place a check mark by the side of the workshops that you wish to attend. You may choose two. If you choose two, the workshop staff will assign you to Round 1 (Friday) and Round 2 (Saturday). Check also in the appropriate space to submit a manuscript in advance for consideration by the workshop leader. All manuscripts should be mailed by May 15 to the address below. Write prominently on the back of the envelope the workshop for which you wish the manuscript to be considered. Remember to place a check mark below opposite the manuscript type to indicate that you will be sending it by May 15. Workshop leaders may admit participants who have not submitted manuscripts as auditors.

WORKSHOP	WORKSHOP LEADER	MANUSCRIPT
1 Writing Fiction	Scott Ely	One chapter or story
2 Writing Poetry	Susan Ludvigson	Five poems
3 Writing for the Stage	Jon Tuttle	A one-act play (i.e., not more than 25 pages or a scene from a play with a paragraph synopsis of play)
4 Creative Non-Fiction	James Kilgo	One example

All participants will hear Stephen Conroy give three sessions on editing for publication. In addition, all workshop leaders will give readings from their works.

It is possible that workshops will fill up quickly. In the event that they do, please write below the numbers of workshops that you would prefer as alternates for those you have selected.

Alternate One # _____ Alternate Two # _____ Alternate Three # _____

Accommodations will be provided in Presbyterian College residence halls, and meals will be served in Greenville Dining Hall at the college. Please check the arrangement you prefer and enclose a check for that amount. Registration deadline for room and meals is May 20. (Other accommodations are available in local motels for those who wish to make their own arrangements.)

FEES (Non-Refundable):

_____ $40.00 Covers registration, room, and meals
_____ $65.00 Covers registration and meals
_____ $35.00 Covers registration and room
_____ $15.00 Covers registration

Please complete and return this form with check made payable to Presbyterian College to:

Writers' Workshop
Presbyterian College
Clinton, S.C. 29325

For more information, write the above address or call (803) 833-8463 (before May 15).
After May 15 call (803) 833-8365.

Writers of all ages constantly search for ways to improve their skills. Presbyterian College's Russell Program Steering Committee and English Department have assembled a nationally renowned staff of professionals who will help writers of all ages and abilities improve their work during the college's 1993 Writers' Workshop.

During the workshop, you'll learn more about poetry, fiction, drama, and much more. And, you may share a table at lunch and exchange ideas with a published author. You may also have your own works critiqued during two interesting and informative workshop sessions. And you will hear a famous editor give advice on publication.

If you wish, you may stay in a comfortable new residence hall on Presbyterian College's oak laden campus. Packages are also available which include all meals. Or, you may choose to travel to campus for the workshops and activities.

Whatever your pleasure, we invite you to experience what has thrilled Pope, Keats, and countless others throughout history. Good writing!

*I am convinced more and more, day by day,
that fine writing is next to fine doing, the top
thing in the world.*

— John Keats (1819)

Clinton administration announces the 'mother of all base closings'

Members of Congress criticize plan for its potential economic harm to certain states

by Ted Carmichael
POLITICS EDITOR

The Soviet Union has crumbled into a loose conglomerate of hard to pronounce countries. Germany is now re-united and trying to dominate Europe with its economic rather than military might. Japan has built the second most powerful economy in the world from the ashes of WWII and has outlawed sending troops abroad.

Welcome to the end of the Cold War, where bombs and guns are only needed to keep extremist countries in line. This "new world order" requires a new definition for our nation's armed forces. That definition says better, faster, cheaper, and smaller. It's the smaller part that's going to adversely affect scores of communities and thousands of defense-related jobs across the nation. In the first step of a process started by Bush and carried out by Clinton, 31 major military installations in 15 states will be shut down. One hundred thirty-four other bases will be scaled back and consolidated.

What Defense Secretary Les Aspin has dubbed "the mother of all base closings" greatly accelerates the process of tightening up the U.S. military budget from its peak in 1985. Over the last four years, 440,000 defense jobs have been eliminated. By the year 2001, that number should reach 2.1 million. By 1997 the defense budget will be just 3 percent of the Gross National Product, the lowest since the bombing of Pearl Harbor. If the base closings of 1988 and 1991 are added in, the total amount of savings will be about $6.5 billion, or one-third of the current budget.

Many members of Congress are protesting shutdowns that are occurring in their districts. Congressman Ronald Dellums of Oakland, California, is outraged over the fact that all five installations in his district have been targeted. During his 22 years as a Carolna is also seeing red. He has always been an advocate of reduced federal spending and supports a smaller military budget. But when referring to the proposed closing of

to the effects of this action.

Like Dellums, Hollings is protesting the closing of the Charleston navy base on logical grounds, citing a study that rates this base as one of the country's most effective. He also points out the fact that some of the installation's facilities will have to be rebuilt on other bases. However, there is little chance that the proposed list of closings will not pass through the Congress. Five years ago, a bill was passed that gave the power of closing and re-organizing of unnecessary bases to the Pentagon, as long as the services can appeal to an independent base-closing commission. The commission will study Aspin's list and listen to various arguments, then send its recommendation to Congress. In order to prevent one or two sites being taken from the list for political reasons, Congress and the president must vote to accept or reject the list as a whole. Ironically, Congressman Dellums helped draft the legislation that set up this independent commission.

Lost in the noise over the domestic base shutdowns is the reciprocal closing of installation shutdowns across the globe. Aspin plans to list 24 such facilities in five countries and to reduce operations in five others. Out of the 350,000 troops abroad, the Defense Secretary plans to shed about 150,000. U.S. forces in Europe will be reduced from 200,000 to 100,000, and there is even talk of eventually bringing that number to under 50,000.

The transition is a painful one for many communities around the US, but it is intended to make the armed forces better able to meet the demands of a different world than what we have become used to.

representative, he has been consistently critical of the military and has voted to cut programs and close bases in the past. Dellums insists, however, that the closings in his district were for political, not logical, reasons. "This is George Bush's base-closing list, and it's George Bush's base-closing commission," he said.

Senator Ernest "Fritz" Hollings of South

the Charleston Naval Station, he said, "The mother of all base-closure lists clobbers Charleston. It could bring economic ruin to the area." Hollings projected that the shutting down of that base will take about $1 billion out of the local economy. The job losses may even affect students on PC's campus. At least one student has expressed concerns about not being able to return next year due

TAKE THE KEYS
CALL A CAB
TAKE A STAND

FRIENDS DON'T LET FRIENDS DRIVE DRUNK

Ever Get Somebody Totally Wasted?

Andy Welch introduces PC to talk radio with the Mayberry Show

Andy Welch mans the microphone at Radio PC. Welch's show can be heard on Mondays from 7:00 to 9:00 pm.

photo by Kim Gibson

by Kim Rabon
STAFF WRITER

Larry King, Oprah Winfrey, and Rush Limbaugh are giant names when it comes to radio and television talk shows. However, if you ask a typical PC student to name his favorite talking host, you might be surprised at the answer. Instead of hearing King or Winfrey, you might hear the name Andy Welch.

Welch has become a talk show favorite on Radio PC with his popular Mayberry Show, which airs on Monday nights from 7:00 to 9:00 pm.

According to Welch, the Mayberry Show presents controversial issues and opens campus telephone lines for discussion, comments, and criticism. Some issues that have been addressed on the show include abortion, gays in the military, female roles in society, and affirmative action.

In addition, the show has confronted local issues such as the recent SGA election controversy, the possibility of independent exams, and the arrival of the H. M. Friends of Lesbian and Gays group on campus.

Welch, a junior, says he became interested in radio during his sophomore year at PC. "Paul Root introduced me to Radio PC, and we started doing music shows together," he said.

Last summer, Welch came up with the idea of creating his own talk show. After listening to a few popular shows and improving his mannerisms and style, he was given permission to start with the production of his own brand of talk.

Welch considers the show to be an asset to the campus and to him. "The show keeps students informed and gives them the opportunity to communicate with other social groups. Communication allows the barriers to be broken down," he said.

In addition, the show keeps me informed. The topics that are presented are researched and thought out. Being the mediator, I can't promote a show unaware of all aspects," added Welch.

Welch reports a positive response to the Mayberry Show thus far. He says that an average of 12 people call in on any given episode.

"I appreciate all the callers who participate on the show. It's only when we speak out that change can happen," said Welch.

The Presbyterian College Writers' Workshop

REGISTRATION FORM

Name _____
Address _____
City, State, Zip _____
Telephone () _____ Amount enclosed _____

Please place a check mark by the side of the workshops that you wish to attend. You may choose two. If you choose two, the workshop staff will assign you to Round 1 (Friday) and Round 2 (Saturday). Check also in the appropriate space to submit a manuscript in a book for consideration by the workshop leader. All manuscripts should be mailed by May 15 to the address below. Write prominently on the back of the envelope the workshop for which you wish the manuscript to be considered. Remember to place a check mark below opposite the manuscript type to indicate that you will be sending it by May 15. Workshop leaders may admit participants who have not submitted manuscripts as auditors.

WORKSHOP	WORKSHOP LEADER	MANUSCRIPT
1. Writing Fiction	Scott Ely	One chapter or story
2. Writing Poetry	Susan Ludwigson	Five poems
3. Writing for the Stage	Jon Tuttle	A one-act play (not more than 25 pages or a scene from a play with a paragraph synopsis of play)
4. Creative Non-Fiction	James Frigo	One example

All participants will hear Stephen Corey give three sessions on editing for publication. In addition, all workshop leaders will give readings from their works.

It is possible that workshops will fill up quickly. In the event that they do, please write below the numbers of workshops that you would prefer as alternates for those you have selected.

Alternate One # _____ Alternate Two # _____ Alternate Three # _____

Accommodations will be provided in Presbyterian College residence halls, and meals will be served in Greenville Dining Hall at the college. Please check the amount you prefer and enclose a check for that amount. Registration deadline for room and meals is May 26. [Other accommodations are available in local motels for those who wish to make their own arrangements.]

FEES (Non-Refundable):

_____ $80.00 Covers registration, room, and meals
_____ $65.00 Covers registration and meals
_____ $55.00 Covers registration and room
_____ $35.00 Covers registration

Please complete and return this form with check made payable to Presbyterian College to

Writers' Workshop
Presbyterian College
Clinton, S.C. 29325

For more information write the above address or call (803) 833-8463 (before May 15).
After May 15 call (803) 833-8365.

Writers of all ages constantly search for ways to improve their skills. Presbyterian College's Russell Program Steering Committee and English Department have assembled a nationally renowned staff of professionals who will help writers of all ages and abilities improve their work during the college's 1993 Writers' Workshop.

During the workshop, you'll learn more about poetry, fiction, drama, and much more. And, you may share a table at lunch and exchange ideas with a published author. You may also have your own work critiqued during two interesting and informative workshop sessions. And you will hear a famous editor give advice on publication.

If you wish, you may stay in a comfortable new residence hall on Presbyterian College's oak-laden campus. Packages are also available which include all meals. Or, you may choose to travel to campus for the workshops and activities.

Whatever your pleasure, we invite you to experience what has thrilled Pope, Keats, and countless others throughout history... good writing!

I am convinced more and more, day by day,
that fine writing is next to fine doing, the top
thing in the world.

— John Keats (1819)

Clinton administration announces the 'mother of all base closings'

Members of Congress criticize plan for its potential economic harm to certain states

by Ted Carmichael
POLITICS EDITOR

The Soviet Union has crumbled into a loose conglomerate of hard to pronounce countries. Germany is now re-united and trying to dominate Europe with its economic rather than military might. Japan has built the second most powerful economy in the world from the ashes of WWII and has outlawed sending troops abroad.

Welcome to the end of the Cold War, where bombs and guns are only needed to keep extremist countries in line. This "new world order" requires a new definition for our nation's armed forces. That definition says better, faster, ... and smaller. It's the smaller part that's going to adversely affect scores of communities and thousands of defense-related jobs across the nation. In the first step of a process started by Bush and carried out by Clinton, 31 major military installations in 15 states will be shut down. One hundred thirty-four other bases will be scaled back and consolidated.

What Defense Secretary Les Aspin has dubbed "the mother of all base closings" greatly accelerates the process of tightening up the U.S. military budget from its peak in 1985. Over the last four years, 440,000 defense jobs have been eliminated. By the year 2001, that number should reach 2.1 million. By 1997 the defense budget will be just 3 percent of the Gross National Product, the lowest since the bombing of Pearl Harbor. If the base closings of 1988 and 1991 are added in, the total amount of savings will be about $6.5 billion, or one-third of the current budget.

Many members of Congress are protesting shutdowns that are occurring in their districts. Congressman Ronald Dellums of Oakland, California, is outraged over the fact that all five installations in his district have been targeted. During his 22 years as a

Carolina is also seeing red. He has always been an advocate of reduced federal spending and supports a smaller military budget. But when referring to the proposed closing of

to the effects of this action.

Like Dellums, Hollings is protesting the closing of the Charleston navy base on logical grounds, citing a study that rates this base as one of the country's most effective. He also points out the fact that some of the installation's facilities will have to be rebuilt on other bases. However, there is little chance that the proposed list of closings will not pass through the Congress. Five years ago, a bill was passed that gave the power of closing and re-organizing of unnecessary bases to the Pentagon, as long as the services can appeal to an independent base-closing commission. The commission will study Aspin's list and listen to various arguments, then send its recommendation to Congress. In order to prevent one or two sites being taken from the list for political reasons, Congress and the president must vote to accept or reject the list as a whole. Ironically, Congressman Dellums helped draft the legislation that set up this independent commission.

Last in the noise over the domestic base shutdowns is the reciprocal closing of installation shutdowns across the globe. Aspin plans to list 24 such facilities in five countries and to reduce operations in five others. Out of the 350,000 troops abroad, the Defense Secretary plans to shed about 150,000. U.S. forces in Europe will be reduced from 200,000 to 100,000, and there is even talk of eventually bringing that number to under 50,000.

The transition is a painful one for many communities around the U.S., but it is intended to make the armed forces better able to meet the demands of a different world than what we have become used to.

representative, he has been consistently critical of the military and has voted to cut programs and close bases in the past. Dellums insists, however, that the closings in his district were for political, not logical, reasons. "This is George Bush's base-closing list, and it's George Bush's base-closing commission," he said.

Senator Ernest "Fritz" Hollings of South

the Charleston Naval Station, he said, "The mother of all base-closure lists clobbers Charleston. It could bring economic ruin to the area." Hollings projected that the shutting down of that base will take about $1 billion out of the local economy. The job losses may even affect students on PC's campus. At least one student has expressed concern about not being able to return next year due

TAKE THE KEYS.
CALL A CAB.
TAKE A STAND.

FRIENDS DON'T LET FRIENDS DRIVE DRUNK

Ever Get Somebody Totally Wasted?

Russia in state of political turmoil

by Ted Carmichael
POLITICS EDITOR

Since the Soviet Union collapsed in December of 1991, Russia has been struggling to form a stable democratic government and to make the transformation from a command to a market-oriented economy. The transition, however, has been difficult. Their economy is in shambles, and internal power struggles may not only hamper the reform process but may reverse it altogether.

Yeltsin, the populist president of Russia, and Ruslan Khasbulatov, the chairman of the Supreme Soviet, had a face-off over which body has the power to rule the country. The deputies of the parliament overwhelmingly voted to nullify all previous agreements to share governing power with the president. They also banned the upcoming national referendum on whether Russia should be a parliamentary or presidential republic, removed the president's power to issue decrees, and took control of the Cabinet. After failing to reach a compromise with the Congress on Friday, an ill-tempered Yeltsin walked out of the hall of the Great Kremlin Palace.

Yeltsin has since said that he and his people will still hold some kind of referendum on power sharing, a move that the deputies warned would be unconstitutional. Yeltsin still holds considerable power in Russia. Parliament is not prepared to run the day-to-day affairs of the executive branch. Besides that, the parliament was "elected" when communists were still running the country. Only Yeltsin was elected by popular vote, and if he is successful in holding congressional elections early (they are scheduled for 1995), then he could get many of the conservative hard-liners replaced.

Although the congress cannot yet run Yeltsin completely out of office, they can make things difficult for him by slowly chiseling away at his power. One commentator for the Russian Information Agency called it the "slow strangulation of the President." As the proverbial noose tightens, Yeltsin's rhetoric is becoming more negative. He said last week that he may have to take "extreme measures" and hinted at a presidential coup. The deputies are understandably edgy; one panicky member announced during the session that 10 truckloads of troops had just arrived. Four hours later a hastily formed commission reported that it was only the snow-plows.

Of course, Yeltsin would have to enlist the support of the military in order to seize power. Although Yeltsin is on friendly terms with the armed forces, Defense Minister Pavel Grachev has kept them out of the current political fight. The threat of Yeltsin's trying to illegally seize power is slight. But the political and economic reforms will not wait. This conflict will have to be resolved soon.

President Clinton still supports Yeltsin as the best hope for democracy in Russia but is cautious about how to support him. He has spoken with former presidents George Bush and Richard Nixon on the issue, tapping their experience and knowledge on the situation. But there are some problems standing in the way of aid from the West. First and foremost, there is little money to spare in these days of tight budgets. Secondly, many people aren't comfortable with giving funds to a country that seems to be so politically unstable.

Most importantly, however, is the worry that the money won't be used in the most effective way. Not only is there much corruption within the Russian system, but the people are also inexperienced with the idea of a free market.

As the situation worsens, and the Russian people's support erodes with the economy, Western leaders must form contingent plans for the worst case scenario. If the Congress is able to replace or remove Yeltsin, it may mark the return of a hard-line communist regime. That would not only be a great political tragedy but would also have a very negative effect on the world economy. And if Yeltsin resorts to violence, the West would have no choice but to support him reluctantly. As Nixon described the situation in a letter to the New York Times three weeks ago, "Our choice is not between him and somebody better, but him and someone worse."

INTERVIEW SUITS
STARTING AT $200

The Men's Shop
PUBLIC SQUARE LAURENS

RAISE A COOL
$1,000.00
IN JUST ONE WEEK!
For your frat, sorority, club,
+ $1000 FOR YOURSELF!
And a FREE IGLOO
COOLER if you qualify.
Call 1-800-932-0528, Ext. 65.

Bill Nave saved these
kids from drowning,
but he's not
a lifeguard.

Verleeta Wooten found
several new stars,
but she's not
an astronomer.

These are teachers. But to the kids they reach,
they're heroes.

BE A TEACHER.
BE A HERO.

Call 1-800-45-TEACH.

Ad
A Public Service of
The Publication
Phone: 800-45-TEACH

Reach for the Power
TEACH
Educators are heroes in Track team members vault their way to heights of victory

by Brian Sacco
STAFF WRITER

The Presbyterian College track team, composed of 23 athletes and led by first year Head Coach Mike Owens, has been successful in its meets so far this season.

On March 20, the Hose participated in the Pembroke State University Braves Track Classic. PC finished third, behind the host team and Francis Marion.

Placing for PC were Orlando Clyburn, first in discus and third in shot put; Ron Palmer, second in 200 meters and third in 400 meters; Matt Glenn, second in 800 meters; and Aaron Johnson, third in 3000 meter scyclechase.

The 400 meter relay team made up of Quincy Eigner, Todd Wofford, Stuart Hackney, and Palmer, finished in second place, and the mile relay team of Patrick Prioleau, Tommy Lewis, Palmer, and Glenn won third place.

At the Francis Marion University Invitational on March 27, the Blue Hose placed fourth out of six teams.

Those placing for PC included Lewis, fourth place in high jump; Tyrese Ingram, sixth place in high jump; Clyburn, second place in shot put and second place in discus; Marvin Atchinson, fourth place in shot put and third place in the hammer throw; Joe Moody, sixth place in shot put; Wofford, fourth place in long jump and sixth place in the triple jump; Johnson, fourth place in 10,000 meters; Jason Whitener, fourth place in 1500 meters; Prioleau, sixth place in 110 meter high hurdles and fourth place in the 400 meters intermediate hurdles; Jon

Robinson, second place in the triple jump; Glenn, first place in the 800 meters; Diamond Carr, fifth place in the javelin; Jamie Moses, sixth place in the javelin; and Keith Moore, fifth place in discus.

On April 6, PC hosted the Blue Hose Classic, with the Hose defeating Paine College, Voorhees College, and Saint Andrews.

Those placing for PC included: Clyburn, first place in shot put and first place in discus; Moody, third place in shot put; Moore, fifth place in shot put and second place in discus; Atchinson, fourth place in shot put; Wofford, first place in long jump and second place in triple jump; Prioleau, third place in long jump and first place in the 110 meter high hurdles; Lewis, second place in the 220 yards and third place in high jump; Robinson, first place in triple jump; Moses, first place in pole vault and fourth place in javelin; Ingram, first place in high jump; Whitener, third place in the mile and second place in 800 yards; Brian Johnson, fourth place in the mile; Eigner, first place in the 100 yards; Hackney, third place in the 100 yards; Eric Byrd, fourth place in the 100 yards; Glenn, first place in the 800 yards; Palmer, first place in the 220 yards; Carr, third place in javelin; and Jonathan Dobson, fifth place in the three mile.

The team of Eigner, Wofford, Hackney, and Palmer placed first in the 400 meter relay. In addition, the team of Prioleau, Hackney, Lewis, and Glenn placed first in the mile relay.

Patrick Prioleau takes to the air in the long jump at the Blue Hose Classic.

photo by Kim Gibson

Golf team begins season in the rough Experience yields some improvement

by Brian Sacco
STAFF WRITER

After a slow start, PC's golf team has gained some momentum going into the SAC championship tournament.

Back in February, during the team's first match, the Blue Hose placed twentieth out of 24 teams in the Nations Bank Intercollegiate Golf Tournament. In addition, the Hose placed tenth in the Challenge of the Carolinas in early March.

Since then, the team has managed to improve its pace by placing sixth out of 12 teams in the Richard Rendleman Invitational Tournament in Salisbury, North Carolina, and placing sixth out of 10 teams at the Graysburg Smokey Mountain Invitational.

In addition, team members Perrin Powell and Bret Boulware qualified for the All-Tournament

Team at the Challenge of the Carolinas. Powell also qualified for the All-Tournament Team at the Richard Rendleman Invitational.

The Hose are preparing for the SAC Tournament on April 25-27.

Although his team struggled early in the season, Head Coach Tommy Addison said he was completely confident in the players' efforts. "Powell, Boulware, and Will Homes have played outstanding golf, while Tyler Boulware has been consistent during the season," he said.

"We are young in tournament experience, but as the season progresses, we are gaining confidence. We are building a strong team with several returners and strong recruits one step at a time," added Addison.

Intercristo is always looking for job leads...

So you don't have to.

You're considering Christian service and are open to relocating, but don't know where to begin? Start with us! Our team uncovers new job leads daily. Our ministry jobs span 215 different occupational categories. Your job skills are needed in ministry. We'll show you where. Call toll free:

1-800-426-1342

Or return the coupon below.

Mail this coupon to:

Intercristo
The Christian
Career Specialist
19900 Fairmont Ave., N.
Seattle, WA 98148-0800

Yes! Please send me free information on Intercristo's Christian Placement Network.

Name _____

Address _____

City _____ State _____ Zip _____

Publication _____

Blue Hose baseball team advances to SAC Tournament

by Everett Catts
SPORTS EDITOR

With a record of 20-25 (9-12 SAC), the PC Baseball team enters the postseason. The sixth-seeded Blue Hose played Elon on Tuesday in the first round of the SAC Tournament. With a win against the Fighting Christians, PC would advance to the tournament in Mars Hill, NC. During the regular season, the Blue Hose won once in a three-game series at Elon.

Going into the SAC Tournament, Tim Corbin's squad has won five of its last six conference games. Improvements in the team's overall pitching and defense have helped in this recent success.

One example of the improved pitching was Jason Bradley's two-hitter against Catawba on April 4. Bradley went the distance, giving up a hit in each of the first two innings, but losing the game, 1-0.

"That's one of the better pitched games all year. He did a tremendous job against a good hitting team," said Corbin.

Jim Dudley's 3-1 loss against Western Carolina, a team which beat Division I powerhouse Georgia Tech, was another good outing for the Blue Hose. Although the Blue Hose outthrew the Catamounts, WCU battled back from a 1-0 lead in the eighth inning.

Coach Corbin commented on the game, saying, "It was another good pitching performance for the team. It was also the best defensive ball game we've played all year."

In the final SAC-8 series of the year, PC swept Gardner-Webb, allowing only four runs all weekend. All three Blue Hose starters pitched complete games.

Defensively, PC has made large strides in the last two weeks. During the Gardner-Webb series the Blue Hose committed only two errors. In the Western Carolina game, there were no errors. Over the past two weeks, the team's fielding percentage has jumped from .928 to .935. Last year's percentage was .929.

On March 28, the Blue Hose retired the jersey of Marcus Miller, a player who died in a car accident last October. Prior to the game Miller's family was present to accept a jersey signed by present and past members of the team, a plaque, and a scholarship in his name. The scholarship was founded by David Fields, former player and current student assistant, and his family. Most of Miller's family was there to take part in the dedication ceremonies, which included the unveiling of Miller's name and number on the right field fence. Approximately 200 fans attended the ceremony and game which followed. The Blue Hose defeated Wingate, 10-5.

Coach Corbin commented on the day's events, saying, "I was pleased with it. It was a good honor for him (Miller) and his family. The fact that we won the game made it even better."

On the next day, the Blue Hose split a doubleheader with the Bulldogs, giving PC a two games-out-of-three victory in the series.

After losing two games in the three-game SAC-8 series with Catawba, the Blue Hose rebounded against Wofford on April

6. Glen Bergeron, Julius Prince, and Mike Arnold each had homers for PC. Arnold, who came in for Prince, hit the game-winning homerun, a two-run blast in the ninth which gave the Blue Hose an 8-7 victory.

Keith Budinger, Chris Bass, Robb Niles, Jimmy Allen, Jay Reeves, Julius Prince, and Gregg Desto were all introduced. Bass pitched a complete game victory on the previous day. Reeves went the distance on Sunday, allowing no earned runs. Desto and Prince each had three hits in four at-bats.

"We're in a position where we have nothing to lose," Corbin said before the team's game against Elon.

On April 20 the Blue Hose played Elon in the SAC-8 playoff game, the winner advancing to the South Atlantic Conference Tournament, which begins today and ends Sunday. Although PC had many baserunners in the first five innings, they were unable to capitalize. Elon got on the board early, scoring runs in the first, second, and third innings. But with two outs in the sixth, the Blue Hose scored six runs, forcing the Fighting Christians to go to their bullpen. In the following inning, PC added two more runs, giving them an 8-3 lead.

Senior Robb Niles pitched into the sixth and got the win. Junior Darren Bane took over in the sixth and gave up only one run in three innings. Nevertheless, Elon didn't quit.

The Fighting Christians scored again in the eighth and threatened to tie in the ninth when Senior Chris Bass loaded the bases on walks. An A.J. Forlano single narrowed the score to 8-4. Elon batter Clint Ayers represented the tying run, but Bass struck him out to end the game.

"I was really proud of the way they went up there and took the game away from Elon in front of their home crowd. They responded very well," said Corbin about the win.

With the win at Elon, PC fulfilled two of their goals. In advancing to the four-team, double elimination SAC Tournament, the Blue Hose also won their 20th game of the season. Coach Corbin's team has now reached that 20 win plateau three straight years.

Following the Little Four Tournament, the Blue Hose lost to Augusta, 13-5. Bushway and Elon Pollock each hit homers for the Blue Hose.

Rounding out the regular season, the Blue Hose swept Gardner Webb, winning 3-1, 7-2 and 4-1 on April 17-18. Before the game, the team's seven seniors were honored.

Men's tennis team dominates on the court and in the classroom

by Kim Rabon
STAFF WRITER

Whether they're on the court or in the classroom, the men's tennis team is having an impressive season.

The men finished 9-1 in the conference, losing only to Elon, after compiling a 17-6 overall record.

The Blue Hose competed in the SAC tournament April 9-10 and in district competition April 16-19. Falling short to Elon, the Hose grabbed second place in both tournaments.

Mallory McRae (#1), Mark Necase (#2), Glenn Austell (#4), and David Kemp (#6) were selected for the All-Conference team, while McRae and Necase were also named to the All-District team.

Prior to the conference tournament, the team lost to Kalamazoo, 8-1. On April 3, they again fell short against Shorter, 5-4, and Berry, 8-1. The team was without David Freudenheim, the #5 player, which could have made a significant difference.

On April 6, the Blue Hose netters defeated Gardner Webb, 9-0, and went on to dominate Queens on April 8 by a score of 7-2.

Head Coach Bobby McKee commented, "I am proud of this team. I definitely want to spotlight our seniors—Mallory McRae, Glenn Austell, and David Freudenheim. They have succeeded in changing the team from mediocre to one that is nationally recognized."

Coach McKee was also pleased that his team has three 1993 Scholar Athletes. To be eligible, an athlete must be a junior or a senior and must have a GPA of 3.5 or better. Those to be recognized are Mallory McRae, Mark Necase, and Scott Ambrose, who also happen to be the top three players on the team.

The team is ranked 17th nationally and is waiting to receive word about the opportunity for national competition.

ONLY YOU CAN PREVENT FOREST FIRES
A Public Service of the USDA Forest Service and your State Forester

Released balloons threaten wildlife

by Heather Moncrief
ENVIRONMENT EDITOR

Parts of the balloon arch which has been caught in the tree to the right of Jacobs Hall since sorority bid day have finally fallen to the ground. Handfuls of shriveled balloons have been picked up near the tree this week. Pieces of blue and white balloons have been found scattered around the campus and the surrounding Clinton neighborhoods since the accidental release of the arch. Other helium-filled balloons which became dislodged from the mass probably traveled farther. The cleanup of the fallen debris on the campus has been left to maintenance and to random students.

Released balloons and fallen remains of them pose a threat to the natural environment. Birds attempt to eat the balloons caught in trees, while dogs, squirrels, and other animals attempt to eat those that have fallen to the ground. The attempts can be choking. If successful in swallowing the material, the animal will suffer from an inability to digest the balloon material as well as any food swallowed afterwards.

A greater threat is created if the balloons land in water environments. When balloons are submerged in water, they lose their color. The colorless masses with strings attached resemble jellyfish and are readily eaten by natural predators such as sea turtles. These predators eventually suffocate or starve to death. In 1985, a dead sperm whale, 17 feet in length, was found to have a balloon with 3 feet of ribbon attached blocking the stomach's valve leading to the intestines. The whale's pathway for digestion had been cut off, causing the whale to starve.

photo by Kim Gibson

While Clinton is not located on the coast, studies have revealed that balloons released here can travel the distance to the beach in a short period of time. In 1988, a balloon released by a research group was followed from Ohio to the South Carolina coast, a trip which took only two days.

Incidents similar to that of the whale are not few in number. It is crucial to note them and to take caution when handling helium-filled balloons. The arch is not the only example of such balloons being released from the Presbyterian College campus. There are several others. Just this month, handfuls of balloons were released during and after the Special Olympics events. If these balloons are to be used around campus, an attempt needs to be made not to let them go. If pieces of balloons are found on the grounds of the college or elsewhere, individuals need to pitch in and throw them away.

New Recycle PC chairperson comments on town meeting

by Kristina Pruitt
STAFF WRITER

Recently it has been difficult to remain optimistic about the recycling program in Clinton. It seems that every time we turned around, another item is being taken off the list of things that can easily be recycled. When I heard about the town meeting concerning the Clinton and Laurens recycling program, I was curious to hear what the city was doing and what the plans for the future were. About 15 people attended the meeting held at the First Presbyterian Church in Clinton. Steve Harold, city manager, and Scott Holland, county public works director, spoke about the problems facing Clinton and focused mainly on the plans for the future.

Harold explained that expense and volume have been the largest problems. Plastic is a good example of how expense and volume have caused problems for Laurens County. The county must have a barker to crush the plastic into small blocks. A tractor trailer truck must also be rented for transporting the blocks to a larger facility. Most centers will not accept plastic unless it is barked and delivered. The barker would cost $7500-$8000. The trailer would cost $7500 a month. A minimum of 5-6 barks or truckloads per month must be collected in order for the county barely to break even.

These figures may not seem too outrageous, especially to those of us who are from larger cities with much larger budgets; however, when the Clinton marketing manager was told to clean up the cash flow, it was discovered that the plastic being collected was worth only $5 a month. The problem is clear: the county was losing money due to its recycling. Relatively speaking, Laurens County would have to collect 3100 times the amount of plastic currently being collected in order to break even. The issue concerning plastic recycling is one example of the type of problems Laurens County has been encountering. There is still hope for Laurens, however.

Laurens County received a $25,000 grant through the state, part of which according to Holland, will be used to help the city implement programs. Harold and Holland explained the plans for the future, which eventually may include curbside recycling.

Not only Harold and Holland spoke, but several citizens also voiced opinions concerning the present and the future. Emily Dillard, a church member who "runs the place," according to one source, collects telephone directories and delivers them to a recycling center. In the near future there will also be magazine collections. Through concerned citizens like Ms. Dillard, programs such as telephone and magazine collections are possible. Despite the problems Laurens County has faced in the past, the recycling programs have endured. Ms. Dillard, Mr. Harold, Mr. Holland, and all of the citizens who cared enough to attend the meeting helped me to realize that there is still hope for recycling in Clinton. If Laurens County, Clinton, and P.C. can continue to work together, then recycling will not only endure, but will prosper.

SPECIAL FEATURE

Cat Leg Amputations to continue

by The Animals' Agenda Magazine,
March/April 1993

Despite inquiries by Senator E. Hollings (SC) and Senator John McCain (AZ), Matthew Wolf, a physiologist at the University of South Carolina, is still being funded by the Department of Naval Research and the Heart, Lung, and Blood Institute to conduct cold injury studies on amputated cat legs. Wolf and his colleague, P. Watson, amputate the legs of approximately 100 cats a year to determine if the experiments can "give an understanding of this condition and lead to effective treatment." Over half-a-million dollars have already been allocated to Wolf's cat program.

Thus far, neither the experiments' protocols nor the results seem to have impressed the scientific community. In the opinion of Christopher Smith, M.D., an expert on this topic, "The experiments... do not appear to model any known cold injury. As a physician with experience in hypothermia in humans, I found this paper (Wolf's) totally useless." His view is echoed by another physician, Judith Anne Fairchild. "Wolf's research," pines Fairchild, "should snag a Golden Fleece award for the Department of Defense."

In common with many animal experiments, Wolf's program may suffer from gross redundancy. The subject of hypothermia has been extensively covered in the clinical literature, and international medical archives contain thousands of cases depicting all types of injuries. Many of these dossiers were compiled during and after the Second World War, when tens of millions of soldiers and civilians were exposed to freezing weather in the Eastern European theater of war. In addition, the Nazis left behind a gruesome legacy of medical data on the same topic, after subjecting thousands of Jewish and Russian prisoners to immersion in icy waters and naked empanelings in ice. The Korean War also yielded a generous medical bounty in this regard. Direct clinical observations in humans are usually far more effective in establishing the worthiness of particular procedures.

A CALL FOR HELP Wolf's cat study is up for renewal this year. Besides writing your Congressperson, it may help sending a similar note to Representative Ron Dellums (CA), who has often worked hard to stop abuses of this kind. Write: The Hon. Ron Dellums, House of Representatives, Washington, DC 20510.

"...United We Stand..."

Alpha Sigma Phi

Kappa Alpha

Pi Kappa Alpha

Pi Kappa Phi

Sigma Nu

Theta Chi

Alpha Delta Pi

Sigma Sigma Sigma

Zeta Tau Alpha

GREEK DAY '93

Friday, April 23, 1993
2:30 p.m.

T-Shirts
On Sale
Friday!!

Fraternity Court

Sponsored by IFC and Panhellenic

THE BLUE STOCKING

"Give the people the light, so they may find the way."

Volume LXXXVIII Number 1

PRESBYTERIAN COLLEGE

Clinton, South Carolina 29325

Friday, September 17, 1993

Reynolds Infirmary transformed into freshman female dorm

by Tobin Turner
NEWS EDITOR

By mid-summer, Joe Nixon, PC's dean of students, knew that housing for females during the 1993-94 school year would be a problem, as the school had overcommitted by 27 female spaces.

With all of PC's auxiliary housing, such as the Moorefield House, Women's Social Hall, Mayes Cottage, Beaty House, Douglas House, and Browns Commons, full, PC's administration came up with the idea of transforming Reynolds Infirmary into a women's residence hall.

Transforming the infirmary into a dorm did pose one problem: the lack of space for student health services.

According to Nixon, a new policy concerning PC students and their health had to be written. "Sick students must now stay in their own rooms, as opposed to a sick bed in the infirmary. Meals are supplied by GDH on a carry-out basis to ill students. Although a nurse is on call around the clock, her office hours will only be from 8:00 am to 5:00 pm on weekdays, 9:00 am to 12:00 pm on Saturdays, and 4:00 pm to 6:00 pm on Sundays," he said.

Students that doctors designate as too contagious to remain in their dorm room are given the choice of returning home until their illness has passed or staying at the Laurens County Hospital until able to return to campus. By staying at the hospital, the student

Andy Altizer, director of residence life at Presbyterian College, and Karen Wittenbrook, Reynolds Dorm RA, lead a dorm meeting for the residents of the new dorm. Fourteen freshmen now call the former infirmary home. photo by Steve Owens receives "constant care" but incurs a fee of $25 for every six hours.

"The charge of $25 is well below normal hospital charges, but the student is responsible for the bills," said Nixon.

The definite future for Reynolds has yet to be decided. Though it houses 14 freshmen and PC's new trial attempt at a wellness theme house, Nixon says he hopes that Reynolds can return to being a clinic with some sick beds.

"The current trend across the nation is for colleges to phase out overnight infirmaries. Even a large university like Clemson does not have overnight sick beds for students. Reynolds may never return to a full size, 20 bed, overnight facility," added Nixon.

Many PC students are not comfortable with the fact that the campus no longer has an infirmary.

"I don't think it's right to make students pay to stay in the hospital when they are sick because the school admitted too many females," commented Junior Ashley Small.

Junior Steve Ellis asked, "Why did school officials accept too many people knowing the existing housing problem?"

"The school didn't try to rectify the existing housing problem. They only compounded it. We should give priority to student life," said Senior Dave Lewis.

All PC students do not disagree with doing away with the infirmary.

"I think it's better to not have an overnight infirmary because most people who get ill prefer to stay in their own dorm room," said Senior Kelly Harrington.

Nixon makes no promises for the future of Reynolds Infirmary/Dorm but adds, "We will just have to evaluate later in the year."

On The Inside

Page 3 . . .

PC's new security system: Why isn't it working yet?

Page 6 - 7 . . .

PC students reveal how they spent their summer vacations.

Page 10 . . .

What does a student do for fun in Clinton? Reporter provides 'entertainment guide' to greater Laurens County.

Vandalism reported in Reynolds Dorm parking lot

by Gray Lesesne
STAFF WRITER

Recent incidents of automobile vandalism at Reynolds Dorm have raised the concern of residents there and prompted college officials to increase security and safety precautions in the area.

Reynolds, which was converted from an infirmary into a dormitory this summer, has a small parking area behind it. The parking lot is adjacent to the Harper Center.

According to Public Safety officials, an incident of vandalism occurred several days before freshmen and transfers arrived on campus. A freshman female student, who had arrived to school early for soccer practice, reported that one of her tires was slashed on her 1986 Ford Mustang, which was parked behind Reynolds Dorm.

A separate incident which was reported later involves the allegation that the front bumper of a 1990 Volkswagen Jetta was stolen between 3:00 am and 10:00 am on the morning of Tuesday, August 31. Owner Beth Peake says that the damage to her car, which was parked in the lot behind Reynolds, was over $350.

Peake said she was pleased with the way Public Safety had handled the incident, but notes that there could be additional lighting installed in the Reynolds parking area.

Chief of Public Safety Grey Mayson says that additional lighting has been installed since the two incidents and that his office has increased foot and riding patrols in the area behind Greenville Dining Hall and Reynolds.

"We have updated the lighting behind Reynolds and increased it to the quality that we have in the other areas of the campus. While additional lighting does deter crime, I don't think that had anything to do with this case," said Mayson.

"We've been improving our lighting situation all over the campus for the past six to eight years," he added.

Mayson suggests that students always park in well-lit areas and that everyone should take precautions to remove any portable valuable equipment (i.e. cellular telephones, removable stereos, etc.) from their parked cars.

Mayson also encourages PC students to register valuable property with Project ID. For more information, contact the Office of Public Safety.

PC
Tidbits

Student discounts possible

Through an agreement reached over the summer between Presbyterian College and Apple Computer Company, it is now possible for PC students to purchase Apple Macintosh personal computers, printers, and related items at substantial discounts. This is a capability that only students at larger institutions have had in the past. There are some "back to school" promotional deals currently in effect with special prices that are good only until October 15 on some of the most popular systems, such as the LC III, Centris 610 and 650, and Powerbook 145.

Price lists, product comparisons, and ordering information are available in the Microcomputer Lab in 109 Richardson Hall, which has been designated as an "Apple Information Center." For more details, see one of the students assistants in the lab or Dr. Bill Yarborough.

PC included in Fiske Guide

Presbyterian College is among 310 colleges and universities nationwide to be included in the 1994 edition of The Fiske Guide to Colleges, which annually selects the institutions in the US with the highest academic standards and the ones about which students would like to learn more.

"There are many college guides on the market, but The Fiske Guide to Colleges is recognized as one of the best by both students and higher education professionals," said Ken Orr, president of PC. "Selection is based partially on responses from students at each college or university, and it is gratifying to know that our students recognize the academic quality and the quality of life at PC."

The Fiske Guide to Colleges is published by Times Books, a division of Random House, Inc. It is currently available in bookstores.

Use of dairy milk case illegal

The South Carolina Dairy Association reports that under state law, it is now illegal to possess a dairy-owned milk case. Such cases are frequently found in college dorms. Violators of the law could face a $200 fine or a 60 day jail sentence. For more information, call 1-800-344-4518.

Class of '97 first to have more females than males

by Dawn Banks
STAFF WRITER

It may seem like an eternity, but it was actually only a little over three weeks ago when members of the freshman class arrived on campus for orientation and were having ID pictures taken, being assigned rooms and mailboxes, and opening bank accounts.

According to Margaret Williamson, PC's vice president of admissions and enrollment, the Class of '97 is a distinguished and diverse group.

The freshman class is made up of representatives from 18 states, including Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Louisiana, Maryland, Massachusetts, Mississippi, North Carolina, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Tennessee, Texas, Virginia, and of course, South Carolina," said Williamson. "We even have one freshman from the nation of Belgium," added

"This is the first time ever that the female population of an entering class has been more than the male population."

Margaret Williamson

Williamson.

Of the 1082 people who applied for admission to PC last year, 832 were accepted and 302 of that group enrolled. Of those 302, 142 are males and 160 are females.

"This is the first time ever that the female population of an entering class has been more than the male population," said Williamson.

"This is not a trend unique to PC. It is national trend," added Williamson.

The Class of '97 have SAT scores ranging from 1000 to 1200, with GPA's of 3.154 and up.

Williamson says that the freshman class's high school activities included foreign language clubs, student government, publications, sports, 29 different sports, Boys State, Girls State, and Governor's School.

The freshman class has arrived at PC and is here to stay for the next four years.

Security system expected to be operational soon

A Georgia Hall resident attempts to use his new dorm card. Georgia Hall, as well as all other PC dorms, will soon be operating under a new security system.

by Charles Smith
STAFF WRITER

One new addition to PC this fall has been a dorm security system that was installed in all residence halls over the summer. However, that system is still not fully operational after nearly three weeks of classes.

"We expect the new security system to be fully operational by the time the paper comes out," said Andy Altizer, director of residence life.

Altizer says the new security system was installed to protect students from outsiders. "The main reasoning behind the system is to keep the outsiders out. We want students to be able to visit their friends. The system is not meant to be a hindrance to students."

"We are concerned with the safety and security of the students at PC. The overall goal is to increase campus safety and cut down on campus thefts. About $4000 worth of goods were stolen last year and 60 percent of that crime came from outside PC," added Altizer.

Public Safety Director Grey Mayson says that once the new system becomes operational, it will help monitor student safety. "If a dorm door is left open or propped open for more than forty-five seconds, a signal goes off at the Public Safety office. An officer will then come and investigate to see why the door was left open," he said.

Both Mayson and Altizer emphasized the fact that students should not get a false sense of security from the new system. They stress that students still need to lock their doors and guard against theft.

"Two bikes and a stereo have already been stolen this year," said Altizer.

"As with any new system, there are going to be problems. Please bear with Public Safety as we work out the 'bugs'," added Mayson.

New academic dean wants to lend 'softer face' to PC administration

by Kelley Perkins
STAFF WRITER

Students returning to PC may have noticed several changes in the registrar's office this year. Perhaps the biggest change is that there is no longer a registrar.

According to college officials, the registrar's office was reorganized in an effort to become more efficient. One component of the reorganization was the hiring Dr.

"The students and faculty are our (the administration's) clients and we need to be open to their concerns."

Dr. Ronald Dempsey
Asst. Academic Dean

Ronald Dempsey Dempsey will be filling the new title of assistant academic dean and will basically do the duties of the former registrar.

The daily responsibilities of the registrar's office are now in the hands of

Dr. Ron Dempsey, PC's new assistant academic dean, works on his computer. Dempsey's office will be taking the place of the former registrar's office.

photo by Kim Gibson

Associate Registrar Flo Dowdle. She will process transcripts, schedule classes and classrooms each semester, conduct senior audits, and handle other matters as they arise.

As the assistant dean, Dempsey will be in charge of overseeing the activities of the registrar's office as well as taking charge of programs such as overseas study. He will also coordinate the Health Services Committee, act as the administrative liaison with various faculty committees, and assist Academic Dean Dr. Bill Moncrief with certain projects.

"I basically see my role at PC as lending a softer face to the administration. The students and faculty are our (the administration's) clients and we need to be open to their concerns," said Dempsey.

To achieve his new role, Dempsey hopes to begin meeting with student groups in order to listen to their concerns.

Dempsey comes to PC from the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary in Louisville, Kentucky, where he served as the director of academic affairs. An ordained Baptist minister, Dempsey hopes to eventually teach in the religion department. Dempsey, his wife Pam, and his 9 month-old daughter, Carson, live in Clinton.

 The Episcopal Church Especially Welcomes Students
+ ALL SAINTS' EPISCOPAL CHURCH
One Block North of Greenville Dining Hall

Sunday Schedule
8:30 & 10:00 am Holy Eucharist
11:00 am Fellowship (in Parish Hall)
11:15 am College Class (with Dr. Dean Thompson)

Monday Evenings
9:00 pm CANTERBURY (at "Crossroads" in Douglas House)

Welcome to CANTERBURY the Episcopal student group on campus

* Need someone to talk to? The Rev. Nancy J. Allison, Rector (833-1388)
The Rev. Lennart Pearson, Priest-in-Charge (833-8295)

INTERVIEW SUITS
STARTING AT $200

The Men's Shop
PUBLIC SQUARE LAURENS

NEVER TOO LATE.

Think you missed the Graduate Record Exam deadline. Think again. With the new on-demand GRE[®] you could be taking the test tomorrow. And see your score the instant you finish. So, no reports are mailed 10 to 15 days later, in plenty of time for most schools' deadlines. Call now for instant registration. Educational Testing Service

Sylvan Technology Centers[®]
Part of the Sylvan Learning Center Network

1-800-GRE-A.S.A.P.

Hickory Hills
Bar-B-Que
Old Laurens Rd.
Clinton, SC 29325
833-2690

"Carolina's Finest"

Attention All PC Students!
Take A Bar-B-Que Break!
All PC students receive a 10% discount on our dining buffet every Thursday night with valid ID.
"All You Care To Eat!"

PROTECT YOURSELF AND YOUR BABY
FROM AIDS

FIND OUT ABOUT DRUGS, SEX
AND AIDS
CALL 1-800-322-AIDS

POINT

PC officials make 'huge blunder' with health policy Reynolds should serve students as an infirmary, not a dorm

Stop and think about this. A PC student from Massachusetts comes down with a severe case of the flu. Since he is too sick and too contagious to stay in his dorm room and too far away to go home and let his mother take care of him, this individual is forced to spend some time in the Laurens County Hospital.

The student ends up staying in the hospital for two days and incurs a bill of $200, which he alone is responsible for. This cost does not include any medication which a doctor may have prescribed to the student or any special services which may have been necessary.

Sound expensive? Well, get used to it because this is PC's new student health policy. The student is now responsible for his own health care.

This summer, because of overpopulation, the college administration was forced to close the campus infirmary and turn it into a dorm for female students. The former infirmary now houses 14 freshmen.

Reynolds Infirmary was built in 1971 and its original purpose was to provide the students of PC with an 18-bed health facility, with patient quarters for nine men and nine women. If any of you have ever visited or stayed in the infirmary, then you know it was a fairly modern facility administering excellent care for the health of PC students.

In the past, whenever a student came down with an illness, he or she would report to the infirmary. If the student was too sick to return to the dorm, then he or she was put to bed to rest. The staff of the infirmary, which was on duty for 24 hours, would see to it that the student was monitored, fed, and generally taken care of.

Of course, there was no cost to the student to stay in the infirmary. The cost was included in tuition.

Since the infirmary is closed, new policy stipulates that if a student comes down with an illness and is too sick or too contagious to be confined to the dorm, he or she can either go home or stay in the Laurens County Hospital at a cost of $25 for every six hours ($100 a day).

We at the Blue Stocking are very disappointed that the infirmary is no longer operational. We also question the fairness of the college's new health policy, which basically operates on the premise of "every man for himself." In addition, we think that the closing of the infirmary will only hurt the college in the long run.

The fact that Presbyterian College was fortunate enough to have such a health facility as Reynolds Infirmary was always a good selling point for prospective students and their parents. Parents feel more comfortable knowing that their babies will be taken care of while they are far away from home.

The fact that the college is no longer providing a place for its sick students is certainly not going to sit well with parents, especially parents of prospectives.

If the cost of the infirmary were included in tuition and the infirmary is no longer operational, then it would make sense to us that each student receive a refund from the business office for a service that cannot be rendered.

Instead of providing students with a refund, the college, as it always does, increased tuition last year. As a result, we as students are paying for something we cannot use. This does not make us happy.

While it may be easy to send a student home who is sick and lives near Clinton, it is going to be difficult for students from Alabama, Florida, and Massachusetts to make the long journey home to taste their mother's chicken soup. They are going to be the ones who have to feel the full "brunt" of PC's new policy when they have to pay to spend some time in the hospital. The new health policy is unfair to those who live more than 100 miles away from greater Clinton.

We understand why the administration closed the infirmary. The school did not have enough room to house all its students. However, maybe we should learn a lesson from all this. A college should admit only the number of students it has room for. If we are going to continue to allow large numbers of people into PC, then we should invest in new dorms.

The staff of the Blue Stocking usually sees eye to eye with the college's administration. However, this time they have made a huge blunder, and the college is going to pay for that blunder in the future.

Sidewalk Talk

Do you think that PC has become overpopulated? If so, what should the college do about it?

Mayson Maynard
sophomore

"I think PC needs to lower the number of students admitted or build adequate housing. It's that simple."

Mark Hunt
junior

"I think that PC is too big, and I feel it is unfortunate that a quality institution like this has to house students in an infirmary."

Adrian Prather
freshman

"I think that PC is not suiting the population of students. New dorms should be added to make the school bigger."

Photo by Brooke Peterson

Letters to the Editor - Letters to the Editor - Letters to the Editor - Letters to the Editor - Letters to the Editor

Student questions PC's bias

Dear Editor:

As many PC students will remember, the Russell Program sponsored a series of lectures on the 1992 presidential election last fall. The program was designed to provide students with a fair perspective of the view of both major parties prior to election day. At first glance, it may seem that this goal was achieved. However, the choice of speakers, in my opinion, did not achieve this goal and furthermore leads me to believe that fairness was not the goal at all.

The speaker on behalf of the Democratic party was Bob Beckel. Beckel's claim to fame is that he managed Walter Mondale's unsuccessful bid for the presidency. Students who attended Mr. Beckel's speech will remember his blatant partisanship and highly critical attitude towards any conservative. The speaker on behalf of the Republican party was David Gergen. Gergen became well known as the communications director of the Reagan White House and later as an editor of US News and World Report. Students who attended Mr. Gergen's speech will remember that he did very little to support President Bush. In fact, the most positive thing I remember Gergen saying about Bush is that, "he is a nice man."

Over the summer David Gergen became a senior adviser to President Clinton. In doing that, he declared that he had voted for Clinton and supported his initiatives. Knowing the liberal bias of Dr. Orr, Dr. Moncriel and others on the Russell Program Steering Committee causes me to doubt that Gergen's appearance in the Clinton administration was coincidence.

The PC administration owes it to students to provide both sides to every issue. Attempts to indoctrinate students by our liberal administration and professors are unethical. Academic freedom does not justify bias in the classroom. It is the responsibility of students who think for themselves to resist such attempts and preserve the integrity of our college.

Sincerely,

Brian Benenhaley
Sophomore

Fraternity denounces rumor

Dear Editor:

The brothers of Pi Kappa Alpha, Mu chapter of Presbyterian College would like to express our concern about a rumor that has been spread throughout the campus. It has come to our attention that many people have the idea that our chapter was expelled from PC several years ago for a rape charge involving a member of our fraternity. We feel that the rumor may have originated by associating our chapter with a Pi Kappa Alpha chapter at Florida State University, which was in fact suspended for such an incident. We have also come to the conclusion that the rumor may have been spread by some upperclassmen who wish to degrade the reputation of our fraternity.

We are not proud that a fellow chapter has been associated with such conduct and we do not want this type of conduct to be associated with our chapter here at PC. The brothers of Pi Kappa Alpha, Mu chapter maintain high ideals and do not believe in or condone such acts.

We would like to set the record straight that any such rumors are simply malicious lies. Our fraternity has an open door policy for the students of Presbyterian College. We hope that this letter will be sufficient in clearing our name and for those people who tend to thrive on rumors here in "Rumorville," just remember to take it for what it is, a rumor.

Sincerely,

Todd Shearer and the Brothers of Pi
Kappa Alpha Fraternity

by Brian Sacco
FEATURES EDITOR

I learned the hard way this summer that no matter how many opportunities you give to the general public there will always be a few bad seeds to ruin it for the majority.

I spent my summer vacation working as a lifeguard and "policeperson" at the city pool in my hometown of LaGrange, Georgia, where I received an education that I never want to experience again.

I had survived the entire summer of the harassment and stress of my job up until the last weekend of my employment when, to say the least, I had a run-in with disgruntled swimmer/troublemaker. This individual was causing a lot of problems, so the lifeguarding staff had him "thrown out" of the pool. However, he soon returned to seek vengeance against my co-workers and myself for, as he put it, "sweating him," and requiring him to leave. This was only preceded by several threats on his part to inflict severe physical harm on the lifeguarding staff. As a result of his threats, we called the police.

'Just like Charles Bronson, he returned with a 'deathwish' and a gun in his pocket to back it up...'

By requesting assistance from the local police, the staff and I hoped this would deter the individual from returning but apparently after fleeing from the police, he only became more angered, to say that he was unhappy with the fact that we had called the police to run him off would be an understatement. Just like Charles Bronson, he returned with a "death wish" and a gun in his pocket to back it up, along with an excessively vivacious mouth to allow us to hear how many different terroristic actions he was going to perpetrate against us. Needless to say, we were not the happiest of campers and punctually the next morning warrants were filed for his arrest and my summer job ended, thankfully, without a bang!

As some philosophers and educators might agree, experience is the cornerstone of a solid education, but in this case, I would have rather kept my head buried in the books. I would have liked to believe that this criminal/scum was going to do no more than threaten or try to scare us but when you have experienced some of the things I have since coming to live in LaGrange, then you would understand my feelings of hostility and fear.

In some sense, I do not feel anger towards the hoodlum who threatened me, but towards the environment in which he lives and the fact that he has probably known violence his entire life. But by the same token, it will take me awhile to forgive him for even thinking that he has the right to threaten the lives of my co-workers and myself.

I also feel bitter towards my employer for only stating that the job would be "tough and demanding," but then making no effort to insure the safety of the lifeguarding staff, having full knowledge that his employees were working in a "war zone" so to speak.

It is a shame that someone who means so little to me should be able to take so much away and make me feel helpless in my own hometown. This young man at any time could track me down or my brothers at the local high school and cause some physical harm.

Through all of the harassment I experienced and all of the stress I had to deal with after the fact, I feel that I have learned a great deal about myself and about what I fear the most. Lifeguarding is not the glamorous job of sunbathers and subservient patrons, but to borrow a line from Uncle Sam, "It's not just a job, it's an adventure."

My Turn

by Jason West
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

The experts tell us that the dog is man's best friend. Of course, cat lovers would say that the cat is man's best friend and moose love's would say that the moose is man's best friend. (The politically correct would say that the dog/cat/moose is the "person's" best friend.)

Whatever your choice, the friendship and love of a pet can bring some added joy to life.

I am the proud owner of Rusty, a two-year-old Golden Retriever. My family acquired Rusty just one week after the death of a previous dog named Flash. That dog was involved in an unfortunate traffic accident.

After Flash's death, my father vowed we would never own another dog. He said that dogs were too much trouble and too much of a time commitment because someone had to feed them, bathe them, play with them, etc. His biggest argument was that he was the one who always got stuck with the duties of taking care of the dog. However, it only took a few hours before my entire family, including my father, began to miss owning a dog.

As a result, the family went out and found Rusty. Rusty was a beautiful, eight-week-old, fat bundle of fur when we first saw him and immediately, we took a liking to him. It was as if a new baby had walked into our lives.

Of course, Rusty is not a small bundle anymore. He is a gigantic dog who likes to jump all over the place and slobber on anyone he can get a hold of. Every now and then, Rusty likes to dig in my mother's flowers and he visits the neighbor's yard to "relieve" himself. He is a lot of responsibility, and he requires a great deal of food, but I wouldn't trade him for the world.

When I come home from school, Rusty is always the first member of the family to greet me. He is there to play fetch, keep me company when I go walking, and provide us all with a little protection. In short, Rusty is a constant companion and a true friend.

That's the funny thing about dogs. To them, it doesn't matter what color you are, what kind of clothes you wear, or where you live. As long as you treat them with respect, they will show you unconditional love.

Maybe we as human beings should try to emulate the dog. If we did, the world would probably "bark" to a better tune.

THE BLUE STOCKING

Presbyterian College - Clinton, South Carolina 29325
Volume LXXXVIII Number 1, September 17, 1993

Editor-in-Chief.....Jason West
Managing Editor.....Lauren Owings
News Editor.....Tobin Turner
Sports Editor.....Everett Catts
Entertainment Editor.....Kim Rabon
Features Editor.....Brian Sacco
Computer Design Editor.....Todd Love
Photography Editor.....Kim Gibson
Layout Editor.....Angela Richardson
Staff Artist.....Michael Christensen
Staff Advisor.....Dr. Neal B. Prater

Staff Writers:

Dennie Lynn Hill
Charles Smith
Dawn Banks
Kim Wood
Kristina Pruitt
Katherine Bonner
Karen O'Connor
Margaret Ellen Pender
Alison Nicole Barnard
Photographers: Reid Collius, Brooke Peterson

Gray Lesesne
Nhien Nguyen
Kelley Perkins
Camisha Clarke
Tonya Sneed
Lauren Parrish
Lauren Jones
Christie Grant

The Blue Stocking is a tri-weekly student publication of Presbyterian College. The paper serves as a forum of news and opinion of regional and national concern. For advertising, contact The Blue Stocking, Presbyterian College, Box 1061, Clinton, SC 29325. The Blue Stocking welcomes letters to the editor from all members of the PC community. Signatures are required. Letters are printed on a space available basis. The Blue Stocking reserves the right to edit all letters for proper grammar and punctuation. The final deadline for submitting letters is Friday at 12:00 pm on the week before publication.

What I did during my summer vacation . . .

PC sophomore 'parties' with Republicans on Capitol Hill

by Brian Sacco
FEATURES EDITOR

Most students only see the outside activities of political parties through print media and television, but sophomore Brian Benenhaley spent eight weeks of his summer discovering the inner workings of the Republican party.

Selected by the Eisenhower Intern Program on the basis of his application, recommendations, and political experience, Benenhaley was able to work at the Republican National Committee headquarters in Washington, D.C.

Benenhaley's position required him to process demographic information for the computer systems of the Strategic Information Department, but he was still able to visit points of interest in Washington, listen to lectures involving the entire scope of American politics, and meet several prominent politicians, such as South Carolina's own Strom Thurmond.

Benenhaley had to learn to be independent in a big city for the first time and the following are excerpts from his journal of experiences:

Monday, June 21 - My first day was long and tedious. I found myself at the computer console processing demographics for the New Jersey gubernatorial race this year. The department I work in is called Strategic Information. Our job is to guide the strategy of the GOP by predicting trends based on the study of raw data. I think I'm really going to enjoy this job.

Tuesday, June 22 - I continue to accustom myself to D.C. I've mastered the Metro and I'm learning my way around the Congressional office buildings (I was lost in Cannon yesterday).

Thursday, June 24 - My Best Day in Washington! (to this point)....Tomorrow should be great, but it will be hard pressed to match the GOP Leadership Reception. I met Bob Michael, Don Nickles, Thad Cochran, Trent Lott, Alan Simpson, and Richard Luger tonight....If only everyday could be like today!

Friday, July 9 - Jeremy did an inventory in the archives today and smuggled some paraphernalia from the Nixon and Goldwater campaigns....I gave half of my lunch to a beggar today. I won't give money, but the guy looked hungry so I shared with him. I felt good about it.

Monday, July 12 - The more we do on New Jersey it seems like the more there is for us to do. More returns come in daily, but they promise us we'll do something else before much longer. I'm still learning nuts and bolts politics though and I still like it. This place isn't so bad.

Tuesday, July 20 - I had an appointment with Senator McConnell and Congressman Inglis....My major project at work today was delivering some sort of info to all the Republican senators' offices. I'm not sure what it was about. I ran into Alan Simpson waiting for the Capitol subway and he and I had a nice chat. He invited me to ride in the "Members Only" car with him. I really enjoy the suddenness of things like that!

Wednesday, July 21 - We had a photo with Lauch Faircloth at 2 on the Senate

While in the nation's capital over the summer, PC student Brian Benenhaley got to meet former White House Chief of Staff and Crossfire host John Sununu.

steps. I saw Helms, Warner, Specter, Coverdell, Byrd, and D'Amato while waiting around. It still gets me excited when you see these guys at work!

Sunday, August 1 - A productive day. I got myself appointed to spearhead the Independent Item Committee for SCSL. I'll be in charge of research and presenting the info in the Fall. It will be great exposure for me as I advance in the organization.

Monday, August 9 - I finished Hawaii today 4 days early. I'm pretty good with the computer keyboard!....It gets pretty lonely living by yourself in a strange place.

Friday, August 13 - I said my goodbyes at work. I really appreciate all that the RNC taught me. I will be a much more effective operative this fall. This has been the greatest learning experience of my life. I can't attempt to describe it.

Benenhaley was required to commute to work daily from his apartment where he had to live alone for the first time in a big city like Washington, D.C. He stated that it surprised him that homeless people lived as close as 100 yards to the Capitol building. Benenhaley said the most exciting part of the entire stay was the time when he was able to watch a live taping of CNN's Crossfire and then converse with John Sununu.

"My job allowed me to interact with different people with different backgrounds and beliefs, which in turn taught me to use experiences to deal with other people," said Benenhaley.

Summer abroad reveals personal strength of two PC students

by Karen O'Connor
STAFF WRITER

At the start of a new academic year, PC always rejuvenated, mainly by the presence of new individuals and campus changes. Freshman faces promise a year of friendship building, new and visiting professors offer diversity, and changes on campus, such as this year's 24-hour dorm lockout and the absence of the infirmary, keep PC students, faculty, and staff of their toes.

However, some of the things that live on PC's campus the most come from people who are not new to our college. Many upperclassmen choose to do something interesting during their summer break, and the stories and the experiences they bring back from their journeys certainly add a spark to life at PC. Valerie Gatchell and David Bishop, both sophomores at PC, chose to go abroad for the summer of 1993, and to experience an entirely new culture and lifestyle.

South Korea was the destination of David Bishop, a biology major from Florence, South Carolina. His travels to Asia were in connection with, and financed by, his hometown church and presbytery. A group consisting of 20 students from different churches within that presbytery visited the city of Sun Chon, South Korea for three weeks this summer. David describes the trip as a "goodwill" program between our two distinct and different parts of the world. The group did some mission work in the Sun Chon area by painting the exteriors of churches and restraining pews and the floors inside the churches. The purpose of the trip was mainly to promote understanding and to offer friendship from our side of the world. The American students also got a chance to tour much of South Korea and to see sights not usually accessible to the average American tourist.

David lived with a host family for the duration of the trip, and because of this, he was well immersed in South Korean culture. One large obstacle that arose was the language barrier between him and his hosts—David knew no Korean before going, and his family could speak very little English. However, he quickly picked up the essentials of the language. "Thank you gets you a long way," David smiles. He says that he got along very well with his hosts and their son, who is about his age. The mutual attachment and friendship that grew out of his visit perhaps proves the point that friendly relationships are possible among people who are not different in culture, but in language as well.

While David found that human relationships are similar in our two different parts of the world, there were some aspects of the Korean culture and land that he found to be very different from this part of the world. Unlike our sweltering southern summers, the temperature in South Korea was in the middle 80's for most of the time that David was there. He also stressed that it was "always overcast" and that he "saw the sun once" while in South Korea. Male-female relationships in Korea at first threw David for a loop. He found that high school age students dated little and rarely showed affection in public. However, it was quite common to see guys holding hands with other guys and girls holding hands with other girls—also something one doesn't see in South Carolina. David also learned that the university system of south Korea was very demanding. A student graduating from high school is allowed to apply to only one department at one university per year.

David says that he found himself rather "sad to leave" when the three weeks of his trip came to an end. In addition to gaining a greater understanding and appreciation for the Korean culture, he feels he also grew to understand himself better.

This past summer found PC student Valerie Gatchell in a different part of the world—Venezuela. While Venezuela was a new destination for Valerie, she is no stranger to international travel. Her family lived in Saudi Arabia for two years, and she has been able to travel extensively throughout most of the world. Over the past five years, she has been extremely involved in doing mission work, mainly in Mexico.

Searching and research are a vital part of Valerie's international experiences. In order to participate in the programs that she does, she must raise and save money for her expenses. Mission work also involves filling out a great number of applications, writing essays, and answering a great deal of questions, jobs that Valerie thinks are well worth the time to her and anyone else interested in mission trips.

This past summer, Valerie participated in the Global Youth Intern Program through the Presbyterian Church. She was a sort of "cultural missionary" to a rural town approximately one and a half hours outside of the Venezuelan capital of Caracas. Rather than travelling in a group, Valerie chose to venture out by herself.

The people with which Valerie spent her summer, like the South Korean society David was in, were unable to speak much English at all. Luckily, Valerie has studied Spanish for about two years, but she still felt nervous about going to a country where she would have absolutely no opportunity to express herself in her native tongue.

Furthermore, she learned shortly before arriving in her summer home that she would be spending her time in what is known as "the fastest Spanish speaking community in Latin America." However, being totally immersed in the society and the Spanish speaking culture forced Valerie to learn quickly. After three weeks time, she felt comfortable enough with her host family to tell them when she didn't understand what they were saying. By the end of her travels she had spoken enough Spanish to arrive at the point where she felt she could "get by." However, arriving at home and being able to express herself in English again was to Valerie a luxury of sorts—"like regaining my personality."

The host family that Valerie stayed with in Venezuela was one main reason that the trip was so meaningful to her. She describes the people of the country as a very "warm and loving community." Her host family had six children in it; this number may sound like a lot, but according to Valerie, six is a small number of children for a typical Venezuelan family—both of the host parents themselves had fifteen or more siblings! Valerie's family was excited to have her, and although space was cramped (the entire family, plus visiting relatives, lived in a three room house above a garage), they did the best they could to provide for Valerie's needs as well as their own.

Valerie feels that one of the most important things that she gained from her experience this summer was the opportunity to question her own values and needs. Upon her return home, Valerie found it difficult to draw the line between necessities and luxuries in her own life.

This leads to a point which expresses an experience that both David and Valerie shared in their travels abroad this summer. Both found that, compared to many other countries in the world, most Americans have more than they need. However, Valerie and David found that many foreign cultures believe that American society is perfectly reflected in the movies or television programs accessible to them at home. David felt among the South Koreans a sort of "fascination" with Americans, and found that children often followed him around on the street. Valerie says that the Venezuelan people had no idea that we in the U.S. have any problems with homelessness, crime, or unemployment. Breaking the stereotypes that other people hold about America is perhaps the most important reason for travelling abroad.

While David and Valerie certainly did contribute a great deal, in terms of goodwill, to the societies that they visited, both feel that they gained more than they could ever hope to give. Without a doubt, both they and the people they came to know in South Korea and Venezuela realized that friendships and goodwill can transcend easily the barriers of geography and language.

So what's keeping you from having an experience like Valerie's and David's? Both stress that funding is available for summer trips—but ascertaining it takes asking questions and exploring possibilities. Churches are a great source of funding, and PC's chaplain Greg Henley has a wealth of information on international opportunities. Both David and Valerie agree that travelling is addictive. "Once you get the bug, you have to go back."

Fullback Steve Gorne (32) fights to gain yardage as two Fairmont State defenders attempt to pull him down.

photo by Steve Owens

Football team begins season with tough losses

by Everett Catts
SPORTS EDITOR

Four points. Four points is all that separates the 1993 Blue Hose Football team from being 2-0 instead of 0-2. In heartbreaking losses to Fairmont State and Charleston Southern, the Blue Hose had chances but these opportunities have slipped through their fingers.

On September 4 the '93 Blue Hose kicked off their season at home against Fairmont State, a team PC lost to last year by two points. After the Falcons took a 10-0 lead in the first quarter, the Blue Hose offense rallied with a 41 yard field goal by Frank Jordan in the first quarter and a TD pass from quarterback Chris Smith to tight end Brad Jones in the second quarter. Fairmont State scored again prior to halftime, giving the Falcons a 17-10 edge at the break.

Fairmont State got a field goal in the third quarter to make it 20-10, but the Blue Hose came back with a three yard touchdown run by Mason Gordon. With less than a minute left, PC once again called on Jordan to tie the game, but the freshman kicker, who had missed an earlier attempt of 40 plus yards, missed the 47 yarder, thus giving Fairmont State the ball and the win, 20-17.

Fullback Steve Gorne, who had 104 yards rushing, 35 receiving, 35 more on kickoff returns, and good blocking, was the Offensive Player of the Week. Gorne's key blocks helped Mason Gordon, who had 136 yards rushing. PC's offense dominated possession with 26 first downs, but five Blue Hose fumbles were devastating.

Linebacker Antonio Merriwether, who had six tackles, was named Defensive Player of the Week. Kevin Cox, a redshirt freshman who made good snaps on the punts, field goals, and extra points, was Special Teams Player of the Week.

On September 11 PC played at Charleston Southern in their first meeting ever. After CSU scored a touchdown to make it 7-0, the Blue Hose rallied with a field goal late in the first quarter. In the second quarter CSU had added a field goal to give them a 10-3 halftime lead.

Charleston Southern widened the lead to 14 points with a third quarter touchdown, but the Blue Hose came back in the fourth quarter when Randy Sullivan came off the bench to lead the offense. Mason Gordon ran for a touchdown to make the score 17-10. With a minute left in the game, Sullivan led the offense again and capped off a drive with a 15 yard TD pass to Chris Yonce. With the score 17-16, the Blue Hose went for the win with a two-point conversion, but Sullivan's pass to Gordon was incomplete, and the game ended at 17-16.

For his fourth quarter heroics, Sullivan was awarded Offensive Player of the Week. Defensive tackle Trent Smith, who had two sacks for 11 yards combined and four tackles, was Defensive Player of the Week. Todd Shearer, who was "very reliable," rushed and blocked on punt returns, and was awarded Special Teams Player of the Week.

Head Coach John Perry commented on the heartbreaking losses, saying, "They're frustrating because we've played some good football, and the defense has played well, and the offense has moved the ball well but hasn't scored enough points."

Tomorrow the Blue Hose play big-time rival Newberry at 7:00 in the first Bronze Derby Classic since the game has been moved from its original Thanksgiving date. Coach Perry and the rest of the team hope that all students make the 20-minute drive to the game. After playing at Lenoir-Rhyne on September 25, the Blue Hose return to Clinton on October 2 to face neighboring rival Wofford.

Freshman athlete wears many hats

by Dennie Lynn Hill
STAFF WRITER

Cum Laude graduate, National Honor Society, All-State Basketball, 3 years; All Region, 4 years; Honorable mention All American in USA Today, Street and Smith Magazine, Women's Basketball

News Service, WYFF Prep Spotlight, WYFF Player of the Year, set all-school scoring record with 1,884 career points, set steal record with 812 steals, Varsity cross-country, Varsity soccer and the list goes on.

For 18 year-old, Freshman basketball player, Karen Neeley, these are some accomplishments that she holds close to her heart.

"She is an excellent basketball player. Karen is a dedicated student athlete. She is also great with children and a very friendly, loving, caring person," said Karen's roommate, Suzanne Thorland.

Karen's roommate is not the only one who shares these views because Karen was also chosen Miss Basketball as well as an Ambassador to Belgium representing Greenville, South Carolina. Both honors were achieved by having more than extreme talent in Basketball, but by high academic achievement and strong character as well. Karen went through extensive interviews for the ambassador program involving questions from geography to analysis of her communication skills.

Karen said she has gotten where she is today with determination and perseverance, values taught to her by her mother. "My mom has definitely been the greatest influence in my life. I am a determined and hard working individual because of the example she has set. She is a single parent who raised three daughters all alone. Of course, times were tough, but she never gave up. She has taught me that with determination and perseverance a person can overcome even the greatest odds."

Karen has achieved and excelled and is now an asset to Presbyterian College. "We, as an institution, are very fortunate to have Karen here. She is an excellent student, leader, and person. Her athletic ability is a plus. She is a great asset to the team and we feel lucky to have her here," said Beth Couture, head coach for women's basketball.

Karen said when she came to PC for a basketball visit she knew this was the place for her. "PC is all anyone could ever want in a school."

Sports View

by Everett Catts
SPORTS EDITOR

I was seven years old when I first experienced the game of baseball. The year was 1978, and my T-league team, the Yankees, played the Athletics in the championship game at Atlanta's Fulton County Stadium.

All I can remember was that everything was huge—the field, the stadium, the ballplayers, and the umpires. I was so small that my jersey's sleeves came down to my forearms. My glove was four times the size of my hand, and most of my teammates were at least six inches taller than me. I was also the oldest person on my team.

Although I may have looked small, my thoughts about baseball were enormous. The moment I was out there, baseball became the biggest thing in my life, and today it still dominates me.

BRAVES FANS PESSIMISTIC

I can't understand why so many fans of the Atlanta Braves are pessimistic. The Braves' starting pitcher is the best in baseball, and their bullpen isn't bad either. Even back in early July, when they were trailing the Giants by eight games, the Braves had a better record than any of the other AL East teams. I don't know what my friends were thinking back in June when they "gave up" on the Braves. Every team in Major League Baseball has to play 162 games. The season does not end in July at the All-Star break.

As of September 12, the Braves had caught and even passed the Giants, leading them by one game. This is the year the Braves will win it all, proving the cliché "three times is the charm" is true and putting an end to the Buffalo Bills comparisons.

Women's volleyball team off to good start so far

by Margaret Ellen Pender
STAFF WRITER

Although seventh year coach Beth Couture will disclose that ten of the fourteen players comprising the 1993 Lady Blue Hose volleyball roster are either freshmen or sophomores, she adamantly refuses to dub this season as "a rebuilding year." Instead of citing the youth of her squad prior to the outset of the season and thus establishing a bulwark in the event that the Lady Blue Hose might struggle through their SAC schedule, she confidently and unhesitatingly conveys her goal for this season. The Lady Blue Hose volleyball team is aiming "to win the conference."

While PC did not sustain heavy losses in terms of numbers from last year's SAC Tourney championship team, the team members who did play their final match in the garnet and blue were of extreme value to the squad and will definitely be missed this season. Departing after the '92 season were Ashley Jenkins; Lisa Kimbrell; team MVP for 1992, and Christy Wynn, Best Defensive Player for '92. Jenkins and Kimbrell have returned to assist with the coaching duties for 1993.

Perhaps an examination of Coach Couture's record while at PC will yield some evidence that could account for her lack of fear in what some would call a challenging situation. Since her inaugural season in 1987, Couture has compiled a record of 200-42 overall, 52-2 vs. SAC-8 opponents, and has been named NAIA District 26 Coach of the Year an incredible five times.

When asked to reveal her plan of attack with this young squad, Couture contended that the recipe for success in 1993 has one primary ingredient, consistency. "In the past, we've always been a power team, but this year we will keep the ball in play and wear opponents down." Couture also asserted that she "is not worried about the youth of this team. From the beginning, we (the team) clicked." Additionally, she noted that the level of enthusiasm had escalated with the influx of new faces. Because of the amazing success of previous squads, expectations skyrocketed and, consequently, the pressure to perform intensified, causing some emphasis on "having fun" while winning.

After having played two matches, the Lady Blue Hose are 2-0. On September 2 the Hose spanked Newberry in three games (15-8, 15-3, 15-13), and then on September 7 destroyed Erskine (15-8, 15-9, 15-9). In a match which featured the return of senior power hitter Deedy Williams, who had been out of action because of injury, the Lady Hose relied on good back row passing and general "heads up" play to down the Flying Fleet. Williams absolutely punished the ball off of sets from senior Jennifer Smith to all of the hitting positions and was complemented by a number of kills from sophomores Kristy Tarallo and Tricia Liles. The consistent back row play of senior Kelly Brown proved to be a key for PC as did the fierce net performance of freshman Watoma Williams.

The Lady Blue Hose finished second in the Catawba Tournament on September 10 and 11, losing in the finals to USC-Spartanburg. In pool play the squad beat Barton, Shaw, and USCS. Each time, the Lady Blue Hose won in three straight games. The Lady Hose then defeated St. Andrews also in three straight games. PC played at USC-Aiken on Tuesday, but results were not available at press time.

PC women's soccer team tested early in season

by Everett Catts
SPORTS EDITOR

With ten of eleven starters back from last year's Co-Conference Champion team, the 1993 Women's Soccer team is prepared for another successful season. This year's squad returns Missy Butler, a three time All-American and 1992 SAC-8 Player of the Year; Charity Brazeal, last year's SAC Freshman of the Year, and All-Conference players Christi Flack and Kathleen Dowd, both of who are captains. Seven freshmen will add depth to an already talented team which aspires to win both the regular season and tournament titles in the South Atlantic Conference.

This year's team will be tested early in the season with Thomas More, Tri-State, Barry, and Mercer on the schedule in the season's first two weeks. Head Coach Brian Purcell scheduled these teams to make PC even stronger than before. "I want to find out what our weaknesses are and fix them before the conference schedule starts," said Purcell.

On September 4 the Lady Blue Hose played Thomas More in the Catawba Women's Classic Tournament. PC led 2-1 late in the game, but Thomas More scored with ten seconds left in regulation. The Lady Blue Hose scored twice in overtime to win 4-2.

On September 5 PC defeated Tri-State University 4-0. Kathleen Dowd had two goals in the victory. Dowd, Charity Brazeal, Missy Butler, and Nicki Soderberg were All-Tournament team selections.

The Lady Blue Hose then travelled to Due West on September 8 to face Erskine. Butler had both goals in a 2-0 win.

On September 12 the women's squad travelled to Stetson University to face Barry University, the defending national champions in NCAA Division II. Although PC lost 3-0, Coach Purcell was pleased with the team's performance, especially in the first and last 15 minutes of the game.

When asked about his freshmen's performance, Purcell said, "I'm pleased with Rebecca Hardiman, Lisa Becker, and Emily Campbell's spectacular performance against Barry (six saves in the second half). Susan Olmert is improving fast, too."

Nicki Soderberg, one of three captains, commented on the team's play, saying, "I don't think we're up to our potential yet, but we haven't burnt out like last year. By the end of the season we will be playing our best soccer. As long as we keep improving, we'll do fine."

The Lady Blue Hose hosted NCAA Division I power on Wednesday and open their SAC-8 schedule at home tomorrow against Carson-Newman at 2:00. The women's team encourages all students to come.

Men's soccer team get season off to fast start

by Brian Steely
STAFF WRITER

After winning the conference last year with a 15-4-3 record, the 1993 Men's Soccer team is off to another great start. Following two 2-0 wins against High Point on September 4 and Erskine on September 8, the Blue Hose tied Wingate 1-1 on September 11 to open SAC-8 play. The defense is clearly a major contributor this year, allowing only one goal thus far. Junior goalkeeper Mark Albertus said, "one of the major reasons for the team's success is manager Phillip George's philosophy on life."

This year's team has to overcome the loss of ten players and five starters, including Will Lindstrom, 1992 SAC-8 Player of the Year and Tournament MVP, and second team All-American. This year's squad will also be without All-Conference players Norman deWaart and Michael Martin.

Nevertheless, PC will return forwards Chris Bruno and Chris Napior, an All-SAC selection last year, All-SAC selections Jason

Woodall and Mark Albertus. Despite returning six starters, the Blue Hose lack experience. PC does have the talent to create another winning season with the help of eight newcomers: Stefan Svardh, Jimmy May, John Decker, Mark Barnett, Scott Plasted, Clint Galloway, and Welsh Condon.

The men's team will play its home opener against Carson-Newman today at 5:00 and host the University of D. C. tomorrow at 4:00.

Presbyterian College SGA

announces Freshman Class office speeches

Monday, September 20 at 8:00 pm

Springs Campus Center

Encore

by Kim Rabon
ENTERTAINMENT EDITOR

Although I live in a moderate size town, it gets pretty boring over a long summer. Being a "college student," I found the normal hangouts that were so great in high school were definitely not happening. So, to occupy my time, I got a chance to see a few movies. This summer's movies covered every category imaginable: action, romance, horror, and comedy.

As a professional movie goer, I have taken the liberty of rating some of the summer's best and worst movies on the "Kim Rabon Guide to Movies Scale." Of course, five stars means it was excellent and one star means it's about as good as the oriental mix in GDH.

Free Willy (PG) ○○○○

This was a great movie! I took the children I babysat for, and I think I ended up enjoying it more than they did. The story of the troubled child befriending and training the whale was not only entertaining but also emotional.

Sleepless In Seattle (PG) ○○○○

Another good one! This was a heartfelt romantic comedy that starred Tom Hanks and Meg Ryan. Both roles were excellent. By the way, the soundtrack for this movie is a definite plus!

Fri, the 13: Jason Goes To Hell (R) ○

What can I say? If you've seen one, you've seen them all. The creators say that this is the last one. Let's pray they are right.

Jurassic Park (PG-13) ○○○○○

Summer's best! Once again, Steven Spielberg has done an excellent job. The dinosaurs and the sound effects to go with them were AWESOME! Of course there will always be some people that don't agree, but this movie is one that you can watch over and over. Unfortunately, this movie can only truly be appreciated in the theatre.

Poetic Justice (R) ○○○○○

I believe this was one of the summer's best. Janet Jackson, who plays the lead role of Justice, makes her big-screen debut as a girl who is trying to make it on her own. Justice suffers through many hardships, but always finds comfort in writing poetry.

What do you do in Clinton for fun?

Small town provides variety of entertainment

by Katherine Bonner
STAFF WRITER

Ah, those beautiful sunlit afternoons walking down the quad from Jacobs to Neville... In the words of one PC student, "I hope it stays this way forever."

Sometimes, however, those stressful first days of Freshman Orientation and registration, and later, tests and final exams just make the beautiful campus most of us call home seem a little small.

Well, never fear there is always a remedy for this claustrophobia. In this case, the remedy is a quick trip to Clinton or Laurens.

What could there possibly be to do in Laurens County? Clinton and Laurens both have a lot to offer—where else in the world can you go and stop on the side of Interstate 26 at the Waffle House and enjoy a plate of hashbrowns served 7 different ways—scattered, smothered, covered, and chunked, just to name a few—then cross the bridge only to find another Waffle House.

And while we're on the subject of fine eating establishments, a peanut butter and chocolate shake from Terry's cannot be forgotten. Neither can chicken strips with honey mustard at Whiteford's, any of the desserts from The Sweet Shop in Laurens, Quesadillas Vare-Day and a fishbowl at El Jalisco, some nice greasy mozzarella sticks at Robert's Drive-In, any of the "deadly sins" at Denny's in Laurens, or a formal dinner at Greystone (for those who can write a check for more than the cost of raisin toast or salsa and chips).

However, suppose you aren't in the mood for food and what you'd rather have is a little entertainment. Well, you guessed it, there are things right here in this county to meet that need, too. If you feel like shopping, as always there is the recently expanded Wal-boxer shorts. Joanna's With Love, which carries every kind of ostan paraphernalia; and The Book Shop, where you can find just the right book to break up the stress caused by Calculus or Social Research Methods 144.

As far as actual entertainment goes, two wings bars have recently opened up—Gregory T's Wings in Laurens and The Varsity here in Clinton. If you want to be the entertainment, try Karyoke at the Holiday Inn. Also, Palmetto Lanes in Clinton sometimes offers a "bowl for a buck" special. If you're in a "redneck" kind of mood, try shooting some pool at Rack Time in Laurens, and located right behind Rack Time is a community center where bingo is held several nights a week. It has even been rumored that

Where else in the world can you go and stop on the side of I-26 at the Waffle House and enjoy a plate of hashbrowns served 7 different ways

Mart in Laurens—even more places to get lost than before! Pretty soon the Belks in Clinton will be merging with the one in Laurens, so for anything from makeup to shoes to pantyhose or socks, you know where to go.

Downtown Clinton also has a lot in the way of shopping. There is Carter's Gift Shop, where you can purchase anything from glassware to golf tees; Earl Thomason Jewelers; Adair's Men's Shop, carrying rental tuxedos and other men's clothing; and of course, Tapestry, which has a wide variety of women's clothing and accessories.

Laurens hot spots include Bargain Bucks, home of the multi-colored $1.50

a student won some money there during summer school a year or two ago. For good, clean fun check for $1.50 movies at The Oaks Theatre in Laurens, or the Skate Away, also in Laurens where you can rediscover your youth by skating to traditional skating rink songs like "Electric Avenue" and "Pac Man Fever."

The most important rule to beating those small college town blues is to do something, and to do that with a good friend. So the next time you find only air mail in your box or your Cheerios from GDH just aren't hitting the spot, grab your roommate or your newest friend and "take a little trip."

collegiate crossword

© Edward Julius

ACROSS

- 1 Where one might study Andy Warhol's works (3 wds.)
- 12 Enrollment into college
- 14 "Calculus Made Simple," e.g. (2 wds.)
- 16 Evaluate
- 17 Extremely small
- 18 Follows a recipe
- 19 Belonging to Mr. Pacino
- 22 Of land measure
- 23 Meets a poker bet
- 24 Gay (W II plane)
- 26 Capri, e.g.
- 27 Belonging to Mayor Koch
- 28 Irritate or embitter
- 30 Train for a boxing match
- 31 — and the Belmonts
- 32 Processions
- 35 Diet supplement (abbr.)
- 38 Scottish historian and philosopher
- 39 College in Greenville, Pa.
- 40 The venerable
- 41 "...not with — but a whimper."
- 43 Return on investment (abbr.)
- 44 Pondered
- 45 Belonging to Mr. Starr
- 47 Part of the classifications (2 wds.)
- 48 Possible place to study abroad (2 wds.)
- 52 Small school in Canton, Ohio (2 wds.)
- 53 Orson Welles film classic (2 wds.)

DOWN

- 1 Those who are duped
- 2 "Do unto —..."
- 3 Fourth estate
- 4 Goals
- 5 Well-known record label
- 6 Well-known king
- 7 151 to Caesar
- 8 Prefix meaning milk
- 9 Confused (2 wds.)
- 10 — husky
- 11 Most immediate
- 12 Like a sailboat
- 13 Cash register key (2 wds.)
- 14 En — (as a whole)
- 15 Auto racing son of Richard Petty
- 19 Political disorder
- 20 — ctt. (footnote abbreviation)
- 21 Traveled on a flexible flyer
- 24 Glorify
- 25 Prospero's servant in "The Tempest"
- 28 Well-known government agency
- 29 American league team (abbr.)
- 30 Fictional hypnotist
- 32 Style exemplified by Picasso
- 33 "She's —..." (from "Flashdance")
- 34 Be unel —
- 35 Visible trace
- 36 Think
- 37 Woman's undergarment
- 38 Commit — kill
- 40 — burner
- 42 "...for if I — away..."
- 44 Actress Gibbs
- 46 African antelope
- 47 Well-known TV band-leader
- 49 Pines — (eyesless type)
- 50 1968 film, "Station Zebra"
- 51 1965 film, — Ryan's Express

SUB to present The Bodyguard

by Dawn Banks
STAFF WRITER

If you're looking for something to do tonight, why not visit Springs and watch a movie? As a part of its "fine film" series, SUB will present The Bodyguard, a sexy, romantic thriller; entertaining, suspenseful, dynamic, and of course intense and intimate.

This Warner Brothers production stars Kevin Costner, who plays the professional bodyguard of Rachel Maron, a stubborn singer and actress, played by Whitney Houston. Being an independent, rich, and successful beauty, Rachel feels that she doesn't need any protection and tries to be brave and tough. However, she soon realizes that she cannot make it on her own because she's being stalked by an obsessed fan.

Costner takes over Maron's security team and does his job quite gracefully and boldly, but soon, romance starts to sink in and gets out of control.

The Bodyguard was directed by Mike Jackson and was nominated for two Academy Awards.

The presentation tonight gets underway at 7:00 pm in Springs Campus Center.

Second annual sports trivia contest to be held

by Kim Rabon
ENTERTAINMENT EDITOR

How sports inclined are you? Have you ever really thought about it? If you haven't, maybe you should start. Now, you'll have your opportunity to show your stuff. The 2nd Annual PC Sports Trivia Tournament will be held on September 29, at 8:00 p.m. in the Springs Campus Center gym.

The tournament will consist of four member teams who will compete by completing a one hundred question test. The team with the highest percentage correct is the winner. Last year's winners, a staff team, consisted of Grant Vashburgh, Steve Owens, Jim Morton, and Comer Randy Randall.

Intramural Director Chris Patterson was the one to develop the idea of a sports tournament. "I got the idea to have the competition because I knew a group of students who were trivia buffs like myself. I asked them about the idea, and they thought it was great," he said.

Patterson says he hopes more female students participate in the tournament this year. "We had over 85 males participate last year. We are hoping that the PC women will come and compete also. We hope to have another successful year," he said.

Campus & Clubs...

Pi Kappa Phi

The brothers of Pi Kappa Phi would like to announce the following initiates: Tyler Binney, Sean Boyette, Brian Derrick, Bret Easterling, Steve Ellis, Robert Goding, Ty Henson, Chris Jones, Creighton Likes, Luke Lipan, Mason Maynard, Michael Milligan, Brian Sacco, Damon Sanders, Tobin Turner, Ian Twombly, Jayson West, Jason Williams, and Trey Zeigler.

College Republicans

The next meeting of the College Republicans will be held on Wednesday, September 29, 1993, at 8:00 pm in Jacobs Hall, Room 108. Bumper stickers will be available at a cost of one dollar each.

SVS

Student Volunteer Services reminds students that they may still sign up to volunteer for various programs by calling the SVS office at 8458. Programs include tutoring, child outreach, social services, Special Olympics, and activities at Thronwell Home for Children. SVS Coordinator Fanchon Glover reports that 180 students have already registered to participate in SVS this year.

Sigma Nu

Sigma Nu started off the new academic year with two consecutive weekends of band parties. On September 7, the fraternity hosted The Medicine Men and on September 9, Aunt Telly's Transmission performed at the house. Sigma Nu is preparing for Fall Rush and invites all upperclass and transfer male students to come out and get to know the members of the fraternity.

Career Planning/Placement

Students who plan to take the GRE, GMAT, LSAT, or MCAT may get a chance to prepare by taking a practice examination on Monday, September 20. Students will receive a diagnostic profile indicating their score on the test and their strengths and weaknesses. The practice examinations will begin at 7:00 pm and will last approximately three hours. Only students who pre-register will be permitted to take the practice exams. To register, contact the Career Planning and Placement Office, Douglas House, Room 215, Ext. 8379 or 8380. The location of the practice exams will be based on the number of students who register.

PC Library

The first phase of the computerization of the library is now virtually complete, according to Diane Yarborough, technical services librarian and project director. Records presently in the card catalog have been converted to machine readable form, and are ready to be customized for loading into a new library computer that should be arriving around the first of the year. By late spring, online terminals may begin to appear in the building as various parts of the system are tested and put into operation.

Student Government Assoc.

The council would like to thank all of those students who gave blood at the annual SGA sponsored blood drive. In addition, the council would like to encourage all freshmen to support their class by attending freshman class office speeches on Monday, September 20 at 8:00 pm in Springs. Student Government Association meetings are open to all interested parties and are held each Monday night at 8:30 in the SGA office located in Springs Campus Center.

The musical group Regency will perform on campus on September 28.
file photo

Encore

by Kim Rabon
ENTERTAINMENT EDITOR

Although I live in a moderate size town, it gets pretty boring over a long summer. Being a "college student," I found the normal hangouts that were so great in high school were definitely not happening. So, to occupy my time, I got a chance to see a few movies. This summer's movies covered every category imaginable: action, romance, horror, and comedy.

As a professional movie goer, I have taken the liberty of rating some of the summer's best and worst movies on the "Kim Rabon Guideto Movies Scale." Of course, five stars means it was excellent and one star means it's about as good as the oriental mix in GDH.

Free Willy (PG) ○○○○

This was a great movie! I took the children I babysat for, and I think I ended up enjoying it more than they did. The story of the troubled child befriend and training the whale was not only entertaining but also emotional.

Sleepless In Seattle (PG) ○○○○

Another good one! This was a heartfelt romantic comedy that starred Tom Hanks and Meg Ryan. Both roles were excellent. By the way, the soundtrack for this movie is a definite plus!

Fri. the 13: Jason Goes To Hell (R) ○

What can I say? If you've seen one, you've seen them all. The creators say that this is the last one. Let's pray they are right.

Jurassic Park (PG-13) ○○○○○

Summer's best! Once again, Steven Spielberg has done an excellent job. The dinosaurs and the sound effects to go with them were AWESOME! Of course there will always be some people that don't agree, but this movie is one that you can watch over and over. Unfortunately, this movie can only truly be appreciated in the theatre.

Poetic Justice (R) ○○○○○

I believe this was one of the summer's best. Janet Jackson, who plays the lead role of Justice, makes her big-screen debut as a girl who is trying to make it on her own. Justice suffers through many hardships, but always finds comfort in writing poetry.

What do you do in Clinton for fun?

Small town provides variety of entertainment

by Katherine Bonner
STAFF WRITER

Ah, those beautiful sunlit afternoons walking down the quad from Jacobs to Neville... In the words of one PC student, "I hope it stays this way forever."

Sometimes, however, those stressful first days of Freshman Orientation and registration, and later, tests and final exams just make the beautiful campus most of us call home seem a little small.

Well, never fear there is always a remedy for this claustrophobia. In this case, the remedy is a quick trip to Clinton or Laurens.

What could there possibly be to do in Laurens County? Clinton and Laurens both have a lot to offer—where else in the world can you go and stop on the side of Interstate 26 at the Waffle House and enjoy a plate of hashbrowns served 7 different ways—scattered, smothered, covered, and chunked, just to name a few—, then cross the bridge only to find another Waffle House.

And while we're on the subject of fine eating establishments, a peanut butter and chocolate shake from Terry's cannot be forgotten. Neither can chicken strips with honey mustard at Whiteford's, any of the desserts from The Sweet Shop in Laurens, Quesadillas Vare-Day and a fishbowl at El Jalisco, some nice greasy mozzarella sticks at Robert's Drive-In, any of the "deadly sins" at Denny's in Laurens, or a formal dinner at Greystone (for those who can write a check for more than the cost of raisin toast or salsa and chips).

However, suppose you aren't in the mood for food and what you'd rather have is a little entertainment. Well, you guessed it, there are things right here in this county to meet that need, too. If you feel like shopping, as always there is the recently expanded Wal-boxer shorts, Joanna's With Love, which carries every kind of outlandish paraphernalia; and The Book Shop, where you can find just the right book to break up the stress caused by Calculus or Social Research Methods 144.

As far as actual entertainment goes, two wings bars have recently opened up—Gregory T's Wings in Laurens and The Varsity here in Clinton. If you want to be the entertainment, try Karyoke at the Holiday Inn. Also, Palmetto Lanes in Clinton sometimes offers a "bowl for a buck" special. If you're in a "redneck" kind of mood, try shooting some pool at Rack Time in Laurens, and located right behind Rack Time is a community center where bingo is held several nights a week. It has even been rumored that

Where else in the world can you go and stop on the side of I-26 at the Waffle House and enjoy a plate of hashbrowns served 7 different ways

Mart in Laurens—even more places to get lost than before! Pretty soon the Belks in Clinton will be merging with the one in Laurens, so for anything from makeup to shoes to pantyhose or socks, you know where to go.

Downtown Clinton also has a lot in the way of shopping. There is Carter's Gift Shop, where you can purchase anything from glassware to golf tees; Earl Thomason Jewelers; Adair's Men's Shop, carrying rental tuxedos and other men's clothing; and of course, Tapestry, which has a wide variety of women's clothing and accessories.

Laurens hot spots include Bargain Bucks, home of the multi-colored $1.50

a student won some money there during summer school a year or two ago. For good, clean fun check for $1.50 movies at The Oaks Theatre in Laurens, or the Skate Away, also in Laurens where you can rediscover your youth by skating to traditional skating rink songs like "Electric Avenue" and "Pac Man Fever."

The most important rule to beating those small college town blues is to do something, and to do that with a good friend. So the next time you find only air mail in your box or your Cheerios from GDH just aren't hitting the spot, grab your roommate or your newest friend and "take a little trip."

collegiate crossword

© Edward Julius

DOWN

- 1 Those who are duped
- 2 Go onto —
- 3 Fourth estate
- 4 Goals
- 5 Well-known record label
- 6 Well-known king
- 7 ISI to Caesar
- 8 Prefix meaning milk
- 9 Confused (2 wds.)
- 10 — husky
- 11 Most immediate
- 12 Like a sailboat
- 13 Cash register key (2 wds.)
- 14 In — (as a whole)
- 15 Auto racing son of Richard Petty
- 19 Political disorder
- 20 — cit. (footnote abbreviation)
- 21 Traveled on a flexible flyer
- 24 Glorify
- 25 Prospero's servant in "The Tempest"
- 28 Well-known government agency
- 29 American league team
- 30 Fictional hypnotist
- 32 Style exemplified by Picasso
- 33 "She's —"
- 34 From "Flashdance"
- 35 Be unwell
- 36 Visible trace
- 37 woman's undergarment
- 38 Commit — skirt
- 40 — burner
- 42 — for if I — away...
- 44 Actress Gibbs
- 46 African antelope
- 47 Well-known TV band-leader
- 49 Pince — (eyeglass type)
- 50 1968 film, "Station Zebra"
- 51 1965 film, "Ryan's Express"

ACROSS

- 1 where one might study Andy Warhol's works (3 wds.)
- 12 Enrollment into college
- 14 "Calculus Made Simple," e.g. (2 wds.)
- 16 Evaluate
- 17 Extremely small
- 18 follows a recipe
- 19 Belonging to Mr. Pacino
- 22 Of land measure
- 23 Meets a poker bet
- 24 — Gay (W II plane)
- 26 Capri, e.g.
- 27 Belonging to Mayor Koch
- 28 Irritate or emit
- 30 Train for a boxing match
- 31 — and the Belmonts
- 32 Processions
- 35 Diet supplement (abbr.)
- 36 Scottish historian and philosopher
- 39 College in Greenville, Pa.
- 40 The Venerable —
- 41 "...not with — but a whimper"
- 43 Return on investment (abbr.)
- 44 Fondered
- 45 Belonging to Mr. Starr
- 47 Part of the class-finds (2 wds.)
- 48 Possible place to study abroad (2 wds.)
- 52 Small school in Canton, Ohio (2 wds.)
- 53 Orson Welles film classic (2 wds.)

Second annual sports trivia contest to be held

by Kim Rabon
ENTERTAINMENT EDITOR

How sports inclined are you? Have you ever really thought about it? If you haven't, maybe you should start. Now, you'll have your opportunity to show your stuff. The 2nd Annual PC Sports Trivia Tournament will be held on September 29, at 8:00 p.m. in the Springs Campus Center gym.

The tournament will consist of four member teams who will compete by completing a one hundred question test. The team with the highest percentage correct is the winner. Last year's winners, a staff team, consisted of Grant Vosburgh, Steve Owens, Jim Morton, and Conner Randy Randall.

Intramural Director Chris Patterson was the one to develop the idea of a sports tournament. "I got the idea to have the competition because I knew a group of students who were trivia buffs like myself. I asked them about the idea, and they thought it was great," he said.

Patterson says he hopes more female students participate in the tournament this year. "We had over 85 males participate last year. We are hoping that the PC women will come and compete also. We hope to have another successful year," he said.

Campus & Clubs...

Pi Kappa Phi

The brothers of Pi Kappa Phi would like to announce the following initiates: Tyler Binney, Sean Boyette, Brian Derrick, Bret Easterling, Steve Ellis, Robert Goding, Ty Henson, Chris Jones, Creighton Lakes, Luke Lipan, Mason Maynard, Michael Milligan, Brian Sacco, Damon Sanders, Tobin Turner, Ian Twombly, Jayson West, Jason Williams, and Trey Zeigler.

College Republicans

The next meeting of the College Republicans will be held on Wednesday, September 29, 1993, at 8:00 pm in Jacobs Hall, Room 108. Bumper stickers will be available at a cost of one dollar each.

SVS

Student Volunteer Services reminds students that they may still sign up to volunteer for various programs by calling the SVS office at 8458. Programs include tutoring, child outreach, social services, Special Olympics, and activities at Thronwell Home for Children. SVS Coordinator Fanchon Glover reports that 180 students have already registered to participate in SVS this year.

Sigma Nu

Sigma Nu started off the new academic year with two consecutive weekends of band parties. On September 7, the fraternity hosted The Medicine Men and on September 9, Aunt Telly's Transmission performed at the house. Sigma Nu is preparing for Fall Rush and invites all upperclass and transfer male students to come out and get to know the members of the fraternity.

Career Planning/Placement

Students who plan to take the GRE, GMAT, LSAT, or MCAT may get a chance to prepare by taking a practice examination on Monday, September 20. Students will receive a diagnostic profile indicating their score on the test and their strengths and weaknesses. The practice examinations will begin at 7:00 pm and will last approximately three hours. Only students who pre-register will be permitted to take the practice exams. To register, contact the Career Planning and Placement Office, Douglas House, Room 215, Ext. 8379 or 8380. The location of the practice exams will be based on the number of students who register.

SUB to present The Bodyguard

by Dawn Banks
STAFF WRITER

If you're looking for something to do tonight, why not visit Springs and watch a movie? As a part of its "fine film" series, SUB will present The Bodyguard, a sexy, romantic thriller; entertaining, suspenseful, dynamic, and of course intense and intimate.

This Warner Brothers production stars Kevin Costner, who plays the professional bodyguard of Rachel Maron, a stubborn singer and actress, played by Whitney Houston. Being an independent, rich, and successful beauty, Rachel feels that she doesn't need any protection and tries to be brave and tough. However, she soon realizes that she cannot make it on her own because she's being stalked by an obsessed fan.

Costner takes over Maron's security team and does his job quite gracefully and boldly, but soon, romance starts to sink in and gets out of control.

The Bodyguard was directed by Mike Jackson and was nominated for two Academy Awards.

The presentation tonight gets underway at 7:00 pm in Springs Campus Center.

PC Library

The first phase of the computerization of the library is now virtually complete, according to Diane Yarborough, technical services librarian and project director. Records presently in the card catalog have been converted to machine readable form, and are ready to be customized for loading into a new library computer that should be arriving around the first of the year. By late spring, online terminals may begin to appear in the building as various parts of the system are tested and put into operation.

Student Government Assoc.

The council would like to thank all of those students who gave blood at the annual SGA sponsored blood drive. In addition, the council would like to encourage all freshmen to support their class by attending freshman class office speeches on Monday, September 20 at 8:00 pm in Springs. Student Government Association meetings are open to all interested parties and are held each Monday night at 8:30 in the SGA office located in Springs Campus Center.

The musical group Regency will perform on campus on September 28.
file photo

Music group 4 Non Blondes to perform in Charlotte, Columbia

Press Release
INTERSCOPE RECORDS

The music comes first for 4 Non Blondes. "Sex is secondary, politics is secondary, everything," says singer-songwriter Linda Perry, "is secondary to music."

Previously honored as the Best New Band of the Year by the San Francisco Bay Guardian and "the unsigned band with the biggest buzz" by BAM, 4 Non Blondes has been hailed as a rock n' roll breakthrough, challenging assumptions about music.

"Fans don't want to see perfect hair and high heels; they want to see you bust a nerve," says bassist Christa Hillhouse. "I need my feet on the ground and I sweat like a hound."

On Bigger, Better, Faster, More! (Interscope Records), the band's debut album produced by David Tickle (Prince, Toni Childs, U2, Peter Gabriel), 4 Non Blondes blends the social consciousness of acoustic folk, the rhythm of funk, the desperation of the blues and the

4 Non Blondes consist of (left to right) Roger Rocha, Christa Hillhouse, Linda Perry, and Dawn Richardson.

file photo

electricity of rock into a unique and explosive sound. From the mind slapping "What's Up" and "Dear Mr. President" to the introspective "Spaceman," from the rockin' blues of "Pleasantly Blue" and "Train" to the deep hard funk of "Superfly" and

"Can't Find My Way Home," from the acoustic ballad "Drifting" to the saloon blues of "Old Mr. Heffer," 4 Non Blondes is emotional, unsettling, manic, unpredictable, disenchanted, uplifting, powerful and very real.

Explains Perry, "Our politics is common sense: This is a beautiful country. We just see problems and we want to see them fixed. We believe in the power of music to influence ideas, to effect change. But we're not pushing except by being who we are. We're out to make new rules, not to preach."

4 Non Blondes will be performing with Aerosmith on Friday, September 24, 1993 at the Charlotte Coliseum in Charlotte, North Carolina. The group will make a South Carolina appearance, also with Aerosmith, on October 1, 1993 at the Carolina Coliseum in Columbia. Both shows get underway at 7:30 pm and tickets on sale now for $22.50. For ticket information concerning the North Carolina concert, call 704-357-4700. For information concerning the South Carolina concert, call 803-777-7228

NOW OPEN!

CAMPUS CONNECTION

"The Connection for Fraternity & Sorority Specialties"

Rush Items	Balloons
T-Shirts & Caps	Gift Items
Cups & Koozies	Buttons
Pens & Pencils	& MORE!

ACROSS FROM RYAN'S -INSIDE SPORTSMAN'S FRIEND

1636 Bypass N.E. Greenwood

Hours: Mon.-Fri. 10 am to 7 pm; Sat. 11 am to 5 pm

Call Laura Hoole for all your Greek needs at:

942-9616

DON'T PANIC. YOU CAN STILL TAKE THE GRE.®

Think you missed the Graduate Record Exam deadline? Relax. With the new on-demand GRE,® you could be taking the test as early as tomorrow. And since you choose the date, you can test at your best. You can even see your score the instant you finish. Score reports are mailed 10 to 15 days later, in plenty of time for most school deadlines. Call now for complete information and instant registration.

® Educational Testing Service

Sylvan Technology Centers®

Part of the Sylvan Learning | eater Network

1-800-GRE-ASAP

THE BLUE STOCKING

"Give the people the light, so they may find the way."

Volume LXXXVIII Number 2

PRESBYTERIAN COLLEGE

Clinton, South Carolina 29325

October 7, 1993

Gillespie honored as South Carolina Professor of the Year

Dr. Gillespie strikes a familiar pose in his office as he grades papers from his American politics class. Gillespie is the third PC professor in as many years to be selected as the South Carolina Professor of the Year.

photo by Brooke Peterson

by Tobin Turner
NEWS EDITOR

Because the last two South Carolina Professors of the Year have been PC faculty members, Dr. J. David Gillespie did not expect his nomination to beat the odds and give PC an unprecedented third consecutive winner. "I just filed the nomination letter away," Gillespie adds with a smile. Much to his surprise, however, CASE (Council for Advancement and Support of Education) announced September 21 that he had been selected as the 1993 South Carolina Professor of the Year.

The reasons for his selection are, in fact, numerous and impressive. Gillespie is the author of Politics at the Periphery: Third Parties in Two-Party America, a text published earlier this year that details the development, history, and accomplishments of third parties in the United States. He was chosen by the 1992 graduates as the Senior Class Professor, an award given to the professor who has most profoundly influenced their lives. In addition, he was selected as the 1992-93 PC Professor of the Year and was the keynote speaker at last year's graduation ceremony. He has studied abroad, was offered a Fulbright Fellowship to study in China, and served as the first chairman of PC's political science department.

Gillespie's single most noteworthy characteristic, however, is his relationship with students.

Sophomore political science major Brian Benenhaley comments, "Dr. Gillespie is a good friend. He has a genuine concern for each student. He responds to what students are thinking and expands upon it."

PC President Kenneth Orr is also aware of Gillespie's special rapport with students and faculty. "Dave Gillespie has earned the respect of his colleagues and the students who have witnessed his dedication and desire for excellence."

Gillespie's method of teaching has much to do with his success. "Every time I enter the classroom, I am a little nervous," he confesses. But he adds that such stage fright forces him to be better prepared and more alert.

"If I ever begin to teach without any stage fright, I believe it will be time to hang it up," adds Gillespie.

"Dr. Gillespie represents the best a small college can be. He'll do anything for any of his students," says Bill Wright, a junior political science major.

Gillespie, in an effort to dodge the spotlight emphasizes, "It is an honor for me simply to be associated with a college where the faculty and students get along so well and provide such a superb learning atmosphere."

Last year's SC Professor of the Year, Dr. Dean Thompson, sums up the effect Dr. Gillespie has on the PC community: "Dr. Gillespie's gray Nissan is parked in front of Neville Hall every weeknight and on Saturday and Sunday afternoons. How often does one see such an extraordinary dedication? Within days of his or her arrival, any newcomer to the PC community constantly hears the name 'Gillespie' spoken with respect and love. New students sense that here's someone they need to learn from; new faculty sense that here's an example they need to emulate."

On The Inside

Page 3 . . .

Radio Free PC - Campus station makes the move to Springs Campus Center.

Page 6 - 7 . . .

Dum Vivimus Servimus: PC students and staff emulate school's motto of service.

Page 10 . . .

Blizzard of Bucks offers chance for students to make money.

Local law forces choice between responsibility and legality

by Gray Lesesne
STAFF WRITER

Imagine the following scenario: a PC student who has had too much to drink at Fraternity Court asks another student for a ride back to the campus, not wanting to take the risk of driving under the influence of alcohol. On the way back to the Presbyterian campus, the car is stopped by a Clinton police officer for speeding or reckless driving. While the driver is logically ticketed or warned for traffic violations, the passenger is charged with public drunkenness, taken to Clinton city jail and is given a $148 citation. This hypothetical situation became a reality for a PC student in the early morning hours of September 19, with the enforcement of a little-known Clinton city law that prohibits public drunkenness in any vehicle within the town limits.

The arrested student, who requested anonymity, was very upset with the actions taken against him by the Clinton police. "I'm surprised. . . I thought I was doing the right thing by asking someone else to drive me home. It goes against everything everyone has taught you (about drinking and driving)," says the student, who is 21, the legal age to drink alcoholic beverages in South Carolina.

The concerns of the student also disturbed Joe Nixon, dean of students. Nixon contacted the Clinton City Manager, Police Chief, and City Attorney with regard to the statute. Questions have arisen among PC students as to the legality of riding with a designated driver or on the safe ride shuttle to and from the fraternity houses. Technically, under Clinton Code, it is illegal to be in a drunken condition (at the judgment of the arresting officer) within the confines of the city limits, which includes the entire campus and all vehicles traveling within the town of Clinton. This would make it illegal to ride with a designated driver or on the safe ride shuttle if one were in a drunken condition.

"I think it's illogical for anyone to be arrested for considering his or her and other people's safety by obtaining a safe ride home," says Steven Ellis.

Zane Corriher agrees. "It makes no sense to me why someone should be arrested for being responsible."

Nixon said, "It is a violation of the PC policy on alcohol for any student to be drunk. (However), someone who has had too much to drink can call Public Safety for transportation back to the campus (from Fraternity Court)."

If in a situation where it is necessary to ride back with a designated driver, Nixon suggests that the driver should drive responsibly. "There are cases where actions (of passengers) justify warrant (the passengers) being arrested. However, I do not approve of or condone drunkenness," says Nixon.

PC Tidbits

Judicial Council suspends student for marijuana use

The Judicial Council conducted a hearing on September 20, 1993, at 5:30 pm in the Chapman Conference Center. A student was charged with the possession of marijuana, a Code of Conduct violation.

The accused pled guilty to the charges. The prosecutor presented its case, calling one witness and presenting evidence. The defense also called one witness while presenting its case. After the prosecutor and the accused were given the opportunity to present their summaries, the council went into deliberation.

The council imposed suspension for the remainder of the semester and 20 hours community service upon returning to PC in January. The council also strongly recommended a substance abuse class.

The accused was read the sentence and was reminded of the right to appeal.

Judicial proceedings as presented in the Knapack were followed. With no further business, the case was adjourned at 6:35 pm.

Freshman officers elected

The Student Government Association held elections for freshman class president and two class representatives during the week of September 20 through the 24. Catherine Bunch of Mauldin, South Carolina, was elected president. Christina Giglio of Sarasota, Florida, and Susan Haigler of Dalton, Georgia were elected class representatives. A total of four people sought the office of president, while eight ran for representative positions.

GDH waffle iron broken

According to officials of the Greenville Dining Hall, the popular waffle iron that was placed in the dining hall last year is temporarily out of service.

"Someone made cheese sandwiches in the waffle iron and just ruined the waffle grids," said Vernon Powell, director of food services.

Powell expects the waffle iron to be fixed soon. "New grids have been ordered and should be here in the next few weeks," he added.

PC ranked second among liberal arts colleges

Press Release
OFFICE OF PUBLIC RELATIONS

In certain cases, being second gives reason to celebrate.

That's the sentiment at Presbyterian College, which has again been ranked among the nation's best colleges by US News and World Report. PC was judged to be the second-best regional liberal arts college in the South, just behind Transylvania College of Kentucky in the magazine's annual "America's Best Colleges" edition, which hit the newsstands this past Monday.

It marks the eighth time that PC has earned recognition in the magazine's comprehensive evaluation, continuing a steady presence in the US News rankings - but it is the highest rank that the four-year liberal arts college has ever received. In the previous four years, PC was rated fifth (1989), sixth (1990), sixth (1991), and fifth (1992).

"We are grateful for this recognition by the editors of US News and World Report," said PC President Kenneth B. Orr. "There is a comprehensive evaluation that, through the years, has become one of the most widely read rankings in the country. Combined with our inclusion in other such highly regarded college guides as Peterson's and Fiske's, we see this as a continued recognition of Presbyterian College - to use a phrase in the Fiske guide - 'as one of the prime private colleges in the Southeast.'"

Two other South Carolina colleges, Wofford and Converse, also earned mention

PC achieved its highest ranking ever this year in the annual US News and World Report survey of the nation's best colleges and universities. file photo in the 1993 rankings of regional liberal arts colleges, as the third- and 10th best schools, respectively. Both colleges are located in Spartanburg. A total of 1,371 schools were evaluated for the US News survey, which divided the colleges and universities in several categories. The Regional Liberal Arts Colleges category included 381 schools placed in four geographic regions: North, South, Midwest, and West.

PC Homecoming activities set for next weekend

by Charles Smith
STAFF WRITER

Many activities have been planned for PC's Homecoming Weekend '93. Activities will begin on Friday, October 15, and continue throughout the weekend.

According to Tom Stallworth, director of alumni affairs, the schedule of events for Homecoming is action-packed.

Friday gets underway with the Wing-Ding Golf Tournament, sponsored by the Scotsman Club. The tournament, which gets underway at 1:00 pm, will be held at Lakeside Country Club in Laurens and will be open to alumni and friends.

At 7:00 pm on Friday, the annual Blue Sox Festival will be held in Belk Auditorium. The festival consists of student-produced skits and other entertainment. Prizes will be given for the best skits. Various class reunion dinners will be held all over Clinton, as well.

Saturday's Homecoming events get underway at 9:00 am with Registration for alumni in the Festival Tent in front of Neville Hall.

At 10:00 am, class reunions will be held in the Springs Campus Center, Neville Hall, Thomson Library, and Jacobs Hall. The classes that will be meeting include the Classes of '43, '51, '53, '55, '58, '61, '63, '66, '68, '71, '73, '76, '78, '81, '83, '88, '92, and the Half-Century Club (includes all classes prior to 1943).

At 10:30 am, special departmental reunions will be held. Graduates of the following departments are invited to meet faculty and friends at the following locations: Chemistry (Third Floor, Richardson Hall), Education (Library Auditorium), Visual and Theater Arts and Music (Harper Center), History (First Floor, Neville Hall).

At 11:30 am, a chicken and barbeque dinner will be held on the West Plaza.

At 1:00 pm, the annual Alumni

Association Program will be held in Edmunds Hall. The program will include an awards presentation, the installation of the '94 alumni officers, and musical selections by the PC Chorus.

At 3:00 pm, the homecoming game between the Blue Hose and the Elon Fighting Christians will get underway at Bailey Stadium.

After the game, there will be a drop-in at the Festival Tent in front of Neville Hall. The reception will get underway at 5:30 pm and will give the public a chance to meet the new Homecoming Queen and her court.

At 7:00 pm, the 50th reunion dinner of the '43 Tiger Beaters will take place at Darlington House in Clinton. The Tiger Beaters were the last PC football team to defeat Clemson.

At 1:00 pm, the annual Alumni

The Episcopal Church Especially Welcomes Students
+ ALL SAINTS' EPISCOPAL CHURCH
One Block North of Greenville Dining Hall

Sunday Schedule

8:30 & 10:00 am Holy Eucharist
11:00 am Fellowship (in Parish Hall)
11:15 am College Class (with Dr. Dean Thompson)

Welcome to CANTERBURY
the Episcopal student group
on campus

Monday Evenings

9:00 pm CANTERBURY
(at "Crossroads" in Douglas House)

• Need someone to talk to?

The Rev. Nancy F. Allison, Rector (833-1886)
The Rev. Lenora Pearson, Priest on Campus (833-8295)

Radio PC hits the airwaves . . .

Station transmitting out of Springs Campus Center this year

David Hyers, manager of Radio PC, conducts his Monday afternoon show. Radio PC is operating out of Springs Campus Center this year. photo by Kim Gibson

by Nhlen Nguyen
STAFF WRITER

Radio Free PC, the "official" radio forum for and by the students of this campus, is on the air. On Sunday, September 19, Radio PC kicked off yet another year of music, call-ins, and talk shows.

According to Dave Hyers, Radio PC manager, this year's variety of programs and a new location on the first floor of Springs Campus Center, has generated more enthusiasm and excitement than usual.

"I am delighted with our new space in Springs. Two previous sites for Radio PC - the lower floor of the library and a booth at WPCC in Clinton - failed to provide the publicity and the attention that the station needed," said Hyers.

"The move to Springs has tripled our visibility," he added.

PC disc jockey and host of the popular Mayberry Show, Andy Welch agrees with Hyers. "The move to Springs has made Radio PC much more accessible to the student body," he said.

Another factor which Hyers feels is giving Radio PC a boost this year is the diversity of shows. "This year's programming includes a morning show, a comedy show, a serious political show, a Christian music program, an alternative program and much more," he said.

Radio PC DJ McDowell Crook says that one goal of the station in the future is to obtain a radio frequency, which will allow Radio PC to be broadcast throughout Clinton and Laurens.

"Radio PC has come along way, but we are still growing," said Hyers.

Radio PC

Fall 1993

Sunday	Monday	Tuesday	Wednesday	Thursday
NA	Dave Hyers	Rotating Slot	Chris Patterson	Chip Hill
3:00-4:00		Guest DJ's	Andy Altizer
NA	Dr. Thompson	Keith Jernigan	Emily Thwaite	Mike Weaver
4:00-5:00			Jennie J. Byerley	Matt Mains
NA	Rob McCredie	McDowell Crook	Melissa Gill	Mark Kerrigan
5:00-6:00	Laura Severinsen		Jenifer Alkonis	Jorge Gironés
Talk Radio	Jerolyn Elliot		Nicole Ginn	Bill Grady
6:00-7:00	Ann Raynal		Stacy Summerel	Joshua Elrod
James Chastain	Andy Welch	Jason Bundrick	Reid Collins	Tyler Jones
John Wexler		Eric Robinson		Bill Wright
SGA		Dave Arthur	Jeremy Poirier
Dallas Olson			Brian Steely
Beth Threngdill	Erin Fox		Everett Catts	Adrian Prath
Karen Hawken	Bronwyn Coltrane			Sherman Johnson
Chad Jordan	Michael Myers	Jason Lee	Barry Brown	Warren Slone
Stewart Hackney	Todd Gorman			Patrick Long

POINT

Ordinance not designed to harass the responsible Students should not be punished for using 'sound judgment'

Recently, a little-known ordinance of the city of Clinton caught one or two PC students by surprise.

The ordinance makes it illegal for any individual to be intoxicated within the confines of the city limits, which includes the entire Presbyterian College campus.

A few weeks ago, a PC student, who was over the legal drinking age of 21, was arrested and charged with a violation of this ordinance. This particular student had been out at Fraternity Court and was definitely intoxicated. However, when it came time for the student to return to his or her room, the individual was responsible enough not to drive. He or she found a designated driver.

While enroute to the dorm room, a Clinton City policeman pulled over the designated driver for speeding. The designated driver had not been drinking. However, the officer noticed that the passenger was inebriated and proceeded to arrest this individual for violating the little-known city ordinance.

The individual spent some time in jail and was charged with a $148 fine. Above all, the individual was humiliated.

We at the Blue Stocking in no way condone drunkenness, especially drinking and driving. However, we think that this little-known local ordinance was not intended to be used against people who exercise responsibility.

Here in America, it is everyone's God given right to drink once he or she has reached the age of 21. We even have the right to get stone stopped if we so desire. (The Blue Stocking in no way encourages this!)

But people do not have the right to impose on others by drinking whenever and wherever they choose. Drunkenness behind the wheel of a car or within a public park goes beyond mere imposition; it endangers. For this simple reason alone, the City of Clinton and other towns across the nation have ordinances designed to prohibit public drunkenness.

We do not believe that the ordinance is unfounded. If an individual is lying in the middle of Adair Street, flat tanked out of his or her mind, then the city police should arrest this individual and charge him or her with public drunkenness.

However, if an individual is drunk, over the age of 21, and responsible enough to obtain a ride home from a designated driver, the police have no business arresting or charging him or her with any crime. People should not be punished for exercising sound judgement.

In today's society, we are constantly encouraged to be responsible with regard to sex, driving, schoolwork, and drinking. Every time you turn on the television set, there are public service announcements on the screen begging us to be "safe."

The Clinton City Police should stop harassing PC students and arresting them for being "safe" and responsible.

Sidewalk Talk

What are your planning to do over Fall Break?

Stephanie Edlekamp
junior

"I'm going to Ft. St. Joe, Florida with five of my friends. Ft. St. Joe is a secluded peninsula with few people and beautiful beaches."

Angelique Cunningham
sophomore

"I am going home with my roommate to Tampa, Florida. We'll be going to the Hard Rock Cafe and Clearwater Beach."

Glenn Burkart
freshman

"I will go and visit with my buds in Atlanta and Athens, but I doubt I'll be able to remember what happened."

photos by Kim Gibson

THE BLUE STOCKING

Presbyterian College - Clinton, South Carolina 29325
Volume LXXXVIII Number 2, October 7, 1993

Editor-in-Chief.....Jason West
Managing Editor.....Lauren Owings
News Editor.....Tobin Turner
Sports Editor.....Everett Catts
Entertainment Editor.....Kim Rabon
Features Editor.....Brian Sacco
Computer Design Editor.....Todd Love
Photography Editor.....Kim Gibson
Layout Editor.....Angela Richardson
Staff Artist.....Michael Christensen
Staff Advisor.....Dr. Neal B. Prater

Staff Writers:
Dennie Lynn Hill
Charles Smith
Dawn Banks
Kim Wood
Kristina Pruitt
Katherine Bonner
Karen O'Connor
Margaret Ellen Pender
Alison Nicole Barnard
David Miller
Photographers: Reid Collins, Brooke Peterson

The Blue Stocking is a tri-weekly student publication of Presbyterian College. The paper serves as a forum of news and opinion of regional and national concern. For advertising, contact The Blue Stocking, Presbyterian College, Box 1061, Clinton, SC 29325. The Blue Stocking welcomes letters to the editor from all members of the PC community. Signatures are required. Letters are printed on a space available basis. The Blue Stocking reserves the right to edit all letters for proper grammar and punctuation. The final deadline for submitting letters is Friday at 12:00 pm on the week before publication.

Letters to the Editor - Letters to the Editor - Letters to the Editor - Letters to the Editor - Letters to the Editor

Russell Program Chairman responds to student's charge of 'unethical' indoctrination

Dear Editor,

Your September 17 issue included a letter from a Mr. Brian Benenhaley charging that "fairness was not the goal" of Dr. Orr, Dr. Moncrief, and the Russell Program Steering Committee in selecting Mr. David Gergen to represent the Republican point of view in last year's series on the 1992 elections. He even implied that scheduling Mr. Gergen was "unethical," an "attempt to indoctrinate students," and he urged his readers to "resist such attempts" in order to "preserve the integrity of our college."

Mr. Benenhaley apparently does not know, nor did he seek to determine, the following facts about how Russell Program speakers are selected: (1) prominent speakers have to be scheduled almost a year in advance; (2) Dr. Orr and Dr. Moncrief do not select them; ad hoc subcommittees and the Russell Program Steering Committee (of which the named administrators are two of eighteen members) schedule these speakers; (3) David Gergen's credentials as a representative Republican spokesman were impeccable at the time of his selection; (4) his selection was unanimous and applauded by everyone on both our subcommittee and our Steering Committee, as well as by local Republicans; (5) no local Republican and no Republican student came forward to complain about his selection when it was announced months before his appearance.

Why was his selection so unanimous? ITEM: Staff Assistant to the Nixon administration, 1971-1972; ITEM: Special Assistant to President Nixon and Chief of White House Writing and Research Team, 1973-74; ITI/M, Special Counsel to President Ford and Director of White House Office Communications, 1975-77; ITEM, Assistant to President Reagan and Staff Director at the White House, 1981; ITEM, Assistant to President Reagan for Communications, 1981-84; ITEM, Research Fellow at the American Enterprise Institute, 1984; ITEM, Managing Editor of U.S. News and World Report (hardly a "liberal rag") from 1985; ITI/M, Republican spokesman vs. Democrat David Shields on PBS's MacNeil/Lehrer Newshour from 1988 to 1993; ITEM, during these years of Republican administrations the London Observer called him "Washington's leading insider-journalist."

Even if someone doubted the above credentials, how could any reasonable person possibly assume that a committee making arrangements for a speaker in 1991 (final contract signed 3/5/92) could control the substance of a talk that the speaker gave in September of 1992, and then could also be party to or responsible for the fact that this speaker would agree in the middle of 1993 to serve in the White House of a Democratic administration? Mr. Editor, I am proud of the wisdom and vision of my committee, but I cannot yet claim for them the gift of prophecy.

I regret having to take my time, your time, and your readers' time in making these points. Mr. Benenhaley could have ascertained any of them by coming by my office or by asking any member of the Russell Program Steering Committee, whose names are frequently published and are readily accessible.

My committee was charged with unfairness, with "unethical" attempts to "indoctrinate" students. Your readers were urged to "resist such attempts" in order to "preserve the integrity of our college." Mr. Editor, a major purpose of liberal education is to teach that integrity comes from gathering facts before formulating a thesis, as well as from resisting any temptation to make charges that cannot be substantiated. Doing so ensures that "fair" and "ethical" discourse can take place at Presbyterian College or anywhere else.

Sincerely,

James L. Skinner
Professor of English
Chair, Russell Program Steering Committee

by Lauren Owings
MANAGING EDITOR

I am enrolled in a class this semester entitled Media and Society. The course title pretty much gives away the primary topic of discussion—we look at different forms of media and how they affect our culture.

Fortunately for me, I'm able to see and work directly with one of the most important mediums in our society today: newspaper. Because of this, I'm able to make judgments about how we are shaped by what we read and take in through this particular medium.

Yes, even a college newspaper can have an "agenda" of sorts. One of the first things you learn about news writing, however, is that it is to be unbiased. Unbiased, in this case, means that the writing should only represent facts and should not represent emotion or personal opinion.

'By denying yourself the right to speak your mind, you can often do more damage than good'

Ironically, the media class that I'm taking makes a strong argument that every form of media is biased. Hmm...this theory seems to pose a definite problem. Or does it? The fact of the matter is that everything that we read and see, whether in a newspaper or magazine, has a bias. It is literally impossible for it not to have an agenda.

The way I see it, if a human being compiled it, wrote it, photographed it, or organized it then there is a message.

The solution that we have developed to try and cure this problem is to editorialize. That is to say, we take out the opinion and in many ways, the punch, by removing parts that may show obvious tendencies one way or the other. I have found this practice to be true in my own life, to editorialize what

I really think or feel for the sake of someone else or myself.

I'll admit that being considerate of other's feelings is a good thing, but it can often have negative repercussions. By denying yourself the right to speak your mind, you can often do more damage than good. Yes, take the time to think before you say something that you might regret, but don't editorialize your beliefs or lifestyle to suit those around you. It has a lot to do with timeliness; knowing when and where to say what's on your mind. So, I'll keep my own 'sage' advice in mind each day that I sit in my media class, and I'll count my blessings that I can have an opinion. Yes, even one that has a little bias. Wouldn't the world be a boring place if we were all alike? That's a question which deserves some consideration.

My Turn

by Jason West
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

Within the last month, PC has received two very high honors. Political science professor Dr. Dave Gillespie was named the South Carolina Professor of the Year and US News and World Report came out with its annual rankings of colleges and universities, which listed PC as 2nd among the Southeast's top liberal arts colleges.

As students of this institution, we all know that PC is a special place. Any college can have beautiful buildings, oak-lined streets, and great athletic teams. However, PC has one special quality that distinguishes it from other schools: PC has substance.

On the inside of this college's halls, you'll find professors of substance like Dr. Gillespie, whose teaching is more important than his pay, his research, and his book writing.

I am proud to say that I am a political science major and Gillespie is my advisor. Gillespie has taught me more than American politics and constitutional law. Above all, he has taught me to respect other people's viewpoints and to question myself.

When I came to PC as a 17-year-old freshman from rural Kershaw County, South Carolina, I brought with me a number of wrong assumptions about the world and the people who make it up. Gillespie has shown me that America isn't always perfect, that homelessness is not a lifestyle choice, and that democrats are people too. (Of course, I'm just being facetious about that last one.)

I have never seen a political science professor who is so capable of presenting both sides of an argument. All of his students know his political persuasion; however, in the classroom, Gillespie is as non-partisan as a person can be. He in no way attempts to indoctrinate or forcefully influence the thoughts of his students. He shows you the facts and lets you make the choice. That is the way all professors should be.

When I graduate from PC, one of the things I will miss most will be stopping by Gillespie's office in Neville Hall to talk about the problems of the world and seeing him propped back in his chair with his feet on his desk.

Dr. Gillespie has made a difference in my outlook on life and for that I am grateful.

SVS coordinator builds on her experience as a PC student

by Kim Wood
STAFF WRITER

Chon Glover, coordinator of Student Volunteer Services, says that her mission at PC is to "provide opportunities for students to serve others."

Glover knows exactly what those opportunities can mean to a PC student since she was one herself not long ago. A 1990 graduate with a major in sociology, Glover was involved with SVS throughout her four years at Presbyterian College. She worked with and served as coordinator of Joanna Tutors, served as awards committee chairman for Special Olympics, and was a part of the Big Sister program.

While a freshman, Glover had a Little Sister who was 14 years old and pregnant. "Going through that with her was a meaningful experience to me because I learned a lot. I didn't want to believe that things like that happened, but they do," said Glover.

Today, Glover's former Little Sister is back in school and working toward her goals for the future. "I like to look back at that time because it helped me realize that you can have a meaningful impact on someone's life," she added.

Glover describes her experience working with SVS as positive. She believes that SVS helped her develop leadership skills and other personal skills needed after college. "I learned just as much outside the classroom as inside," she said.

Shortly after graduating, Glover was offered the position of Director of Minority Affairs and Coordinator of Student Volunteer Services. As SVS coordinator, Glover oversees 28 programs which are executed by student program coordinators and ensures that the student volunteers have the equipment, supplies, support and guidance that they need. She works closely with host agencies in the community, such as the Red Cross and local school districts.

"My job is basically to be a motivator and encourager. I am responsible for letting student volunteers and student coordinators know that they are appreciated," says Glover.

Glover says she tries to use her experience as a PC student to help current students she works with. "Knowing PC and knowing what type of institution it is and the benefits and opportunities it provides, I want to be able to let students know the kinds of things I encountered and how they have helped me become the person I am," she said.

"I encourage everyone on the PC campus to become involved with SVS. Most programs do not require more than an hour of your time a week, and it is a great investment in other people," added Glover.

Chon Glover, SVS coordinator, talks with a student volunteer on the phone in her office.

photo by Kim Gibson

Pi Kapps spend summer biking across country Trek raises money for the severely disabled

by Brian Sacco
FEATURES EDITOR

When one hears the word "summer abroad," a vision of studying at a famous foreign institution or dining and sightseeing at popular European cities immediately comes to mind.

But for brothers of Pi Kappa Phi fraternity who participate in their national service organization, PUSH's Journey of Hope, a much different definition of "summer abroad" is evoked.

The Journey of Hope involves seeing the country while riding on the seat of a bicycle and traveling about 75 miles a day in an effort to increase public awareness of the severely disabled through PUSH America. On the trek, each biker travels about 3,500 miles, covering 62 days, while travelling from San Francisco to Washington, DC, and Charleston, South Carolina on alternate years.

PUSH America was founded by Pi Kappa Phi with the intention of improving the lives of people with severely disabling conditions through service, volunteerism, education, and awareness. PUSH America is a private, non-profit organization that has served the needs of the severely disabled across the US for 16 years. Since its founding, PUSH America has raised more than two million dollars through the collegiate members of Pi Kappa Phi.

During the year, each chapter of Pi Kappa Phi engages in several different fundraising activities, at the same time, each rider must raise $4000 to be able to participate during the summer. While this seems to be an overwhelming accomplishment, it is likely that every brother who has ridden cross country for this project will say that he has not only been challenged, but he has also learned a great deal about himself and other people.

Beta Chapter of Pi Kappa Phi fraternity, here at PC, has been well represented on the Journey of Hope with seniors Stanton Smith, David Dixon, and Beta alumni Chris Garrett and Dave Autcreman having participated in the program.

"The ride made me realize how fortunate I am to be in college, be a member of Pi Kappa Phi, and be able to ride across America," said Dixon.

Throughout their ride the Pi Kapps made several stops to visit the disabled that they were riding to benefit.

Stanton Smith, who rode this past summer, explained, "At first, I felt uncomfortable with spending time with the disabled, but as the trip progressed, I discovered that they were not that different and they have the same emotions and thoughts as everyone else and just want to be treated with respect."

PUSH America was founded on the ideal of service, and the brothers of Pi Kappa Phi fraternity who have experienced the journey of Hope have gone the "extra mile" to benefit others and have learned a great deal which will be helpful in the future.

"When you help others, you give more than you receive," said Smith.

PUSH America is an outreaching, positive, caring attitude towards everyone," added Dixon.

Phillips to serve SVS in rare male internship

by Brian Sacco
FEATURES EDITOR

It is not uncommon for any prospective student, current student, or alumnus from Presbyterian College to have among his or her repertoire of outstanding qualities a commitment to service that is second to none. It is also just as rare to find a student at PC whose overwhelming desire to help others is only exceeded by his or her own unselfishness when others can benefit from his or her generous efforts. But as Student Volunteer Services senior intern Christopher Phillips will tell you, "Being able to help everyone directly and indirectly makes it all the more enjoyable."

A senior business major from Tampa, Florida, Christopher's undaunted efforts for SVS have been just that — unselfish. When he was a freshman, working with the Thornwell Swimmers proved to be a memorable experience that had a great impact on his life. "To see the excitement of the swimmers and the fact they remembered your name each week really made you feel good," he said. His sophomore year involved a unique type of friendship with the Big Brother program in which he discovered that "No matter what you do, such as reading to your little brother, you can and do make a difference."

Last year, as Cub Scout coordinator, Christopher was involved in helping and encouraging several young boys to improve their outdoor skills and further their development in community service and civic pride. Christopher has also been involved with Special Olympics the last few years where he has "looked at things differently and realized how fortunate I really am."

Christopher Phillips serves as the SVS intern this year.

photo by Kim Gibson

This year, as SVS intern, Christopher's duties will include supervising the Activity Fair, publishing the monthly newsletter, and attending and inputting at most of the meetings; but although these seem to be great responsibilities, Christopher feels comfortable with them. "I want to be a positive role model for the volunteers and coordinators while at the same time continuing to make SVS grow."

In a rare position as a male SVS intern, Christopher would like to increase the number of males involved because he thinks that the school provides an excellent opportunity for all of its students to live the school motto — "Dum vivimus servimus." When asked about the motivation behind his work as SVS intern, Christopher stated that Laura Smith, last year's SVS intern, gave him a great deal of support and encouragement. He also credited Chon Glover's pats on the back and the coordinators' willingness to help with his success so far. In closing, Christopher stated, "People always need help and it only takes a small amount of time to make an impact on someone's life."

*"While We Live . . .
We Serve"*

Intramural --
Newsby Chris Patterson
INTRAMURAL DIRECTOR

The fall intramural program got off to a great start this year with a back-to-school sand volleyball tournament. Over 100 students participated in the one day event that was held at the intramural complex. After three hours of hard fought volleyball, the tournament was completed with the winning teams of: (women) Pi Kapp Rush Girls and (men) Raiders.

Intramural football kicked off this year on September 15th. This is the second year that football has been played by "Carolina Rules". This fast-paced style has proved to be a success at P.C., with overall participation up this year by 15%. The intramural football playoffs began on Sunday, October 3 with a full slate of games. The playoff teams were: (women) Tri-Sigma, Alpha Delta Pi, ZTA I, ZTA II, Pi Kapp Rush Girls, and The Neanderthals; (men) Ladies' Choice, KA I, PIKA, Sigma Nu I, Pi Kapp I, Pi Kapp II.

On Sept. 29th over 50 students, staff, and faculty gathered for the second annual sports trivia contest. The winning women's team was ZTA with Tracy Pierro answering all of her team's questions. The winning men's team was once again Jim Morton, Steve Owens, Grant Vosburgh, and Randy Randall. The team answered 90 out of 100 questions correctly. They beat their closest competitors by 8 points. There is no truth to the rumor that this team will be banned from future trivia competition at P.C. and switched over to the Senior Tour.

There's a simple way to prevent AIDS.

Men's soccer team on way to conference title

by Brian Steely
STAFF WRITER

The men's soccer team is well on their way to another conference title. In the last nine games the team has allowed three goals and seven of these games have been shut outs. In the past two weeks the team has defeated Carson-Newman (1-0), University of D.C. (5-0), Lenoir-Rhyne (1-0), Wofford (1-0), and tied Catawba (2-2).

In the past week Chris Bruno scored the game winning goal against inner-state rival Wofford. Last Saturday in a crucial SAC game, John Mairs scored the only goal of the match to put the Hose on top 1-0. In Salisbury, NC the team tied SAC-8 rival Catawba in double overtime. The team showed great intensity and played one of the best games of the season.

Team defense as a whole has been exceptional thus far yielding only three goals in the last nine games. Junior goal keeper Mark Albertus says, "one of the major reasons the defense has been so solid is due to the tough play of Brian Blackwelder, Clint Galloway, and Kevin Smith." However, it is clear that Mark Albertus himself deserves much of the credit due to his exceptional goal keeping.

Over fall break the Blue Hose will head to Panama City where they will play Birmingham Southern and St. Leo.

Robert Goding (21) fights off an opponent as he runs for the ball.

photo by Reid Collins

Blue Hose football team suffers two tough losses

by Everett Catts
SPORTS EDITOR

Close but no cigar is a cliché which has been fitting for PC's 1993 football season. The Blue Hose are 1-4 (0-1 SAC), and all four of their losses have been by a margin of a touchdown or less.

On September 18, the Blue Hose defeated Newberry 30-13, regaining the Bronze Derby which they had lost last year. Steve Gorrie rushed for 168 yards on 31 carries and scored two touchdowns, on a 47-yard reception, and another on a three-yard run. The PC offense punished Newberry, racking up 257 yards rushing and a total of 414 yards combined. Freshman Randy Sullivan, starting quarterback, was 10 for 18, passing for 157 yards. At halftime, the Blue Hose led Newberry 23-13. The Blue Hose defense allowed only two Newberry touchdowns and held the Indians scoreless in the second half. Interceptions by Todd Shearer, Jeff Wilson, and Bernard Vereen, and fumble recoveries by Quincy Eigner, Antonio Merrinwether, and Damon Carr killed four Newberry drives in the last two quarters. Carr picked up the ball and ran 39 yards for a touchdown that broke Newberry's back with 29 seconds left.

On September 25, the Blue Hose played at Lenoir-Rhyne in their first conference game of the season. Lenoir-Rhyne led 10-7 at halftime. In the third quarter, PC took the lead with two Sparky Vaughn field goals and shut out Lenoir-Rhyne. In the fourth quarter, the Bears came back and tied the score at 20 with 4:50 remaining. PC had a chance to win with five seconds left, but Vaughn's 25-yard field goal attempt was blocked. In the first overtime, Sullivan scored on a one yard run, but the Bears tied the score at 27-27, forcing a second overtime. In the second overtime, L-R scored and recovered a PC fumble, ending the game with a 34-27 loss.

On October 2, the Blue Hose lost to Wofford, 20-13. At halftime, the Terriers led 13-3, and PC's only scoring came on a 14-yard Jordan 40-yard field goal. In the third quarter, Randy Sullivan's four yard pass to Chris Yonce made it a 20-13 Wofford lead. But PC's second drive was stopped when Sullivan was sacked on fourth down with 48 seconds left, giving Wofford the ball and the win.

Head Coach John Perry commented on the two losses, saying, "We had a chance to win all of our games, but we've just come up short."

The Student Government Association announces the 1993 Homecoming CourtKathleen Dowd
Jennifer Fouse
Kelly Harrington
Catherine HodgesMelanie Johnson
Liza Jones
Ashby Lawton
Elliott NicholsonLori Randall
Lori Tarbert
Soule Wilkin
Jennifer WoodsLady Hose volleyball off to good start
Williams provides 'vital offense' for team

Brooke Fleming spikes the ball in another PC victory.

photo by Reid Collins

by Margaret Ellen Pender
STAFF WRITER

Although we are surrounded and at times almost suffocated by a world which preaches conformity, it is an undeniable truth that difference is what sets us apart. Just as we all know Wendy's because of "the square hamburger" or Waldo because of his red and white striped shirt, we generally distinguish people by any apparent peculiarities which they possess. As an example, imagine that you were to enter the gym in Templeton to watch a Lady Blue Hose volleyball match. Of the six players on the court, suppose that one was wearing a large brace on her leg. Immediately, your reaction would probably be something along the following lines:

The story of Deedy's arrival at P.C. is one of perseverance and dedication. After beginning her athletic career at Sumter High

"Wonder what happened to her?" "Can she play with that thing on, and if so it is worth enduring the pain which surely must accompany such activity?"

According to senior outside hitter Dionne (Deedy) Williams who wears such a brace, the answer to the latter of those questions would be an unequivocal "Yes!" but truthfully anyone who has ever attended a PC volleyball match could have answered that question with ease. Granted the presence of a bulky contraption on Deedy's leg may initially be her distinguishing trait, but an observer needs only to witness the incredible power of one of her booming spikes to resolve any concerns regarding her ability to perform.

While her path to becoming a member of the Lady Blue Hose squad could effectively be dubbed "the road less travelled," Deedy has, nonetheless, made her presence felt. She is in the starting rotation for the third consecutive season, and thus, as one of the more experienced players on a young team, will be expected to provide leadership as the Lady Hose seek to capture another SAC crown. During the 1992 season, Deedy devastated opponents with her crushing spikes, en route to averaging a team high 4.52 kills per game and being named to the All-Conference and All-District teams. After twelve matches of the 1993 season, Deedy seems to be on target to surpass even the impressive numbers that she recorded last year.

The story of Deedy's arrival at P.C. is one of perseverance and dedication. After beginning her athletic career at Sumter High as a freshman who, in her own opinion, "did not know much about volleyball," Deedy developed into an exceptional player and consequently became a college prospect; one of the many coaches who contacted her was P.C.'s Beth Couture. Deedy, however, was not simply a one sport athlete. Rather she was cut out of the Bo Jackson mold and excelled in basketball, which she continues to play here at P.C., and track. While playing in a basketball game late in her senior season, Deedy suffered a severe knee injury and her life and college plans were thrown off course. A torn ligament in her left knee resulted in reconstructive surgery and countless hours of rehabilitation.

Due to her injury, Deedy chose to enroll in classes at USC-Sumter in the fall of 1989, but Coach Couture did not lose interest in the 5'8" power hitter whom she believed had the talent to play a major role for the Blue Hose. To her delight, Deedy recovered and joined the team for the 1990 season.

Under the direction of Coach Couture, who according to Deedy can wear the hat of "coach, mama, and friend," Deedy has refined all aspects of her game, but especially her ability to hit away from the block. As a result, she has been able to provide a vital offensive force for this year's young but unified squad which is seeking to continue Presbyterian's tradition of volleyball excellence.

In recent action, the Lady Blue Hose fell to Converse (8-15, 6-15, 15-11, 8-15) but two nights later exhausted Wofford in a match that exemplified the best of collegiate volleyball. Although the Lady Hose felt that they should have defeated the Terriers in three games, they initially fell behind 1-0. Ultimately, the Hose battled to a 13-15, 15-5, 15-6, 15-17, 15-12 victory. Over the weekend of Oct. 1-2, the Blue Hose downed Erskine, Lenoir-Rhyne, Francis Marion, Palm Beach Atlantic, and St. Andrews Presbyterian in the Francis Marion Tournament, and thus advanced to the finals. Although the Lady Hose fell to Elon College in the final round (4-15, 11-15, 7-15), the young team gained some valuable experience; additionally, Deedy Williams and Kristy Tarallo were named to the All-Tournament team.

Women's soccer ranked 19th in nation

by Everett Catts
SPORTS EDITOR

The women's soccer team is now 6-2, 1-0 in the conference, and ranked fifth in the latest ISAA Division II South poll.

On September 15, the Lady Blue Hose hosted NCAA Division I power, Mercer. Before the game, PC president Ken Orr and athletic director Gail Gault presented plaques to members of last year's SAC Championship team. In the game, the Lady Blue Hose held the Bears scoreless through regulation, forcing overtime. In overtime, Mercer scored and won 1-0.

Three days later, PC hosted SAC foe Carson-Newman. Rebecca Hardiman had two goals and an assist. Kathleen Dowd, Lisa Becker, and Missy Butler also scored in the 5-0 rout. Elizabeth Welborn added an assist.

On September 23, the Lady Blue Hose travelled to Lumburg, North Carolina, to face St. Andrews. Butler scored on a breakaway, and Dowd scored off of Charity Brazeal's assist. With the goal, Butler has scored at least one goal in all five of PC's wins (The Lady Blue Hose defeated Limestone in a forfeit). It was also PC's fifth shutout of the season.

Following the St. Andrews game, the women's team took an eleven-day break to prepare for the bulk of the conference schedule.

This week, PC has three key SAC-8 games on the road. On Tuesday, the Lady Blue Hose played Lenoir-Rhyne. Today, PC plays at Wingate, and this Saturday they will play at Catawba.

Head Coach Brian Purcell commented on the three games, saying, "If we win all three it's huge. A lot hinges on these three, plus the Gardner-Webb game."

On the team's performance, Purcell said, "We're still getting better, and I was really pleased with them in the Carson-Newman and St. Andrews games. Our attacking has also improved."

The Lady Blue Hose's next home game is on October 13 against Gardner-Webb.

Sports View

New coaches join
PC athletic staffby Everett Catts
SPORTS EDITOR

(Contributed to by Alison Baynard and Gray Lesesne)

Presbyterian College has added three new members to the athletic coaching staff—Doug Kobash, Ben Foutz and William Allsbrook.

Kobash, of Moorehead, Minnesota, has replaced Tim Corbin, who was hired as the head assistant at Clemson. Formerly of Susquehanna University in Pennsylvania and Emory University in Atlanta, came to Presbyterian this past August. In addition to his duties as head baseball coach, Kobash will teach Physical Education classes in the spring. Kobash holds a degree from Concordia College of Minnesota and the University of Miami at Ohio. While at Emory from 1990 to 1993, Kobash began a new baseball program. He feels that his move to PC is a "positive step in the right direction. I chose Presbyterian because of its good reputation, strong academics . . . and ability to recruit athletes with a scholarship program."

Also new at PC is Ben Foutz, who replaces Ruben Mendoza and will coach defensive lineman. Foutz graduated from Lenoir-Rhyne, where he played defensive end under head coach John Perry, who now heads the PC program. Foutz, a native of Cave Spring, Virginia, married the former Andrea Lucas on August 7 and plans to obtain a teaching certificate in social studies and a Master's Degree in that same field. Mr. Foutz states, "I'm really excited to be associated with college football again and very fortunate to be associated with Presbyterian College."

William Allsbrook, an assistant basketball coach, replaces Ronnie Fischer. Allsbrook graduated from Furman University, where he played guard and later became an assistant for the Paladins. Allsbrook, originally from Chapel Hill, North Carolina, is married to the former Sharon Kelley. Coach Allsbrook stated, "I'm excited to be at Presbyterian, to get to work with Coach Nibert and Coach Nunnery, and to enter a program known for its success on and off the court."

'I forgot how much I enjoyed reading until one of my classes... gave me a mandatory opportunity'

by Kim Rabon
ENTERTAINMENT EDITOR

One of my favorite past times is reading things that I truly want to, although I don't really have time anymore.

Reading, for me at least, helps me get away to another place and forget my troubles for a while. I had forgotten how much I enjoyed reading until one of my classes this year gave me a mandatory opportunity.

This semester I'm taking Literature for Children, which is not only demanding but also enlightening. One of the requirements of this course is to read a certain number of books for several different literature categories.

So far this semester, the class has discussed some of the different types of younger children's books. I've had the chance to re-read some of my childhood favorites and to discover some new ones. It really feels good to take a break from all the "college literature" that I have to take now and go back to the stories that gave me the initiative to read as a child.

Looking at the books that I read as a child, I wonder what it was that made me enjoy them so much. I guess I was content with just being able to read. Reading is something that I take for granted. With so many people who cannot read, I sometimes catch myself wondering where the children's books were when these people needed them.

Reading is a gift, a gift that should be used and then given to someone else. I guess it took an education class to make me more aware of it. Everyone should take some time and enjoy a book of his/her choosing or even dig up a favorite childhood story for old time's sake.

Don't get caught napping...

Blue Sox Festival set for next Friday night

by Katherine Bonner
STAFF WRITER

With Homecoming but a week away, it's time to start making plans. Will you go to the game with friends, or will you take a date? Where will you go out to dinner afterwards? Will you make plans to meet up PC alumni who are relatives or good friends of yours? Will you go out and find something to wear to the game? Will you vote for this representative or that one? Will you start off your Homecoming weekend right by going to the Blue Sox festival, or will you spend another Friday napping?

Ditch the nap idea because Blue Sox is an event you wouldn't want to miss! Held at 7:00 pm on the Friday of Homecoming weekend, the Blue Sox festival is a PC tradition and the first event of Homecoming.

Each year, campus organizations spend lots of time creating and practicing skits about PC and our Blue

Hose to present at the festival. This year's theme is "Fairy Tales," and the skits are sure to have you rolling in the aisles! Who knows, you might see that guy that sits behind you in Economics dressed as one of the Seven Dwarfs or the girl who checked your books out in the library skipping across the stage in a bright red cape with a basket of goodies in her arms. So don't sleep your Friday away; witness firsthand the creativity of your fellow students and start off Homecoming right!

The Blue Sox Festival will be held on Friday, October 15 at 7:00 pm in Belk Auditorium. The competition is open to any organization on campus that wishes to participate. The best skits win cash awards. For more information, contact a Student Union Board member or Heidi Gramling.

Dutch musical group to perform

by Dawn Banks
STAFF WRITER

Presbyterian College will host Quink, a Dutch quintet, on October 18, at 7:30 pm in Edmunds Hall. The concert will carry CEP credit.

Since their debut in the 1978 Holland Festival, Quink has captured the attention of audiences throughout the world with its distinctive styles of music, which include the repertoire: lieder, chansons, and contemporary 20th Century.

The group has been invited to perform at various international concerts, has had appearances on Dutch and German television stations, and has been selected as a finalist in the Netherlands National Music Competition.

The group has won high praise from music critics, including critics from the New York Times and Gramophone.

Due to the great success of its 1985 debut tour of the U.S., Quink now returns to America twice a year. PC was included in Quink's agenda this time around.

The members of Quink include Machteld Van Woerden, Marjolein Koetsier, Corrie Pronk, Harry Van Berne and Kees Jan de Koning.

SUB to present Scent of a Woman

by Kristina Pruitt
STAFF WRITER

The drama Scent of a Woman starring Al Pacino and Chris O'Donnell brings laughter, tears, and even several nail-biting situations. The movie is about a teenaged boy (Chris O'Donnell) who applies for a weekend job house/ grandfather sitting. The job turns out to be an adventurous weekend for the man and the boy. They both develop a friendship through a series of comical, emotional, and trying times.

If you would like to catch a glimpse of a great movie, the Student Union Board will be presenting Scent of a Woman on October 22, at 7:00 in Springs Campus Center. As always the movie is free of charge, so come on out!

Mocktails

presented by Panhellenic

Thursday, Oct. 21

from 11:00-2:00

in Springs

Drinks are free
All students welcome

NEVER TOO LATE.

Think you missed the Graduate Record Exam deadline? Think again! With the new on-demand GRE®, you could be taking the test tomorrow! And see your score the instant you finish. Score reports are mailed 10 to 15 days later, in plenty of time for most schools' deadlines. Call now for instant registration. Educational Testing Service

Sylvan Technology Centers®
Part of the Sylvan Learning Center Network

1-800-GRE-ASAP

SUB presents Blizzard of Bucks

by Camisha Clarke
STAFF WRITER

Why move to California to see Bob Barker or to win big money and prizes when the world's craziest game show is coming to this campus to bring those same things, with the exception of Bob Barker? Remain seated while the Student Union Board (SUB) takes you on a tour of the all new 1994 edition of the "Blizzard of Bucks" Crazy Game Show featuring the Incredible Money Machine.

On Monday, October 25, you and your friends may be competing in the wildest, craziest games ever for a chance to win cash and prizes. The repeated question and thought of the day appear to be, "What is the Blizzard of Bucks?" In response senior Marla Ramsey humorously says, "They drop a whole bunch of money on you like a blizzard." Junior Stephanie Edelkamp has described the Blizzard of Bucks as "a way to make lots of money very easily, quickly and somewhat unexpectedly." Although quick and easy may not be the case, each contestant does have an opportunity to compete in crazy competitions where the overall winner gets a chance to step inside the Incredible Money Machine and grab up to $500... in cash.

Trivial gameshow questions will not be the basis of this remarkable event. Contestants do not have to memorize the encyclopedia in order to be eligible. Also, they do not have to predict the most popular answer in a survey of 100 people that does not include them or have to guess the price of an item they will never use—not in the Blizzard of Bucks Crazy Game Show! All that the lucky contestants participating in this game show really need are a good sense of humor, an adventurous spirit, and simply a love for entertainment. Catching a ball in the sombrero on your head and sitting through a pie with only your tongue in search of bubble gum are only two of the possible adventurous competitions in which you or your friends may engage for a chance to go for the dough.

At 7:00 pm the show starts, and the 12 contestants are chosen randomly from the members of the audience who have submitted their "GO FOR THE DOUGH" tickets at the door. These tickets, located below, should be cut from this page, filled out and brought to Edmunds Hall at the time of the show if you wish to be in the drawing for contestants. All contestants will even receive a complimentary prize.

To insure the safety and progress of the contestants while in the money machine, they should be aware of the following rules:

1. Contestants must keep their feet together and stand in the position marked, facing forward.
2. Contestants must GRAB money. (i.e. Money cannot be trapped against body, sides or top of the machine.)
3. Contestant cannot pick up money off the floor or money adhering to the sides or top of the machine.
4. Contestants must wait for the bell to start grabbing money, and must stop when the bell is sounded again.
5. Contestants may kick or shuffle feet to loosen money on the floor.
6. Contestants win all the money they can

SUB will present the Blizzard of Bucks Game Show on October 25. file photo stuff into a bag before the buzzer rings.

The excitement and momentum of a standing-room-only crowd should make this the best SUB show ever. Do not miss this opportunity to see the "people you know make fools out of themselves," as freshman Robin Billington points out.

Interested in making a difference?

Amnesty International encourages you to help others by joining

Any student who would like to become a part of PC's Amnesty chapter should contact Dr. Terry Barr 2nd Floor - Neville (8373)

Campus & Clubs...

Pi Kappa Phi

This past summer at Pi Kappa College in Charleston, South Carolina, PC's Beta Chapter of Pi Kappa Phi was recognized for "outstanding efforts" during the past year. The chapter received the Champion Master Chapter Award for overall excellence; the Extra Mile Award for highest total contribution to PUSH ($23,215); the Diamond Star Award for raising over $10,000; and the Red Rose Award for doubling last year's contribution. Beta Chapter was ranked 2nd in the nation in highest contribution by a chapter.

Sigma Sigma Sigma

The Sisters of Sigma Sigma Sigma would like to congratulate their new initiates Elizabeth Cunard and Kathryn Elliot October 25-29. Sigma will sponsor "Share With A Child Week," which will include visits to local daycares, Whitten Center, and other locations. On October 30, Sigma will have its annual Halloween Roast.

FCA

PC's chapter of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes announces its calendar of events for October.

October 16 - Homecoming - "Chicken and all the fixins" with FCA Alumni in Crossroads after the football game

October 23 - Parent's Weekend - 2nd Annual FCA Parent's Weekend BBQ Buffet in Springs Gym after the football game

October 29-31 - FCA Fall Retreat - The topic of this year's retreat at Camp Marretta will be "Relationships"

Weekly meetings are held every Wednesday at 9:00 pm in Crossroads

Tune into Radio PC on Thursdays from 3-4:00 pm as your fellow FCAers play your favorite contemporary Christian songs.

Sigma Nu

Sigma Nu would like to congratulate its new pledges: Lucas Whitney, Buddy Riebel, Ty Pollak, Rob Alexander, and Ty Phillips. Sigma Nu claimed the highest GPA of all PC fraternities for the fourth consecutive semester.

Student Government Assoc.

The Student Government Association would like to announce the new Freshman Class officers: Catherine Bunch, President; Christina Giglio and Susan Haigler, Representatives. SGA would also like to remind everyone that elections for Homecoming Queen will be Friday, October 15. Please remember to vote and support your favorite candidate. If any student is interested in supporting the Presbyterian College United Way Campaign, contact SGA President Lauren Owings (8952) or Dr. Jack Presseau (8382).

Contemporary Christian recording artist to perform in Upstate

Christian artist Bruce Carroll will perform in Spartanburg on October 16.

by Michael McCall
PRESS RELEASE

Bruce Carroll's music prompts many labels. He's been described as an acoustic pop artist, a contemporary country singer, and an inspirational performer. But more than those genre-intensive monikers, terms such as "keenly intelligent," "sharply observant," and "emotionally moving" keep surfacing.

Carroll's fourth album, Sometime Miracles Hide, will continue to inspire listeners while confounding pundits. "I'm at a point now where the more I try to tell people what I am, the more confused people get," Carroll says with a laugh. "I just want to write great songs and sing them true to my own style. I think everything else will take care of itself. God is big, and He can certainly cross all of those lines."

Working for the first time with acclaimed producer Barry Bannister (Amy Grant, Paul Overstreet, Twila Paris, Kim Hill), Carroll says that his latest album is his fourth for Word Records and the first to be jointly distributed by Epic Records. Sometime Miracles Hide features 10 powerful musical statements by an exceptional performer and composer who combines lyrical stories and sublime music in a style all his own. Carroll also received some top-level input from famous guests, including Vince Gill, Ricky Skaggs, Paul Overstreet, Twila Paris, Kelly Willard, and fiddler extraordinaire Mark O'Connor. These guests underline the unique talents of Bruce Carroll and his strikingly provocative way of viewing modern life.

The electric nature of Carroll's music has not kept him from touching people—or from garnering prestigious awards from the music industry. He earned a Grammy Award in 1991 for his album The Great Exchange, and in 1989 he became the first recipient of the Gospel Music Association's Country Album of the Year award.

Through it all, Carroll's mission has remained the same. "It's so important to me that Christianity is at the center of what I do," he says. "Everything else is really secondary to my relationship with God."

Bruce Carroll will perform in concert at Evangel Cathedral in Spartanburg, South Carolina on Saturday, October 16 at 7:00 pm. Tickets are $10.50 for Gold seating, $6.50 for advance group (10 or more), $8.50 for advance individual, and $9.50 the day of the show.

Evangel Cathedral is located near the intersection of I-85 and I-26. Take exit 69 on I-85 going north or south. Tickets are available at select Christian bookstores. For more information call 803-292-6040.

file photo

BLIZZARD OF BUCKS!!!

GO FOR THE DOUGH!!!

(Please Print)

Name: _____

Address: _____

Bring this form to: Edmunds Hall

On: October 25, 1993

And you may be selected to stand inside the AMAZING MONEY MACHINE!!

THE BLUE STOCKING

"Give the people the light, so they may find the way."

Volume I XXXVIII Number 3

PRESBYTERIAN COLLEGE

Clinton, South Carolina 29325

October 29, 1993

Student questions why administration received 'AC' priority Long range plans to address air conditioning needs of campus dorms

by Kelley Perkins
STAFF WRITER

As the latest cold front sweeps in and students start unpacking their boxes of winter clothes, air conditioning may be the last thing on their minds.

However, many PC students are still remembering the months they spent sweating in their rooms because they happen to live in one of five campus facilities without air conditioning. Those five facilities include Bailey Hall, Doyle Hall, James House, Moorefield House and the Women's Social Hall.

In one student's mind, the air conditioning situation was complicated by the fact that the Smith Administration Building's window units were replaced recently with a form of central air before his dorm received any attention. "The student, who is a resident of Bailey Hall and wished to remain anonymous, said, 'There is no problem with the air conditioning in our dorm. We just don't have it.'"

The student reports that he has been complaining about the lack of air conditioning for the last three years. His complaints, he feels, have fallen on deaf ears. "I think the administration's basic view is that Bailey Hall is a freshman dorm, and they just don't care," he said.

A Bailey Hall resident beats the heat with a window fan. photo by Kim Gibson

PC's administration, however, responded that they do care.

"I would love to see Bailey and the other dorms air conditioned," said Andy Altizer, director of residence life. Altizer reports that air conditioning for Bailey is in the college's five year long range plan.

As for Doyle, "I hope that building is bulldozed in the next five years," said Altizer.

Skip Zubrod, PC's vice president of finance, confirmed that the addition of central air for Bailey Hall is in the college's future plans.

"Part of the current long range plan does concern upgrading facilities in which students are housed - of which Bailey is included," said Zubrod.

As for the James House, Moorefield House, and Women's Social Hall, Zubrod replied, "We are looking at upgrading all the current residential facilities. We are even looking at building a new facility of some kind. That facility could be an apartment complex, a senior village, or an addition to the Barron and Grotnes complex."

"We want to get the students out of Mayes, Doyle, and the various houses," added Zubrod.

As for the administration building taking priority over the students, Zubrod says that isn't true.

"Placing central air in Smith was a cost-saving move. It will pay for itself in two and a half years. Putting central air in Smith cost about $20,000. Putting air in Bailey will cost about $400,000," said Zubrod.

Zubrod further stated that the newer window units which were replaced in the administration building will be used to replace older units around campus, such as the ones in Douglas House.

On The Inside

Page 2 . . .

New Spencer Hall construction set for next semester.

Page 6 - 7 . . .

You are what you eat: Everything you always wanted to know about Greenville Dining Hall.

Page 11 . . .

Watusi Rodeo to perform at annual Fall Fling.

PC Royalty

Despite overcast skies, senior Kathleen Dowd is nothing but smiles as she is named the 1993 PC Homecoming Queen. Escorted by Alton Dowd, her father, Kathleen was sponsored by Zeta Tau Alpha Sorority.

photo by Steve Owens

PC— Tidbits

SGA Silent Auction held

The Student Government Association conducted its First Annual Silent Auction over Parents Weekend and successfully raised over $2000 by auctioning off various novelty items. Donations ranged from Charlotte Hornets tickets to hotel accommodations at the Atlanta Marriott Marquis. "The Council would like to express its sincere appreciation to all contributors and patrons of the auction," said Lauren Owings, SGA President.

Midnight Madness set to kick off basketball season

The 1993-94 Men's basketball team will kick off its season with the Second Annual Hoops and Halloween Midnight Madness in Templeton Center tonight.

According to Men's Head Coach Greg Nibert, the evening will be filled with activities. Doors open at 11:30 pm and at 11:45 pm there will be a $5,000 shootout. At Midnight, the Blue Hose team will be introduced to the public. At 12:10 am, the team will conduct a 15 minute scrimmage game.

Students are encouraged to come to the event dressed in their favorite Halloween costume. A $25 cash prize will be awarded to the male and female with the wildest costume. Also, a $100 prize will be awarded to the "most enthusiastic group in attendance. In addition, free Pepsi, popcorn and coffee will be available.

Nibert encourages all students, faculty, and staff to attend the Midnight Madness event and support the Blue Hose.

Flu shots made available

According to Joe Nixon, dean of students, Presbyterian College will make flu shots available this year.

"The college-age population is not a high-risk group and mass inoculations are not necessary," said Nixon. "However, several students have expressed an interest in getting a flu shot, so the college is going to provide the opportunity."

Students who wish to get a flu shot should call Reynolds Health Center (8400) by 3:00 pm today. The shots will be given at one of the local doctors' offices next week. Participants will be contacted next week about the time and the date. The cost of the shots are $15.

Spencer Hall construction set for Spring of '94 New building to feature state-of-the-art classrooms

by Jason West
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF
(contributed to by Nhien Nguyen)

If you haven't noticed the empty space four seminar rooms, a computer lab, an amphitheatre, and an outdoor lecture area. In with two classrooms that will be open to students at night.

This building is PC's attempt at constructing a state-of-the-art academic facility. The building will be built with the latest equipment and will have the capacity for future upgrading," said Zubrod.

However, the building will not be completely new. Some remains of the old Spencer Hall will make their way into the new structure.

"We saved the four front columns of the old building so that they could be used on the new structure. In addition, we saved several thousand bricks from the old building to use, as well. The bricks and columns will give the building a sense of history and tradition," said Zubrod.

Hall goes according to plan, construction for the new Spencer will begin in the Spring of '94.

"Hopefully, we can begin construction in late spring of next semester. That all depends on if we have the funding for the project. Construction time will take anywhere from 15 to 18 months. So, if we get started next spring, the building will probably open in the fall of '95," said Zubrod.

The new Spencer Hall will look very similar to the old building.

file photo

between Georgia Hall and Jacobs Hall, take heed. According to officials of the college, that space will not be empty much longer.

This past summer, the former Spencer Hall, which sat on the now empty lot next to Jacobs, was demolished to make room for a new $4 million academic center.

Previously, Spencer, built in 1914, had served Presbyterian College as a male residence hall. It was closed in the spring of 1990, after being declared "unsafe."

The new building, which will occupy the vacant lot, is going to resemble the old Spencer. "The new academic center, which will also be named Spencer Hall, is going to be remarkably similar to the old building," said Skip Zubrod, PC's vice president of finance.

"The building will be four stories tall and will have 39,340 square feet. We intend to place the psychology, sociology, political science, mathematics, and education departments in the new structure," said Zubrod.

Zubrod reports that the new Spencer Hall will have 14 classrooms, 44 faculty offices in addition, the building will house a couple of special psychology labs and will be equipped

The old Spencer Hall took less than one day to demolish. The demolition took place during the past summer.

photos: Anne Crook

Hickory Hills Bar-B-Que
Old Laurens Rd.
Clinton, SC 29325
833-2690

"Carolinda's Finest"

Attention All PC Students!
Take A Bar-B-Que Break!
All PC students receive a 10% discount on our dining buffet every Thursday night with valid ID.
"All You Care To Eat!"

The Episcopal Church Especially Welcomes Students
+ ALL SAINTS' EPISCOPAL CHURCH
One Block North of Broadway (between Hall)

Sunday Services:
8:30 & 10:00am Holy Eucharist
11:00am Fellowship (open to all)
11:45am College Students' Devotion (open to all)

Monday Evenings:
9:00 pm CANTERBURY (in Douglas House)

Need someone to talk to?
The Rev. Michael J. Kline, Rector, 807 College Ave.
(800) 888-1111 (toll-free) or (803) 785-1111 (local)

'I didn't dream of coming to the United States...'

Visiting scholar from India to spend year at PC

by Brian Parrish
STAFF WRITER

What images fill your mind when someone mentions India? For most people it is probably thoughts of the Taj Mahal, Arabian Nights, snake charmers, or even magic carpets and genies.

However, for Rita Jacobs Chertan, known to her American friends as Rita, the mention of India conjures up fond images of her family, home, and career. Rita, who is from Madras, India, is Presbyterian College's visiting scholar for this academic year.

Rita came to PC from the Women's Christian College of Madras, where she has been a professor of English for 25 years. She holds a master's and a master of philosophy degree in English.

According to Rita, her home college in Madras is approximately the size of PC, but only has women faculty and students.

Rita's life in India does not just revolve around her work. She is also a mother and wife. Her husband Jacob Chertan, who is an account executive in Madras, and she have an 18 year-old son named Sushil and an eight year-old daughter named Sarah Grace.

When asked how she became interested in coming to the United States, Rita humorously replies that initially she had no interest.

"I did not dream of coming to the United States! I thought my life was a settled one—teaching college and looking after my family. However, things changed suddenly," she said. Rita's college president asked her to apply

Rita Jacobs Chertan, a visiting scholar from India, is slowly becoming adjusted to life in small town America.

photos by Kim Gibson

to the United Board for Christian Higher Education in Asia in order to come to America. She said that request put her in a real dilemma. "I knew that going to the US would mean a year of personal enrichment, but it would also mean that my family would have to manage without me and that I would be away from them for nine whole months. I have never been away from my family for more than a week. However, after talking it over at home, my family felt that I should apply to come to America," said Rita.

So far, Rita's visit to the US and to PC has not produced any major culture shocks. "The biggest adjustment I have had to get use to is greeting everyone I meet. In India, you really only greet the people that you know well and not everyone that you pass on the sidewalk," she said.

Another adjustment Rita has had to make is coming to a land of plenty from a land of inadequacy. "Electricity, water, food, and technological advancements are all very abundant here in this country," she said.

Since coming to PC, Rita has noticed that the American classroom is more informal than its counterpart in India. "Students in America are more vocal and express their views with absolute self-confidence. In India, only a few students are willing to take a stand and argue a point," she said.

"While at PC this year, I would like to meet and talk with as many people as possible so that their concepts of India and my concepts of America will become more concrete and definite," said Rita.

"My best experience at PC so far has been the kindness and graciousness that I have witnessed. Various people have helped to make my life comfortable and happy," she added.

PC administrator meets with Secretary of Education

Press Release
OFFICE OF PUBLIC RELATIONS

When Presbyterian College administrator Margaret Williamson and two other members of the National Association of College Admission Counselors (NACAC) met with US Secretary of Education Dick Riley recently, they sought to discuss Riley's vision of the role of counseling in the nation's schools and colleges.

They were not disappointed with what they heard. "Our conversation with Secretary Riley was very informative and productive," said Williamson, vice president for enrollment and dean of admissions at Presbyterian College. "It is clear that he has a national perspective on educational issues, yet because of his experiences he understands the restraints and concerns on the local level. I hope he will continue to push education issues to the forefront of the administration's agenda."

Williamson, president-elect of NACAC, was joined by executive director Frank Burtnett and president Cleve Latham at the meeting, during which Riley stressed the importance of counselors' roles in the nation's schools.

"We very much support high academic standards and achievement for all students and the teaching-learning aspect of education," Riley said. "Helping students positively deal with the transition from school to college or from school to career is terribly important, and we are proposing a number of initiatives to improve the transition from secondary to postsecondary and from school to work."

Riley also commented on the role of counselors in the Clinton Administration's Goals 2000. Educate America Act and the Elementary and Secondary Education Act, two bills which are currently on Capitol Hill.

"The Goals 2000: Educate America Act is the administration's centerpiece. It defines a partnership for the federal role in K-12 education and sets nationwide goals," Riley said. "The reauthorization of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act has certain priorities established, and the key concepts behind the two bills do work together.

"The concepts that are prioritized involve high standards and student achievement and professional development experiences for educators to help students meet these high standards. One type of tool available to counselors in both proposals, which is our recommendation as passed on from the President, calls for strong professional development support for all educators. I would certainly perceive that this includes counselors, and the very important role played by counselors in both of these acts."

NACAC is an education association of secondary school counselors, college admission officers, financial aid officers, and other students who work with students as they make the transition from secondary school to college. Founded in 1937, the association currently has a membership of more than 5,500 institutions and individuals, representing secondary schools and colleges in all 50 states and several foreign countries.

PROTECT YOURSELF AND YOUR BABY FROM AIDS

FIND OUT ABOUT DRUGS, SEX
AND AIDS
CALL 1-800-322-AIDS

POINT

Tasty meals at GDH come less often than a full moon Dining hall staff should make every effort to improve service

It seems that the old army motto, "Be all that you can be," can be applied to almost anything—even a dining hall.

It would appear to the staff of the Blue Stocking that Greenville Dining Hall (GDH) would do well to heed to that old army motto.

It's not that GDH is the worst dining hall to be found on a college campus. Quite simply, it is not. In fact, GDH does a pretty good job of providing PC students with nutritional meals at a reasonable price.

However, the fact remains that each boarding student at PC pays $1730 a year for the privilege to dine at GDH, and consequently, has the right to demand the utmost quality for each dollar.

We at the Blue Stocking, like any average student, accept that under no circumstances will every meal that is served in the dining hall be a favorite. Not even Mom can accomplish that feat. Every so often, though, one likes to leave the dining hall with the warm, fuzzy feeling that accompanies being fully contented by a delicious meal.

It is our opinion that delicious meals at GDH come less often than full moons. We believe that PC students are tired of three choices of "fried" meats, a baked potato bar that doesn't keep potatoes hot, a salad bar with chunks in the dressings, croutons that are soft instead of crunchy, and a vegetarian bar with meat.

We would like to see a dining hall that provides students with healthy foods, such as grilled chicken and broiled fish. (Oh sure, GDH does serve these dishes, but it would be nice to have them more than once a month.)

We would like to see a dining hall with a full-time, certified nutritionist, who can provide expertise in planning a wide variety of healthy and delicious menus.

We would like to see a dining hall that provides its students with more ethnic foods, a sandwich bar with more than peanut butter and jelly, and for once, we would like to eat a meal that didn't include a side dish of mashed potatoes and gravy.

Don't get us wrong. We are not arbitrarily "fussing" at Vernon

Powell and his GDH staff. We appreciate the difficult job he performs. Indeed, Powell has proven that given the right occasion and motivation, such as Parents Weekend or a Senior Visitation Day, he and his staff can prepare commendable food.

It should not be an issue of taste versus nutrition or variety versus quality. The staff of GDH is comprised of paid professionals whose responsibility is to provide the best food possible at every meal of every day. Surely, this needs to be the ultimate goal of GDH, not just simply filling the empty stomachs of PC students with anything it can get its hands on.

The need for improvement is unquestionable. Admittedly, the food could be worse, but as long as students pay such a large sum of money to GDH, the right to ask of nothing less than the best remains.

The Blue Stocking staff encourages all students to be proactive rather than reactive. By voicing concerns directly to the staff of GDH, we can all work toward a more ideal dining situation.

Sidewalk Talk

What is your opinion of the food service in Greenville Dining Hall?

Anna Hunt
sophomore

"My friends and I were in line and the GDH man opened the coffee maker and cockroaches were crawling all inside. All he said was, 'Ohhhhh!'"

Karen Sharper
junior

"I feel that the food in GDH is better than some other institutions. It could be worse. Thank goodness for it."

Bob Struck, Chairman
Physical Ed. Dept.

"I think as far as nutritional food goes, it's improving (feeding) a family. Like with this, would it make a difference in health?"

Letters to the Editor Letters to the Editor Letters to the Editor Letters to the Editor Letters to the Editor

Student feels that drunkenness is not an exercise in 'sound judgment'

Dear Editor,

Your October 7 issue had an article containing an opinion about the Clinton City Ordinance about drinking. Overall, I agree that it was foolish to arrest someone trying to avoid driving home drunk. The individual might have saved not only his or her life, but that of an innocent bystander as well. The individual involved should be congratulated for getting a sober driver.

However, the article states at one point that, "People should not be punished for exercising sound judgment." When one applies this statement to getting a designated driver, it's a sound statement. But, I must ask if getting drunk is exercising sound judgment. To me, it's not. I can't claim I've never been drunk. Still, when one gets down to the basics, getting drunk is unsound judgment.

At the heart of this issue is not designated drivers or obscure city laws. The issue is drinking too much. Drunkenness is against the law in some form everywhere. Looking to PC policy, turn to page 19 in the Knapsack under "Standards of Proper Conduct" and see what the printed policy is.

There are provisions that recognize that people will drink and basic rules are set down to curb abuse and problems. However, there is one part that is extremely important. It reads as follows: "Drunkenness as a result of the use of alcohol is a violation of the alcohol policy and punishable through the Judicial System. Mature judgment and discretion are required at all times."

I wrote this letter not to condemn the individual that set off this incident. Indeed, I applaud the individual for getting the designated driver. However, let us not be sidetracked by statements that the police are harassing students and the like. They only distract us from the real issue of drinking too much.

Your article concludes, "The Clinton City Police should stop harassing PC students for being safe and responsible." Being safe and responsible means avoiding getting drunk in the first place. Getting drunk only gives you a brief high. Other than that, all the rest of the effects are negative.

Let us learn from this incident that one's actions do have ramifications.

Getting drunk is certainly bound to attract trouble. Blaming others for your own lack of good judgment is only avoiding the issue. Honor demands that we confront the issue head on, not sidetrack it with fiery rhetoric or make excuses.

Sincerely,

Christopher R. Phelps
Sophomore

The Blue Stocking encourages all members of the PC community to express their opinions about matters concerning the campus and the world. If you have an opinion and would like to share it, you can send your letter by campus mail to PC Box 1061.

Letters to the editor must be signed and are subject to grammatical revisions. Letters must be turned into the newspaper office one week prior to publication.

My Turn

Mrs. Wells and Mrs. Johnson are like 'grandma's away from home'

by Jason West
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

It may seem that this issue of the Blue Stocking is devoted in large part to Greenville Dining Hall. In fact, some may even go so far as to say that this issue of the Blue Stocking is devoted entirely to "GDH bashing."

That is simply not the case. Believe it or not, there are some things that I dearly love about the dining hall. For example, I think that the Blue Ladies add a unique touch to the life of this campus.

It's kind of nice to have a "grandmotherly" figure to see to it that I eat all my vegetables and fuss at me if it looks like I haven't been studying as much as I should. (It's also nice to have a friendly Blue Lady put a little extra portion of a good meal on my plate.)

When I was a freshman, I had the good fortune of being taken under the wing of two very special Blue Ladies: Mrs. Clara Wells and Mrs. Walter Johnson. Mrs. Wells and Mrs. Johnson usually work the breakfast shift at GDH and have always greeted me with a smile and a warm hello.

From the very first day I walked on this campus, they have constantly inquired about my family, my grades, and my college activities. In addition, they have wished me well on my exams, have offered advice when I was feeling sick, have wished me a safe trip home on breaks and vacations, and have always greeted me with a hug when I returned.

Mrs. Wells and Mrs. Johnson have taken a genuine interest in me and for that I am grateful. They are my "grandma's" away from home and have both added a little extra meaning to my college years.

THE BLUE STOCKING

Presbyterian College, Clinton, South Carolina 29325

Volume LXXXVIII Number 3, October 29, 1993

Editor-in-Chief: Jason West
Managing Editor: Lauren Owens
News Editor: Tobin Turner
Sports Editor: Everett Catts
Entertainment Editor: Kim Rabon
Features Editor: Brian Sacco
Computer Design Editor: Todd Love
Photography Editor: Kim Gibson
Layout Editor: Angela Richardson
Staff Artist: Michael Christensen
Staff Advisor: Dr. Neal B. Pinder

Staff Writers:
Denise Lynn Hill
Charles Smith
Dawn Banks
Kim Wood
Kymira Penn
Kathleen Bourne
Karen O'Connor
Margaret Ellen Pender
Alison Nicole Burnett
David Miller
Photographers: Ron Galtier, Brooke Pittman

The Blue Stocking is a weekly student publication of Presbyterian College. The paper is generally a balanced news and opinion column and national concern. For advertising contact: The Blue Stocking, Presbyterian College, Box 1061, Clinton, SC 29325. The Blue Stocking reserves the right to refuse any advertisement. The Blue Stocking is published on a weekly basis. The Blue Stocking reserves the right to refuse any advertisement. The Blue Stocking reserves the right to refuse any advertisement. The Blue Stocking reserves the right to refuse any advertisement.

POINT

Tasty meals at GDH come less often than a full moon Dining hall staff should make every effort to improve service

It seems that the old army motto, "Be all that you can be," can be applied to almost anything - even a dining hall.

It would appear to the staff of the Blue Stocking that Greenville Dining Hall (GDH) would do well to heed to that old army motto.

It's not that GDH is the worst dining hall to be found on a college campus. Quite simply, it is not. In fact, GDH does a pretty good job of providing PC students with nutritional meals at a reasonable price.

However, the fact remains that each boarding student at PC pays $1730 a year for the privilege to dine at GDH, and consequently, has the right to demand the utmost quality for each dollar.

We at the Blue Stocking, like any average student, accept that under no circumstances will every meal that is served in the dining hall be a favorite. Not even Mom can accomplish that feat. Every so often, though, one likes to leave the dining hall with the warm, fuzzy feeling that accompanies being fully contented by a delicious meal.

It is our opinion that delicious meals at GDH come less often than full moons. We believe that PC students are tired of three choices of "fried" meats, a baked potato bar that doesn't keep potatoes hot, a salad bar with chunks in the dressings, croutons that are soft instead of crunchy, and a vegetarian bar with meat.

We would like to see a dining hall that provides students with healthy foods, such as grilled chicken and broiled fish. (Oh sure, GDH does serve these dishes, but it would be nice to have them more than once a month.)

We would like to see a dining hall with a full-time, certified nutritionist, who can provide expertise in planning a wide variety of healthy and delicious menus.

We would like to see a dining hall that provides its students with more ethnic foods, a sandwich bar with more than peanut butter and jelly, and for once, we would like to eat a meal that didn't include a side dish of mashed potatoes and gravy.

Don't get us wrong. We are not arbitrarily "tussing" at Vernon

Powell and his GDH staff. We appreciate the difficult job he performs. Indeed, Powell has proven that given the right occasion and motivation, such as Parents Weekend or a Senior Visitation Day, he and his staff can prepare commendable food.

It should not be an issue of taste versus nutrition or variety versus quality. The staff of GDH is comprised of paid professionals, whose responsibility is to provide the best food possible at every meal of every day. Surely, this needs to be the ultimate goal of GDH, not just simply filling the empty stomachs of PC students with anything it can get its hands on.

The need for improvement is unquestionable. Admittedly, the food could be worse, but as long as students pay such a large sum of money to GDH, the right to ask of nothing less than the best remains.

The Blue Stocking staff encourages all students to be proactive rather than reactive. By voicing concerns directly to the staff of GDH, we can all work towards a more ideal dining situation.

Sidewalk Talk

What is your opinion of the food service in Greenville Dining Hall?

My friends and I were in line and the GDH man opened the coffee maker and cockroaches were crawling all inside. All he said was, "Ohhhhh."

Anna Hunt
sophomore

I feel that the food in GDH is better than some other institutions. It could be worse. Thank goodness it isn't.

Karen Sharper
junior

I think as far as the food service it is superior to other schools. I do wish they could decrease the price of the food.

Bob Struck, Chairman
Physical Ed. Dept.

Letters to the Editor Letters to the Editor Letters to the Editor Letters to the Editor Letters to the Editor

Student feels that drunkenness is not an exercise in 'sound judgment'

Dear Editor,

Your October 7 issue had an article containing an opinion about the Clinton City Ordinance about drinking. Overall, I agree that it was foolish to arrest someone trying to avoid driving home drunk. The individual might have saved not only his or her life, but that of an innocent bystander as well. The individual involved should be congratulated for getting a sober driver.

However, the article states at one point that, "People should not be punished for exercising sound judgment." When one applies this statement to getting a designated driver, it's a sound statement. But, I must ask if getting drunk is exercising sound judgment. To me, it's not. I can't claim I've never been drunk. Still, when one gets down to the basics, getting drunk is unsound judgment.

At the heart of this issue is not designated drivers or obscure city laws. The issue is drinking too much. Drunkenness is against the law in some form everywhere. Looking to PC policy, turn to page 19 in the Knapsack under "Standards of Proper Conduct" and see what the printed policy is.

There are provisions that recognize that people will drink and basic rules are set down to curb abuse and problems. However, there is one part that is extremely important. It reads as follows: "Drunkenness as a result of the use of alcohol is a violation of the alcohol policy and punishable through the Judicial System. Mature judgment and discretion are required at all times."

I wrote this letter not to condemn the individual that set off this incident. Indeed, I applaud the individual for getting the designated driver. However, let us not be sidetracked by statements that the police are harassing students and the like. They only distract us from the real issue of drinking too much.

Your article concludes, "The Clinton City Police should stop harassing PC students for being safe and responsible." Being safe and responsible means avoiding getting drunk in the first place. Getting drunk only gives you a brief high. Other than that, all the rest of the effects are negative.

Let us learn from this incident that one's actions do have ramifications.

Getting drunk is certainly bound to attract trouble. Blaming others for your own lack of good judgment is only avoiding the issue. Honor demands that we confront the issue head on, not sidetrack it with fiery rhetoric or make excuses.

Sincerely,

Christopher R. Phelps
Sophomore

The Blue Stocking encourages all members of the PC community to express their opinions about matters concerning the campus and the world. If you have an opinion and would like to share it, you can send your letter by campus mail to PC Box 1061.

Letters to the editor must be signed and are subject to grammatical revisions. Letters must be turned into the newspaper office one week prior to publication.

My Turn

Mrs. Wells and Mrs. Johnson are like 'grandma's away from home'

by Jason West
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

It may seem that this issue of the Blue Stocking is devoted in large part to Greenville Dining Hall. In fact, some may even go so far as to say that this issue of the Blue Stocking is devoted entirely to "GDH bashing."

That is simply not the case. Believe it or not, there are some things that I dearly love about the dining hall. For example, I think that the Blue Ladies add a unique touch to the life of this campus.

It's kind of nice to have a "grandmotherly" figure to see to it that I eat all my vegetables and fuss at me if it looks like I haven't been studying as much as I should. (It's also nice to have a friendly Blue Lady put a little extra portion of a good meal on my plate.)

When I was a freshman, I had the good fortune of being taken under the wing of two very special Blue Ladies: Mrs. Clara Wells and Mrs. Walter Johnson. Mrs. Wells and Mrs. Johnson usually work the breakfast shift at GDH and have always greeted me with a smile and a warm hello.

From the very first day I walked on this campus, they have constantly inquired about my family, my grades, and my college activities. In addition, they have wished me well on my exams, have offered advice when I was feeling sick, have wished me a safe trip home on breaks and vacations, and have always greeted me with a hug when I returned.

Mrs. Wells and Mrs. Johnson have taken a genuine interest in me and for that I am grateful. They are my "grandmas" away from home and have both added a little extra meaning to my college years.

THE BLUE STOCKING

Presbyterian College - Clinton, South Carolina 29325
Volume LXXXVIII Number 3, October 29, 1993

Editor in Chief	Jason West	Staff Writers	Grav Fessing
Managing Editor	Lauren Owens		Nicholas Smith
News Editor	Tobin Turner		Kelley Perkins
Sports Editor	Everett Carr		Camisha Clark
Entertainment Editor	Kim Rabon		Jonny Sneed
Features Editor	Brian Sacco		Brittani Parrish
Computer Design Editor	Todd Love		Lauren Jones
Photography Editor	Kim Gibson		Christy Gail
Layout Editor	Angela Richardson		David Miller
Staff Artist	Michael Christensen		Brooke Peterson
Staff Advisor	Dr. Neil B. Paine

The Blue Stocking is a bi-weekly student publication of Presbyterian College. The paper serves as a forum of news and opinions of campus and national concern. For advertising contact: The Blue Stocking, Presbyterian College Box 1061, Clinton, SC 29325. The Blue Stocking will consider letters to the editor from all members of the PC community. Submitters are requested to please send letters to the editor, signed and dated. The Blue Stocking reserves the right to edit all material for proper grammar and punctuation. The final deadline for submitting letters is Tuesday 4:00 p.m. for the next issue.

Gravy Guru: Vernon Powell beginning 31st year at Greenville Dining Hall

Vernon Powell and Ray Bell plan a week's menu.
photo by Jason West

by Kim Wood
STAFF WRITER

Although Vernon Powell is currently involved in his 31st year as director of food services for Presbyterian College, he can still recall getting his start in the food service industry "at his mother's knee."

In addition to what he learned from his mother, he took home economics in high school, studied food services in college, and did "apprentice type work" involving the production, preservation, cooking, and serving of food.

Powell's career has included teaching food service for two years as a quartermaster in the army, serving in the field as an army wouldn't even get you to Christmas these days," said Powell. Powell left PC in 1960 and then returned in 1977 and has been here ever since. "It is my job to 'orchestrate the whole operation [of GDH]. I do the majority of the purchasing, and I am personally involved in a large part of the catering menus, and oversee the menus for the students dining at GDH," he said.

Over the years, Powell has seen a number of changes on campus and in food service operation.

"Colleges became a great deal more competitive after the 60's as they all began to try to recruit the same top students. Dining halls, in turn, became more competitive also," commented Powell.

"The first thing I did when I returned in 1977 was to install salad bars (those currently in GDH are the originals, but new ones are on order and are due to arrive soon)," said Powell.

Over the years, he has also added ice cream machines, hot bars, "lite" bars, and (at the suggestion of a student) the ever-popular peanut butter and jelly sandwich tables.

"We try to be as responsive as possible to people's needs and ideas," Powell said. "We don't like being seen as the enemy. We're not the enemy. We enjoy talking with people, and if it's at all possible we try to provide [what students request]."

One problem that Powell says he runs into when trying to fulfill student requests is the lack of money. "It helps if the students' suggestions are budget friendly," he said.

"If a student has some requests, I will be

"You are what you eat"

Dietician says that GDH meets 'adequate' nutritional standards

by Brian Sacco
FEATURES EDITOR

Do you ever wonder if what you are eating in Greenville Dining Hall (GDH) is nutritionally sound?

In an effort to improve the quality and dietary allowances of the food served at GDH, the administration of Presbyterian College has ventured into the field of nutritional consulting by acquiring the services of Lori Kent.

Kent, a registered dietician in the state of South Carolina, is presently employed by Self Memorial Hospital in Greenwood as the manager of the dietary department. She has assumed consulting duties for GDH and Presbyterian College in addition to her regular employment.

Kent's duties as consultant for PC involve analyzing the menus at GDH for their dietary value as set by the federal government's Recommended Daily Allowances. The menus are prepared every day by Vernon Powell, director of food service, and his staff.

Kent says she finds her work as a consultant to PC very interesting. "It is challenging to satisfy the multiple number of needs and choices of the students who dine in GDH," she said.

According to Kent, the most important aspect in preparing meals for a college dining hall is to provide a main entree containing both amounts of iron, while at the same time providing sufficient amounts of "properly and healthily cooked" vegetables. In addition, she stressed the fact that there must be variety in the meals that are served.

It is important that the dining hall staff attempt to consider every food preference, from the deep fried Southern diner to the strict vegetarian diet," said Kent.

Kent was complimentary of the efforts the dining hall was making in satisfying the student consumption desires on the PC campus but commented that there is room for much improvement.

The dining hall needs to make an effort to eliminate foods high in fat and to use different methods of cooking vegetables, along with different varieties of greens," said Kent.

"An individual's diet has a great deal to do with the kinds of food served, but part of the responsibility of good nutrition lies with the individual."

Kent says she believes that for the most part, GDH meals meet the minimum standards for good health.

"Overall, Mr. Powell and his staff make an adequate effort to adhere to the nutritional value guidelines," she said.

Food committee to hear student suggestions

by Brian Sacco
FEATURES EDITOR

The purpose of a dining hall on today's college campus is to serve the growing needs and changing eating habits of today's students.

With the expanding number of different cultural and ethnic diets appearing all over the country at different campuses, food service managers must combat the growing change with new and innovative methods of providing nutritional meals.

In an effort to understand the changing attitudes of student dining, the PC Student Government Association (SGA) formed a food committee several years ago. The food committee is charged with communicating the ideas and suggestions of the student body to the administration and to Vernon Powell, director of food service, and his staff. This year, the SGA food committee is chaired by Dallas Olson.

According to Olson, the food committee has encountered numerous difficulties in the last few months in coordinating and communicating opinions to Powell and his staff.

"Landon Westbrook, last year's food committee chairperson, placed a suggestion box in GDH for student response with 'Edible Suggestible' sheets attached to it. The box disappeared shortly thereafter. Westbrook questioned Powell about the disappearance of the box. Several weeks later, the box returned, only without the 'Edible Suggestible' sheets," said Olson.

Powell refutes that story. "Two years ago I placed 'Edible Suggestible' sheets in the dining hall, but they received little written response," he said.

Olson went on to say that last February, Westbrook sent a letter directly to Dr. Orr with suggestions concerning the food served in GDH and even went so far as to present the name of a clinical nutritionist who was willing to do consulting work for the dining hall.

When questioned about the letter to Orr, Powell explained he had never seen or heard of this letter.

The college did follow Westbrook's recommendation for hiring a dietary consultant. When asked about the process the administration and the dining hall followed when selecting Lori Kent, the new registered dietician for GDH, Powell said, "She was just someone I knew."

Olson hopes to end some of the communication problems that have existed in the past between his committee and the GDH staff. His group plans to hold a forum next month.

"The food committee will be holding an open forum for the entire student body in order to allow students to voice their opinions and suggestions. We will in turn organize and submit these ideas to Mr. Powell and the GDH staff," said Olson.

The food forum is scheduled for 9:00 pm on November 22 in Springs Campus Center.

The Blue Ladies strike a familiar pose in GDH, serving dinner with a smile.

photo by Reid Collins

Women's soccer team finishes season ranked third in conference

by Everett Catts
SPORTS EDITOR

With a 12-4 overall record (5-2 SAC) the women's soccer team heads into the postseason after finishing third in the SAC-8 regular season behind Catawba and Elon.

After beating Lenoir-Rhyne on October 5, the Lady Blue Hose crushed Wingate 5-0. Missy Butler had two goals and Charity Brazeal, Heather Fredrick, and Nicki Soderberg scored one each. On October 9 PC lost to Catawba 1-0. The game was scoreless until Catawba scored on a penalty kick with four minutes left in the game.

Following fall break the Lady Hose defeated Gardner-Webb 2-1. Fredrick and Renee Bevil scored for PC. On October 15 the women's team destroyed Mars Hill 5-0. Soderberg, Fredrick, Kathleen Dowd, Cobi Shafe, and Carey Bailey scored in the victory. Missy Butler and Rebecca Hardman recorded assists, and Emily Campbell got her third shutout of the year. On October 20 the Lady Blue Hose hosted Coker, the team that defeated PC in the District Semifinals last year. Coming into the game, Coker was undefeated and ranked sixteenth in the NAIA. PC won 2-1 in overtime, as Hardman got the game-winner on a penalty kick. Butler had PC's other goal.

The following day the Lady Blue Hose travelled to Charlotte, NC, to play Queens, ranked fifteenth in Division II. After spotting the Royals two goals in the first half, PC rallied. Charity Brazeal's header off Lisa Becker's serve cut the lead in half. The Lady Blue Hose tied the score in the second half when Hardman's header trickled in past Queens' goalkeeper. PC shut out the Royals but also failed to score again, forcing overtime. In the first overtime neither team scored. With five minutes left in the second overtime, Kathleen Dowd kicked one in off Brazeal's assist, giving PC the lead. Two minutes later the same tandem hooked up for another goal to give the Lady Hose the victory.

On Saturday, October 23 PC hosted SAC foe Elon. After the Fighting Christians took a 1-0 lead, the Lady Hose tied the score on Carey Bailey's penalty kick. At halftime the score was tied 1-1, but in the second half Elon scored two more times and won 3-1.

On Tuesday, October 26 PC hosted Carson-Newman in the first round of the SAC Tournament. The results were not available at press time. If the Lady Hose won, they will play tomorrow at home at 2:00 against either Catawba or Wingate.

Head Coach Brian Purcell commented on hosting the tournament, saying, "It will be different. It's been at Catawba for the past two years and the games were at night."

Head Coach Brian Purcell commented on hosting the tournament, saying, "It will be different. It's been at Catawba for the past two years and the games were at night."

Head Coach Brian Purcell commented on hosting the tournament, saying, "It will be different. It's been at Catawba for the past two years and the games were at night."

Head Coach Brian Purcell commented on hosting the tournament, saying, "It will be different. It's been at Catawba for the past two years and the games were at night."

Head Coach Brian Purcell commented on hosting the tournament, saying, "It will be different. It's been at Catawba for the past two years and the games were at night."

Head Coach Brian Purcell commented on hosting the tournament, saying, "It will be different. It's been at Catawba for the past two years and the games were at night."

Head Coach Brian Purcell commented on hosting the tournament, saying, "It will be different. It's been at Catawba for the past two years and the games were at night."

Head Coach Brian Purcell commented on hosting the tournament, saying, "It will be different. It's been at Catawba for the past two years and the games were at night."

Head Coach Brian Purcell commented on hosting the tournament, saying, "It will be different. It's been at Catawba for the past two years and the games were at night."

Head Coach Brian Purcell commented on hosting the tournament, saying, "It will be different. It's been at Catawba for the past two years and the games were at night."

Head Coach Brian Purcell commented on hosting the tournament, saying, "It will be different. It's been at Catawba for the past two years and the games were at night."

Head Coach Brian Purcell commented on hosting the tournament, saying, "It will be different. It's been at Catawba for the past two years and the games were at night."

Head Coach Brian Purcell commented on hosting the tournament, saying, "It will be different. It's been at Catawba for the past two years and the games were at night."

Head Coach Brian Purcell commented on hosting the tournament, saying, "It will be different. It's been at Catawba for the past two years and the games were at night."

Head Coach Brian Purcell commented on hosting the tournament, saying, "It will be different. It's been at Catawba for the past two years and the games were at night."

Head Coach Brian Purcell commented on hosting the tournament, saying, "It will be different. It's been at Catawba for the past two years and the games were at night."

Head Coach Brian Purcell commented on hosting the tournament, saying, "It will be different. It's been at Catawba for the past two years and the games were at night."

Head Coach Brian Purcell commented on hosting the tournament, saying, "It will be different. It's been at Catawba for the past two years and the games were at night."

Head Coach Brian Purcell commented on hosting the tournament, saying, "It will be different. It's been at Catawba for the past two years and the games were at night."

Head Coach Brian Purcell commented on hosting the tournament, saying, "It will be different. It's been at Catawba for the past two years and the games were at night."

Head Coach Brian Purcell commented on hosting the tournament, saying, "It will be different. It's been at Catawba for the past two years and the games were at night."

Head Coach Brian Purcell commented on hosting the tournament, saying, "It will be different. It's been at Catawba for the past two years and the games were at night."

Head Coach Brian Purcell commented on hosting the tournament, saying, "It will be different. It's been at Catawba for the past two years and the games were at night."

Head Coach Brian Purcell commented on hosting the tournament, saying, "It will be different. It's been at Catawba for the past two years and the games were at night."

Head Coach Brian Purcell commented on hosting the tournament, saying, "It will be different. It's been at Catawba for the past two years and the games were at night."

Missy Butler dribbles the ball down the field against Elon. photo by Reid Collins

Football team sets two records during Parents Weekend game

by Everett Catts
SPORTS EDITOR

In front of 2,674 fans, the Blue Hose football team crushed Mars Hill 45-28 and broke two rushing records in the process. PC got on the board early when Mars Hill fumbled the opening kickoff and Jeff Wilson scooped up the ball and ran eight yards for the touchdown. Frank Jordan's extra point was good, giving PC a 7-0 lead. The Blue Hose held the lead until Mars Hill tied it 14-14 in the second quarter. PC regained the lead on a 44-yard run by Mason Gordon and never looked back. Gordon scored three more times and rushed for 254 yards, breaking Steve Parsley's record of 235 yards in 1989. The Blue Hose running attack was unstoppable, plowing through the second-ranked defense in the SAC-8. Steve Gorrie ran for 103 yards on 20 carries, and PC totalled an amazing 396 yards on the ground, breaking the mark set back in 1951.

On defense Todd Shearer had ten tackles, including four solo tackles. Stacey Lewis had an interception and Barry Brown broke up two passes.

With the win the Blue Hose improved to 3-5 (2-2 SAC).

On October 16 PC hosted Elon for Homecoming. Kickoff returns of 71 and 62 yards by Elon's Rod Clark killed PC, giving Elon excellent field position. Although the Blue Hose took the lead 17-16 late in the third quarter, Elon scored fifteen unanswered points to win 31-17.

Steve Gorrie led PC with 94 yards rushing on 15 attempts, and Jeff Wilson had twelve tackles, including one for a loss.

On October 9, PC played Catawba. Gordon led the Blue Hose with 234 yards on 25 carries and three touchdowns. His final score came on a 63-yard run with 1:36 left to win the game. Gorrie had 89 yards rushing on 13 carries. Stacey Lewis led the defense with nine tackles in the 38-31 victory.

Tomorrow the Blue Hose play at Wingate and return home on November 13 in the season finale against Carson-Newman.

Women's soccer team to host South Atlantic Conference Tournament

by Everett Catts
SPORTS EDITOR

The Lady Blue Hose women's soccer team is proud to host the South Atlantic Conference Tournament this weekend.

Semifinal games begin tomorrow with 12:00 and 2:00 games. The Lady Blue Hose will play at 2:00 tomorrow against Catawba. The finals will be on Sunday at 2:00 pm. All three games are at the Ponderosa and admission is free. In 1991, when the men's soccer team

Blue Hose men's soccer team wins three straight games

by Brian Stealy
STAFF WRITER

Over fall break, the men's soccer team headed off to tournament competition in Panama City, Florida.

In tournament action, the Hose lost the first game against St. Leo 3-2, and tied the second game to Birmingham Southern 0-0.

Both games went into overtime but the Hose were unable to pull off a win. However, as a consolation, senior Chris Bruno and freshman Jimmy May did manage to make the All-Tournament team.

The Hose returned from Florida only to lose a conference game to Gardner-Webb, 4-2.

According to Head Coach Ralph Polson, the team decided to get its act together and get on with the season after the Gardner-Webb loss. The Hose seem to have managed by since defeating Elmiston 7-0, and by crushing Belmont Abbey 3-1.

This past Parents Weekend the Hose pulled off a win against Elon 3-2.

The Hose are now looking for their tenth shutout to break last year's record of nine. Depending on the upcoming Wingate game, the team will either win, tie, or lose the South Atlantic Conference crown.

The team remains optimistic but still has goals that need to be achieved. "In recent games, the Blue Hose offense has been a lot more productive, scoring numerous goals. However the team still hasn't reached their goal of scoring 60 goals," said junior goal keeper Mark Albertus.

hosted the tournament, close to 500 fans watched PC beat Catawba in the finals. Coach Brian Purcell encourages all PC students to attend the game tomorrow and support the Lady Blue Hose.

In other news: The PC Golf team finished eighth in the eighteen team Battle of Musgrove Hill on October 4 and 5 in Clinton. Gabe Southlands led the team with a two-day total of 163 (82, 81). Perin Powell shot an 84 and 81 for a total of 165.

Sports View

by Everett Catts
SPORTS EDITOR

When Michael Jordan retired earlier this month, another sports legend was wiped from the sports world. Jordan was one of the greatest people to play basketball and his spectacular play will surely be missed. Earlier this year Jordan's team, the Chicago Bulls, won a third straight NBA title, showing his and his team's excellence. Many people had dubbed the Bulls as a "dynasty," predicting many future titles. Now, with Jordan's retirement, the Bulls' quest for another title will be an even bigger challenge than before, when Jordan was still with the club.

Sadly, Jordan is not the only legend to leave the sports world this year. The Boston Celtics' Kevin McHale has also retired, and his teammate Reggie Lewis, who was one of the best players in the league, died of a heart attack last summer while playing for the Boston Celtics.

The sport of Stock Car Racing, which is dangerous in itself, also lost two men. Alan Kulwicki and Davey Allison were struck down in plane and helicopter accidents, respectively.

Major League Baseball had many losses this year. During Spring Training, Steve Olin and Tim Lincecum died in a horrible boating accident. This past summer, Don Drysdale, the former pitcher for the Dodgers, died of a heart attack. Other baseball legends have retired. George Brett, who won three batting titles and played his entire career with the Kansas City Royals, is one.

The amazing Nolan Ryan, who pitched for 26 seasons and broke several records, is history. The National Football League lost two players. Anthony Muñoz, the dominant offensive tackle for the Cincinnati Bengals, and Larry Bird, a Magic Johnson having retired in the past two years, are two superstars retired in the NBA. There are many more legends to go, but it is sad to see them go.

Here at PC, there have been athletes whose lives were abruptly ended by death. In 1991 David Beck, a former football player, then lost his life in a car accident. Last fall, Marcus Miller, a soccer standout player at the time, was also killed in an automobile accident.

I am sure other colleges and universities have had similar losses. The local sports community grieves the loss of these legends.

Brown serves as quiet leader in volleyball success

by Margaret Ellen Pender
STAFF WRITER

It is no secret that we live in a world which has become dominated by the importance of "self." In fact, egocentric would not be an unjust label for the behavior which often prevails in our society. As evidence of this pattern, consider the lengths to which some humans will go in order to attract the media's attention. However, it is still possible to encounter people who are not overcome with this obsession for the advancement of self. Indeed there are people who are not yearning to claim their place in the spotlight.

After watching a Lady Blue Hose volleyball match, it is not difficult to distinguish the standouts, those players who abound in talent and who deliver the crushing spikes or "brick wall" blocks which seem to provoke almost instinctive, vigorous rounds of applause from observers. These are the players who are naturally showered with praise during post game celebrations and who generally receive accolades from the public. Without the dedication and efforts of the other team members, however, none of the feats which the stars accomplish would be possible. Thus, it becomes obvious that while those players who "toil in the trenches" (as is often said about linemen in football) who also labor ardently in the shadows of those who dazzle fans but rarely receive credit are not frequently recognized, their contributions are a vital ingredient for the success of the team. As evidence of this point, ask yourself the following questions: how could Nolan Ryan ever notch a no-hitter if he did not have a skilled, prepared defense behind him to handle those rare occasions when some lucky hitter happened to connect with one of his 96 mph fastballs, or how could Michael Jordan have racked up sixty points in one outing unless he had a supporting crew to play defense, rebound, and feed him the ball?

Without a doubt it takes a special person to exemplify this team concept, to play a supporting role. Fortunately, we are in the presence of such a player. For the past two years Kelly Brown, a defensive specialist who has gotten a chance to play a little front row for the first time this year, has been a solid back row player who has served as a catalyst for the offensive reaction. As any volleyball fan knows, a good pass to the setter is the essential first ingredient needed to launch the offensive attack, and in recent years Kelly has often provided that key component for the Lady Hose.

Although Kelly now claims to have left Florida as home, she spent her high school years across the continent in California where she attended Desert High School and began her volleyball career. Not surprisingly, Kelly's introduction to volleyball occurred on the beaches of Florida (where she had lived prior to moving to California). Kelly did not participate on an organized squad until her tenth grade year when she joined the Desert High program. Ironically, Kelly's primary role while in high school was that of an outside hitter, but because of the advice of her club team coach who noted her lack of height, she decided to focus on her defensive skills and to present that aspect of her game to college coaches. Knowing that her father, who serves in the Air Force, was going to be transferred back to Florida and that her parents wanted her to be relatively close to home, Kelly began to look at colleges with strong volleyball programs in the Southeast. After being born in Newberry, SC, Kelly was vaguely familiar with PC and thought that perhaps it would fit the mold of her ideal college. After visiting the campus and learning about the success that Coach Beth Couture was enjoying with the Blue Hose squad, Kelly realized that indeed Presbyterian was a perfect match. Since Kelly did attend a high school that was on the other side of the continent, the possibility of Coach Couture hearing of her talent and driving over to catch a Thursday afternoon match was less than likely. Consequently, Kelly took the initiative, contacted Coach Couture, and ultimately signed with the Blue Hose.

Since arriving at Presbyterian, Kelly has fervently devoted her attention to improving her game, especially in the area of passing, and now she is enjoying the fruits of her labor. Kelly has been described by Coach Couture as a "hard worker who is very team oriented" and who possesses "excellent skill." Among the players and fans, Kelly is known for her years across the continent in California where she attended Desert High School and began her volleyball career. Not surprisingly, Kelly's introduction to volleyball occurred on the beaches of Florida (where she had lived prior to moving to California). Kelly did not participate on an organized squad until her tenth grade year when she joined the Desert High program. Ironically, Kelly's primary role while in high school was that of an outside hitter, but because of the advice of her club team coach who noted her lack of height, she decided to focus on her defensive skills and to present that aspect of her game to college coaches. Knowing that her father, who serves in the Air Force, was going to be transferred back to Florida and that her parents wanted her to be relatively close to home, Kelly began to look at colleges with strong volleyball programs in the Southeast. After being born in Newberry, SC, Kelly was vaguely familiar with PC and thought that perhaps it would fit the mold of her ideal college. After visiting the campus and learning about the success that Coach Beth Couture was enjoying with the Blue Hose squad, Kelly realized that indeed Presbyterian was a perfect match. Since Kelly did attend a high school that was on the other side of the continent, the possibility of Coach Couture hearing of her talent and driving over to catch a Thursday afternoon match was less than likely. Consequently, Kelly took the initiative, contacted Coach Couture, and ultimately signed with the Blue Hose.

Kelly Brown (16) jokes with her teammates on the bench. photo by Reid Collins

Since arriving at Presbyterian, Kelly has fervently devoted her attention to improving her game, especially in the area of passing, and now she is enjoying the fruits of her labor. Kelly has been described by Coach Couture as a "hard worker who is very team oriented" and who possesses "excellent skill." Among the players and fans, Kelly is known for her consistency and her smart play. Perhaps she will not be the one to crush the volleyball and send it to the floor in a deflated heap, but it is likely that she will be the one who delivers the pass that made the entire play possible, and the amazing thing about Kelly, who confesses she "can't say enough about the upperclassmen," and that she has gained "a lot of respect for the freshmen who have come in and accepted new roles," is that she is perfectly content with her role. She has the ability to reap satisfaction from watching Deedy Williams punish the ball off of a beautiful set from Jennifer Smith and does not mind if no one remembers that she dug the ball to initiate the play.

In recent action the Lady Blue Hose downed conference foe Lenoir-Rhyne 15-11, 15-8, 15-4 in a match which featured sophomore Kristy Tarallo's 20 digs and senior Jennifer Smith's 23 assists. On October 18 the Lady Hose notched another victory over non-conference opponent USC-Aiken (15-12, 16-14, 15-10) and on the following night defeated Mars Hill handily (15-5, 15-3, 15-4).

Senior Deedy Williams continued her exceptional career by establishing a new school record for a single game number of kills (38) and, more impressively, by moving into first place on the list for career number of kills which propelled her beyond her sister's previous record of 1,487. In honor of her achievements, Deedy was named SAC Player of the Week. Senior Jennifer Smith also established a new record for Lady Blue Hose volleyball, by registering 52 assists against Elon on October 9, she increased her four year total to 3,051 and eclipsed the former career assist record. PC finished second in the Jacksonville State Tournament this past weekend.

will play Newberry's football champion in the three-mile race that covered the perimeter of campus and the track around the intramural complex. Matt Glenn won the men's division with a time of 16:43. Amy Becker won the women's division with a time of 22:21.

The first annual intramural cross-country race was held on Oct 6. Twenty students ran in the three-mile race that covered the perimeter of campus and the track around the intramural complex. Matt Glenn won the men's division with a time of 16:43. Amy Becker won the women's division with a time of 22:21.

The first annual intramural cross-country race was held on Oct 6. Twenty students ran in the three-mile race that covered the perimeter of campus and the track around the intramural complex. Matt Glenn won the men's division with a time of 16:43. Amy Becker won the women's division with a time of 22:21.

The first annual intramural cross-country race was held on Oct 6. Twenty students ran in the three-mile race that covered the perimeter of campus and the track around the intramural complex. Matt Glenn won the men's division with a time of 16:43. Amy Becker won the women's division with a time of 22:21.

The first annual intramural cross-country race was held on Oct 6. Twenty students ran in the three-mile race that covered the perimeter of campus and the track around the intramural complex. Matt Glenn won the men's division with a time of 16:43. Amy Becker won the women's division with a time of 22:21.

The first annual intramural cross-country race was held on Oct 6. Twenty students ran in the three-mile race that covered the perimeter of campus and the track around the intramural complex. Matt Glenn won the men's division with a time of 16:43. Amy Becker won the women's division with a time of 22:21.

The first annual intramural cross-country race was held on Oct 6. Twenty students ran in the three-mile race that covered the perimeter of campus and the track around the intramural complex. Matt Glenn won the men's division with a time of 16:43. Amy Becker won the women's division with a time of 22:21.

The first annual intramural cross-country race was held on Oct 6. Twenty students ran in the three-mile race that covered the perimeter of campus and the track around the intramural complex. Matt Glenn won the men's division with a time of 16:43. Amy Becker won the women's division with a time of 22:21.

The first annual intramural cross-country race was held on Oct 6. Twenty students ran in the three-mile race that covered the perimeter of campus and the track around the intramural complex. Matt Glenn won the men's division with a time of 16:43. Amy Becker won the women's division with a time of 22:21.

The first annual intramural cross-country race was held on Oct 6. Twenty students ran in the three-mile race that covered the perimeter of campus and the track around the intramural complex. Matt Glenn won the men's division with a time of 16:43. Amy Becker won the women's division with a time of 22:21.

Encore

by Kim Rabon
ENTERTAINMENT EDITOR

I wanted to use my column this issue to tell you about a movie I saw over Fall Break. The Good Son. When I saw the previews for this movie, I instantly knew I wanted to see it. Don't ask me why because it looked absolutely evil! I guess it is one of those movies that you know will win a few awards.

I went into this movie knowing what type of things to expect, but I still came out of the movie with my mouth gaping in disbelief. Yes, I'm somewhat ashamed to say that I did enjoy the movie (I don't usually go for the possessed type), but I did have a problem with the casting. After laughing at Macaulay Culkin in both Home Alone I & 2, I was surprised that he actually took this role. I can understand that he probably doesn't want to be labeled the "Home Alone Kid," but this role was an extreme change from his previous movies. I guess it is kind of upsetting that a children's role model such as Culkin would make such a drastic career move. There is no way movie-goers will ever view Macaulay as the innocent, humorous child as before—even in future roles!

I probably wouldn't have thought about it much if I hadn't stopped by my younger cousins' house on the way back from the movie. My cousins are four and six and they own both Home Alone videos; in other words, they are Macaulay Culkin fans! I was talking to my aunt and told her what movie I had just seen and who was in it and my cousins instantly started asking me to take them. What can you say? "I'm sorry you can't go to this one because one of your favorite movie actors causes 10-car accidents and tries to push his mother off a cliff!" Call me crazy, but that will not work!

The Good Son is a good movie for an older audience. If you live with or are around younger children that enjoy movies, The Good Son is not the one you want to take the family to. This movie is in the theaters now, so if you have a chance, go see it for yourself.

Make your MTV dreams come true with Fun Flicks!

by Camisha Clarke
STAFF WRITER

Once again, the Kramer Agency of Grand Rapids, Michigan, will be bringing non-stop action and entertainment to Presbyterian College.

After enlightening the campus with the Blizard of Bucks Crazy Game Show and fattening the pockets of the lucky winner in the Incredible Money Machine, the Student Union Board (SUB) is once again sponsoring the Kramer Agency as it delivers totally interactive video, where anyone can be a star in the second annual appearance of Fun Flicks, Totally Interactive Video.

Why not be the star in your own MTV-style music video? Just about anybody could rent a quarter million dollar Hollywood-style video production studio complete with director, crew, costumes, props, and a to-die-for voice—maybe in a good dream. Fortunately, those very dreams can come true when you direct and participate in your own Fun Flicks video with over 85,000 Hollywood-style special effects at no charge at all. That is correct. FREE!

music video. Both Springs Campus Center Director Randy Randall and Director of Intramural Activities Chris Patterson have participated in their own state-of-the-art sound video recording of Stephen Wolf's "Born to Be Wild." Anyone can make a one-of-a-kind video with Fun Flicks.

With a huge selection of over 350 songs, every Fun Flicks video should be an original production. Rap, country and western, rock, and pop are simply a few of the classes of music available to everyone.

Walk in space, be in an old western gunfight, ride a motorcycle, waterski like a pro or fly like Superman in a "mini movie" starring you and your friends.

Senior Monique Byrd experienced the excitement last year of fulfilling her visual fantasies while spectators were wowed by the video virtuosity of the Fun Flicks technicians. While lip synching to Salt 'N' Pepa's "Push It," Byrd found the "glamorous costumes" to be the most exciting aspect of making her own country and western, rock, and pop are simply a few of the classes of music available to everyone.

For six hours, beginning at 10:00 a.m. on Thursday, November 18, you and your friends have the opportunity to participate or just see the movie magic in Springs Campus Center. Lip sync to your own video and keep the tape for your lifetime memories.

'You are getting very, very sleepy...' Hypnotist to visit campus on November 1

by Katherine Bonner
STAFF WRITER

Have you always dreamed of being a Chippendale dancer? Or have you always wished you could see one of your hard-as-nail friends in a vulnerable moment? Perhaps you have been wondering lately about what exactly you wanted for Christmas when you were twelve. Well, November 1, you may get your chance at one (or even all) of these things! That evening a SUB-sponsored hypnotist is coming to campus, and several students will get their chance to show their true colors!

Dr. Holiday is a professional hypnotist from Rochester, New York. He has performed for all kinds of audiences throughout the United States including conventions of all sorts, many fraternal organizations, lots of comedy clubs, and several festivals. These performances were in every place from Dallas, TX to Norfolk, VA, and everywhere in between. Dr. Holiday has received rave reviews from many of the people and organizations for whom he has performed. He is noted as "one of the most popular entertainers around." While his show has kept audiences rolling in the aisles, he is a serious hypnotist with a list of credentials a mile long. Holiday was the founder of the Success Dynamics Institute in the 1970's, a company which utilizes hypnosis for self therapy and therapy growth. He has also lectured in many psychology classes all over the country. He is a graduate of California State University with a degree in medicine and psychology. So when you see your roommate on the stage screaming about how much he loves Elvis, know that you can later remind her of Dr. Holiday's credentials so she won't think it's just a joke! Dr. Holiday's show will create memories for years to come.

Dr. Holiday will be performing in Bell Auditorium at 8:00 p.m. on November 1. It's a SUB-sponsored event and you can be sure of a great time!

INTO THE NIGHT
AT Jerry's

Free dessert with any entree

310 E. Carolina Avenue
Clinton 833-5090

cannot be used with any other coupon or special offer
offer expires November 30

Watusi Rodeo set to perform at SUB's annual Fall Fling

Press Release
EAST COAST ENTERTAINMENT

Watusi Rodeo will be kicking off the festivities for the 1993 Fall Fling which begins at 9:00 p.m. at the Armory on November 5. This dynamic six piece country-rock band formed in early 1989 as the house band at PARTNER'. Watusi Rodeo played over 250 nights to a full house and a packed dance floor. Their repertoire consists of Top 40 Country hits (Garth Brooks, Vince Gill, Hank Williams, Jr., etc.) mixed with classic Rock & Roll guaranteed to fill the dance floor. The sound is tight, high energy, and professional. Pala steel guitar, lead, rhythm and bass guitars, drums, keyboards, and great vocals with four part harmonies make up the instrumentation.

The players in Watusi Rodeo are seasoned professionals with many years of stage and studio experience, entertaining crowds throughout the U.S., Europe, and Canada. In 1989, pedal steel guitarist Charlie Vaughn, highly regarded in the Nashville and Atlanta country music circles, was inducted into the Atlanta Country Music Hall of Fame. Charlie formerly played with WPL's Swinging Gentlemen and the Sammy Tucker Band and has backed up everyone from Willie Nelson to Hank Williams, Jr. New lead vocalist Marc Alan joined the band after winning the 1991 Metro Atlanta Marlboro Country Music Showdown. Marc then went down to Louisiana and won the Marlboro Showdown there. Jack Barr plays keyboards, rhythm guitar, and sings. He toured nationally with the popular college-oriented rock band The Surf. Lead guitarist Nathan Barfield is a regional guitar

Watusi Rodeo will be the featured band at this year's Fall Fling.

file photo

legend, Nathan's sizzling guitar playing has dazzled audiences for years, live, and on record. Russell Daniel plays drums and sings great harmony. He played with Ziggurat, a major label touring act, and Bombay, a rock band with a widely distributed album and an award winning music video. Gary Duke, bassist, most recently played with the Duke Coley Band and Drivin' Blind, a popular southern rock group with radio airplay. Gary played country music in Europe for two years and has played the 'chitlin' circuit for many years.

In August 1992, Watusi Rodeo won the True Value/GMC Truck Country Music Showdown in Alabama, and October, 1992 opened for Tracey Lawrence in Mobile. Also in October, Watusi Rodeo was chosen to be a part of the New South Music Showcase in Atlanta, where they played before fans at the Sanctuary in Buckhead.

Future plans for the group include continuing to play dates throughout the South and working hard on original songs that they plan to take to Nashville studios.

Come out to the Armory and join the Fall Fling festivities! Watusi Rodeo is sure to be a hit. The band will be playing for the entire evening, from 9:00 p.m. to 1:00 a.m.

Gospel Extravaganza to feature PC Choir

by Dawn Banks
STAFF WRITER

The Presbyterian College Student Fellowship Choir will present its annual Gospel Extravaganza on November 14th. This rock celebration will begin at 7:30 at Edmonds Hall.

The Gospel Extravaganza will include not only the Student Fellowship Choir but various choirs from colleges and churches in the area. Colleges who have been invited include USC, Spartanburg USC, Columbia, Furman, and South Carolina State. The Student Fellowship Choir has also own impressive program setup, including notes from Gordon Davidson, Tyron Phillips, Rich Williams, and Karen Shorper.

The choir, which was organized in 1986 by Jonathan Dover, Carla Jones, and Veronica Brown, performs at a chapel service and also sings in the area.

The Gospel Extravaganza is one of the many events held by the PC Student Fellowship Choir, but by far one of the best. Every one is encouraged to come and enjoy the gospel through harmonious singing. There is no charge for this event. If you have any questions, contact Jonathan Dover, president of the choir, at Jonathan.Dover@pc.edu.

Campus & Clubs...

Kappa Alpha Order

The brothers of Beta Pi would like to extend a sincere welcome to their new faculty advisor Allen Morris. Morris serves as president of the Scotsman Club and is a 1956 graduate of PC and a former Number 1 of PC's Kappa Alpha chapter. On October 29 through 31, the chapter will be going to Camp Tule A Wanda for its 10th annual Mountain Weekend.

SGA

The Student Government Association is in the process of discussing such issues as GDH, dorm visitation hours, independent exams, parking and recycling. Remember that SGA is here to make sure that the student's voice is heard. The organization cannot function without your input. Please contact any member of SGA if you have any questions or concerns. SGA would also like to announce that it is sponsoring a Radio PC talk show. Dallas Olson and Jason Winfield will be on the air every Sunday from 8:00 to 9:00 p.m.

Chaplain's Office

✓ Are you considering a call to the ministry? Columbia Theological Seminary in Decatur, Georgia is offering a conference on the ministry, November 5 - 7, 1993. This is an excellent opportunity for persons considering the ministry to explore their calling as well as learn more about Columbia. There is no charge for the conference. Participants need only provide their own transportation to and from the campus. Application and travel subsidies are available in the Chaplain's Office, Douglas House, Room 204. Deadline to register is November 1.

✓ The Chaplain's Office encourages all students to participate in the Crop Walk/Run on November 20 during the Habitat Band Blast. The event will benefit the Church World Service Disaster Response Office. For more information, contact the Chaplain at ext. 8476 or Jennifer Fouse at ext. 8829.

Financial Aid

Eight $3000 scholarships will be awarded to applicants in their junior year to assist them in their senior year of study. The program is specifically designed to foster freedom of speech and press while promoting quality sports-journalism at the collegiate level. The application deadline is January 14, 1994. Applications are available in the Financial Aid Office. The scholarships are offered through the NCAA Foundation.

Pi Kappa Phi

Pi Kappa Phi will be holding a "toll road" in Clinton on Saturday, October 30 to raise money for PUSH America, the fraternity's national service project for the severely disabled. The brothers encourage everyone to come by and offer their support.

Wayne's World theme park comes to Carowinds in spring

Press Release

Charlotte, N.C.- The magic of the movies will come alive in an "excellent" way at Paramount's Carowinds with the introduction of a new Wayne's World theme area in the spring of 1994.

Paramount's Carowinds guests will be transported into the heart of Aurora, Ill., home of the two popular hosts of the famous

According to Hugh E. Darley, Jr., senior vice president of design and entertainment for Paramount Parks Inc., the new theme park will provide a total guest experience that encompasses much more than just a ride or an attraction. "Guests will actually feel as though they are walking behind the scenes of a Hollywood set experiencing the environment that was created for the motion picture," Darley a Wayne's World environment.

This high-energy Wayne's World area will be anchored by North America's first movie-themed wooden roller coaster called the "Hurler."

The 3,157-foot coaster will feature a lift hill of 83 feet and four high-speed hills, with maximum speeds reaching 50 mph. Giant billboards of Wayne and Garth's favorite going to be riding a roller coaster unlike any other coaster that they have ever ridden," Ueberroth added.

Paramount's Carowinds Executive Vice President and General Manager Watt Burris said that the park's expansion represents a continuation of the Paramount theming which began with the '93 season. "The Paramount association allows us to keep the best of the talk show Wayne's World. The characters of Wayne Campbell and Garth Algar earned their claim to fame as the popular stars of the 1992 Paramount feature film Wayne's World, after gaining national attention on Saturday Night Live. The duo's unique style and humor spawned lingo and catch phrases such as "Waynespeak," and their adventures continue this winter in a Paramount movie sequel, Wayne's World 2, scheduled for national release on December 10, 1993.

explained. Guests will also be quick to recognize many of the props and scenes that popularized in the Wayne's World movie.

Settings that will be familiar to guests in the eight-acre themed include a recreation of the Aurora, Ill. film version streetscape, Wayne's house and basement, and the pair's favorite donut shop. Add to this a specialty shop, unique games, special music, video monitors, and photo opportunities, and guest will find themselves completely immersed in heavy metal bands will the coaster's lift hill, and the back turn will enclose a live show venue. While travelling on the coaster, guests will actually ring the outside of this outdoor amphitheater, which will feature a live rock concert type show.

Ray Ueberroth, president of the American Coaster Enthusiasts, said "The Hurler" is the perfect complement to the existing roller coasters at Paramount's Carowinds. The people in the south-east United States are theme park experience and add to innovative dimensions from the movie, television, and publishing worlds," Burris said. "The Wayne's World area brings to life an extremely popular motion picture with attractions the entire family can relate to and enjoy," he concluded.

The new Wayne's World area will be built on undeveloped land behind the Paramount Theater in the park's existing Carolina Showplace themed area.

'Absolut' trouble: Unauthorized T-shirt sales cause concern

by Gray Lesesne
STAFF WRITER

When senior Warren Sloane decided to commence an entrepreneurial fundraising project earlier this year, he had no idea of the amount of success and challenge he would encounter.

Sloane noticed the increasing popularity of the "Absolut" vodka-style-shirts on college campuses and in specialty stores everywhere and thought that perhaps a similar shirt depicting Presbyterian College would sell here as well.

Sloane had the artwork done and shirts printed in a colorful and eye-catching manner. The shirt depicted an Absolut vodka bottle with Neville Hall, the school's official seal, and the words "Absolut Tradition" inside.

According to Sloane, the shirts sold well for over three months for ten dollars each. He refused to say how much was made in total sales for the shirts.

"I thought they looked good. Other students had made shirts in the past and this was a personal project," said Sloane.

Sloane's t-shirt success came to an end when a college official noticed that the school's seal was located in the top of the vodka bottle pictured on the back of the shirts.

Sloane did not realize that the use of the school's seal without permission of the college is a violation of college regulations and also a violation of the copyright law. The seal is specifically licensed to the Performance Group of Greenville, and usage without its or Presbyterian College's permission is illegal.

While Sloane has not been nor will be charged with either an Honor Code violation or sued under the copyright law for the infraction, the College ordered him to stop selling the t-shirts effective October 26.

"There ought to be a process for distribution where students with original ideas can make a profit," says Sloan. "This college, especially the business department, teaches entrepreneurship. I really don't see the complaint about this item."

Sloane's business venture is simply not legal, according to Skip Zubrod, PC's treasurer and vice president for finance.

"This college owns the use of the seal, name, school logo... the entire group," said Zubrod, noting that the officers of the college must approve use for Presbyterian College purposes.

"Usually there is no problem in allowing the seal of the school to be used with campus organizations," said Zubrod. "However, students or others who wish to make a profit from the shirts or other merchandise must work with one of the many vendors the Performance Group has contracted with."

Possibly, according to Zubrod, the vendors would work out an agreement with the inventor of a new product so that he or she can make a profit if the items sell. But that would be up to the individual vendor. Zubrod's office maintains a list of vendors that the college works with.

With regard to the Absolut Presbyterian

PC student Warren Sloane's shirt features Neville Hall in an Absolut Vodka bottle with the official school seal on top. The PC Administration ordered Sloane to discontinue sales on October 26.
Photo by Kim Gibson

shirt, Zubrod agrees with the decision made to discontinue sales.

"A major objective of the college this year has been to promote the responsible and legal use of alcohol. I think that shirt runs contrary to one of our goals," said Zubrod.

Sloane is ready to put the issue behind him. "It's over and done with," he said.

On The Inside

Page 2 . . .

Joe Nixon confronts rumors about a 24-hour visitation policy.

Page 6 - 7 . . .

After Hours: PC faculty do more than teach.

Page 8 . . .

PC volleyball and men's soccer teams capture SAC-8 conference championships.

Amended Fall Rush to return to campus next fall

by Kelley Perkins
STAFF WRITER

After three years of deferred rush, freshmen will once again be able to rush during the fall semester beginning in the fall of 1994, according to Dean of Students Joe Nixon.

The faculty voted to allow freshmen to pledge no earlier than the beginning of Fall Break. Dr. Robert Hudson proposed the amendment which offered this compromise between deferred rush and rush at the beginning of the fall semester. The faculty further decided that changes to this policy cannot be proposed for five years.

When asked what changed the minds of the faculty, Nixon replied, "There was not substantial evidence that pledging in January improved the academic performance of freshmen students." He added that they could not substantiate that freshmen were becoming involved in greater numbers in other campus organizations during the fall semester.

Nixon further stated that a persuasive point was made by the fraternities and sororities. They pointed out that the current system led to an entire semester of informal rush, especially for male students, and only the pledging was deferred. Nixon also said, "The fall semester resulted in female freshmen students being isolated from a large portion of upperclass students because of the rules for sorority rush."

Allan Barksdale, the inter-fraternity council president, told the Blue Stocking that he and Leigh Hearnburg, the Panhellenic president, went and talked with several faculty members before the vote to answer questions and to explain their position. "I don't know whether or not this helped, but last year we lost by three votes and this year we lost by one vote before the amendment was offered," Barksdale said.

Barksdale further stated that the motion was first approved by the Social and Greek Affairs Committee and then by the Student Affairs Committee before reaching the faculty. When asked how he felt about the amendment, Barksdale replied, "I think it's a good compromise. I'm glad it's moved back to the fall."

Nixon agreed. "I favored the return to fall pledging. The semester of informal rush was stressful on both Greeks and freshmen. I think the compromise is a good decision."

PC — Tidbits

PC professor injured in collision with student

by Tobin Turner
NEWS EDITOR

Tragedy hit the PC campus early on the morning of November 15 as Dr. Eugene Womble, professor of mathematics, was struck by a car while riding his bicycle to class.

Womble was immediately transported to Laurens County Hospital via ambulance. The collision between Womble and the car driven by Sonya Nelmes, a PC student, occurred at 7:50am at the intersection of E. Calhoun St. and S. Adair. Nelmes is estimated to have been traveling at 10 mph when she pulled into the path of the bicycle. An estimated $300 damage was done to Womble's bike, while the car driven by Nelmes incurred an estimated $800 worth of damage, including a broken front windshield. The resilient and determined Womble, however, was to be found in his 12:00 class later that day, still in his torn, bloody clothes, preparing his class for an upcoming test. Dr. Womble is yet unable to return to a normal schedule, missing most of his classes. "I'm incredibly sore, with some mighty big bruises," Womble admits. "I just hope some good comes of this and people become more speed and safety conscious." The incident is still under investigation by the Clinton Police Department.

Dr. Womble file photo

Waffle iron returns to GDH
After a long absence, the waffle iron made a triumphant return to Greenville Dining Hall this past week. According to Vernon Powell, food service director, the waffle iron was broken when a student attempted to make a grilled cheese sandwich in it. So far, no problems have been

Nixon confronts rumors, clarifies policies

Joe Nixon, dean of students, says there is no truth to the rumor that a 24-hour visitation policy has been proposed. Nixon is the Chair of the Student Affairs Council.

photo by Kim Gibson

by Dave Miller
STAFF WRITER

In a recent letter to the student body, Dean of Student Affairs Joseph Nixon stated that he had increased the fine for being on the roofs and ledges of buildings on campus. In this letter, Nixon also made references to the escort policy, a rumor concerning a possible 24-hour visitation policy, and the alcohol policy.

Earlier this semester a student fell off the roof of a fraternity house. As a result, Nixon increased the fine for such actions from $25 to $100 in an attempt to increase campus awareness and a sense of safety. Although the student who fell from the roof of the fraternity house wasn't seriously injured, Nixon explained, liability for such incidents falls upon the school. The fine will also be imposed upon any club or organization which allows such incidents to occur.

Nixon also addressed the possible elimination of the current dormitory escort policy. The Student Government Association, Men's Council, and Women's Council have voted to propose the deletion of the escort policy from the Knapsack. Before taking effect, this proposal must be approved by the Student Affairs Council, which will consider the proposal at its November meeting. Because of the recent installation of card access systems in all dormitories, the escort policy is likely to be deleted. Director of Residence Life, Andy Altizer, called the escort policy "weak, unenforceable, and outdated."

Despite the rumors circulating campus, Nixon said in his letter, there has not been a proposal to the Student Affairs Council for a 24-hour visitation policy for PC students. Nixon is the Chair of the Student Affairs Council and stated that he is willing to listen to students' opinions regarding the 24-hour policy, although he is opposed to its approval for a variety of reasons, including the concern of female students about their personal safety if opposite-sex visitors are allowed to stay the night.

Nixon also clarified the alcohol policy in his memorandum. Nixon stated that all hard liquor is prohibited on the entire campus and that beer and wine are allowed only in rooms in which both occupants are twenty one or older. He said the primary concern about hard liquor is its potential for alcohol poisoning due to its elevated alcohol content.

Residence halls to close for Thanksgiving break

by Andy Altizer
GUEST WRITER

Thanksgiving Break officially begins on Wednesday, November 24, at 1:00 pm. Classes will resume the following Monday, November 29. Greenville Dining Hall will serve the noon meal on November 24 and will be closed until the dinner meal on Sunday, November 28.

The residence halls will close at 5:00 pm, Wednesday, November 24 after classes and re-open at noon, Sunday, November 28. Dorm cards will not work between these dates and times.

Students who need to stay in their rooms over Thanksgiving Break must contact the Residence Life Office (8277, 8276, or in Douglas House) by 5:00 pm, Monday, November 22. Only students with legitimate reasons will be permitted to remain on campus during the holiday break. Students who do not contact the Residence Life Office will not be able to use their dorm card over break.

Holidays are frequently a time when items are stolen out of student rooms, so make a conscious effort to lock your room and bathroom if you live in a suite. It is a good idea to participate in Project ID to assure all of your property is properly marked. It is imperative for students to take home expensive items like jewelry, money, and other easily carried off merchandise. Contact Public Safety for information concerning Project ID or if you are interested in storing items such as TVs or stereos in the Administration Building.

The October 29 edition of the Blue Stocking incorrectly reported that the new academic building will be named Spencer Hall. According to Skip Zubrod, vice president for finance, the new building will be named after the individual who donates the funds for its construction. The Blue Stocking regrets the error.

"Give Us A Call!"

Peer Connection
Phone Line

is now

OPEN

call us at:

8424

Sunday through
Wednesday 7-10 pm

Discuss your concerns, issues, or problems with peers who have been selected and trained to help you
All calls will be confidential

Amity Scholar hopes to expose PC students to French culture

Patrick Delamare hopes to provide his students with more ideas about France than those of the Eiffel Tower and Chanel perfume.

photo by Kim Gibson

by Brian Parrish
STAFF WRITER

Patrick Delamare is one of four Amity Scholars who will be spending the year teaching language classes and taking courses at Presbyterian College.

Delamare is from the Normandy region of France, where he was born in Rouen. According to Delamare, Normandy is famous for the camembert cheese, calvados wine, and famous horses that it produces.

While living most of his life between Rouen and Paris, Delamare has already graduated from a French business school where he attained a degree in business and marketing similar to that of the American

MBA.

In 1990, after several previous trips to California, Delamare came to the United States as an intern with the Seven-Up Company in San Diego. "That experience made me want to work with an international company dealing with imports and exports of products, and it made me want to start my own company with friends from France and California," he said.

By studying at PC this year, Delamare hopes to gain better knowledge of the United States and help others to become exposed to the culture of France and the French language.

So far, Delamare is enjoying many of the qualities of American college life. "I especially enjoy the beauty of the green PC campus which has lots of room for walking and is change from the busy streets of Paris," he said.

One of the things that has surprised Delamare most about American college students is the emphasis they place on sports and athletic events. "In France, we just play sports one or two hours per week in school. They are not as important," he said.

Delamare attributes the lack of interest in sports among French students with the lack of leisure time. "French students have a rigorous schedule and have to attend classes six days per week from 8:00 am until 5 or 6:00 pm," he said.

Delamare points out that the biggest difference he has noticed about the United States is that strict social hierarchies here are not as prevalent as in France. "When you see someone on the street here, you cannot tell if they work for McDonalds or are the chairman of IBM. In France, the social classes are more defined by strong and obvious attitudes," he explained.

The lack of a strict social hierarchy is one of the reasons that Delamare thinks students from different places can come to PC and blend so well. "On this campus it is really good that there are people from different states and countries because all of us are different and bring different cultures so that others can learn different ways of thinking and different opinions," he said.

Delamare also acknowledges surprise at the difference in the price of goods here as compared to France. "In France, a gallon of gasoline is about $5 and a Coke is about $2," he said.

Delamare says that he has enjoyed attending classes at PC, such as Gillespie's political science course. He also finds American students to be more serious in their classes than students in France.

"I really hope that for my students learning French will become something that they love and anticipate eagerly. I also desire to give Americans more ideas about France than those of the Eiffel Tower and Chanel perfume," said Delamare.

"I am really enjoying PC and I know that my two semesters here will be an enriching and positive experience. I have been to other schools, and I can say very easily that it is not at every school that you will find this environment. I am glad that this school is open to the rest of the world," added Delamare.

10% off to all
PC students

Tapestry

Not only the best ladies clothing around!

* Sorority and Fraternity crossstitch kits (also graphs of Neville Hall and Thomason Library)

* Scarborough and Co. gifts (potpourri, lotions, powders, etc.)

We have a large selection of evening wear for Christmas and formals!

Next to First Presbyterian Church

Clinton, SC
833-6591

WASTED YOUTH.

A Public Service of the USDA Forest Service and your State Forester.

ONLY YOU CAN PREVENT FOREST FIRES

POINT

'Don't make excuses for your own laziness ...'

Students encouraged to make a contribution to campus

We, the editorial staff of the Blue Stocking, firmly believe that here at Presbyterian College, no one can say that there are not sufficient opportunities made available to each student.

At arguably on of the finest private colleges in the South, we are blessed with a setting in which we can not only be a part of an outstanding academic environment but can also make numerous contributions to the PC community and the world beyond the PC campus.

Where else can one student be involved with so much? Where else can you sit on the front steps of Neville Hall and freeze to death while listening to Dr. Thompson recite from epic poetry? Where else can one find such a unique dining experience as GDH and feast on such classic entrees as oriental mix?

With such a ever-increasing price tag on private education, Presbyterian College has continually provided a heads-above-the-rest education without totally draining its own resources. The fact that we have had the last three Professors of the Year for the state of South Carolina should be proof enough that the academic atmosphere and reputation are far ahead of those of other colleges.

But academic work is only secondary to the immense number of community- and church-related activities which are provided here at PC. That is what is special about PC: students who go here are not only interested in themselves generally but are willing to sacrifice their own time to make a contribution to the campus and community.

Many students let their free time become self indulgent and fault finding. Don't complain about the way the student government is operated; stop hiding and go out and run for an office.

Don't say there is not enough entertainment on campus; make an effort to see beyond stereotypes of activities and get involved. Take the time to see what really goes into producing publications before you complain about their quality.

Presbyterian College was founded on the ideal of service and, equally so, commitment. If you are not willing to make a commitment of a small portion of your week to make a positive contribution to this campus, then maybe PC is not the place for you.

We hope that every student realizes that this is a high-priced education and will take advantage of every opportunity provided in order to benefit him or herself.

We would like to encourage students to take time to decide where their contribution would be most beneficial and make that choice to do their part. Remember that all the book knowledge in the world will not help you in most cases if you are not able to apply that knowledge constructively in dealing with people.

Get involved with people around you and with people with interests similar to yours. Don't make excuses for your own laziness, get out and make a contribution to this campus which is providing you with a second-to-none education.

In most cases, you will learn a great deal more than you could ever imagine.

Sidewalk Talk

What is your opinion of a possible 24 hour visitation policy at PC?

Lavette L. Douglas
senior

"I think the visitation hours during the weekdays should remain the same. But on weekends, I think we could possibly go to 24-hour visitation rights."

Carrie Yurcisin
sophomore

"I think college students are definitely responsible enough to deal with a 24 hour visitation especially in the case of out of town friends visiting."

Dean Steorn
junior

"I think at our age, we should be able to make our own decisions about who we want to see, when we want to see them, but we should also respect our roommates and other people's rights at the same time."

photos by Reid Collins

THE BLUE STOCKING

Presbyterian College - Clinton, South Carolina 29325
Volume LXXXVIII Number 4, November 19, 1993

Editor-in-Chief..... Jason West
Managing Editor..... Lauren Owings
News Editor..... Tobin Turner
Sports Editor..... Everett Catts
Entertainment Editor..... Kim Rabon
Features Editor..... Brian Sacco
Computer Design Editor..... Todd Love
Photography Editor..... Kim Gibson
Layout Editor..... Angela Richardson
Staff Artist..... Michael Christensen
Staff Advisor..... Dr. Neal B. Prater

Staff Writers:
Dennie Lynn Hill
Charles Smith
Dawn Banks
Kim Wood
Kristina Pruitt
Brian Parrish
Karen O'Connor
Margaret Ellen Pender
Alison Nicole Barnard
David Miller
Gray Lesene
Nhien Nguyen
Kelley Perkins
Camisha Clarke
Brian Steely
Lauren Jones
Christie Grant
David Miller
Photographers: Reid Collins, Brooke Peterson

The Blue Stocking is a tri-weekly student publication of Presbyterian College. The paper serves as a forum of news and opinion of regional and national concern. For advertising, contact The Blue Stocking, Presbyterian College, Box 1061, Clinton, SC 29325. The Blue Stocking welcomes letters to the editor from all members of the PC community. Signatures are required. Letters are printed on a space available basis. The Blue Stocking reserves the right to edit all letters for proper grammar and punctuation. The final deadline for submitting letters is Friday at 12:00 pm on the week before publication.

Letters to the Editor - Letters to the Editor - Letters to the Editor - Letters to the Editor - Letters to the Editor

Student suggests that others keep an open mind

Dear Editor:

I just have a short letter to the students of Presbyterian College: it's very hard to get an education in life with a closed mind.

As Friedrich Nietzsche said, "One has to speak with thunder and heavenly fireworks to feeble and dormant senses. But the voice of beauty speaks softly. It steals into only the most awakened soul."

Sincerely,

Jason Bundrick
Sophomore

Fraternity explains PC campus alcohol policy

Dear Editor:

Pi Kappa Alpha, along with IFC, would like to inform PC's freshmen about the school's alcohol policy.

When a student under the age of 21 is caught drinking at a fraternity house, not only does that individual get in trouble; the fraternity where the student was drinking also gets in trouble.

The fraternity is subject to the following fines: First offense - $25 fine and closure for 10 days; Second offense - $50 fine and closure for 20 days; Third offense - $100 fine and closure for 105 days.

Any individual under 21 who is caught drinking is subject to the following fines: First offense - $25 fine and banned from fraternity court for 10 days; Second offense - $50 fine and banned for 20 days; Third offense - $100 fine and banned for 105 days.

As you can see, underage drinking can cause a fraternity a great deal of hassle. Please remember that if you participate in underage drinking, it is not only your liability but also the liability of the fraternity where you are drinking.

Sincerely,

Blake Stansell and the Brothers of Pi Kappa Alpha and IFC

The Blue Stocking encourages all members of the PC community to express their opinions about matters concerning the campus and the world. If you have an opinion and would like to share it, you can send your letter by campus mail to PC Box 1061.

Letters to the editor must be signed and are subject to grammatical revisions. Letters must be turned into the newspaper office one week prior to publication. The next issue of the Blue Stocking will be published on December 10, 1993.

He's my hero ... I have many reasons

by Tobin Turner
NEWS EDITOR

tears, I apologized again and again. Patting my head, my grandfather calmly replied, "That's why we have spares."

As I search for my travel bag and keys, I can clearly see my grandfather rising with the sun to pick blueberries from his many bushes. I would eventually go and help for a few minutes and quit, while he would stay on nearly all day until he had several gallon buckets of blueberries. Then that evening we would wash them, and I would watch in astonishment as he delivered the sum of his day's work to friends and relatives.

I think of the walks we took down the railroad tracks that lie several hundred yards from his house and how we would watch the trains. How along our walk I'd start a rock collection of identical granite rocks, and he would examine each rock carefully and tell me what an outstanding collection I had.

How he always kept cookies, candy, or cake around to finish off every meal or snack or break or sneeze or any other possible occasion for his company, especially grandchildren, to eat a sweet. How we would go on our daily trips to Murrell's, a country store run by his best friend, where my grandfather and I would discuss the finer points of life, such as why people like dogs so much or why he, unlike me, took an afternoon nap in his recliner.

As I head down the steps, ready to start the ride home to Bristol with my grandfather, I stop briefly and realize just how much he has been to me during the past nineteen years. I can't imagine a Thanksgiving, Christmas, or summer vacation without him because he is Thanksgiving, Christmas, and summer vacation. No one makes me smile quicker than he does with his own special wit; however, no one has shown me more vividly that responsibility should never, never be taken lightly. My grandfather is my hero. I have many reasons - a grandson's reasons.

As I walk out to his car, parked several rows back, I feel blessed beyond measure. When he spots me and gets out of his car, his eyes brightening, I feel the pressures of school and grades melt away. My grandfather has shown me, in more ways than he will ever know, that it is the times with the people you love that will last forever.

My Turn

by Jason West
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

It's not an easy job serving as a public official. I am a member of the Kershaw County Board of School Trustees and am one of nine individuals responsible for the education of some 9,000 students and the employment of nearly 1,000 people. The responsibilities are more wide-ranging than you'd think.

By far the toughest part of the job is dealing with student expulsions. In today's society, more and more children and teenagers are being forced out of school because they pose a physical threat to others, impeding the educational process. Unfortunately, the decision to expel a student often falls on my shoulders, as well as the shoulders of the other board members.

Within the last year, my board has expelled a number of students. They have ranged from 12-year-olds in sixth grade to 18-year-old seniors. Their offenses have included everything from bringing weapons to school, committing blackmail, performing lewd sexual acts, threatening other students, and being under the influence of drugs and/or alcohol.

What concerns me most is that the very kids we have to dismiss are the ones who need to be in school. They are the ones who need the most attention and most help. However, school districts cannot afford to keep students who pose a danger to others, and they simply lack the time to give them extra attention, which often is what the students are crying out for.

Certainly it is more convenient to expel a child than to deal with his or her problems. However, convenience should not be a reason to oust a child who needs help. Banishing a child from school will not solve any problems. Expulsion only intensifies feelings of separation and aggravates the hatred and bitterness inherent in the child.

I know that the growing number of expulsions is not an isolated problem that is unique to Kershaw County. The problem is one which exists in every school district in this nation; it exists in our society as a whole.

We banish our problems to the far-off corners, out of sight and out of mind. Time doesn't allow us to do otherwise. But these students who are punished by being pushed away haunt me, and I wonder if America in turn is haunted by those it pushes away.

We have to find a better solution.

Thompson provides 'Blessed Assurance' on Sunday mornings

Dr. Dean Thompson teaches Sunday school at All Saints' Episcopal Church in Clinton. file photo

by Karen O'Conner
STAFF WRITER

Where would you expect to find a PC professor on Sundays? Certainly not teaching a class, right? Think again. Dr. Dean Thompson finds himself in the role of teacher even on the weekends.

In addition to guiding PC students through the joys and rigors of English literature on weekdays, Thompson fills the capacity of spiritual leader on Sundays.

Teaching, of course, is nothing new to Dr. Thompson. He has spent 10 years working in the college classroom. And for several years he was a Sunday school teacher of fifth and sixth grade students. "Teaching that class is why I have gray hair now," jokes Thompson.

Last January, however, Thompson began teaching a Sunday school class for college-age students at All Saints' Episcopal Church in Clinton.

And how many PC students, you ask, are springing out of their comfortable beds and dashing off to church and Sunday school on Sunday mornings?

"The numbers haven't been big," said Thompson. "I'm realistic enough to know that many students are sleeping off Saturday night's sin and debauchery."

"But there are others who hunger for spiritual nourishment apart from that which the college offers - a complement to their training on campus - and it struck me that my offering a Sunday school class which explores and nurtures the spiritual self might well help some students in their moral and ethical growth on campus," he added.

Sunday worship service at All Saints' starts at 10:00 am and is followed by fellowship, coffee, and donuts from 11:00 to 11:15 am. After they "fuel up," Thompson and his students begin class and discussion.

Thompson is extremely proud of his sterling track record for always letting students out of class on time. "I never dismiss my students late. I want them to be first in line for Mr. Powell's fried chicken and green beans at GDH," he said.

This past semester, the focus in the Sunday school class has been on "Exploring Spiritual Gifts." However, Thompson is planning a special program for the month of December that will deal with the meaning of Christmas. Next semester's students will begin a critical reading of selected books in the Bible.

Learning occurs in all types of classrooms and even outside of classroom confines, as Dr. Thompson well knows.

"We are all on a spiritual journey together; we might as well meet one hour a week and compare notes. And as always, I'm learning too much from my students to call myself the sole teacher," said Thompson.

After Hours: PC faculty do more than teach

Moncrief uses photography to capture the natural world's beauty

by Brian Sacco
FEATURES EDITOR

For many people the individual and unique beauty of the natural world pass by their field of vision without so much as causing the blink of an eye. But for Dr. William Moncrief, Senior Vice President for Academic Affairs at Presbyterian, capturing the essence of nature on film has evolved from a simple hobby to a personal rewarding avocation. Dr. Moncrief explained that anyone can learn to use a camera, but it takes a special kind of artistic approach to impart personal visions of a higher order of the natural world on a photograph. "My photography is an attempt to capture some of these transitory moments in time which reach beyond time, serendipitous moments of grace which give our lives perspective," said Moncrief.

Moncrief began this hobby in high school after seeing a picture which stimulated an artistic interest: "I saw a silhouette of a cousin on horseback and thought that it was neat." He discovered over time that there were many surprises involved in photography, especially after taking a picture, he notices the significance. "When I recognize something that I want to take a picture of, I make an honest attempt to capture the image," stated Moncrief.

Moncrief's talents have evolved over the years as evidenced by his involvement with several prominent photography organizations

Show ("State of the Art") of the Guild of South Carolina Artists (1991).

His work is contained in private a one-man show containing forty-five of his photographs was exhibited at the Keturah Museum of the McCormick Arts Council in McCormick, South Carolina; in May 1992, sixty works appeared in a one-man show at The Museum in Greenwood, South Carolina; in October 1992, a one-man show of thirty-five of his photographs inaugurated a new gallery at Piedmont College in Demorest, Georgia; in April and May of 1993, an exhibit of thirty-three of his photographs inaugurated a new gallery space at Rabun Gap-Nacoochee School in Rabun Gap, Georgia; and in September 1993 an exhibit of twenty-six photographs was shown at Oxford College of Emory University in Oxford, Georgia.

Moncrief is a member of the South Carolina Photographers' Guild, the Guild of South Carolina Artists, and the Artists' Guild of Spartanburg.

Dr. Moncrief explained that many of his acquaintances don't recognize him without a camera around his neck. He stated that his photographs rarely are posed because he thinks that if he takes the picture spontaneously he usually comes out with quality pictures. Moncrief says, "Photography helps me deal with a self-fulfillment of interest and a need to be creative."

Dean Moncrief began his photography hobby while in high school.

photo by Brooke Peterson
and shows. During the last five years, Moncrief's work has appeared in ten juried and invited exhibitions, including Southern Vision (1988), the annual Juried Show of Pickens Museum (1989, 1990), the Annual Juried Show of the Artists' Guild of Spartanburg (1991), and the Annual Juried collections from Mobile, Alabama, to Brooklyn, New York, and has also been featured in three books, including The Big Click: Photographing South Carolina (1991). During March 1992, fifty-nine of his photographs were displayed in a one-man show at Presbyterian College; in April 1992,

Stewart fell in love with music before falling for literature

Stewart has met many people through music, including her late husband. "We met at a Music Festival in Sewanee, Tennessee. He family, at that moment," said Stewart.

Stewart said she had thought of herself as a cellist and when she would see people from

Dr. Rachel Stewart played with the Birmingham and Los Angeles symphonies. photo by Brooke Peterson

played viola and was excellent. On our first date we played with his family. I couldn't play a high part on my cello, so I lowered it an octave. He and his family complemented me and I fell in love with him, and his entire her childhood, they, too, thought of her as a cellist, but that changed for her when she went away to school at Harvard. Stewart said, "I always saw myself as a cellist, then at Harvard, I fell in love with books, and WOW!"

Stewart said that after she fell in love with books, she would rather read than play, but she continued to play in orchestras with her husband because he loved it so much.

After her husband's death in 1969, she never played in the symphony again. "I had three daughters to raise and knew I couldn't make enough to live on, so I went with my heart to books," she said.

However, the influence of music did not disappear from her household entirely. Stewart's daughters were taught to enjoy and appreciate the art. In fact, Stewart's middle daughter, Jane, went on to make music a career and is the youngest violinist in the National Symphony Orchestra at the Kennedy Center in Washington, D.C.

Her love of books is what brought Stewart to Clinton and to Presbyterian College. She decided that she wanted to raise her family in a small, Southern, church-related town. She said when she visited Clinton, she knew PC is where she wanted to be.

"I walked from the Administration building to Georgia Hall, and I watched the people on campus. I then knew I wanted to be here and I am grateful that I am."

Burnside enjoys finer points of ballroom dancing, ping-pong

by Kim Wood
STAFF WRITER

Have you always wanted to waltz, but never knew how? Are you too scared to do the fox trot, swing, or rumba?

PC history professor Dr. Ron Burnside and his wife Betty once had the same problem. "When we would go out to different clubs, we never went near a dance floor," said Burnside. "After dinner, when other people got up to dance, we always felt out of place because we didn't know how."

However, the fear of the floor soon passed when the Arthur Murray Dance Studio opened in Greenville in the late '70s. "At that point, we welcomed the chance to learn a few dance steps," said Burnside.

After six months of lessons, the Burnside's began to feel at ease with their feet and have been dancing ever since. "Dancing is something we both enjoy and can do together."

said Dr. Burnside.

The Burnside's brought their dance talent to PC in the mid '80's. At that time, the Military Science Department decided to add a formal dinner and ballroom dancing to its annual military ball.

"I remember that one of my students who was going to the ball came by and said that he and his partner had no idea how to dance. He asked if my wife and I could teach them, so we agreed to give it a try," said Burnside.

The Burnside's soon began teaching many PC students ballroom dancing. "The students enjoyed the dancing class so much, so we have continued to offer it every year," added Burnside.

In the Spring of 1991, Dr. and Mrs. Burnside spent six months in China teaching English. However, English isn't all they taught. They also spent time teaching their Chinese students ballroom dancing. "The Chinese like to dance, and they were glad to have the opportunity to learn some American dance steps," said Dr. Burnside.

"I enjoy teaching students how to dance," said Burnside. "It gives me an opportunity to show that I have other interests besides teaching history."

Burnside's other interests include playing ping-pong and racket ball. He can often be found practicing in Springs Campus Center or playing in the intramural tournaments for both sports. "I enjoy ping-pong and racket ball because, like dancing, they bring me into contact with students outside the classroom setting, which is a very important element of college," he said.

Dr. Ron Burnside can often be found playing ping-pong in Springs. photo by Kim Gibson

Volleyball team wins SAC-8 Tournament

by Margaret Ellen Pender
STAFF WRITER

Imagine for a moment that you are Coach Beth Couture. You began the season with an incredibly young squad, but after months of living and breathing nothing but volleyball, you have molded a collection of young ladies into a powerful, bloodthirsty team of volleyball players who have, indeed, continued PC's tradition of volleyball excellence.

Imagine now that you are Coach Couture attempting to sleep on the night prior to the SAC tournament. After posting an impressive regular season record of 29-7, you believe that the Lady Hose have matured greatly during the season and that you and the team are prepared for the challenge ahead. However, there may be a miniscule amount of apprehension lingering in the back of your mind because you realize that your team will most likely face Elon, the number one seed and a team which defeated the Lady Hose twice during the regular season.

Despite what Coach Couture's hopes for her squad may have been, she probably would never have dreamed of the success that they enjoyed in the SAC tournament. On Friday, Nov. 5, the Lady Blue Hose crushed Gardner-Webb 3-0 and Wingate 3-0, and then went on to slay their Goliath by defeating Elon 3-0. The following morning, the Lady Blue Hose squared off against Elon again and in the words of senior Jennifer Smith, the Hose "kicked their tails!" She went on to explain that "we played out of our minds. We were pumped; nothing could have been better!" And indeed, it seemed so. The Lady Blue Hose did not lose a game during the entire tournament. Deedy Williams, Kristy Tarallo (30 kills, 63 digs), and Watoma Williams (58 kills, 10 digs, 10 blocks) were named to the All-Tournament

Conference Freshman of the Year Watoma Williams and Lori Suit block an opponent's spike in a recent win.

photo by Steve Owens

team and Deedy Williams who notched 31 kills (90 overall) and 15 digs in the final match was selected as the tournament Most Valuable Player. Perhaps more impressively, Deedy Williams and Tarallo were chosen for the All-Conference team and Watoma Williams was named Freshman of the Year for the SAC.

By winning the SAC Tournament, PC advanced to the NCAA Division II Regionals. The Lady Blue Hose will face Slippery Rock, PA tonight. The winner of that game will play Gannon, PA tomorrow. Both games will be at Erie, PA.

Basketball teams begin season with high expectations

by Everett Catts
SPORTS EDITOR

The 1993-94 basketball season is just around the corner, and many expect both teams, which will compete in NCAA Division II, to go far.

The men's team is coming off its best season in school history, when PC's 1992 squad went 27-5 (13-1 in the conference), won the conference title, advanced to the District 26 finals and NAIA National Tournament, and were ranked seventh in the nation. Head Coach Gregg Nibert, who was named Conference and District Coach of the Year in '93, is excited about his squad in the upcoming season.

This year's team has three starters back, and are picked to win the conference again in the pre-season polls. Andrew Wellman, an All-Conference selection, leads the returners. After averaging ten points per game in his first two years, Wellman, a senior guard, was second on the team in scoring last year with 13 ppg. Wellman led the team and the conference in three-point shooting percentage with a 47% mark which was fourth in the nation, and he is a Pre-Season All-American. Senior center John Lloyd, who averaged 11 points per game, and Ernest Holiday, a junior, will run the floor at the point guard position. Johnathan Bankhead, Brian Franklin, Tony Grant, and Jay Whitney will battle for the two forward positions, which were vacated by and Bret Jones and Derek Lovelace.

Jones, who graduated and is now a assistant coach here, was the leader of the 1993 team.

With eleven lettermen back, this year's Blue Hose have more depth than last year and should once again vie for the conference title. PC's first home game is on December 1 at 7:30, against Allen.

The women's squad, coached by Beth Couture, is coming off a 17-11 season in which they were fourth in the conference. The 1994 season will be brighter than ever with all five starters back. Melanie Johnson, Jennifer Hilliard, Chris Mitchum, Kaye Watts, and Deedy Williams are returning for the Lady Blue Hose.

Johnson, a senior forward, averaged 18 points, three steals, and six rebounds per game and was PC's only All-Conference selection.

Jennifer Hilliard, a senior forward who scored 15 points per game and hauled in a team-high 7.5 rebounds per outing, is Johnson's sidekick. The two players led the team in those two categories in most games.

Sophomore Chris Mitchum and junior Kaye Watts are the squad's returning guards.

Senior DeeDee Williams returns after scoring 7.5 points per game last year. Senior Shannon Trammel, sophomore Jennifer Mims, and freshman Watoma Williams, will compete for playing time at the center position.

Freshmen Suzanne Thorsland and Karen Neely will battle to dethrone the starters, along with sophomore Kristy Tarallo.

The Lady Blue Hose's first home game is this Tuesday, November 23, at 7:00 pm.

Sports View

by Everett Catts
SPORTS EDITOR

In the past three weeks, three fall sports finished their seasons with great success. In the school's first year of NCAA Division II, the four fall sports have a combined record of 58-20-3.

The men's soccer team, which lost six starters to graduation, won the SAC-8 regular season and tournament titles, and finished 14-3-3.

The team had six All-Conference players and Jimmy May was named Freshman of the Year. Although the men's team shutout their final two opponents and played very well, only one player, Jason Woodall, made the All-Tournament team. One player? How about four or five? I can't believe that fact; they won the entire tournament!

The women's volleyball team also had a good year under similar circumstances. This year's 34-6 team lost three senior starters in '92 and hasten freshmen and sophomores. Nevertheless, the Lady Blue Hose finished second in the conference, behind Elon, the only SAC-8 team to beat them. Only two players represented PC on the All-Conference team, but Watoma Williams was named Freshman of the Year. In the conference tournament PC was undefeated and unstoppable. The Lady Blue Hose crushed Elon twice in the tourney, getting revenge on the Fighting Christians. Now that PC has reached the regionals, there's no telling what they can do.

The women's soccer team was third in the conference with a 5-2 record and overall record of 13-5. The Lady Blue Hose were also twice ranked nationally. Five players represented PC on the All-Conference teams, and Missy Butler was SAC-8 Player of the Year for the second time in as many years. Although the team was ousted from the playoffs in the tournament semifinals, they had more players (two) on the All-Tournament team than the men's team.

The Blue Hose football team, which is now 5-6, would be 8-3 if not for early season mistakes. Four of their losses have been by margins of a touchdown or less. Despite the frustration, the Blue Hose are 4-3 in the conference, good for a third place tie with Lenoir Rhyne. Mason Gordon broke three school records, finishing the year with 1,401 rushing yards.

Butler proves a leader in women's soccer

Senior leads Blue Hose team to instant success

by Gray Lesesne
STAFF WRITER

For senior Missy Butler, a Presbyterian College education has included much more than achievements in the classroom and on the soccer field, where her athletic abilities have brought the women's soccer program and the college much recognition. Her accomplishments and awards include such valuable titles as All-American Soccer Player for three years (twice recognized by the NAIA), first All-South Atlantic Conference, 1992 District Player of the Year, and member of the All-SAC Tournament team. Butler may even be named an All-American again this year. As Butler attempts to recall her many titles and awards, she laughs, saying, "I never think about them."

Butler, a sweeper who was converted to forward last year, thinks that her best contribution to the Lady Blue Hose soccer program is her speed. "I hope that I will be respected as a player...because I respect everyone who's playing," says Butler, a native of Columbia, SC. She said that the PC soccer program "has given a tremendous amount to me. It demands that you be the best you can be, both on and off the field." During her tenure at PC, Butler has given her best to the college.

In 1992 Butler was honored by being named South Atlantic Player of the Year after leading her team with eighteen goals and five assists. Butler was again named Player of the Year this year after leading her team in goals (10) and points (22). In her four years here Butler has had twenty-nine goals, thirteen assists, and seventy-one points. Even more impressive is the fact that Butler has scored 28 goals and totaled 63 points in her past two years at PC.

Involvement in the Lady Blue Hose program includes about two and a half hours of practice six days a week, plus games at home and on the road. Butler said that the program has improved substantially under the leadership of Head Coach Brian Purcell, who took the then club sport and made it a varsity sport five years ago.

"Missy has given a lot to her

Missy Butler eyes the ball as she speeds past two Coker defenders.

photo by Steve Owens

team...including her tremendous speed, agility, and ability to change directions quickly. Also, she frees other teammates up to score because the competition has to worry about her," said Purcell.

"She's a silent leader," said teammate Renee Bevil, adding, "her best qualities are her speed, skill, and also her heart. She wants to win and it shows."

Many fans who follow women's soccer note the intensity and degree of aggression with athletes in the sport. However, Butler has conducted herself in a most sportsman-like manner and has never in her four years here received a yellow or red card, a feat which teammate Bevil says is "typical for Missy...I've never seen her lose her temper." Butler has also remained "thankfully uninjured" during her career at PC, playing in all 72 games since 1990.

Butler notes that the discipline women's soccer team members are under is a positive facet of being on the team. "Coach Purcell is proud to keep our standards high. The discipline we have is good...it helps us as a team," said Butler.

Butler begins her personal preparation for each game by thinking about her love for the sport. "That's why I'm here," she said. "I love just being out there, whether we win or lose."

An education major, Butler hopes to be a role model for children by "going out and playing hard. You have to show them that you love playing the sport." She also feels that role models must set good examples on and off the soccer field. "You want to be respected as a [team] player," she said. After graduation Butler plans to teach with an emphasis in special education. She wants to continue with soccer, possibly as a club sport.

"Missy is a good role model," says Purcell. "I think she'll be an excellent teacher or coach."

Mistakes lead to another tough Blue Hose football loss

by Everett Catts
SPORTS EDITOR

Those fans who watched number one FSU and number two Notre Dame missed a battle of two of the top three teams in the SAC-8. On November 13 PC, tied for second with Elon, hosted a Carson-Newman team which was first in the conference (6-0 SAC) and ranked 15th in the nation.

Fresh off a three-game win streak, PC's hopes of a winning season were crushed by two big mistakes—kickoff returns for touchdowns.

On the opening kickoff Carson Newman's Kendall James received the ball at the eleven and ran 89 yards for a touchdown. After the Blue Hose tied 7-7 on Stuart Hackney's eight-yard catch, PC once again kicked the ball to James, who returned the kick for a 94 yard score which gave Carson-Newman the lead (14-7) and momentum they needed.

In the second quarter neither team could score until PC's Barry Brown recovered a punt snap at the Eagles' 47, setting up a 45-yard field goal by Frank Jordan. The score put PC within four, 14-10.

Carson-Newman's touchdown put them up 21-10, a score which would stand at halftime.

In the third quarter, both teams' offenses were stagnant, and the Blue Hose had to settle for a field goal and never got past the Eagles' 28.

The field goal did put PC within eight, 21-13, but the Blue Hose would not score again. Carson-Newman added a fourth quarter TD and won 28-13.

Although PC lost the game and finished tied for third in the conference with a 4-3 slate, there were some positives which came out of the game. Steve Gorrle led the offense with 93 yards rushing on 19 carries. Mason Gordon, who had been averaging 174 yards against SAC opponents, had only 53 yards rushing, but broke Clayton Burke's record for rushing yards in a season. Gordon's 53 yards gave him the school record for most rushing yards in a season (1401).

Three PC players had six tackles or more to lead the defense.

Men's soccer team takes conference crown again

by Brian Steely
STAFF WRITER

On November 2, PC's men's soccer team began the first round of the Food Lion South Atlantic Conference Men's Soccer Tournament against the number 8 seed Mars Hill. Mars Hill was defeated by the Blue Hose 4-1.

The match marked the last home game for seniors Chris Bruno, John Mairs and Jason Woodall. The trio is the winningest four-year class in PC men's soccer history.

The team then advanced to the semi-finals of the tournament in Hickory, North Carolina, to face the Lenoir-Rhyne Bears, the defending South Atlantic Conference champions.

The Bears would have to take a seat in the stands for the title game after the Blue Hose defeated them 1-0. The one goal against Lenoir-Rhyne was made possible when Chris Napier crossed to Bruno in the center of the box. Bruno kicked the ball into the right side of the net to put the Hose on top for good.

Mark Albertus continued his solid goalkeeping with seven saves and the defense did an excellent job of providing him with support.

Advancing to the finals of the tournament, the Hose played number two seed Catawba for the title. Mairs and Tyler Boulware scored the only two goals of the match, defeating Catawba 2-0, and winning the tournament.

"A lot of credit needs to go to Coach Polson for taking a team that graduated seven starters last year and guiding them to another SAC championship," said Albertus.

Bruno tied Presbyterian's all-time record for games played with 78. Previously, that was a record held only by '93 graduate Michael Martin. Woodall finished third on the all-time list with a total of 74 games played.

Albertus led the conference in goals and shutouts, while placing third in saves with 100. After the tournament, Albertus had a new school and conference record with 11 shutouts.

Named to the All-Conference first team were Woodall, and Albertus. Jimmy May, Bruno, Brian Blackwell, and Napier were honored on the second team. May was named the SAC-8 Freshman of the Year. Woodall was PC's only All-Tournament selection.

Encore

'SUB has something for everyone'

by Kim Rabon
ENTERTAINMENT EDITOR

Because PC is a small school and contains a diverse group of students, it is a tough job to find activities that everyone will like. The Student Union Board is the organization on campus that takes on this job each year. SUB organizes numerous events from concerts and movies to how-to workshops to entertain the PC students.

I'm dedicating my column to SUB this time not to advertise the group, but to commend them for doing a great job so far this year. I've had a chance to go to several activities that SUB has sponsored, and each time I have gone away saying, "That was great!"

It is really nice to know that there is a group on campus that is dedicated to making sure you have something to do and have fun doing it.

The events that I have had a chance to be a part of this year include the Regency concert. This group of singers entertained everyone with their variety of songs and amusing conversations in between.

I also had a chance to see and participate in the game show Blizzard of Bucks. I have never seen a game show in person, so this was a unique experience for me.

Last, but certainly not least, I went to the ever-popular hypnotist. This event drew a very large crowd. I thought this event was very interesting, and I was glad to have seen it.

As always, SUB brings the movies to Springs every month. Students get a chance to see movies they have missed or get a chance to see some of their favorites again.

Coming soon, the Student Union Board will have their own telephone line that will have the upcoming events of the week recorded. SUB has something for everyone. Make sure you check out what is coming up and attend some for yourself. Believe me, you won't be disappointed.

Habitat Bandblast to feature Casual Insanity

by Kim Rabon
ENTERTAINMENT EDITOR

Listening to great bands for a great cause: what could be better? You'll have an opportunity, tomorrow, in fact, to do just that. Habitat for Humanity is sponsoring its annual Bandblast Saturday, November 20. Bandblast is a chance to hear some awesome music while at the same time taking advantage of the opportunity to help others.

This year's Bandblast consists of three wonderful bands who have volunteered their services for a worthwhile cause. These bands include The Zoomworms, Casual Insanity, and Jaded Soul.

The Zoomworms consists of Presbyterian College students: Ben Medley, Bracken Carr, Jason Bundrick, and Dave Arthur. The band says that their influences comprise anything made of or produced sound, but mostly other bands. The Zoomworms concentrate on and play originals, rather than covers (well, O.K., they play one cover).

Casual Insanity is a band straight out of Rock Hill which consists of Sean Carrouth, Tim Dockery, Kyle Gunderson, Rick Lewis, and Brian Taylor.

Casual Insanity says that they have a rhythmic sound that goes back to the basics in Rock and Roll and tells a story. This band guarantees to bring to you "an attitude, an issue, a mental musical opportunity, and a new outlook on the music in your life."

The third band that will be performing is Jaded Soul. Information concerning this band was delayed, so we are unable to provide further details. The music from this band is sure to be as good as the other two bands playing.

Bandblast will be taking place in the Springs Campus Center gym from 1:00 to 6:00 on November 20. Tickets, which are $5.00 are being sold door to door and in GDH. Come out and enjoy a day of great music and leave knowing not only that you've had a good time, but you have helped someone else.

For more information, contact PC student Tabitha Terry.

Casual Insanity will be featured at Habitat for Humanity's annual Bandblast. The Rock Hill-based band will perform along with two other bands on Saturday in Close Arena from 1pm-6pm.

Photo courtesy of L&L Marketing

PC Choir concert will feature a taste of the Renaissance

by Steve Owens
GUEST WRITER

The sights and sounds of the Renaissance Period will come to life on Sunday, Nov. 21, when the Presbyterian College Choir presents its 1993 Fall Concert, "Renaissance in Sound, Shape, and Color."

The concert will begin at 7:30 pm in Belk Auditorium. There is no admission charge, although donations will be accepted to help fund the choir's European tour scheduled for next May.

"The choir will sing music from the Renaissance, and Bob Hild, associate professor of art, has selected and will show slides of art work from the period," said Dr. Charles T. Gaines, director of the choir. "During the evening, the choir will demonstrate techniques used by composers of the Renaissance, and Dr. Hild will highlight techniques used by the artists of the period in the slides."

The concert will include both sacred and secular works by composers such as Palestrina, Lasso, Byrd, Monteverdi, Vittoria, Costeley, Arcadelt, Montezino, Finck, and Dufay. Included will be motets, Italian and English madrigals, Spanish Christmas carols, a German Christmas work, and French works.

Gaines said the choir is getting acquainted with many of the college's Amity Scholars from Europe, who are coaching the choir on some of the German, French, and Spanish texts to give the concert a truly international flavor. That touch, coupled with the visual displays of Renaissance artwork, should give the audience a true taste of the period.

"I think most people in the audience will enjoy seeing the slides and hearing the music at the same time. It is simply a different approach to a concert," Gaines said. "I hope it will give the audience a true feeling of the sounds, shapes, and colors of the Renaissance period."

The Episcopal Church Especially Welcomes Students
+ ALL SAINTS' EPISCOPAL CHURCH
One Block North of Greenville Dining Hall

Sunday Schedule

8:30 & 10:00 am Holy Eucharist
11:00 am Fellowship (in Parish Hall)
11:15 am College Class (with Dr. Dean Thompson)

Monday Evenings

+ 9:00 pm CANTERBURY (at "Crossroads" in Douglas House)

Welcome to CANTERBURY
The Episcopal student group
on campus

* Need someone to talk to? The Rev. Nancy J. Allison, Rector (833-1308)
The Rev. Lemuel Pearson, Priest-in-Charge (833-8295)

Sounds of Christmas...

The 28th annual Madrigal Dinner-Concert will be held on December 3 and 4 in Greenville Dining Hall. The event has become a Christmas tradition at PC and features the Madrigal Singers, strolling minstrels, the Morris dancers, a magician, and a traditional English meal. Reservations for the dinner-concert must be made by November 22. Tickets are $15 per person. For more information, contact the Music Department.

photo by Steve Owens

Mastersingers to usher in holidays

by Kim Rabon
ENTERTAINMENT EDITOR

It is finally that time of year that we start to hear the joyous songs of Christmas. Presbyterian College students and staff, as well as the community, will have a chance to hear these songs performed on campus by a very talented group of individuals: The Palmetto Mastersingers.

The Palmetto Mastersingers are a choir of 75 to 80 men, mostly out of Columbia. Of course, we are proud to have PC's very own Randy Randall and Jerry Biebesheimer as part of the choir. The choir will be performing a variety of Christmas selections from various countries. The choir will also be joined by 50 young men from Lauren's High School for a special Christmas medley.

Dr. Donald Gray, the director of The Palmetto Mastersingers, has a varied background as a singer, opera director and choral conductor. Dr. Gray has over twenty-five roles to his credit. He established the USC Opera Workshop in 1972 and subsequently served eighteen seasons as artistic director of the Columbia Lyric Opera. He also has served as guest director for several other companies. He received his Doctor of Music degree from Northwestern University in 1972 and has been on the faculty at USC for twenty years, where he serves as coordinator of the Voice Division.

The Palmetto Mastersingers will be performing in Belk Auditorium on Tuesday, December 7, at 7:30. This Christmas concert is sure to be one of many highlights of the Christmas season.

Drama department to present one acts

"The Magic Well" directed by Karen Wittenbrook, and "The Last Flapper" directed by Ann Marie Blair will be performed in Harper Center Theater on November 19 and 20. Both plays will be performed each evening beginning at 7:30 pm. Tickets go on sale for $2 at 7:00 pm before the performance; no reserved seating will be available.

"The Last Flapper" by Jim Luce, directed by, and starring Ann Marie Blair is the story of Zelda Fitzgerald, wife of author F. Scott Fitzgerald. In this one-woman show, Zelda relives her life through her disease of schizophrenia. Jason D. Lee will be acting as stage manager.

Herman Ammann's "The Magic Well" will be directed by Karen Wittenbrook, Erika Torrey is the stage manager, and Brian Parrish and Holly Nelson are the assistant stage managers/understudies. This fairy tale play includes a dragon, a frog, a town poet, and an old hag in the story surrounding a magic well. Director, Wittenbrook says the play "promises to be full of laughs and craziness, so come out with your sense of humor." Cast members include: Brad Sims, Amy Ferguson, Jeff Phillips, Shannon Howard, Shealy Painter, Jamie Bouknight, Alyssa Pinkerton, Brad Williams, Lee Ann Clark, Carey Bailey, Jean Greenman, Carrie Yurcisin, Brooke Peterson, and Jason D. Lee.

Campus & Clubs...

Intramural News

by Chris Patterson
INTRAMURAL DIRECTOR

This year's intramural soccer season ended on November 4 with the following teams as champions: Men's A League (Pi Kappas), Men's B League (KA), Women's League (Couture's Chaos). Spencer Treadwell of Pi Kappas led all male scorers this season with nine goals while Melanie Johnson led Couture's Chaos to their second consecutive women's championship.

On October 27, the Fall Swim Meet was held in Springs with over 100 students participating. The men's champion was Theta Chi and the women's champion was Alpha Delta Pi. The winning teams were paced by outstanding swimming from Trip Lacost of Theta Chi and Jessica McCullough and Marion Grossman of AD PI.

On November 9, PC's men's football champions, known as Ladies' Choice, traveled to Newberry to take on one of their teams in the first annual Intramural Bronze Derby. The PC team won the game 52 to 44. The game was videotaped and will be broadcast on the PC cable channel at various times during the next few weeks.

Crop Walk/Run

The annual Crop Walk/Run will be held tomorrow during the Habitat Band Blast. Students are encouraged to support those who are participating. For more information, contact the Chaplain's Office at Ext. 8476.

Financial Aid

The ETV Endowment of South Carolina is sponsoring six student internships, available during the summer of 1994 at South Carolina ETV.

The internships require 40 working hours a week for 10 weeks for a payment of $180 per week. Applicants must have career interests in some professional field related to the activities of South Carolina ETV.

Areas of emphasis include skills in fundraising, script writing, telemarketing, computer sciences, radio and television production, broadcast engineering, and public information.

In addition to career interests, applicants will be judged on scholastic record and participation in other outside activities. Preference will be given to South Carolina college students.

The deadline for application at ETV is February 1, 1994. Applications are available in the PC Financial Aid Office.

Holiday Festivals

The annual Chitlin' Strut will be held November 26-27 in Sally, South Carolina. The event will feature a parade, crafts, and loads of chitlins, which are fried pig intestines. So, visit Sally and "pig out."

SGA

On Monday, November 15, the officers of the Student Government Association and the officers of the College met to discuss current issues of concern on campus. Topics discussed included the infirmity situation, housing options, the new academic facility, recycling efforts, among other topics. SGA encourages all students to voice their concerns either by contacting a member of the council or by attending the Monday night meetings at 8:00 pm.

Pi Kappa Phi

On Saturday, November 6, Beta chapter successfully raised over $2,700 for PUSH, our national service project to benefit the severely disabled. We will be involved in several projects this year to raise money for PUSH and hope that the PC community will make every effort to support this worthwhile endeavor.

Sigma Sigma Sigma

Tri Sigma sorority raised over $500 for the Robbie Page Memorial Fund during share with a child week, October 25-29. The money was raised by Toll-Roading, and a Rock-a-thon in front of Springs Campus Center. We would like to welcome new members Marianne Smith, and Jenny Harris.

INTERVIEW SUITS
STARTING AT $200

The Men's Shop
PUBLIC SQUARE LAURENS

Sounds Good

Smashing Pumpkins:
Drowning in their own talent

by Brian Steely
STAFF WRITER

Smashing Pumpkins, the self-professed geeks from Chicago, recently released the second LP, Siamese Dream.

With the lyrical wisdom and guitar wizardry of their frontman Billy Corgan, the Pumpkins are quickly becoming a household name. The group's influences come from the likes of Hendrix and Pink Floyd run through the blender with a liberal dose of early seventies Black Sabbath to boost the volume department. Internal problems almost tore the band apart during the recording of their new album, but they came up with nothing short of a masterpiece.

The 13-song Siamese Dream shows the band to be more challenging and more inclined to take leaps into different keys and moods than they were in their first album, Gish. "There should be lots of parts if a song goes over four minutes, or else it's going to get boring," Corgan says.

Their monstrous guitar sound shows through in "Rocket," "Hummer" and "Geek USA." They also pull out two incredible tracks with no guitar sound at all: "Disarm" is performed with just acoustic piano and strings, while "Spaceboy" contains the sound of a Mellotron. The loud guitars are present in "Mayonaise," but the attack is muted giving the song a lush yet intense sound.

Last year, I had the privilege of talking to Corgan about the band's success. I asked him if he were worried about people's pointing at them as sell-outs. He said that the band wasn't selling out, but they were buying in.

Corgan knew what he was talking about as the once small indie band went Platinum last Tuesday with Siamese Dream. See them live if you get the chance, because like the great Jane's Addiction, the Smashing Pumpkins are celebrating the art of falling apart.

Tens of thousands of people will need blood during the holidays.

Still wondering what to give?

American Red Cross

Give blood again. Once more will be felt for a lifetime.

PHOTO BY JERRY SALAS

Ad
CROSS

THE BLUE STOCKING

"Give the people the light, so they may find the way."

Volume LXXXVIII Number 5

PRESBYTERIAN COLLEGE

Clinton, South Carolina 29325

December 10, 1993

PC coaching legend Cally Gault announces retirement

Cally Gault

file photo

by Steve Owens
GUEST WRITER

Presbyterian College officials have begun their search for a new athletic director after Cally Gault announced that he will retire at the conclusion of the 1993-94 academic year.

"After 31 years, I feel like I've been married to Presbyterian College. But this isn't a divorce, I just won't draw a salary and I won't have a desk," Gault said. "It is time for a change on my part because there are some things I would like to do that include family and hobbies, but PC will continue to be as close to my heart as always. I will be available if needed and called upon, but I won't be trying to run things from the outside."

"Cally Gault has, for more than three decades, guided the development of athletics at Presbyterian College in a remarkable way," PC President Dr. Kenneth B. Orr said. "He has been recognized by his peers for his distinctive contributions to athletics, and we have, as a college, benefitted from the wide respect he enjoys and the talent he has brought to his assignment."

Recognized as one of South Carolina's coaching legends, Gault has won more than any other PC football coach, posting a 22-year record of 127-101-8. He retired from coaching in 1984 to devote his full attention to the athletic director position, which he has held for 31 years.

"I think retiring from coaching was probably a bigger step for me to take because I really loved coaching. I didn't realize how much I loved it until I didn't do it anymore," Gault said. "A coach's job is very time consuming, but in the last few years it has been equally time consuming to be an athletic director with the athletic program's move to the NCAA (from the NAIA), fund raising, and other duties."

Gault received his undergraduate degree from Presbyterian College in 1948 and his master's degree from USC in 1956. He established himself as one of South Carolina's top high school coaches during his tenure at North Augusta High School, where his teams won three state championships and won 42 consecutive games over a four-year span.

Gault returned to PC in 1963 and went on to win five South Carolina Coach of the Year awards. He is a member of the National Association of Intercollegiate (NAIA) Hall of Fame, the South Carolina Athletic Hall of faculty, administration, athletic department, and alumni. Members are: seniors Barry Brown and Kathleen Dowd of the student body; faculty members Dr. John Inman and Dr. Charles Coker; administrators Margaret Williamson and Tom Stallworth; Beth Couture and Bob Strock of the athletic department; and T.D. Todd, Jr. of Laurens, and Ralph N. "Buzz" Tedards of Clinton, representing the

"I hate to say I'm retiring because it is a word I don't like to use. My real retirement... will be in the First Presbyterian Church cemetery as close to the football field as possible."

-Gault

Fame, and the Greenville High School Hall of Fame.

"I hate to say I'm retiring because it is a word I don't like to use. My real retirement, as PC is concerned, will be in the First Presbyterian Church cemetery as close to the football field as possible," said Gault.

Replacing a legend is not an easy task, but it is a challenge that awaits a search committee to be chaired by President Orr.

The search committee is comprised of representatives from the PC student body, alumni.

The committee will accept resumes and inquiries through January 30, 1994. Finalists will be selected during February, and interviews will be conducted by committee members during March.

"We anticipate making a decision on the new athletic director in April, and the individual will assume the post on July 1, 1994," Orr said.

On The Inside

Page 2 . . .

Better late than never: 1992-93 PaC SaC publication delayed.

Page 2 . . .

Seasonal reflections: Silent Night Ball captures true meaning of Christmas.

Page 4 . . .

Senior Jennifer Smith focuses on her role as a volleyball setter.

Weekend vandalism spree wrecks campus PC student charged with 'malicious injury to property'

by Tobin Turner
NEWS EDITOR

A wave of vandalism hit the PC campus last weekend causing in excess of $500 damage.

Jack Robertson, director of the physical plant, called the vandalism the "most widespread and destructive acts I've seen at PC."

Director of Residence Life, Andy Altizer, agreed, adding, "In my two-and-a-half years at PC, this was the worst weekend for vandalism in the residence halls."

Multiple incidents of vandalism occurred within Georgia Hall—a glass door was shattered, a fire alarm was pulled, a fire safety light was removed, and several windows were broken.

Neville Hall had its two large flower pots and Christmas wreaths stolen from the front steps. Clinton Hall had a bench swing stolen from its porch. A ribbon was found missing from the Christmas tree in the lobby of Belk Hall.

In addition, two security poles were damaged near GDH which alone cost nearly $250 to repair. Two parking signs and a pole were stolen from the parking lot of Springs Campus Center.

Smyth Hall was also the victim of vandalism as it had three windows broken. In addition, soil from Neville's potted plants was found thrown about the center stairs and third floor hallway. The swing from Clinton Hall was also found in Smyth along with a U.S. Postal mailbox that had been stolen from the West Plaza of campus.

According to Grey Mayson, Public Safety chief, two suspects, one a PC student, have been summoned to appear in court on charges of malicious injury to property for their involvement in the Smyth Hall incidents. The suspects include PC junior Jason Patrick Woodall and former PC student Trenton Tillman III.

Several other students have been connected to the other acts of vandalism. "Most of the damage has been accounted for except the door of Georgia and we're confident we'll find out who did that," Altizer admits.

"The damage done this weekend represents the actions of only a few individuals and does not represent the behavior of the entire PC student body," he added.

PC Tidbits

Dorms to close on Friday, December 17

The residence halls and houses will close on Friday, December 17, at 5:00 pm (dorm cards will not work at this time). The dorms will re-open on Saturday, January 8 at noon.

The Residence Life Office reminds students to lock their room and bathroom doors before leaving for Christmas vacation. Christmas break is usually a time that many colleges experience an increased rate of thefts on campus. Students are also reminded to take home expensive jewelry and other items that could easily be taken out of rooms. Public Safety is willing to store stereos, TVs, etc., in Smith Administration Building.

Students are encouraged to take out their trash before leaving to reduce the chance of roaches over the holidays. Also, students are encouraged to help save electricity by unplugging all appliances that will not be needed while they are gone.

If a student is not planning to return to campus next semester or planning to move off campus over break, he or she should contact Mrs. Burriss in the Dean of Students Office (8277).

FCA plans holiday carolling, road trip

PC's chapter of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes is planning a number of Christmas activities for this weekend.

Tonight, the group will go carolling. Any students wishing to participate should meet at the Information Gazebo at 7:00 pm. Cookies and drinks will be served at Dr. Dean Thompson's home afterwards.

On Saturday, December 11, FCA will sponsor a road trip to see the Christmas lights of Tiny Town.

by Jason West
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

Christmas is much more than tinsel, shopping, and fruitcake Ornament captures meaning of season dinner. After our meal, it has become customary to trim Grandma's tree.

My grandmother is a very particular lady. She likes for the decorations to be hung in "just the right way." Grandma's tree includes white lights, crocheted snowflakes, bells, and a porcelain angel for the top. Each family member even has his or her own individual decoration, inscribed with the member's name, to hang. However, there is one ornament that is the most important of all and everyone wants to put it on the tree. That ornament is the Silent Night Ball.

Way back in 1959, my grandmother purchased the Silent Night Ball at a department store for $1.98. When it was new, the ball was a beautiful blue color with a church and the words Silent Night printed on it.

Over the years, that one ball has come to mean more to my family than any other part of Christmas. That ball is a part of the legacy and the meaning of Christmas in my house. To me, it symbolizes all of the good of the holiday season.

This year, the Silent Night Ball is 34 years old. Now, the ball is tarnished, the blue color has faded, and monetarily, it is worthless. Despite all that, the Silent Night Ball is still the joy of my Christmas season. I view it as a priceless antique that represents many Christmases gone by in my family.

The Silent Night Ball reminds me of the song "Herrloons," sung by Amy Grant. In that song, Grant sings of the importance of family and the real meaning of Christmas. I view the Silent Night Ball as more than an heirloom because it represents "all that I come from and all that I live for and all that I'm going to be."

During the holidays it is easy to get wrapped up in all the activities of the season. The Silent Night Ball reminds me that Christmas is not just a time for gifts, parties, and twinkling lights. It reminds me that Christmas is a time to appreciate the blessings of family and tradition.

May God bless you all as you celebrate this joyous season in your own special way.

Yearbook publication set back 1992-93 book delayed due to 'lost pages'

by Gray Lesene
STAFF WRITER

Since late September, eager upperclassmen have awaited the arrival of the 1992-93 PaC StaC yearbook. However, the annual has still not arrived on campus, several months behind its projected issue date.

Lauren Owings, 1992-93 PaC StaC Editor, attributes the delay to pages that were lost in shipping between the yearbook office and NewsFoto, Inc. of San Angelo, Texas. NewsFoto is the company that provides the publication service for the yearbook.

Owings dismissed rumors that entire disks of yearbook material were erased prior to the submission for final printing. "We kept backup copies of everything," she said.

Owings did not cite a specific target date for final distribution of the late publication. "Yearbook production is not a simple or fast process... that is where our problem is," said Owings. "The yearbook is being printed as fast as humanly possible."

Owings also dismissed rumors of any type of late fee incurred because the publication was not printed by a December deadline.

"I would like to personally apologize for the delay of the yearbook. We hope to distribute it as soon as possible," said Owings, who noted that this delay will not affect the publication of the 1993-94 PaC StaC

DRUNK DRIVING DOESN'T JUST KILL DRUNK DRIVERS.

Next time you and your friends are out drinking, do it wisely. It takes a step above the law to let the kids in the car. Friends don't let friends drive drunk.

Next time you and your friends are out drinking, do it wisely. It takes a step above the law to let the kids in the car. Friends don't let friends drive drunk.

FRIENDS DON'T LET FRIENDS DRIVE DRUNK.

The Episcopal Church Especially Welcomes Students
+ ALL SAINTS' EPISCOPAL CHURCH
One Block North of Greenville Dining Hall

Sunday Schedule

8:30 & 10:00 am Holy Eucharist
11:00 am Fellowship (in Parish Hall)
11:15 am College Class (with Dr. Dean Thompson)

Monday Evenings

+ 9:00 pm CANTERBURY (at "Crossroads" in Douglas House)

Welcome to CANTERBURY
the Episcopal student group
on campus

• Need someone to talk to?

The Rev. Nancy J. Allison, Rector (833-1388)
The Rev. Terriann Pearson, Priest-in-Charge (833-8095)

Blue Hose basketball team begins season with successive victories

PC's Tony Grant (32) is fouled by a Lees-McRae player as he drives toward the basket.

photo by Steve Owens

by Everett Catts
SPORTS EDITOR

After a slow start, the men's basketball team has won three in a row, and is now 4-3.

The squad opened the regular season with a 70-67 loss to Lees-McRae on November 22. Ernest Holiday led PC with 18 points. Tony Grant, Andrew Wellman, and Brian Franklin were also in double figures. Franklin led the team in rebounds with seven, and two players had six boards each.

Four days later, PC suffered their second loss with a 74-64 setback to Vorhees in the USC-Spartanburg Tournament. Wellman led all scorers with 17 points, and freshman Layne Fowler added 11. Grant led the team with nine boards, and Franklin had seven.

PC got their first win of the season with a 80-62 pounding of Limestone in the tournament's consolation game. Franklin led the team with a career-high 17 points. John Lloyd had 15 points and Wellman added eleven. Ronnie Cannon had nine points in only his fourth game as a Blue Hose. Cannon and Franklin led the team with seven boards apiece.

Two days later, PC defeated non-conference rival Newberry 73-64. Lloyd led all scorers with 20 points. Wellman, Franklin, and freshman Andre Newman had 18, 14, and 13 points, respectively.

On December 1 the Blue Hose had their first home game of the regular season, a 93-27 shellacking of Allen. Wellman, who connected on six of his seven shots, had 17 points to lead the team. Wellman also hit all five of his three-point shots. Lloyd added 13 points. Franklin led the team with seven boards.

The Blue Hose also played at Georgia Southern on December 3 before returning home to play Vorhees this past Monday. PC's next home game is on December 18 against USC-Aiken.

On December 3 the Blue Hose played at Georgia Southern, a team that advanced to the NCAA Division I Tournament in 1991. Franklin and Fowler scored 11 points each in a 72-58 loss.

PC returned home to play the Vorhees this past Monday. Jonathan Bankhead had 17 points as the Blue Hose crushed the Vorhees, 85-64. Three other players—John Lloyd (12), Wellman (11), and Franklin (10)—were in double figures in scoring. Layne Fowler broke a conference record when he handed out 13 assists.

Women's basketball team undefeated

by Everett Catts
SPORTS EDITOR

The 1993-94 Women's Basketball team is off to a quick start. The Lady Blue Hose are undefeated at 4-0 and holding opponents to an average of 49 points per game. PC's average margin of victory is an amazing 32 points.

The Lady Hose began the season at home on November 23 with a crushing blow as they defeated Converse 90-40. Jennifer Hilliard came off the bench to lead PC with 21 points. Chris Mitchum, another reserve player, had 11 points. Starters Melanie Johnson and Karen Neeley, a freshman, scored 15 and 9 points, respectively. Hilliard also led the team in rebounds with 8, and Lavette Douglas and Jennifer Mims poured in six apiece. Johnson led the team in assists with seven, and Mitchum had five.

On December 1 the Lady Blue Hose competed in the Little Four Tournament at Newberry College. In that game, PC edged Wofford 62-60. Mitchum led all scorers with 13 points and had five assists. Johnson and Hilliard followed with 12 and 11 points, respectively. Johnson, along with Mims, led the team in rebounds with eight each. Douglas had six boards in the victory.

On the following day in the tournament finals, the Lady Hose crushed host Newberry 117-40 to win the tournament championship. Neeley led the team with 28 points and 9 assists, and four other players were in double figures in scoring. Johnson poured in 17, Kristy Tarallo had 14, and Hilliard and Mitchum scored 10 each. Tarallo led the team with 10 rebounds, and Deedy Williams hauled in six.

Two days later, PC edged USC-Spartanburg 57-56. Hilliard led the Lady Blue Hose with 12 points, and Kaye Watts and Johnson each had nine. Williams had 10 rebounds to lead PC, and Jennifer Trammel hauled in six.

After opening their conference schedule with Gardner-Webb on December 8, PC returns home to play Newberry tomorrow night at 3:00 am. The team encourages everyone to come.

INTO THE NIGHT
AT Merry's

Free dessert with any entree

310 E. Carolina Avenue
Clinton 833-5090

cannot be used with any other coupon or special offer offer expires February 15, 1994

The staff of the Blue
Stocking wishes you a Merry Christmas and a happy 1994!

Smith focuses on good play, not limelight

by Margaret Ellen Pender
STAFF WRITER

There are some things in life which seem like they were simply made to go together, such as peanut butter and jelly, Oreos and milk, popcorn and movies. It is virtually impossible to have one without the other, and if some senseless person were to attempt to separate two of these things which are inextricably linked, the result would undoubtedly be some sort of cosmic calamity.

After hearing senior setter Jennifer Smith confess that she "could not have played volleyball anywhere else," it seems that perhaps there should be an addition to the list of inseparable elements.

Since her arrival at PC, Smith has made her presence known on the volleyball court as a consistent performer and a fierce competitor. Off the court, she has the reputation of a modest, soft-spoken team player who gladly embraces her role as a setter and accordingly is satisfied to stay out of the limelight.

"In high school, I accepted the fact that setters do not get much recognition but that is fine with me. I want to do what I'm supposed to do so that we can win and I can help others get All Conference," said Smith.

With Smith at the helm, the Lady Blue Hose have enjoyed almost unrivaled success. In her four years at the school, PC has posted an incredible record of 136-26, which translates to winning 81 percent of all matches. Smith notched her most outstanding individual accomplishment in a regular season match in October 1993, after dishing out 52 assists in a contest against Elon College. As a result, Smith became PC's all-time leader in the volleyball assist category with 3,051 in her career.

While the list of accomplishments is impressive, Smith did not begin her association with volleyball in hopes of becoming a star

She admits that she did not know "volleyball from soccer" when her recreation league basketball coach suggested that she give it a try. Smith eventually grew to develop a love for the game, played at Pickens High School, and dreamed of playing volleyball in college.

Since coming to PC, Smith has not regretted anything. "There is not another program like PC's. There can't be; otherwise, they would be winning like we do," she said.

Following graduation in May, Smith, a special education major, hopes to find a teaching job in South Carolina and perhaps to assume some coaching responsibilities. Although she had once thought of being a coach, Smith had "forgotten about the idea until Coach Beth Couture mentioned one day that she would make a good coach." Noting the influence that Couture has had on her, Smith lists coaching as a "definite possibility" and again credits the "great coaches (that she) has had to pattern herself after."

Jennifer Smith

file photo

PC students share visions of holiday happiness and seasonal joy

by Leslie Robinson
STAFF WRITER

As the Christmas holiday season has once again settled into the hearts and minds of PC students campus wide, many cannot help but think of those memorable moments awaiting at home. A tall, brightly and creatively decorated Christmas tree, home-cooked meals galore, and presents to go around for everyone are some of the many highlights which make the holiday season so special.

Because exams are nearing rapidly and students been on campus since late August, the days are beginning to seem longer and a small amount of homesickness is setting in as students anxiously await Christmastime. But what makes the holidays so special? What causes so much joy, love, and happiness?

When PC students were asked what makes the Christmas holidays so special to them, a majority stated that the chance to spend time with their families was the most important and special part of the holidays.

Sophomore Brett Easterling responded by saying, "Christmas is a time for gathering of friends and family and expressing love for each other. For me it is a time for reminiscing about the times I've shared with the people I care about."

Freshman Erin Smith exclaimed, "I like spending time with my family!"

Christmas decorations also provide immense pleasure for other PC students. Beyond the singing Christmas tree in GDH or the mistletoe in Clinton dorm, many people also enjoy decorating their own homes.

Freshman Sazy Ligon says her favorite part of the holidays is "being with my family and decorating."

Junior Rob McCredie stated, "Christmas is a time of decorating, spending time with my family and friends, eating well, and of course opening lots of presents!"

Christmas is also a time to be grateful for family and friends.

Dean of Admissions Margaret Williamson says Christmas is a time for "appreciating friends and family, thinking about and hopefully helping family and friends."

"I like sleeping late and eating lots of fruitcake over the Christmas holidays," said junior Dena Elliott.

Sophomore Ty Henson also says, "Contrary to popular belief, Christmas is not a competition to put the most lights on your house. It's a celebration of a year's worth of love among family and friends."

Although students and faculty across the campus find different things special about Christmas, generally everyone is looking forward to the time-off for celebration.

(Above) Freshman Suzanne Youmans gets into the holiday spirit by helping decorate Belk Hall with festive ornaments.

(Right) Seniors Leigh Stokes and Meredith Shealy place the finishing touches on their Christmas tree.

photos by Kim Gibson

1994

Neville Hall becomes first smoke free building on campus

by Dawn Banks
STAFF WRITER

On January 1, 1994, Neville Hall became the first smoke free academic building on the PC campus. The concept of a smoke free Neville Hall came from a group of concerned students, professors, and staff who feared the dangers of allergies and other health risk factors related to smoking. Although the new policy inconveniences smokers, vocal opposition to the plan has been minimal.

"I am a smoker and yes, I do recognize the effects of secondary smoke; therefore, I am in favor of this new policy," said Dr. Tom Weaver, associate professor of political science. "I am very compromising to the decision. It was handed down decently by (the administration) without being condescending to smokers."

"This decision also serves me by helping me smoke much less, as well as preventing secondary smoke (from being breathed by non-smokers). Smoking is an addiction and people should be more understanding, encouraging, and helpful," added Weaver.

"I support this policy. I personally feel that this decision was very appropriate as far as health issues are concerned; however, I feel that the rights and feelings of smokers should be validated also by at least allowing some indoor smoking area and not just secluding them outside in the cold weather simply because they want to smoke a cigarette," said Dr. Peter Hobbie, assistant professor of religion and occasional pipe smoker.

Dr. Booker T. Ingram, associate professor of political science, said that the smoke free policy in Neville should discourage students from smoking as well. "I see young people smoking today more than ever. I do respect the rights of every individual on the PC campus, but I also personally feel that a smoke free Neville is a great step in decreasing, if not eliminating, smoking of cigarettes by college students, which in turn reduces future health risks."

Others also praised the decision. "This helps promote a better environment for working and learning," said Ann Adams, faculty secretary in Neville. "The overall appearance of Neville Hall has improved and that is important for visitors and prospective students."

Student smoker Billy Severns agrees. "I think we as smokers need to consider the rights of non-smokers who really don't have to put up with secondary smoke if they don't want to," he said.

Now that Neville has been declared smoke-free, many are speculating on the possibility of a smoke-free campus or at least a larger portion thereof.

"There could be a possible committee to tackle these questions," said Bill Moncrief, vice president of academic affairs.

Students, faculty, and staff will no longer be permitted to smoke in Neville Hall. An administrative decision prohibited smoking in offices, classrooms, and halls after students and staff voiced concerns about the dangers of second-hand smoke. Faculty, staff, and students have praised the decision and expressed interest in making other academic buildings smoke-free. Dr. William Moncrief, dean of the faculty, said that a committee may be formed to discuss such measures.

(file photo)

On The Inside

Page 3 . . .

Is Taco Bell coming to Laurens?
Your guess is as good as ours.

Page 6 - 7 . . .

It's all Greek to me: Students and faculty discuss positives and negatives of the Greek system at PC.

Page 10 . . .

The PC Choir gears up for its annual Broadway Cabaret.

Templeton annex construction underway Building to be funded entirely by private donations

by Gray Lesesne
NEWS EDITOR

PC students were welcomed back from the winter break with a flurry of new construction at the Templeton Physical Education Center.

Templeton's side parking lots have been cleared and construction is underway on an addition that will provide student groups and athletic teams with additional meeting space. The annex includes over 6000 square feet of open space, a kitchen, restrooms, and classroom space, which according to Coach Bob Strock, chairman of the physical education department, is badly needed.

The quick construction of the annex, which was not included in the college's long range plans, is due to the request of the individuals who donated the money for its construction, said Strock. "They wanted to see PC students enjoy the new facilities just as soon as possible," he said.

Skip Zubrod, vice president for finance, said that the building was entirely funded by gifts from donors at a cost of approximately $400,000. The donors requested anonymity and a name for the annex has not been determined.

While the long range plans, especially for Templeton, did not include such an addition, Zubrod said the college was excited about it. "We're looking forward to all types of groups using the facility," he said. Zubrod noted that future additions to Templeton will include additional staff office space and locker facilities.

The annex is scheduled for completion by September 1, 1994. It is expected to accommodate up to 400 persons.

"This is not just a facility for the athletic department," said Strock. "This space will be available for a variety of activities. This is a valuable addition for PC."

PC Tidbits

PC Judicial Council sentences two students

The Judicial Council conducted a hearing on November 22, 1993, in the Chapman Conference Center. A student was charged with assault and battery, a Code of Conduct violation.

The accused pled not guilty to the charges. The prosecution presented its case calling two witnesses and presenting sworn statements along with other evidence. The defense called seven witnesses and provided a sworn witness testimony while presenting its case.

The council found the accused guilty and imposed the following sentence: 1) 60 hours of community service; 2) mandatory counseling; 3) restitution for medical costs.

The Judicial Council also conducted a hearing on Friday, December 10, 1993, in the library auditorium. A student was charged with vandalism and drunkenness, Code of Conduct violations, and theft, a violation of the Honor Code.

The accused pled not guilty to the Honor Code violation and guilty to the remaining charges. The prosecution presented its case calling two witnesses. The defense was given the opportunity to present its case calling three witnesses including the accused.

The council found the accused not guilty of the Honor Code violation and guilty on all other counts. The council imposed the following sentence: 1) 21 hours of community service on campus; 2) 21 hours of community service off campus; 3) eight hour Risk Reduction class; 4) restitution of $225 for property damage; 5) a letter of apology to the Blue Stocking.

Each of the accused were read the verdict, sentenced, and reminded of the right to appeal.

New RDs on campus

PC has two new resident directors for the spring semester. April Seehafer, a recent graduate of Washington State University, has taken Beth Couture's place in Barron & Grotnes dorms. Ashley Jenkins, a December '93 graduate of PC, has taken Jo Jennings' place in Mayes, Beaty, and Reynolds.

Library anticipates completion of automation process

by Charles Smith
STAFF WRITER

The library's drive toward automation should be complete by next spring. According to Diane Yarbrough, Thomason Library's director of technical services, the automation will provide a bonus for both students and faculty.

Although it has been a long process, Yarbrough says the automation process is about 95 percent complete. The drive for automation was launched three years ago and the major obstacle in the way of completion has been funding.

Finance was not the only problem facing the project. "All of the cards in the card catalog had to be transferred into computer readable form," said Yarbrough. "There are over 100,000 titles that must be transferred to the computer. Every card has to be put into a database one title at a time. This undertaking is still going on."

Another reason for the slow completion has been the fact that the technical services department of the library has not only been consumed with the automation project but has also had to keep materials going through the library for students. "It has been like doing two jobs at once," said Yarbrough.

When the automation project is complete, students will be able to select a specific topic, song, or a chapter from a book just entering a title or subject matter into a computer.

Yarbrough adds that even more technology advances are on the way for PC's library. "The automation project has been a lot of work," she said. "As the campus network evolves, students will even be able to access the library from their dorm rooms on personal computers."

PC students David Long and Chad Jordan use the computers available in Thomason Library for background research. Eventually, students will be able to access all of the library's holdings from terminals in Thomason and via the college's own computer network. The transfer process will be complete in 1995.

photo by Kim Gibson

Thefts in Georgia Hall cause residents to take precautions

by Gray Lesesne
NEWS EDITOR

Thefts have recently been reported in Georgia Hall and residents there are being urged to take appropriate precautionary measures by college officials.

Andy Altizer, director of residence life, said that a student reported that his stereo and several compact discs were stolen from his unlocked room. Another Georgia Hall resident reported that his clothes were stolen out of dryers located in the basement.

Altizer said that it is essential that PC students keep their dorm rooms locked and that the outside doors on each dormitory closed. A memorandum to Georgia Hall residents advising appropriate security precautions was distributed last week. Also, Altizer warned against leaving clothes unattended in the Georgia Hall basement. He also advised participation in the Project I.D. program in conjunction with the Office of Public Safety.

Blue Stocking announces staff changes

The Blue Stocking staff announces the appointment of Tobin Turner, a sophomore from Bristol, Tennessee as

Managing Editor.

Tobin is majoring in business and biology and is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James E. Turner. Appointed as News Editor is Gray Lesesne, a freshman from West Columbia, South Carolina. Gray is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William G. Lesesne and plans to major in political science and English.

Turner

Lesesne

Improvements at GDH please health-conscious students

by Dawn Banks
STAFF WRITER

The October 29, 1993 edition of the Blue Stocking featured student dissatisfaction with the food and services being provided by Greenville Dining Hall. Since that time the GDH staff has taken the initiative and made a number of changes.

Changes at GDH have included a deli bar, new salad bars, an improved health bar, and new modes of preparation for many foods in the regular dining line. The return of the waffle irons has also caused considerable excitement among GDH patrons, as well.

Tashiba Dawson, a sophomore, said, "Now I don't have to stand in line when I'm late for class. I can get a sandwich instantly and move on."

"From the time I entered Presbyterian in August of 1993 until now, I feel that GDH has greatly improved. The addition of the deli bar and the healthier preparation of the foods appears somewhat to be to the students' liking," said Chantae Brewer, a freshman.

Katy Hays, also a freshman, said, "I understand that everyone's needs cannot be compensated by GDH's daily meals at the same time; however, I feel that they should be more health conscious."

Vernon Powell, director of Greenville Dining Hall, said, "Many of those who dine at GDH haven't realized our improvements. Among other improvements, the kitchen has been totally renovated and refurbished. I feel that we have done quite a bit."

Powell also said that student input is needed and welcome for continued progress and improvement.

Blue Ladies serve a luncheon meal. GDH has changed its menus and food choices in response to student complaints. Students have praised the changes, especially the deli bar and improved health bar..

file photo

Run for the border?

Unconfirmed reports, in addition to mounting physical evidence, give credence to the speculation that a Taco Bell chain restaurant is coming to the greater Clinton-Laurens area. The site for the new restaurant is across from the Wal-Mart store on Main Street in Laurens, adjacent to the Sonic Drive-In. The Taco Bell site is nearing completion and should open soon.

photo by Kim Gibson

Experience Virtual Reality

February 9, 1994

The Alpha Experience

An SUB Event
10:00 am - 4:00 pm
Springs Campus Center

Give blood again. It will be felt for a lifetime

Every year, your heart pumps
2,625,000
pints of blood.
Surely, you can spare a few.

POINT

'It's easy to forget about those who can only wish they were darting into the arms of their brothers or sisters'

It's a warm, cloudless day in front of Neville Hall. As excited new pledges tear down the front steps landing in avalanches of hugs and body slams, it's easy to become totally engrossed in the frenzy of the moment; it's easy to forget about those who can only wish they were darting into the arms of their brothers or sisters. It's easy to ignore the unpleasant thought of upset students calling home to parents who, for possibly the first time, are unable to help their son or daughter.

We, the Blue Stocking staff, acknowledge the many positives that the Greek system brings to PC campus but cannot overlook the paradox of the system: searching for numbers, yet being selective about whom they admit.

Rushes who fail to obtain the coveted bid never have the chance to find out the reasons for their rejection. The reasons, of course, may be unjust because Greek members are only human, and, therefore, inevitably biased. Almost every Greek organization is founded upon the highest ideals, usually proudly expressed in creeds and mottos. However, it often seems that these ideals are only for show, as members base decisions more upon shallow, trivial aspects of an individual than the true qualities of a person.

Unquestionably, rejection and disappointment lie in everyone's future, whether it be graduate schools, jobs, or relationships. Possibly, the key to using the failure to secure a bid for the positive is to find out what one was seeking from Greek life and search for it somewhere else, like SVS or academic clubs.

We recognize that the Greek system on this campus plays an integral part in the day to day activities of a large number of PC students and,

moreover, believe that it should remain a viable part of student life. The social outlets and activities the system provides are a necessary part of a college located in a small, rural community, helping to prevent PC from becoming the dreaded "suitcase college."

The key, we believe, to being a happy member of the student body is being yourself and following what you believe to be right. Whether one is a Greek, independent, male, female, minority student, scholar, athlete, or someone who did not receive a bid, it is still up to the individual as to the effect he/she can have on PC and the effect PC has on the individual. No group or organization should define an individual, and by sheer determination any student is capable of being what they want to be—Greek or not.

Sidewalk Talk

What is your opinion of the Greek system at PC?

David Breitmoser
Freshman

"I think the Greek system is a good idea, but the administration needs to lay off and let it be. We have to have something to do on weekends."

Carolyn Rizk
Sophomore

"I think it depends on the person. For me, it is a pretty big part of my life. The girls in my sorority are my closest friends."

Chris Jones
Sophomore

"Numerous people believe that Greeks are simply partygoers and drinkers. In reality, most Greek organizations have community service projects. The Greek system is a productive part of PC."

photos by Brooke Peterson

THE BLUE STOCKING

Presbyterian College—Clinton, South Carolina 29325
Volume LXXXVIII Number 6, January 28, 1994

Editor-in-Chief.....Jason West
Managing Editor.....Tobin Turner
News Editor.....Gray Lesesne
Sports Editor.....Everett Catts
Entertainment Editor.....Kim Rabon
Features Editor.....Brian Sacco
Computer Design Editor.....Todd Love
Photography Editor.....Kim Gibson
Layout Editor.....Angela Richardson
Staff Artist.....Michael Christensen
Staff Advisor.....Dr. Neal B. Prater

Staff Writers:
Dennie Lynn Hill
Charles Smith
Dawn Banks
Kim Wood
Kristina Pruitt
Katherine Honner
Karen O'Connor
Margaret Ellen Pender
Alison Nicole Barnard
David Miller
Photographers: Reid Collins, Brooke Peterson

The Blue Stocking is a tri-weekly student publication of Presbyterian College. The paper serves as a forum of news and opinion of regional and national concern. For advertising, contact The Blue Stocking, Presbyterian College, Box 1061, Clinton, SC 29325. The Blue Stocking welcomes letters to the editor from all members of the PC community. Signatures are required. Letters are printed on a space available basis. The Blue Stocking reserves the right to edit all letters for proper grammar and punctuation. The final deadline for submitting letters is Friday at 12:00 pm on the week before publication.

Letters to the Editor - Letters to the Editor - Letters to the Editor - Letters to the Editor - Letters to the Editor - Letters to the Editor - Letters to the Editor

Student apologizes for incident of vandalism

Dear Editor:

I would like to apologize for the incident of vandalism which occurred last December. My actions were irresponsible, immature, and reckless. I have no excuse for my actions. We all do things we wish we could take back. I am sorry for the embarrassment I have caused various people. I hope this act can be forgiven by all. I've learned a lot from this whole ordeal. Actually, that is what we are here at PC for: learning. Learning the easy way is much better than learning the hard way.

Sincerely,

Jason Woodall
Senior

Resident Life Director comments about recent thefts in Georgia Hall Altizer urges students to take precautions and protect their property

Dear Editor:

Two thefts have been reported in Georgia Hall since the beginning of the spring semester. A student on the first floor reported that his stereo and several CD's had been taken out of the room. The room door was unlocked. Another student residing in Georgia Hall reported that his clothes were taken out of one of the dryers. Currently, both of these thefts are being investigated by PC's Public Safety.

Students are encouraged to lock their room doors at all times. It is important to remember to lock your bathroom door if living in a suite configuration. It is also essential to keep the outside doors closed to keep out people who do not attend PC.

Other precautions that should be taken include: 1) immediately reporting any strange behavior to Public Safety; 2) participating in Project ID (Project ID is a burglary prevention program where students mark property with an identifying number and then list the make and serial number of those items); 3) not leaving clothes unattended in the laundry rooms; and 4) immediately reporting the loss of your room key or dorm card to the Residence Life Office.

Sincerely,

Andy Altizer
Director of Residence Life

Ivan Neal
has put out a lot of fires. He's not a firefighter-- he's a teacher. but to the kids he's reached,

he's a hero.

BE A TEACHER.
BE A HERO.

Call 1-800-45-TEACH

'There is a human side to a solid education as well'

But our society is surprisingly apathetic in its support of these institutions. The Joanna school district aches for scarce tax dollars while other school districts in the state enjoy budget surpluses. Joanna has been hit hard—the major mill has closed, and poverty is a major challenge.

Though the community of parents and friends of Joanna students is very interested in the children's progress, priorities of living must come first. Finding a job or preparing an evening meal has an inherent priority over helping with homework or attending PTA meetings. Eventually, these necessities become a hindrance to a child's education.

But Joanna-Woodson is a haven from poverty, suffering, and sadness which can face some of its students when they walk out the front door each day at 2:35. The education at Joanna-Woodson is working—students are learning, they are being encouraged, they are discovering that an education is their ticket out. Teachers at Joanna-Woodson give themselves to their profession because they have a love for students, for teaching, and for the knowledge that they've made a difference in a young person's life.

Joanna-Woodson, like schools everywhere, badly needs monetary support. Many now realize that by educating young people today, we save millions in welfare dollars and job retraining tomorrow. Simply put, this means less of a tax burden for the whippersnappers who will attain a Presbyterian degree.

There is a human side to a solid education as well. The educated find satisfaction in being able to read one's favorite novel, identify the plants in one's garden, or compute simple math problems. An education boosts self-confidence and increases involvement in society.

Schools also deserve our non-monetary support. This means attending PTA meetings, participating in volunteer activities, and helping youngsters with their homework. (If you are interested in helping, contact the SVS office at 8458.) Before I left Joanna-Woodson for Christmas break, my teacher, Mrs. Dianne Reddeck, was helping the students in her speech pathology class make gingerbread houses to take home. Mrs. Reddeck told me the students enjoyed that project more than any other throughout the school year. As I watched those students construct their dream gingerbread homes (and make a gigantic mess), I noticed that the practicality of the lesson turned into a time to dream, wish, and escape. Just as those youngsters so intricately molded their gingerbread houses, it is our responsibility to carefully mold them through an education that demands no less than their best.

by Gray Lesesne
NEWS EDITOR

Most Tuesday afternoons I can be found at Joanna-Woodson Elementary School, volunteering my time for the Joanna Tutors program. The concept of the program is simple: assisting teachers and students in the best way possible with the resources one has. I give to the Joanna school program because I am convinced that within those halls that have witnessed laughter, triumph, defeat, poverty, a few good examples of stern discipline and a lot of crying over the years, there is hope. Time at Joanna provides opportunities to reflect upon elementary school years, the time in children's lives when their entire future is directed by a few decisions made by peers and teachers. What seem so basic to us—the recess games, chorus rehearsal, class work, physical education, music, group lunches, and even detention—are vital to the formation of the students' future.

POINT

'It's easy to forget about those who can only wish they were darting into the arms of their brothers or sisters'

It's a warm, cloudless day in front of Neville Hall. As excited new pledges tear down the front steps landing in avalanches of hugs and body slams, it's easy to become totally engrossed in the frenzy of the moment; it's easy to forget about those who can only wish they were darting into the arms of their brothers or sisters. It's easy to ignore the unpleasant thought of upset students calling home to parents who, for possibly the first time, are unable to help their son or daughter.

We, the Blue Stocking staff, acknowledge the many positives that the Greek system brings to PC campus but cannot overlook the paradox of the system: searching for numbers, yet being selective about whom they admit.

Rushes who fail to obtain the coveted bid never have the chance to find out the reasons for their rejection. The reasons, of course, may be unjust because Greek members are only human, and, therefore, inevitably biased. Almost every Greek organization is founded upon the highest ideals, usually proudly expressed in creeds and mottos. However, it often seems that these ideals are only for show, as members base decisions more upon shallow, trivial aspects of an individual than the true qualities of a person.

Unquestionably, rejection and disappointment lie in everyone's future, whether it be graduate schools, jobs, or relationships. Possibly, the key to using the failure to secure a bid for the positive is to find out what one was seeking from Greek life and search for it somewhere else, like SVS or academic clubs.

We recognize that the Greek system on this campus plays an integral part in the day to day activities of a large number of PC students and,

moreover, believe that it should remain a viable part of student life. The social outlets and activities the system provides are a necessary part of a college located in a small, rural community, helping to prevent PC from becoming the dreaded "suitcase college."

The key, we believe, to being a happy member of the student body is being yourself and following what you believe to be right. Whether one is a Greek, independent, male, female, minority student, scholar, athlete, or someone who did not receive a bid, it is still up to the individual as to the effect he/she can have on PC and the effect PC has on the individual. No group or organization should define an individual, and by sheer determination any student is capable of being what they want to be—Greek or not.

Sidewalk Talk

What is your opinion of the Greek system at PC?

David Breitmoser
Freshman

"I think the Greek system is a good idea, but the administration needs to lay off and let it be. We have to have something to do on weekends."

Carolyn Rizk
Sophomore

"I think it depends on the person. For me, it is a pretty big part of my life. The girls in my sorority are my closest friends."

Chris Jones
Sophomore

"Numerous people believe that Greeks are simply partygoers and drinkers. In reality, most Greek organizations have community service projects. The Greek system is a productive part of PC."

photos by Brooke Peterson

THE BLUE STOCKING

Presbyterian College - Clinton, South Carolina 29325
Volume LXXXVIII Number 6, January 28, 1994

Editor-in-Chief.....Jason West
Managing Editor.....Tobin Turner
News Editor.....Gray Lesesne
Sports Editor.....Everett Catts
Entertainment Editor.....Kim Rabon
Features Editor.....Brian Sacco
Computer Design Editor.....Todd Love
Photography Editor.....Kim Gibson
Layout Editor.....Angela Richardson
Staff Artist.....Michael Christensen
Staff Advisor.....Dr. Neal B. Prater

Staff Writers:
Dennie Lynn Hill
Charles Smith
Dawn Banks
Kim Wood
Kristina Pruitt
Katherine Honner
Karen O'Connor
Margaret Ellen Pender
Alison Nicole Barnard
Photographers: Reid Collins, Brooke Peterson

The Blue Stocking is a tri weekly student publication of Presbyterian College. The paper serves as a forum of news and opinion of regional and national concern. For advertising, contact The Blue Stocking, Presbyterian College, Box 1061, Clinton, SC 29325. The Blue Stocking welcomes letters to the editor from all members of the PC community. Signatures are required. Letters are printed on a space available basis. The Blue Stocking reserves the right to edit all letters for proper grammar and punctuation. The final deadline for submitting letters is Friday at 12:00 pm on the week before publication.

Letters to the Editor - Letters to the Editor - Letters to the Editor - Letters to the Editor - Letters to the Editor - Letters to the Editor - Letters to the Editor

Student apologizes for incident of vandalism

Dear Editor:

I would like to apologize for the incident of vandalism which occurred last December. My actions were irresponsible, immature, and reckless. I have no excuse for my actions. We all do things we wish we could take back. I am sorry for the embarrassment I have caused various people. I hope this act can be forgiven by all. I've learned a lot from this whole ordeal. Actually, that is what we are here at PC for: learning. Learning the easy way is much better than learning the hard way.

Sincerely,

Jason Woodall
Senior

Resident Life Director comments about recent thefts in Georgia Hall Altizer urges students to take precautions and protect their property

Dear Editor:

Two thefts have been reported in Georgia Hall since the beginning of the spring semester. A student on the first floor reported that his stereo and several CD's had been taken out of the room. The room door was unlocked. Another student residing in Georgia Hall reported that his clothes were taken out of one of the dryers. Currently, both of these thefts are being investigated by PC's Public Safety.

Students are encouraged to lock their room doors at all times. It is important to remember to lock your bathroom door if living in a suite configuration. It is also essential to keep the outside doors closed to keep out people who do not attend PC.

Other precautions that should be taken include: 1) immediately reporting any strange behavior to Public Safety; 2) participating in Project ID (Project ID is a burglary prevention program where students mark property with an indentifying number and then list the make and serial number of those items); 3) not leaving clothes unattended in the laundry rooms; and 4) immediately reporting the loss of your room key or dorm card to the Residence Life Office.

Sincerely,

Andy Altizer
Director of Residence Life

Ivan Neal
has put out a lot of fires. He's not a firefighter-- he's a teacher. but to the kids

he's reached,
he's a hero.

BE A TEACHER.
BE A HERO.

Call 1-800-45-TEACH

'There is a human side to a solid education as well'

But our society is surprisingly apathetic in its support of these institutions. The Joanna school district aches for scarce tax dollars while other school districts in the state enjoy budget surpluses. Joanna has been hit hard—the major mill has closed, and poverty is a major challenge.

Though the community of parents and friends of Joanna students is very interested in the children's progress, priorities of living must come first. Finding a job or preparing an evening meal has an inherent priority over helping with homework or attending PTA meetings. Eventually, these necessities become a hindrance to a child's education.

But Joanna-Woodson is a haven from poverty, suffering, and sadness which can face some of its students when they walk out the front door each day at 2:35. The education at Joanna-Woodson is working—students are learning, they are being encouraged, they are discovering that an education is their ticket out. Teachers at Joanna-Woodson give themselves to their profession because they have a love for students, for teaching, and for the knowledge that they've made a difference in a young person's life.

Joanna-Woodson, like schools everywhere, badly needs monetary support. Many now realize that by educating young people today, we save millions in welfare dollars and job retraining tomorrow. Simply put, this means less of a tax burden for the whippersnappers who will attain a Presbyterian degree.

There is a human side to a solid education as well. The educated find satisfaction in being able to read one's favorite novel, identify the plants in one's garden, or compute simple math problems. An education boosts self-confidence and increases involvement in society.

Schools also deserve our non-monetary support. This means attending PTA meetings, participating in volunteer activities, and helping youngsters with their homework. (If you are interested in helping, contact the SVS office at 8458.)

Before I left Joanna-Woodson for Christmas break, my teacher, Mrs. Dianne Reddeck, was helping the students in her speech pathology class make gingerbread houses to take home. Mrs. Reddeck told me the students enjoyed that project more than any other throughout the school year. As I watched those students construct their dream gingerbread homes (and make a gigantic mess), I noticed that the practicality of the lesson turned into a time to dream, wish, and escape. Just as those youngsters so intricately molded their gingerbread houses, it is our responsibility to carefully mold them through an education that demands no less than their best.

by Gray Lesesne
NEWS EDITOR

Most Tuesday afternoons I can be found at Joanna-Woodson Elementary School, volunteering my time for the Joanna Tutors program. The concept of the program is simple: assisting teachers and students in the best way possible with the resources one has. I give to the Joanna school program because I am convinced that within those halls that have witnessed laughter, triumph, defeat, poverty, a few good examples of stern discipline and a lot of crying over the years, there is hope. Time at Joanna provides opportunities to reflect upon elementary school years, the time in children's lives when their entire future is directed by a few decisions made by peers and teachers. What seems so basic to us—the recess games, chorus rehearsal, class work, physical education, music, group lunches, and even detention—are vital to the formation of the student's future.

Sororities: 'It's about learning the genuine qualities of other people and sharing what you have to give.'

by Katherine Bonner
STAFF WRITER

One of the most recognizable features of college life is membership in a fraternity or sorority. At Presbyterian College nearly 30 percent of the female student population is affiliated with one of the college's three sororities: Alpha Delta Pi, Sigma Sigma Sigma, or Zeta Tau Alpha. Female students offer different reasons for their rushing, pledging, and joining a sorority. Perhaps the most common reason is to meet new people.

"One of the major reasons that most freshmen go through rush and pledging is definitely to meet people," said Leigh Hearnburg, president of the Panhellenic Council and a member of Alpha Delta Pi. "Freshmen women want to get to know upperclassmen women."

The thought of getting to know sorority members and making new friends motivates many girls to join. According to Rebecca Babcock, president of Zeta Tau Alpha, making friends is what prompted her to pledge a sorority. "My friends are the number one thing I've enjoyed about sorority life. I feel like I've gotten close to people that I probably wouldn't have otherwise," she said.

However, the comfort of sorority friendships is not limited to the tree-lined walkways of PC's red brick campus. Many sorority members enjoy the benefits of being a part of a national organization and making connections at hometown parties, summer jobs, and conventions.

"I like the concept of a national sisterhood," said Mary Wallace Campbell, vice president of Sigma Sigma Sigma. "I recently went to the national Bacchus convention and met other Sigmas there."

"I like knowing that anywhere I go there are familiar faces and people who know me well," said Sigma member Kim Frampton.

While many Greek women enjoy the friendship bonds of sisterhood and the being a part of a "community," others are motivated to join a sorority in order to become more involved and to develop leadership skills.

"I felt like I was missing out on part of PC. I felt like my routine on campus was a little monotonous and that I needed a change," said Zeta pledge Carrie Yurcin. "It's not just about getting involved. It's about learning the genuine qualities of other people and sharing what you have to give."

"Having the chance to hold an office in a sorority where I was among friends gave me the confidence to take on the role of an SVS coordinator. My responsibilities now reach more than just 90 of my closest friends by also reaching all across campus and even into the community," said Alpha Delta Pi member Ashley Williams.

For some, being a member of a sorority was not due to the joys of sisterhood and leadership but to a much stronger motivation—the dreams of childhood and youth. "I always liked the idea of a sorority and dreamed of being a member of one someday," said Paige Bell, president of Sigma Sigma Sigma. "After coming to PC, I went through rush, found what I liked, and pledged."

Other students were encouraged to join sororities because of the thought of having a sister for the very first time. "I'm an only child," commented Mary Beth Brumelow, a member of Zeta Tau Alpha. "Being a member of a sorority, I now feel like I have a lot of sisters that I never had growing up."

Sorority membership provides a feeling of family and community that is vital for many PC women. "The sorority has become a home away from home, and it has given me an opportunity to make a difference in my college experience and in the college experience of others," said Alpha Delta Pi Vice President Jessica McCullough.

32 % of PC's students are Greek

68% of PC's students are Non-Greek

Figure based on fall 1993

KA

ΣΝ

ΑΔΠ

It's all Greek to me!

ΠΚΦ

Faculty observes both positive and negative aspects of Greek life on campus

by Brian Sacco
FEATURE EDITOR

With last semester's change of fraternities and sorority rush from Spring to Fall, the opinions and concerns of the faculty and administration became even more important to the future of the Greek community at PC. Generally, students around the campus assume that a majority of the faculty and administration are firmly against the promotion of the Greek system. To the contrary, the faculty and administration are not in complete accordance with one another concerning the contributions of Greeks to PC's overall campus life.

Dr. William J. Moncriet, dean of the faculty, doesn't agree with all actions of Greeks but feels that PC's size makes the Greek system a good social outlet. "At a school like PC, located in a rural town, fraternities and sororities can function in a social way, but I wish students wouldn't test limits and I can't condone all activities involved with fraternities and sororities," he said.

Other faculty members believe that fraternities and sororities have a positive affect on campus. "Fraternities and sororities serve a social purpose and need by developing leaders. Although they have gotten some bad publicity at times, some has been deserved, some not," said Dr. Dale Rims, professor of speech and drama.

Dr. Neal Prater, professor of English,

... faculty and administration are not in complete accordance with one another concerning the contributions of Greeks to PC's overall campus life.

sees both the negatives and the positives of the Greek system. "Although Greeks offer wonderful benefits, membership is not open to everybody. Therefore, to some degree these societies seem to be anachronisms. It seems strange that our school would sponsor such organizations that practice exclusion," he said.

Fraternities and sororities are helpful on large campuses to get to know people, but I have reservations about them on a small campus," said Dr. Peter Hobbie, religion professor. "They separate people into groups on small campuses, and they divide people on the basis of social skills or personality. Any person good enough to be at PC is good enough to be in any organization on campus."

University of Career Planning & Placement Director Anne Green, who played an instrumental role in bringing sororities to Presbyterian's campus, is generally pleased with the role of fraternities and sororities at PC. "I have reservations about their exclusivity, but I have been very pleased with their apparent strong commitment to academics, the leadership opportunities, the networking, and the brotherhood and sisterhood relationships," she said.

As an undergraduate, Dr. Tim Gaines, professor of psychology, was asked to rush a fraternity but didn't like the idea of people his own age judging him. "I know students that are in fraternities and sororities, but that doesn't affect my opinion of that person," said Gaines.

Some faculty members at PC question the need for a Greek system. "I don't think we need them [fraternities and sororities] on a campus so small. They are just an excuse for more time to socialize. Fraternities and sororities divide people, and we don't need that because there is already enough division. All the things they do can be accomplished by other organizations," said Gina Prosch, instructor of English.

"The Greek letters serve as a superficial nameplate," added Prosch. Still, many faculty and staff members see more positives in the Greek system than negatives. "There are many benefits from membership in a fraternity or sorority. Membership offers student association with groups which have similar beliefs and aspirations, allows for leadership development, and assists schools with recruiting, visitation, phone a-thons, committees, and councils," said Joe Nixon, dean of students. "Any organization may have faults and weaknesses, but with fraternities and sororities, the positives outweigh the negatives."

'The benefits of joining a fraternity extend beyond association with members of only one fraternity.'

by Karen O'Conner
STAFF WRITER

Like Neville Hall, the six fraternity houses at PC are a recognizable landmark on campus.

While some students have never even stepped foot inside a frat house, others couldn't imagine a weekend without visiting fraternity court. At the very least, every student has driven past fraternity court on his or her way to Subway or Ingles.

The Greek system and the "houses" often provide a central place for PC students to get together and socialize; however, fraternities mean a great deal more to the approximately 30 percent of campus men who are members. What is it that compels an individual to rush and become a member of a fraternity?

According to the brothers of PC's six national fraternities, one of the most important things about their organization is the friendships which develop between members. In fact, many PC men describe their organizations not as a fraternities but as a brotherhood.

Lee McAbee, a member of Kappa Alpha Order, describes the guys in his fraternity as best friends. "These are the guys that you want to stand by you at your wedding," he said. "Brothers also help you to face some of the trying times that you have to deal with when you are away at college. Brothers are your family away from home."

Allen Barksdale, a member of Theta Chi, also considers his fraternity brothers an "extended family." "Fraternity brothers are lifelong friends and would do anything for one another," he said.

"If one brother in a fraternity is in any kind of trouble, all the other brothers will pull together and help him in any way they can," said Michael Christensen, a member of Alpha Sigma Phi. "Brothers are always there for each other."

Mark Martin, a member of Sigma Nu, says, "It's a good feeling to know that in fraternities you make friends that would do anything for you throughout your life. I feel as though my brothers accept me for who I am."

While the feelings of brotherhood and friendship are what most Greek men find as the defining feature of their fraternity, there are many other things that fraternities have to offer.

Dave Greve feels that membership in Pi Kappa Phi has provided him and his brothers with a great many leadership opportunities. "Being a member of a fraternity gives you a chance to learn to interact with and relate to people in all types of atmospheres, not only in special situations but also while organizing service projects and meetings," he said.

The benefits of joining a fraternity extend beyond association with members of only one fraternity. Even though Greek men seem to develop the closest friendships with the brothers of their particular fraternity, some find that joining a fraternity has extended their circle of friends, not closed it.

"I was very introverted when I was a freshman. Joining a fraternity provided me with the confidence to go out of my way to meet people who were not members of Greek organizations," said McAbee.

Lance Dauby, a member of Pi Kappa Alpha, believes that fraternity affiliation extends beyond the brothers at one college. "I feel a connection between all the members of my national fraternity," he said.

Dauby also believes that being a member of a national fraternity can help in the job market, because he feels Greeks tend to look out for their brothers all over the United States.

Fraternity members believe that society often presents a negative concept of their fraternal system. Frats are frequently portrayed in the movies and by the media as "hotbeds" of horrifying conduct and drunkenness.

Martin agrees that he often runs into the negative stereotype of fraternities, but he stresses that fraternities are not just about drinking. "Brothers can have fun together, but they know when it's time to get serious and work together to accomplish things as a group," he said.

ΑΣΦ

ΘΧ

ΠΚΑ

ZTA

Lady Hose fuse together to deliver powerful punch

by Margaret Ellen Pender
STAFF WRITER

We've all heard the old adage which says that facing adversity builds character, and then we've heard the story of the formation of a diamond, exemplifying the message of the saying that out of the heat and pressure of unbearable conditions an object of incredible beauty is born.

By tapping ever so slightly into the immeasurable riches stored in our heads, we could view the 1993-94 Lady Blue Hose basketball team as the diamond which has been chiseled out of a rock of frightening and potentially devastating occurrences, the first of which involved fifth-year head coach Beth Couture. The scare began in the early morning hours of a day last fall just prior to the onset of basketball season. As Coach Couture returned to Clinton from Greenville for an early workout with the basketball squad, she was involved in a car accident which, according to paramedics, could have easily been fatal. Couture suffered relatively minor injuries and was released from the hospital after a few days.

The other potentially devastating incident involved senior standout Jennifer Hilliard. Like Couture, she was the victim of an automobile accident which could have resulted in serious injury. To the relief of everyone, Hilliard sustained minor injuries and missed only one game.

At times throughout sports history, teams have been motivated to brilliant performances by tragedy, and yet the Blue Hose were not grasping for a miracle to kindle a great season. This year's squad has all of the ingredients needed for success: experienced seniors to provide leadership and consistent performance, developing and dedicated juniors and sophomores to add depth and offensive punch, and up-and-coming freshmen who are already contributing noticeably to (in the words of junior Leigh Irwin) "bring this team together. We have never had a team that was this close," she conceded.

Unselfish play and a balanced attack

are the outward signs that reveal the closeness of this team, and perhaps that is the real key which has propelled this team to a 14-2 record (4-1 in the SAC). Big victories were notched against intrastate rival Newberry (117-40) and more recently against conference rival Carson-Newman (82-62). At one point in the season, the Lady Blue Hose received their first-ever national ranking; they were placed 19th in the NCAA Division II poll. Currently, PC is ranked 18th.

While the focus of this year's squad has been "the team," there have been numerous individual achievements which cannot be overlooked and which have in fact added to the brilliance of the diamond. With a 93-57 win over Converse, Coach Couture moved into first place on PC's most career wins list. Senior forward Jennifer Hilliard notched another milestone in her outstanding career by scoring her 1000th point in a contest in the Surf and Slam Classic in San Diego over the holidays. Additionally, she was named SAC Player of the Week for her efforts in two PC victories.

In a matchup with Carson-Newman, sophomore Chris Mitchum tied her own school record for number of three-pointers in a game; she drilled six en route to notching 24 points. Freshman Karen Neely, who has become quite a weapon for the Hose, set an NCAA Division II record for the most steals in a single game; she had 14 against Newberry.

Currently, several Presbyterian players are ranked in statistical categories for the SAC. Hilliard stands fourth in scoring (15.2 ppg), first in free throw percentage (80.7%), and eighth in field goal percentage (46.9%) and rebounding (7.1 rpg). Junior Kaye Watts is third in free throw percentage (78%) and sixth in steals (3 spg) and three-point percentage (27.5%). Freshman Karen Neely ranks first in steals per game (3.9) and third in assists (4.2 asp). Junior Melanie Johnson and sophomores Chris Mitchum and Jennifer Mims have been recognized as well. Johnson is fifth in steals (3.1 spg), Mitchum is second in three-pointers (37.1%), and Mims is first in blocks (1.4).

PC's Chris Mitchum takes the ball upcourt as Karen Neely (33) looks on. Mitchum leads the Lady Hose in three-pointers with a 37.1 percent mark.

photo by Brooke Peterson

Young baseball team prepares for tough season

by Everett Catts
SPORTS EDITOR

With nine players lost from the 1993 team that went 24-27 and finished third in the SAC-8 tournament, the 1994 Blue Hose baseball team will have to count on young talent and the leadership of the upperclassmen.

Despite his squad's youth, first year head coach Doug Kovash is excited about the season. "I think we're enthusiastic. We're young. We've got players who are talented and skilled at their positions but inexperienced at the college level, including the upperclassman," said Kovash.

This year's squad will rely on the leadership of senior pitchers Darren

Bane and Jim Dudley, along with junior outfielders Paul Bushway and Elton Pollock. PC will be without their other outfielder, Joe-Henry Berube, who was drafted in the 24th round and signed with the Seattle Mariners. Berube, a three-time All-Conference choice, batted .380, hit 12 homers, and drove in 45 runs last year as a junior.

Because of the team's youth, only Bushway and Pollock have solidified positions. The seven other spots are still up for grabs. With 29 players on the roster, many positions are deep, especially catcher and first base, but there is no clear starter in either spot. The position where the Blue Hose are weakest is shortstop, where Kovash hopes Brody Hendrix to play. Hendrix, a senior who split time with sophomore

Luke Lipan last year, had a successful Fall and the position is "...his to keep or lose," said Kovash.

If the Fall season is an indicator of things to come, the Blue Hose should have their best season ever. In the fall Kovash split the squad into two teams. Both teams combined for a 12-13 record, and the starters went 8-0.

But the Blue Hose have a tough schedule with three ranked teams and two others receiving votes in the pre-season poll on the ledger. PC's first game is against seventh-ranked Armstrong State on February 12, followed by a game against Georgia College on February 13. The Blue Hose's first home game is on February 16 against USC Aiken, the fourth ranked team in the nation.

Sports View

PC athletes are anything but 'dumb jocks'

by Everett Catts
SPORTS EDITOR

Whoever said that all athletes lack intelligence obviously had never been to PC. PC's athletes defy the stereotype that athletes only care about sports. Presbyterian College has had a tradition of student-athletes who put academics in front of athletics.

In 1991 two Blue Hose scholar-athletes—David Nelson and Christian Lindstrom—won the South Atlantic Conference's prestigious President's Award, given to the athletes who excel on the field and in the classroom.

Last year PC continued its tradition when Andrew Wellman, the basketball team's star guard, was honored as the First Union Scholar Athlete of the sport, an award given to the athlete who also performs high in the classroom and takes part in community service.

Also in the 1992-93 school year, three men's tennis players—Mallory McRae, Mark Necaise, and Scott Ambrose—were named All-American Scholar Athletes for their performance on the court and 3.5+ grade point average in the classroom.

This year is no exception. The results of Fall semester's grades were just as good as always.

The men's basketball team led all PC sports in combined GPA with an amazing 3.07 GPA. One player had a perfect 4.0 GPA, and four others were Dean's List students.

The women's basketball team was close behind with a combined GPA of 2.93. The Lady Blue Hose had five players on the Dean's List.

The women's soccer team tied the women's basketball squad with a 2.93 combined GPA. The Lady Hose had one player with a perfect 4.0 GPA and five Dean's List students.

Men's basketball shows signs of improvement

by Everett Catts
SPORTS EDITOR

The Men's basketball team is now 8-7 and is showing signs of improvement. After losing two straight games, the Blue Hose have won two of their last three games. Back on January 6, PC crushed Erskine 89-66 as Andre Newman paced the squad with a career-high 21 points. Two days later the Blue Hose lost on the road to intrastate rival Wofford 76-70. Jonathan Bankhead's 17 points led all scorers.

PC returned home to face SAC rival Catawba on January 12. At halftime the Blue Hose led 40-37, but the Indians came back and won 80-71. PC's sub par shooting (44% from the field) was their downfall. Brian Franklin's 15 points and 7 boards were team highs.

The men's team rebounded with a conference win against Elon on January 15. Tony Grant led the Blue Hose with 14 points in the 62-54 victory. Ronnie Cannon and Newman each had seven rebounds to lead PC.

But the Blue Hose lost the very next game on January 16, a 70-68 setback to Wingate. John Lloyd led the team with 17 points and 7 rebounds. Franklin added 16 points in the loss.

Three days later the Blue Hose improved to 8-7 with a home win against Carson-Newman. PC shared the wealth as six players were in double figures in scoring. Lloyd led PC with 14 points, and Newman, Wellman, and Cannon each had 12. Franklin added 11, and Tony Grant had a double double, scoring 10 points and grabbing 10 boards. After leading 26-25 at halftime, the Blue Hose were on fire in the second half, hitting 14 of 18 shots for a field goal percentage of 77.8%.

The win improved PC's conference record to 3-2, tying them for second with four other teams.

Earlier this week the Blue Hose played conference leader Mars Hill and will travel to Hickory, NC, to play Lenoir-Rhyne tomorrow night at 7:45.

PC's Andrew Wellman (20) dribbles up the court against Carson-Newman. Wellman, a senior biology major, is averaging 12 points per game.

photo by Brooke Peterson

Tennis teams prepare for new challenges

by Alison Barnard
STAFF WRITER

The PC men's and women's tennis teams are both looking forward to exciting and challenging seasons this year.

The men's team finished last season with an impressive overall record of 17-7. Unfortunately, the squad has changed with the loss of four players, Mallory McRae, Glenn Austell, David Freudenheim, and Don Stillwell, to graduation. The Blue Hose have gained one new player, Will Sharpe, and have tryouts scheduled for the spring to fill the remaining slots. Returning players include seniors Mark Necaise, Scott Ambrose, and Paul Roof, junior Tyler Van Leuven and sophomore David Kemp.

When asked about the upcoming season, Coach Bobby McKee stated, "It is basically a theme of new experiences this year." As a result of becoming full-fledged members of NCAA Division II, the team will play a new dual match format. McKee added, "I have confidence in the guys returning, and I'm going to be counting on the senior players a good deal." Certainly all of these challenges will make for a season to remember.

The PC women's team is again strong this season. The team finished last season with an overall record of 9-5 and lost only one player, Minda Griffin, to graduation. Three freshmen—Dana Davis, Chrissie Bolt, and Dawn Dachelet and one sophomore, Liz Whitfield, join the experienced team consisting of seniors Dina Padgett, Stephanie Hunt, and Jennifer Miller, along with sophomores Jennifer Brim, Jessica Clark, and Stacie Buttorf.

Coach Donna Arnold, having confidence in her team, stated, "Compared to last year, we are definitely stronger, and we have more depth." After winning the conference title three times in a row and coming in second place last year, the team wants to win the conference championship again this year.

When asked about her team's schedule, Arnold said, "We play several ranked opponents, but hopefully, playing a tough schedule will help us to improve."

WASTED YOUTH.

ONLY YOU CAN PREVENT FOREST FIRES
A Public Service of the USDA Forest Service and your State Forester

Lady Hose fuse together to deliver powerful punch

by Margaret Ellen Pender
STAFF WRITER

We've all heard the old adage which says that facing adversity builds character, and then we've heard the story of the formation of a diamond, exemplifying the message of the saying that out of the heat and pressure of unbearable conditions an object of incredible beauty is born.

By tapping ever so slightly into the immeasurable riches stored in our heads, we could view the 1993-94 Lady Blue Hose basketball team as the diamond which has been chiseled out of a rock of frightening and potentially devastating occurrences, the first of which involved fifth-year head coach Beth Couture. The scare began in the early morning hours of a day last fall just prior to the onset of basketball season. As Coach Couture returned to Clinton from Greenville for an early workout with the basketball squad, she was involved in a car accident which, according to paramedics, could have easily been fatal. Couture suffered relatively minor injuries and was released from the hospital after a few days.

The other potentially devastating incident involved senior standout Jennifer Hilliard. Like Couture, she was the victim of an automobile accident which could have resulted in serious injury. To the relief of everyone, Hilliard sustained minor injuries and missed only one game.

At times throughout sports history, teams have been motivated to brilliant performances by tragedy, and yet the Blue Hose were not grasping for a miracle to kindle a great season. This year's squad has all of the ingredients needed for success: experienced seniors to provide leadership and consistent performance, developing and dedicated juniors and sophomores to add depth and offensive punch, and up-and-coming freshmen who are already contributing noticeably to (in the words of junior Leigh Irwin) "bring this team together. We have never had a team that was this close," she conceded.

Unselfish play and a balanced attack

are the outward signs that reveal the closeness of this team, and perhaps that is the real key which has propelled this team to a 14-2 record (4-1 in the SAC). Big victories were notched against intrastate rival Newberry (117-40) and more recently against conference rival Carson-Newman (82-62). At one point in the season, the Lady Blue Hose received their first-ever national ranking; they were placed 19th in the NCAA Division II poll. Currently, PC is ranked 18th.

While the focus of this year's squad has been "the team," there have been numerous individual achievements which cannot be overlooked and which have in fact added to the brilliance of the diamond. With a 93-57 win over Converse, Coach Couture moved into first place on PC's most career wins list. Senior forward Jennifer Hilliard notched another milestone in her outstanding career by scoring her 1000th point in a contest in the Surf and Slam Classic in San Diego over the holidays. Additionally, she was named SAC Player of the Week for her efforts in two PC victories.

In a matchup with Carson-Newman, sophomore Chris Mitchum tied her own school record for number of three-pointers in a game; she drilled six en route to notching 24 points. Freshman Karen Neely, who has become quite a weapon for the Hose, set an NCAA Division II record for the most steals in a single game; she had 14 against Newberry.

Currently, several Presbyterian players are ranked in statistical categories for the SAC. Hilliard stands fourth in scoring (15.2 ppg), first in free throw percentage (80.7%), and eighth in field goal percentage (46.9%) and rebounding (7.1 rpg). Junior Kaye Watts is third in free throw percentage (78%) and sixth in steals (3 spg) and three-point percentage (27.5%). Freshman Karen Neely ranks first in steals per game (3.9) and third in assists (4.2 asp). Junior Melanie Johanson and sophomores Chris Mitchum and Jennifer Mims have been recognized as well. Johanson is fifth in steals (3.1 spg), Mitchum is second in three-pointers (37.1%), and Mims is first in blocks (1.4).

PC's Chris Mitchum takes the ball upcourt as Karen Neely (33) looks on. Mitchum leads the Lady Hose in three-pointers with a 37.1 percent mark.

photo by Brooke Peterson

Young baseball team prepares for tough season

by Everett Catts
SPORTS EDITOR

With nine players lost from the 1993 team that went 24-27 and finished third in the SAC-8 tournament, the 1994 Blue Hose baseball team will have to count on young talent and the leadership of the upperclassmen.

Despite his squad's youth, first year head coach Doug Kovash is excited about the season. "I think we're enthusiastic. We're young. We've got players who are talented and skilled at their positions but inexperienced at the college level, including the upperclassman," said Kovash.

This year's squad will rely on the leadership of senior pitchers Darren

Bane and Jim Dudley, along with junior outfielders Paul Bushway and Elton Pollock. PC will be without their other outfielder, Joe-Henry Berube, who was drafted in the 24th round and signed with the Seattle Mariners. Berube, a three-time All-Conference choice, batted .380, hit 12 homers, and drove in 45 runs last year as a junior.

Because of the team's youth, only Bushway and Pollock have solidified positions. The seven other spots are still up for grabs. With 29 players on the roster, many positions are deep, especially catcher and first base, but there is no clear starter in either spot. The position where the Blue Hose are weakest is shortstop, where Kovash hopes Brody Hendrix to play. Hendrix, a senior who split time with sophomore

Luke Lipan last year, had a successful Fall and the position is "...his to keep or lose," said Kovash.

If the Fall season is an indicator of things to come, the Blue Hose should have their best season ever. In the fall Kovash split the squad into two teams. Both teams combined for a 12-1-3 record, and the starters went 8-0.

But the Blue Hose have a tough schedule with three ranked teams and two others receiving votes in the pre-season poll on the ledger. PC's first game is against seventh-ranked Armstrong State on February 12, followed by a game against Georgia College on February 13. The Blue Hose's first home game is on February 16 against USC Aiken, the fourth ranked team in the nation.

Sports View

PC athletes are anything but 'dumb jocks'

by Everett Catts
SPORTS EDITOR

Whoever said that all athletes lack intelligence obviously had never been to PC. PC's athletes defy the stereotype that athletes only care about sports. Presbyterian College has had a tradition of student-athletes who put academics in front of athletics.

In 1991 two Blue Hose scholar-athletes—David Nelson and Christian Lindstrom—won the South Atlantic Conference's prestigious President's Award, given to the athletes who excel on the field and in the classroom.

Last year PC continued its tradition when Andrew Wellman, the basketball team's star guard, was honored as the First Union Scholar Athlete of the sport, an award given to the athlete who also performs high in the classroom and takes part in community service.

Also in the 1992-93 school year, three men's tennis players: Mallory McRae, Mark Necaise, and Scott Ambrose were named All-American Scholar Athletes for their performance on the court and 3.54 grade point average in the classroom.

This year is no exception. The results of Fall semester's grades were just as good as always.

The men's basketball team led all PC sports in combined GPA with an amazing 3.07 GPA. One player had a perfect 4.0 GPA, and four others were Dean's List students.

The women's basketball team was close behind with a combined GPA of 2.93. The Lady Blue Hose had five players on the Dean's List.

The women's soccer team tied the women's basketball squad with a 2.93 combined GPA. The Lady Hose had one player with a perfect 4.0 GPA and five Dean's List students.

Men's basketball shows signs of improvement

by Everett Catts
SPORTS EDITOR

The Men's basketball team is now 8-7 and is showing signs of improvement. After losing two straight games, the Blue Hose have won two of their last three games. Back on January 6, PC crushed Erskine 89-66 as Andre Newman paced the squad with a career-high 21 points. Two days later the Blue Hose lost on the road to intrastate rival Wofford 76-70. Jonathan Bankhead's 17 points led all scorers.

PC returned home to face SAC rival Catawba on January 12. At halftime the Blue Hose led 40-37, but the Indians came back and won 80-71. PC's sub par shooting (44% from the field) was their downfall. Brian Franklin's 15 points and 7 boards were team highs.

The men's team rebounded with a conference win against Elon on January 15. Tony Grant led the Blue Hose with 14 points in the 62-54 victory. Ronnie Cannon and Newman each had seven rebounds to lead PC.

But the Blue Hose lost the very next game on January 16, a 70-68 setback to Wingate. John Lloyd led the team with 17 points and 7 rebounds. Franklin added 16 points in the loss.

Three days later the Blue Hose improved to 8-7 with a home win against Carson-Newman. PC shared the wealth as six players were in double figures in scoring. Lloyd led PC with 14 points, and Newman, Wellman, and Cannon each had 12. Franklin added 11, and Tony Grant had a double double, scoring 10 points and grabbing 10 boards. After leading 26-25 at halftime, the Blue Hose were on fire in the second half, hitting 14 of 18 shots for a field goal percentage of 77.8%.

The win improved PC's conference record to 3-2, tying them for second with four other teams.

Earlier this week the Blue Hose played conference leader Mars Hill and will travel to Hickory, NC, to play Lenoir-Rhyne tomorrow night at 7:45.

PC's Andrew Wellman (20) dribbles up the court against Carson-Newman. Wellman, a senior biology major, is averaging 12 points per game.

photo by Brooke Peterson

Tennis teams prepare for new challenges

by Alison Barnard
STAFF WRITER

The PC men's and women's tennis teams are both looking forward to exciting and challenging seasons this year.

The men's team finished last season with an impressive overall record of 17-7. Unfortunately, the squad has changed with the loss of four players, Mallory McRae, Glenn Austell, David Freudenheim, and Don Stillwell, to graduation. The Blue Hose have gained one new player, Will Sharpe, and have tryouts scheduled for the spring to fill the remaining slots. Returning players include seniors Mark Necaise, Scott Ambrose, and Paul Roof, junior Tyler Van Leuven and sophomore David Kemp.

When asked about the upcoming season, Coach Bobby McKee stated, "It is basically a theme of new experiences this year." As a result of becoming full-fledged members of NCAA Division II, the team will play a new dual match format. McKee added, "I have confidence in the guys returning, and I'm going to be counting on the senior players a good deal." Certainly all of these challenges will make for a season to remember.

The PC women's team is again strong this season. The team finished last season with an overall record of 9-5 and lost only one player, Minda Griffin, to graduation. Three freshmen—Dana Davis, Chrissie Bolt, and Dawn Dachelet and one sophomore, Liz Whitfield, join the experienced team consisting of seniors Dina Padgett, Stephanie Hunt, and Jennifer Miller, along with sophomores Jennifer Brim, Jessica Clark, and Stacie Buttorf.

Coach Donna Arnold, having confidence in her team, stated, "Compared to last year, we are definitely stronger, and we have more depth." After winning the conference title three times in a row and coming in second place last year, the team wants to win the conference championship again this year.

When asked about her team's schedule, Arnold said, "We play several ranked opponents, but hopefully, playing a tough schedule will help us to improve."

WASTED
YOUTH.

ONLY YOU CAN PREVENT FOREST FIRES
A Public Service of the USDA Forest Service and
your State Forester

Encore

Kim Rabon
ENTERTAINMENT EDITOR

Music is such a broad form of entertainment that most of us take it for granted. Unless you get out for concerts, simply turning on the radio wouldn't seem like you were being entertained. Listening to music is more like a natural habit than something to take up your time. Although the types of music vary from person to person, there is always that special sound that each of likes. Music as an entertainment allows us to experiment and listen to other types of music that normally wouldn't be our preference.

I believe that our very own Radio PC has about as good of a variety as you can get. Students host shows that cover anywhere from classical to rap or alternative to contemporary. Unlike some people, I really enjoy R&B dance and "light" rap music. When Barry Brown, a Radio PC host, asked me to listen and review a couple of tapes for my next column, I thought that it would be a good idea. Barry receives tapes of new artists from a record label called Immortal/RCA Records which he publicizes on his show.

The two artists I listened to were Volume 10 and Fatal. Volume 10 is a 23 year old artist from Los Angeles who has released a maxi-cassette entitled "Pistol Grip Pump," which contains the title track performed six different ways. These included the Radio Edit, LP Version, A cappella, Friday Night Mix, UK Jazz Mix and Extravagant DogHeart Mix. All of the versions were full of energy and powerful lyrics. I especially liked the Friday Night Mix and the UK Jazz Mix, because of the background music contained in them. Fatal had a maxi-single with the radio and instrumental versions of two songs. The title song, "Timber," and another single entitled "Pass the Kronz." I enjoyed both of these songs also. Their distinctive beat could definitely make them popular among many people. Both of these artists have the skill, initiative, and talent to succeed in our competitive music society.

I enjoyed the opportunity to listen to these tapes and give my opinion of them. If you would like to hear the songs for yourself, you can request them on Barry's show on Wednesday nights from 9:30pm to 11:00pm. You never know, he might give you a tape to keep!

Annual Winter Conference set for this weekend

by Steve Owens
GUEST WRITER

Thomas G. Long, professor of preaching and worship at Princeton Theological Seminary, will lead discussions on "Hearing a Call, Hearing a Cry, Hearing a Promise: Being People of Faith in a Bored and Crazy World" at Presbyterian College's 1994 Winter Conference Retreat to be held Jan. 28-30 at Camp Bethelwoods near Rock Hill, SC.

Long will also bring his message to Presbyterian College's Belk Auditorium on Jan. 31 when he delivers the Thomas F. Staley Lecture. The lecture, which will be held at 11:00 am, is free and open to the public.

A graduate of Erskine College, Erskine Theological Seminary, and Princeton Theological Seminary, Long served for two years as pastor of the McElroy Memorial ARP Church in Atlanta. In addition to his duties at Princeton Theological Seminary, he preaches regularly and conducts workshops on preaching and worship throughout the United States. Along with serving as editor of the journal Theology Today, Long is the author of seven books and more than 40 articles for books and professional journals.

The Winter Conference Retreat began in 1969 as a way to bring together members of different religious organizations so that they may better understand their similarities rather than their differences. In addition to discussion sessions on recognizing a direction for their lives and realizing the impact others have on their lives, conference participants will have an opportunity to enjoy activities such as canoeing, taking hay rides, square dancing, and having an ice cream orgy.

Angelique Cunningham and Kathryn Elliott shove off in a canoe at Bethelwoods, home of PC's annual Winter Conference. file photo

Newlyweds Chris Patterson and Beth Bleckly cut the cake at their wedding reception. Patterson, PC's intramural director, married the Furman graduate on December 18, 1993.

PROTECT YOURSELF FROM AIDS
IT'S THE CHOICE OF A LIFETIME

FIND OUT ABOUT DRUGS, SEX
AND AIDS
CALL 1-800-322-AIDS

Campus Connection
Campus & Greek Specialties
1636 By-Pass NE
Greenwood, SC 29649
942-9616
Laura Hoole Owner

'Great White Way' comes to Clinton PC Choir to present Broadway Cabaret

Press Release

The eleventh annual Broadway Cabaret will be presented by the Presbyterian College Choir on Sunday, February 13, at 3:00 pm and Monday, February 14, 7:30 pm in Belk Auditorium. The public is invited to attend the concert. Donations will be received at the door for the choir's European tour in May. This event is worth CEP credit.

The forty-two voiced mixed choir will be featured in selections from Godspell and Les Miserables. The show will open with the jazzy "Lullaby of Broadway" from 42nd Street. The Madrigal Singers will sing tunes from Pal Joey. Soloists from the choir will be featured in several songs from other shows.

Choreography, special lighting, and costumes will add to the musical numbers. Donna Whitmore Sexton returns to direct the choreography for the fourth year. She is a dance-director with experience on the stage from Houston to Greenville, where she was recently Associate Director at the Theater on the Green. A narrator will provide highlights about the musicals as the evening proceeds.

Dr. Charles T. Gaines, the Charles A. Dana Professor of Music, is conductor of the choir. The stage will be transformed in the second act to appear as a cabaret with guests at tables where they will be "entertained" by soloists and small ensembles singing hits from various musicals. Mr. Jerome Biebesheimer will direct the stage lighting while an instrumental combo will furnish accompaniment.

The PC Choir's annual Broadway Cabaret will feature songs from "Godspell" and "Les Miserables." The concert is a CEP event. file photo

Tamburitzans to perform at PC

Performing Kohrumi, a warrior's dance, from the Dagestan province of the Georgia Republic are the Tamburitzans from Duquesne University. file photo

Press Release

The Tamburitzans of Duquesne University, now in their 57th season, will present a concert at Presbyterian College in Belk Auditorium on Saturday, January 29, at 7:30 pm. The program is the second of the 1993-94 season for members of the Laurens County Community Concert Association. PC students may receive CEP credit for this event by showing their student ID at the door.

Each year the Tamburitzans present an entirely new concert portraying the culture of the East European peoples. The professional credits of Pittsburgh's collegiate performers extend throughout the world. Serving as goodwill ambassadors for the US State Department, the Tamburitzans have made extended tours of Europe, Canada, Latin America, and the former Soviet Union.

This group of highly talented folk artists, dedicated to the preservation of East European folk culture, take their name from the musical instrument they play—the "tamburiza." Using over five hundred authentic costumes in each concert, the Tamburitzans sing in a dozen different European languages and perform the dances of as many countries. The concert proves to be an exciting spectacle of music, color, and dance.

The forty Tamburitzan performers are full-time students at Duquesne University, and each member receives a complete scholarship in exchange for participating in the troupe. Candidates are chosen on the basis of academic achievement and proficiency as singers, dancers, and/or instrumentalists.

For more information contact Mr. Jerome Biebesheimer, Cultural Events Coordinator at Presbyterian College.

Campus & Clubs...

Chaplain's Office

The Chaplain's Office has information concerning a campus ministry internship at USC-Columbia. The internship would involve assisting the Presbyterian University Campus Minister at USC in all aspects of ministry, including programming, small group leadership, administration, worship, retreats, etc. The position opens August 1, 1994. Send your resume and letter of interest to the Reverend Sally Robinson, 1702 Greene Street, Columbia, South Carolina 29201, or call 799-0212. For more information see PC Chaplain Greg Henley.

FCA

The FCA Southeastern Collegiate Retreat will be held February 4 - 6 at Ridgecrest Conference Center near Asheville, North Carolina. The cost of the conference is $67. For more information see an officer of the PC FCA. Join the FCA every Wednesday night at 9:00 pm in Crossroads for fun, music, sharing, and Christian fellowship.

Annual Fund

The phones of PC's alumni will soon be ringing with student callers asking for support of the college in the annual phonathon. The phonathon will be held February 3 through February 28. The phonathon secures nearly half of the gifts made each year to the Annual Fund. These gifts help provide needed financial assistance for students, supplement faculty salaries, and help meet current operational needs. The phonathon is also important because a large number of alumni contributions help attract large gifts from major corporations which consider alumni support as a condition of making large gifts. Both organizations and individuals will have the chance to win cash prizes and merchandise. In fact, a total of $900 in cash and prizes will be awarded. Each organization is committed to two hours of calling, beginning with a 30 minute training session. Groups interested in participating should contact Jim Morton, director of the Annual Fund, at extension 8325.

China Semester

PC students will have the opportunity to study in China in the fall semester of 1994 in a program offered by the SASASAAS. The program will be administered by Wake Forest University and will be based at Beijing Foreign Languages Normal College. A student will earn 16 hours of credit, 10 of which will be in Chinese language. In addition to the language course, the student will take two courses which will be taught in English. In addition to course work, there will be a variety of activities and excursions in and around Beijing. Students will have the opportunity to attend theatrical performances, films, and opera, as well as temples, the Great Wall, the Ming Tombs, and festival celebrations. The cost of the program is approximately $7,050 and includes orientation, room, board, tuition, organized culture excursions, textbooks, visa fees, and round trip airfare. The program will be competitive and students must submit applications by February 15. For more information contact Dr. Ron Burnside.

Intramural News

The intramural sports schedule is off and running this spring with a record number of participants for basketball. Forty-seven teams have signed up to take part in hoops season. This year's games are being played on a bigger court; players have more space to maneuver and the quality of play seems to have improved. After the first week of games the strongest teams appear to be Public Enemy & Pi Kappa Phi for the men and Couture's Chaos & U Lose for the women. The leading scorers so far are Matt Glenn, John Weizler, Eric Banks, Brooke Fleming, and Sarah Bradley. The next intramural sport will be racquetball. The organizational meeting for all interested participants will be January 31 at 4:00 pm in Springs.

Westminster Fellowship

Westminster Fellowship is a diverse group of Christians, welcoming all denominations. WF meets every Tuesday night at 8:45 pm in Crossroads.

NBC's Star Jones to speak on Black History

by Dawn Banks
STAFF WRITER

In celebration of Black History Month, Presbyterian College is sponsoring a number of events throughout February. One of the many activities planned is an appearance by NBC legal correspondent Star Jones on February 15 at 11:00 am in Belk Auditorium.

Jones' presentation will focus on "Black History: The Key to the Future."

Star Jones joined NBC News in February of 1992 as a correspondent specializing in legal matters after previously serving as Senior District Attorney in Brooklyn, New York. In addition, Jones also worked for Court TV as a regular commentator during the Palm Beach rape trial of William Kennedy Smith.

Jones' appearance at PC is in conjunction with the year long "Women and the Media Series" sponsored by the Arnold Symposium.

The event carries CEP credit.

Star Jones, an NBC correspondent, will visit PC on February 15.

file photo

PC Players to present Museum

The PC Department of Visual and Theater Arts will present the play Museum beginning February 23 and running through February 27.

According to Brad Williams, publicity manager for the Caldwell Harper Theater, the play is a comedy about the attitudes and opinions of the "culture vultures" of the world. "Museum focuses on the reactions, opinions, and attitudes of art lovers, foreigners, skeptics, students, and artists. It is an entertaining attack on art snobs and the art world," he said.

The play will be performed at the Harper Center on Wednesday, February 23 through Saturday, February 26, at 7:30 pm. There will be one afternoon performance on Sunday, February 27, at 2:30 pm. General admission for the play will be $5 and student admission will be $3. The play does carry CEP credit.

Upcoming PC Events . . .

February 17, SUB will sponsor Fun Flicks in Springs from 11:00 am to 5:00 pm.

February 18, Winter Formal featuring "Uncle Mingo" 8:00 pm to 12:00 am.

February 25, At 7:00 pm SUB will show "The Firm" in Springs.

Oxfam America
February 16

Join the fight against hunger by volunteering to give up a meal in GDH. The money for that meal will be sent to Oxfam to help feed the hungry. Sign up to participate in Oxfam during the week of February 7-11 in GDH.

Showing February 11
at 7:00 pm in Springs

INTO THE NIGHT
AT Jerry's

Free dessert with any entree

310 E. Carolina Avenue
Clinton 833-5090

cannot be used with any other coupon or special offer
offer expires February 15, 1994

Laurens Hall to become female residence dormitory

by Amanda Barnes
STAFF WRITER

An avalanche of rumors regarding student housing and procedures have prompted concern among PC students as the spring months approach. With over 1000 students living on campus, PC housing problems include a shortage of women's residences, continued use of temporary housing such as Mayes Cottage and fourth floor Clinton Hall, and a new system for housing sign-ups.

A primary problem facing many college campuses (including Presbyterian) is an uneven ratio of male to female students. Residence life director Andy Altizer said that PC is following the national trend in which more female students are attending colleges and universities than their male counterparts.

This year a large number of female freshmen caused major housing changes such as the conversion of Reynolds Infirmary into a women's residence hall along with some rooms in Douglas House and fourth floor Clinton Hall. The problem looks as if it will continue next year with PC admissions following the existing trend.

Contrary to rumors, the only existing dormitory that will be transformed into a female residence will be Laurens Hall, currently a male residence hall located next to Smyth Hall. According to Skip Zubrod, PC's vice president for finance and treasurer, Laurens Hall will be renovated by upgrading the restrooms, replacing the carpet, and painting the rooms. This facility will provide space for 23 female residents.

A housing committee has been formed to face the short and long term housing problems. Members include Zubrod, Altizer, Morris Galloway, and Joseph Nixon, dean of students. Now that the immediate problem has been solved, the committee is considering options for the future which include an additional housing facility for the fall of 1995. Among the possibilities are an apartment complex or another traditional residence hall resembling Barron and Grotnes Halls.

"The more options, and the more alternative type housing, the better we can meet the needs of all students," said Altizer. If on-campus apartments become a reality, they will likely be filled with upperclassmen students. Another dorm similar to Barron Hall could accommodate a variety of room styles, stated Altizer.

Altizer also predicts that a lottery type system will likely be used this year for housing registration. The system will take into account the class of the student when they register for rooms. It will also eliminate the long lines that have plagued registrations in the past. Either each student will personally draw his/her registration time and return to sign up or they will be assigned a register time by computer. The new system will allow for exceptions, such as Laurens Hall, currently a male residence hall, will be converted into a women's residence hall this summer. The new Laurens Hall will accommodate 23 female students.

photo by Brooke Peterson

keeping the same room or creating a hall community as many students live in currently.

Another change this year will be the handling of room deposits, which are due June 1. This deadline will be strictly enforced, according to Altizer, and there will be no exceptions. Housing sign-ups will occur from April 11-15, 1994. Altizer said that students will receive additional information regarding sign-ups as the registration time approaches.

On The Inside

Page 3 . . .

Possible GDH meal plan sparks debate.

Page 6 - 7 . . .

Sex and Alcohol in the 90's:
A risky Mix?

Page 10 . . .

Mason Gordon finds success on and off the football field.

Public Safety cracks major vandalism, burglary case On-campus incident leads to city, county, state apprehension

by Alison Barnard
STAFF WRITER

The early mornings of Friday, February 4, turned out to be a night of activity for PC public safety as six vehicles in the Georgia Hall parking lot were burglarized. An estimated $2,231 worth of property was stolen from parked vehicles while an additional fifteen hundred dollars worth of property damage was done to the automobiles.

PC Public Safety Officer Tom Owens, while on a routine patrol of the Georgia Hall parking lot at approximately 3 a.m., spotted several parked vehicles with shattered windows. A white van was spotted leaving the parking lot at a high rate of speed and Public Safety pursued. The high speed chase, also involving the Clinton Police Department, would end with the stolen van crashing into a building and the two occupants escaping on foot.

By 4 a.m., the Laurens County Sheriffs Department, along with the State Law Enforcement Department, using bloodhounds and helicopters, had joined in the manhunt. Within two hours, the two assailants, Bradley Smith of Greenville, and a juvenile, had been apprehended.

After dusting for fingerprints, authorities were able to link the six break-ins at the Georgia Hall parking lot on February 4 with two other break-ins that occurred at PC on the morning of February 1. The various items that were stolen from students' cars, CD players, cellular phones, stereos, and compact discs, have been returned.

"We feel like we've gotten two criminals off the street that should be off the street and hopefully won't be back," said Public Safety Chief Grey Mason.

Victim Reid Bowyer, who, along with a shattered window, had a cellular phone and numerous compact discs stolen from his vehicle, echoed similar feelings adding, "I was proud of Public Safety for catching the thieves. I was very pleased to get my stuff back."

PC

Tidbits

PC President's House grounds vandalized

On January 31, 1994, the grounds of the home of PC President and Mrs. Ken B. Orr were vandalized, according to Chief Grey Mayson of Public Safety. Persons lined trees, shrubbery, and the front porch areas of the college-owned home located across from Belk Auditorium on Broad Street with toilet paper. Although some footprints were obtained by Public Safety, there are no suspects in the case. Individuals with information should call the Public Safety office.

Students participate in hunger awareness program

Over 300 Presbyterian College students participated in the Oxfam Hunger Awareness program Wednesday. They fasted from dinner Wednesday evening and donated the money that would have been used for their dinner to Oxfam, which provides assistance to needy people worldwide. The program was sponsored by Westminster Fellowship.

Order of the Omega brings Greek honor society to campus

Members of PC's fraternities and sororities who have excelled in academics and demonstrated leadership in their Greek organizations were inducted into PC's newest honor society on Wednesday February 9 in Edmunds Hall. Forty students were inducted in addition to eight faculty alumni. Member Matt Glenn said that the Order of the Omega hopes to participate in various service projects around campus.

Applications for new RAs being sought

Director of Residence Life Andy Altizer is now accepting application for 1994-95 school year Resident Assistants. These applications are available in 2nd floor Douglas House and are due on or before March 4, 1994.

Possible GDH meal plan alternative sparks debate

By Gray Lesesne
NEWS EDITOR

While recent student dissatisfaction with food and service in Greenville Dining Hall has been allayed by efforts of the GDH staff to serve healthier food in a more efficient fashion, some PC students are urging the SGA and the college's administration to offer a meal plan for the 1994-95 school year. Under the current system, PC students (or their parents) pay $1808 per school year to eat 21 meals weekly in GDH.

All students who live on campus are required to purchase this plan. This cost is based on the premise that some meals will not be eaten, according to Skip Zubrod, vice president for finance and treasurer. Other colleges sponsor meals plans allowing students to pay for the number of meals actually eaten per week or in increments up to and including 21 meals. However, PC does not offer such a plan.

At a recent freshman class meeting, students expressed concern over the money wasted each time a meal was not eaten in GDH. While the actual cost of a missed meal cannot be accurately determined, college officials estimate it to be around $3.00. "It's senseless for us to waste our parents' good money when we could be using it elsewhere," said one student.

SGA President Lauren Owings assured students that her organization was working closely with the administration and GDH staff and that the SGA food committee will be taking suggestions for alternative food plans for next year. Although there has a good place to help build the community."

"We realize some meals are going to be missed, and we've factored that into our costs. What we offer now is the most cost-efficient option. Another type of meal plan would not be significantly less," he said.

However, students claim that even a slight cost reduction would be beneficial to those who do not frequent GDH or cannot eat every meal there. "Students can't possibly eat there all of the time; perhaps some type of meal plan and cost reduction would better suit many students' needs," said Sophomore Amy Ellis.

Freshman class president Catherine Bunch, member of the SGA food committee, said, "We haven't closed the door on any options yet. We are still working hard and need student input."

"It's senseless for us to waste our parents' good money when we could be using it elsewhere," said a freshman recently when discussing the issue at a class meeting.

been no formal proposal, an alternative plan is expected to be presented by the SGA at some point in time. Zubrod said that going through the SGA is the best way to realize results for this type of proposal. He also expressed his personal opposition to such a plan, claiming that by requiring students to eat in the dining hall, a sense of community is created. "The dining hall is

Students anticipate tuition increase

By Gray Lesesne
NEWS EDITOR

With the cost of higher education steadily rising on a national level, some PC students are feeling the financial crunch as they plan for the 1994-95 academic year. This anticipation is heightened with the speculation of a possible tuition and fees increase for Presbyterian College students. While no official action on actual student costs for next year will be taken until the March 1, 1994 Board of Trustees meeting, PC students are bracing for a price increase, which may hinder some from returning to campus in the fall.

Skip Zubrod, vice president for finance and treasurer, said that it is "premature" to anticipate any rise in student costs. "Nothing has been or will be approved until the March meeting of the Board of Trustees," he said.

But, some students have no doubt that there will be a price increase. "The price of this school has gone up both years I've been here," says one sophomore. "I could barely afford this year and it looks like with any increase next year I'll be forced to make plans to go elsewhere."

Zubrod points out that PC is below the cost average for institutions of comparable quality. "We never like a price increase. And the administration is being sensitive to student concerns," he said. Of fourteen other regional liberal arts colleges surveyed, Presbyterian is below the average by approximately $1400 according to Zubrod.

"PC is a school where individuality is stressed. We're not other schools," said the sophomore. "I see some (wasteful) spending on campus, so if they want to raise prices, perhaps they should tell us where it's going," she said. She receives financial aid as well as private scholarships and is concerned that these will not rise with the cost increase.

"Our total financial aid will increase with any rise," said Zubrod. "Of course, it will be on an individual basis." Zubrod noted that, as in the past, the financial aid office will assist students in attaining the maximum aid possible.

"I hope that when the Board of Trustees meets that they will consider that a lot of PC students and their families aren't millionaires. It's a major expense to come here. It puts a real strain on me and all students to ask our families to make any further sacrifices, especially when they have put a lot on the line for us to come here," said a freshman.

Alpha Delta Pi
Congratulates our new Deltas!

Robin Billington
Catherine Bunch
Laura Cam
Brandt Casto
Leanne Clark
Catherine Clayton
Ginny Cobb
Christina Eckert
Kate Gibson
Susan Haigler
Renee Haynes
Katy Hays
Lisa Hill
Corinne Hollingsworth
Anna Hunt
Andrea Kellar
Lori Lesslie
Tricia McKay
Candi Newton
Jennifer Page
Jennings Palmer
Beth Phillips
Marcie Phillips
Wendy Ramos
Loy Stone
Helen Weidler
Carrie Wilson

Sociology department requires seniors to assist in evaluation

by Gray Lesesne
NEWS EDITOR

As a requirement for continued accreditation of Presbyterian College by the Southern Association, several academic departments are under assessment this year in a three year evaluation of the college. These include the education, religion, sociology, English, and the music departments. Each department formulates its own format for assessment and evaluation. As a part of the sociology department's evaluation, the fourteen senior major students will be required to take a standardized test to assist the department in its academic review, according to Dr. Robert Freymeyer, Associate Professor of Sociology and department chairperson.

When Freymeyer announced the department's intentions recently, several sociology majors expressed frustration about taking a comprehensive and all-inclusive test that would measure their general knowledge of the subject. But Freymeyer attributes those concerns to the possibility of sociology seniors having to take the Graduate Record Exam (GRE), which would cost the college money and require test takers to travel to Lander University in Greenwood. Since that time, the sociology department has moved away from that option and will now likely offer a test on campus that will be of no charge. The exam given will be strictly used to evaluate the course knowledge of PC sociology students and results will not be placed on academic records, he said.

"Basically, this test will allow us to compare our results with the fourteen other major institutions that (are of equal merit)," said Freymeyer. "It will in no way affect the status of graduation or grades of any of our seniors. It's a way for us to compare the sociology department to others nationally," he said.

Valerie Schoenleber, a sociology major and senior who will take the test, said "I don't think it's a problem. My roommate has taken one of these type of tests for another department. If it helps to evaluate the department, I don't have a problem with it."

"My only concern is that there is no incentive for test takers to perform well. It might be an unfair evaluation of the department," said Amy Kimball, a senior also majoring in sociology.

"All departments do some standardized measurements of their students. The students aren't really being evaluated, it's the department," said Dr. Charles McKelvey, associate professor of Sociology. "We need some form of objective measurement."

Freymeyer compared this school-wide assessment to annual assessments done at state supported institutions. He hopes that similar annual assessments will not become a requirement for independent schools like Presbyterian, although he said a periodic focus on departmental goals and objectives is beneficial.

Orr named to higher education committee

Press Release

Presbyterian College president Dr. Kenneth B. Orr has been selected by the United States Department of Education to serve on the National Advisory Committee on Institutional Quality and Integrity.

The appointment, made by Secretary of Education Richard W. Riley, begins immediately and runs through September 30, 1995. The committee advises Secretary Riley on matters relating to accreditation and institutional eligibility.

"I am pleased to be invited to advise Secretary Riley on (these issues) within American higher education," said Orr, PC's sixteenth president. Orr is a native of Charlotte and has been president of Presbyterian College since 1979. He holds degrees from Duke University, Union Theological Seminary, and the University of Michigan.

Ever Get A Pal Smashed?

SGA announces candidates for '94-95 offices

The Presbyterian College Student Government Association announced Wednesday that SGA elections for student body officers for 1994-95 will be held Wednesday, February 23, 1994 in Springs Campus Center from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m.. Speeches for all executive council positions will be heard February 21 in Springs at 6 p.m.. The following are candidates for SGA Executive Council President: Dallas Olson, Jr. and John Wetzler. For Vice President: Jamie Chastain and Leigh Davis. For Secretary: Natascha Jones and Marie Youmans. For Treasurer: David Spivey. For Student Union Board President: Charissa Cleckler. For Judicial Council Chairperson: Mary Beth Thomas and Bill Wright.

SGA President Lauren Owings encouraged all PC students to attend the speeches to be held on February 21 and to vote on February 23. "These elections directly affect student life. The student government association is by and for the students. Those candidates elected will be responsible for representing the student body to the administration," she said.

Haven't Filed Your Taxes?

- Each year, the IRS lists the most common mistakes people make when doing their taxes... like math errors, not claiming the earned income credit, or forgetting to sign the return.
 - But the biggest mistake people can make any time, any year, is not filing at all.
 - If you missed filing for a year or so and you should have filed, the people at the IRS want to help. Whatever your reason, they'll listen. They can help stop things from getting worse, because penalties and interest keep adding up. They'll explain your payment options if you owe... even help you get any refund you've got coming.
 - Talk to the people at the IRS any time of year. They want to help, and that's no mistake!
- Call 1-800-829-1040

POINT

The purpose of a liberal-arts school is to educate, not provide a chance for easy sex and endless beer

In a recent issue of Christian Century, William H. Willimon describes the abuse of alcohol on the campus of Duke University and contends that today's college student is a part of a "lost generation."

Willimon argues that colleges and universities have become places of social activity instead of institutions of learning. He depicts the students of Duke as being more concerned with student activities, residence life, athletics, fraternities/sororities, and drinking than with pursuing educational goals and broadening their horizons.

We at the Blue Stocking believe that Willimon's depiction of students at Duke is an accurate account of a large number of students here at Presbyterian College.

At PC, we like to think of ourselves as one of the best and brightest liberal arts colleges in the South. Indeed, we are. PC can boast of a consistent ranking as one of the best schools in the region, a gifted and tremendously talented faculty, and a large number of intelligent, motivated students. However, there is a growing segment of our campus population whose only goal is to "live for the weekend."

This "weekend" attitude couldn't have been summed up more accurately than by a logo that recently appeared on a campus t-shirt. The logo read "Presbyterian College: The ultimate party with one helluva cover charge."

The purpose of Presbyterian College as a liberal-arts school is to "educate" the whole person, not provide a chance for easy sex and ever-flowing beer.

In other words, attending PC allows for exposure to a variety of things that should change the way we look at the world and ourselves. The college has adopted a number of goals as a part of its liberal-arts mission. Those goals include helping a student "gain a basic knowledge in the humanities, natural sciences and social sciences," developing in the student the "ability to think clearly and independently," helping the student "develop personal moral and ethical commitments," and helping the student "achieve a sense of dignity and self-worth."

Unfortunately, some students couldn't care less about experiencing a broad-based, liberal-arts education and fulfilling the aforementioned goals. Their only concern is for partying and for themselves. The weekend at PC begins on Thursday, and to these students, the activities of the weekend revolve around alcohol, leading to a number of problems including vandalism, date rape, fights, driving under the influence, abusive relationships, etc. This constant partying also leads to poor grades and excessive absences from classes, which in turn leads to a numbing of the mind.

Unfortunately, a student who is constantly surrounded by noise and beer often misses out on the quiet and reflective moments of college life, which help in molding character. Instead of going to Waffle House with a group of friends and talking about life or spending some time in a late night rap session in a dorm, the partygoers must spend time hurling their fun times into a toilet.

Of course, we at the Blue Stocking realize that all partying is not bad. College can't be all seriousness and all books.

Our point is that students who place their social lives above their education are doing themselves and Presbyterian College a disservice. We are here to learn, not to experience "one helluva party."

Sidewalk Talk

Do you think that PC has an alcohol problem?

"PC" doesn't have an alcohol problem. I think only a small percentage of students have a problem, while others drink casually."

Karen Sharper
Junior

"Yes, there is a problem. However, college is a great time to be an alcoholic."

Chris Adair
Senior

"Yes, PC has an alcohol problem but it's only prevalent on weekends. I've never truly witnessed an incident that got out of hand."

Natasha Jones
Sophomore

photos by Reid Collins

THE BLUE STOCKING

Presbyterian College - Clinton, South Carolina 29325
Volume LXXXVIII Number 7, February 18, 1994

Editor-in-Chief: Jason West
Managing Editor: Tobin Turner
News Editor: Gray Lesesne
Sports Editor: Everett Catts
Entertainment Editor: Kim Rabon
Features Editor: Brian Sacco
Computer Design Editor: Todd Love
Photography Editor: Kim Gibson
Layout Editor: Angela Richardson
Staff Artist: Michael Christensen
Staff Advisor: Dr. Neal B. Prater

Staff Writers:
Dennie Lynn Hill
Charles Smith
Dawn Banks
Kim Wood
Kristina Pruitt
Katherine Bonner
Karen O'Connor
Margaret Ellen Pender
Alison Nicole Barnard
Photographers: Reid Collins, Brooke Peterson

Gray Lesesne
Nhien Nguyen
Kelley Perkins
Camisha Clarke
Touya Sneed
Brian Parrish
Lauren Jones
Christie Grant

The Blue Stocking is a tri-weekly student publication of Presbyterian College. The paper serves as a forum of news and opinion of regional and national concern. For advertising, contact The Blue Stocking, Presbyterian College, Box 1061, Clinton, SC 29325. The Blue Stocking welcomes letters to the editor from all members of the PC community. Signatures are required. Letters are printed on a space available basis. The Blue Stocking reserves the right to edit all letters for proper grammar and punctuation. The final deadline for submitting letters is Friday at 12:00 pm on the week before publication.

Letters to the Editor - Letters to the Editor - Letters to the Editor - Letters to the Editor - Letters to the Editor

Student upset over new lights at 'Lake Orr'

Dear Editor:

After a busy day on campus, the picnic table by the pond was my sanctuary. I could relax there: no TV, no lights, no distractions; just me, my notebook, and the ducks. I could laugh or cry to myself, write poetry, think, talk to the ducks, stare at the stars, write letters, or sit with my significant other in peace. That place was special to me.

So, I applaud the decision made by the administrative regime at Presbyterian College of the placement of lights around "Lake Orr."

I have some more suggestions though. It is my opinion that some areas on campus are too dark at night, thus deemed "unsafe," so the college could invest in the placement of lights around GDH, Jacobs Hall, the track around the stadium, the sidewalk on Fraternity court, around the fountain, and Dr. Orr's house. That may solve the problem of dark areas on campus.

I keep forgetting that college is serious. Students should focus on learning and not on having fun and developing personal well-being. Thank you for using my money to take away my happiness.

Sincerely,

Jason D. Lee
Sophomore

Studying abroad viewed as 'best decision' ever made by one Presbyterian College student

Dear Editor:

Having recently returned from studying overseas in Wales, I'd like to encourage PC students to study abroad before they graduate. Whether it's a program in Wales, China, Scotland, etc. Go for it!

The reasons to study abroad are far more convincing than the worn-out reasons one tends to hear frequently such as "it will broaden your horizons" and "it will be such a good experience." Leaving PC's small, safe, protected environment may be a scary thought, but the adventures you will have in a new culture, the foreign friends you will make who will want to know every detail about America (particularly about the South!), and the self-reliance you will gain by being overseas should put to rest any initial nervousness you may have about missing a semester in Clinton.

The educational and travel opportunities of a foreign study program are unique. For instance, in Wales, I took an outdoor pursuits class, and every Friday I went on all day field trips to go kayaking, rock climbing, and caving. With this class, I spent a week mountain climbing in Snowdonia with British, Welsh, and Irish students. Would I have had this opportunity in Clinton, South Carolina?

As far as traveling goes, there's no better time to travel than when you're a student and therefore eligible for discounts on transatlantic flights and Eurail passes. With my program, we were able to travel to Russia from London for an excellent student fare and with one of Britain's leading experts on the former Soviet Union.

If you're concerned about the costs involved for studying abroad, the tuition, room and board for an overseas program is approximately the same amount as a semester at PC. Any financial aid you may have will transfer to the program of your choice, and PC offers the M and L Brown Fund every year for students planning on studying abroad.

Take advantage of the opportunities that PC offers, and don't overlook the possibility of studying abroad. For me, it was one of the best decisions I've ever made.

Sincerely,

Christie Grant
Senior

'I would make all residence halls smoke free' from the effects of cigarette smoking, which accounts for 1 in 6 deaths. Each year 65 billion dollars in health care costs are attributed to smoking related problems. Because the smoker breathes filtered smoke, the smoke he/she inhales is not as dangerous as the second-hand or sidestream smoke breathed by anyone around the smoker. In 1988 the U.S. Surgeon General deemed nicotine as just as addictive as heroine or cocaine. The fact that smoking causes lung cancer in smokers is a well-known fact, but the U.S. Surgeon General reported in 1986 that involuntary smoking can cause cancer in nonsmokers.

On February 21, 10 students and staff will attend a workshop designed by the American Lung Association to teach people to help others stop smoking in a program called, "How to stop smoking in 20 days." This workshop has been brought to PC by Resa Welch, assistant dean of students, in an effort to reduce smoking and its harmful effects on students. The people attending this workshop will be available to help students who wish to stop smoking. The formation of a Smoking Committee, chaired by Margaret Williamson, and comprised of faculty, staff, and students is in the works, and the committee will consider the development of smoking policies in buildings that do not have a policy of this sort, which includes all buildings except Neville Hall and Greenville Dining Hall. If you are interested in becoming part of this committee, or if you have any questions or suggestions, please contact a member of this committee.

Students who choose not to smoke have made the choice not to pollute their lungs with dangerous smoke. It seems unfair that other students can smoke in community buildings on campus, and therefore subject nonsmokers to the danger they have already chosen to avoid. Not only is it a matter of the smell of stale smoke lingering in the dorms, or the fact that the lack of ventilation in academic building hallways causes smoke to stay in the halls, choking anyone who passes by, it is a matter of the health of the students of Presbyterian College. Some students are allergic to cigarette smoke; it can cause red, itchy eyes, uncomfortable breathing, and in some severe cases, an inability to breathe resulting in a trip to the emergency room, in addition to the risk of eventual cancer.

Several students have expressed concern about the smoking in the dorms: Sophomore Nicole Ginn said, "When I lived on second floor Clinton, I lived directly across from the kitchen, and although my roommate and I did not smoke, our room was always filled with smoke and our clothes smelled of smoke."

"My next door neighbor smokes, and the smoke comes through the walls and makes my room and clothes smell just like I was smoking," said Sophomore

The Blue Stocking encourages all members of the PC community to express their opinions about matters concerning the campus and the world. If you have an opinion and would like to share it, you can send your letter by campus mail to PC Box 1061.

Letter to the editor must be signed and are subject to grammatical revisions. Letters must be turned into the newspaper office one week before publication. The next issue of the Blue Stocking will be published on March 3, 1994.

Elizabeth Cunard. Andy Altizer, director of residence life, said, "If it were up to me, I would make all residence halls smoke free except for individual rooms where all roommates are smokers."

I live in Clinton Dorm, and we have had a never-ending problem with smoking. We were not given the option of a smoke free dorm, but we were asked to fill out a questionnaire asking if we smoke, and if we feel there is a need for a designated smoking area. When we returned from Christmas Break, signs were posted announcing that the third floor kitchen would be the designated smoking area. Junior Joy Rubier said, "I don't understand why when we got back from Christmas Holidays, our third floor kitchen was designated as the smoking area for Clinton dorm without our consent." Third floor residents were not given the right to vote even though this is something that affects our entire hall. Smokers do need a place to smoke, but why should it be a community area. If a student wishes to smoke, he/she should only be allowed to smoke in his/her room with the door closed. No smoking should be permitted in the halls, and these rules should be enforced. Smokers do have the right to smoke, but it isn't simply a matter of choice, it is a matter of imposing harm upon other human beings.

Campus alcohol policy: 'Why ask why?'

by Brian Sacco
FEATURES EDITOR

As the abuse of alcohol by college students appears in more and more news reports, the role alcohol plays on Presbyterian's campus would obviously be on the minds of PC administrators. Many students on campus would agree the use of alcohol has an impact on the school environment, most notably on the weekends. Generally, every report or study on alcohol abuse will conclude that alcohol abuse is a severe health issue and a serious problem on college campuses.

Joseph O. Nixon, dean of students, explained the affect alcohol and alcohol abuse has on the atmosphere of the campus as a whole. "Alcohol has a negative impact on student performance and personal relationships." He also added that "alcohol plays a role in the damage of the residence halls." Andy Altizer, director of residence life, stated, "Almost all vandalism [on campus] is associated with alcohol."

The school is making an effort to combat the problems associated with alcohol abuse by attempting to educate students about the wrongs of alcohol abuse. In all introductory physical education classes the program "On Campus Talking About Alcohol" (O.C.T.A.A.) is in its second year of instruction here at PC. Altizer commented, "Hopefully at the end of the class students may learn something." Nixon added, "It is too early to determine how successful the program is at PC."

The Office of Student Affairs sponsors National Collegiate Alcohol Awareness Activities in October which include several videos and seminars promoting the power of positive choices involving alcohol.

Sex and alcohol in the 90's: a risky combination on any campus

Alcohol Vs. Books

The typical college student spends more money for alcohol than for books!!!

OSAP, Alcohol Practices, Policies, & Potentials of American Colleges, 1991

Do you have a problem?

Answer "yes" or "no" to the following questions:

1. Do you sometimes drink a lot after a letdown or a fight?
2. Do you drink more than usual when under pressure?
3. Have you noticed that you're able to handle more alcohol than you could when you were first drinking?
4. Do you ever wake up the "morning after" and discover that you can't remember part of the evening before?
5. When drinking with other people, do you try to have a few extra drinks when they won't know it?
6. Do you often find that you want to keep drinking after your friends say they've had enough?
7. Do you often regret things you did or said while drinking?
8. Have you often failed to keep promises you've made to yourself about controlling or cutting down on your drinking?
9. Do you try to avoid close friends while you're drinking?
10. Do more people seem to be treating you unfairly?
11. Do you sometimes wonder whether life is worth living?
12. After periods of drinking, do you sometimes hear or see things that are not there?
13. Do you get frightened after you've been drinking heavily?

According to the National Council on Alcoholism and Drug Dependence, any "yes" answer indicates a probable symptom of alcoholism. More than one "yes" answer indicates its presence.

1-800-NCA CALL --The twenty-four-hour toll-free information and referral line of the National Council on Alcoholism and Drug Dependence.

Alcoholics Anonymous --Listed in the phone book. You can also call 1-212-686-1100 for information and referral to a local meeting.

Taken from an article in Seventeen Magazine.

US survey measures attitudes about sex and alcohol

by Christie Grant
STAFF WRITER

A study recently released by the American Council for Drug Education reports that 93.6% of all college students have used alcohol in their lives, and 85% of sexual assaults are alcohol related. Furthermore, the typical college student spends more money on alcohol than for books.

Key findings concerning drug and alcohol abuse at PC during December 1992 reveal that 79% of students drink at least every 30 days. Forty percent reported some form of misconduct at least once during the past year as a result of drinking, and 95% of the students surveyed believed that the average student uses alcohol once a week or more often.

PC used the U.S. Department of Education's CORE Drug and Alcohol Survey in December 1992 by surveying a random sample of 300 PC students. Forty-five percent of the surveys were returned, and the above percentages were calculated based on the number of students and the number who replied. The survey was funded by the U.S. Department of Education in order to measure attitudes and usage among college students.

In December of 1993, the same survey was given to 300 random PC students, and 141 people responded. All the results of this survey haven't been compiled yet, but some early results prove that 8% of the students surveyed had been taken advantage of sexually while under the influence of alcohol. Of the males surveyed, 1.4% responded they had taken advantage of someone sexually while under alcohol's influence.

Resa Welch, assistant dean of students, said, "there's definitely an alcohol/sex connection, when men and women drink beyond their tolerance levels, they often make unwise decisions about sex. Alcohol can never be an excuse for date or acquaintance rape." Research shows that 85% of date rapes involve alcohol. My advice is that if you choose to drink, don't drink to the point that it impairs your judgement, because decisions made while intoxicated often affect you for a lifetime.

A national survey found that "students at smaller colleges drink more than their colleagues at larger schools." When asked about the solution to this problem, Welch replied that "it's crucial for drinking norms to change on college campuses, and those norms have to be changed by college students themselves. College students have to accept alcohol issues and find solutions as well."

Date rape: A problem every college student faces

By Brian Sacco
FEATURES EDITOR

According to media reports and experts on the subject, acquaintance rape and sexual assaults are especially prevalent on college campuses. Recent surveys indicate that one out of four women who attend college will be a victim of sexual assault or attempted sexual assault. In addition, approximately 15 percent of men indicate that they have been forced to have sex.

Many sexual assault victims choose not to tell anyone and often do not seek the help they need.

The statements you just read are the same ones that are being heard at college campuses across the nation and these same exact words are the ones that were contained in the pamphlet "Sexual Assault: What to Do; How to Respond" which was sent to every student's home over the Christmas break. If you missed it the first time, then you better get it this time because the longer the problem is avoided or misunderstood, the worse the problem of sexual assault will become on college campuses.

The Student Affairs Department, recognizing that sexual assault incidents occur just as frequently on a campus the size of PC's as a larger school, actively pursue an effort to educate students on the importance of realizing and reporting a sexual assault offense. Dean of students, Joe O. Nixon, commented, "There is a reluctance to report incidents because of fear of exposure." The policy concerning sexual offense guidelines for the school is outlined in The Knapsack. During the school year, the residents of each hall are exposed to a series of videos to educate the students about date rape. Andy Altizer, director of residence life, stated, "We have to know what to teach to best meet the needs of the students. We are educating for the future."

Furthermore, Dean Nixon added, "I hope it [date rape] is uncommon, but I realize that it does happen on campus. Harassment and inappropriateness are more common." In conclusion, Nixon stated, "We are here to support and assist victims."

"I think we have a problem here at PC with date rape. I can name several people who have been taken advantage of. Unfortunately, nothing was done about it because it wasn't reported," said Dena Eliot.

"As a college community, we like to think that things like date rape don't happen on our campus. We like to think that PC is an exception to the rule and that tends to make us not address serious problems such as alcohol and date rape," said SGA President Lauren Owings. "Date rape at PC happens more than we think, but the school's small size deters people from reporting it like they should."

David Dixon, a senior and member of the Peer Connectors, believes that date rape does occur at PC. "It is a problem that is often not reported but it happens here at PC," he said.

Dixon says that the Peer Connectors, which is a group of students trained as entry level counselors, are available and open to talk with anyone about date rape or any other topic of concern.

Myths Contributing to Acquaintance Rape

- *This only happens to other people at other places.
- *When a woman says "no" she means "yes" or "maybe."
- *Women play a role in getting themselves into acquaintance or date rape situations by their behavior or dress.
- *It is useless to report acquaintance or date rape.
- *If the man has spent a lot of money, it is okay for him to expect sex.
- *If a man believes he has been "led on," it is okay for him to expect sex.

Protect Yourself and Others

Women

- *Know yourself--set your sexual limits and communicate them clearly.
- *Be assertive--exercise control over your environment and don't apologize for what you want or don't want.
- *Trust your intuition--if the situation is not comfortable, say so. Realize your behavior sends a message.
- *Avoid excessive use of alcohol and drugs. Recent research shows that 75% of men and 55% of women were impaired by alcohol and other drugs while involved in a date or acquaintance rape incident.

Men

- *No means no--accept the woman's response and do not become aggressive.
- *Dating someone does not give you the right to violate that person's rights.
- *Previous consent does not apply to the current situation.
- *Regardless of your relationship, forcing someone to have intercourse is never acceptable.

From a pamphlet published by the Student Affairs Office.

Lady Blue Hose enjoy unity and success on the court

by Margaret Ellen Pender
STAFF WRITER

In watching the Lady Blue Hose basketball team over the course of this season, I am often reminded of the things which my coach used to say over and over again to encourage our team or to restore the confidence of individuals.

While this year's Lady Blue Hose squad can definitely deliver a powerful offensive punch both from the inside duo of Jennifer Hilliard (16.1 ppg) and Jennifer Mims (6.2 ppg) and from the outside accuracy of Chris Mitchum (12.3 ppg), Kaye Watts (9.7 ppg) and Melanie Johnson (9.5 ppg), all teams have those "off nights" when it seems that they could not buy a basket. That is the time when a great team will distinguish itself by turning up the defensive intensity while waiting for the shots to fall, which is exactly what the Lady Blue Hose have done.

Fortunately there haven't been too many off-nights thus far, but when they do occur, senior Jennifer Hilliard, who leads the league in free throw percentage, concedes that the solution is to be "all over the floor on defense." Saturday night's 91-68 win over Elon was one of those game in which everyone contributed, the shots fell and PC proved that it can do it on both ends of the floor; however, it was Wednesday's disappointing overtime loss to Catawba which may have revealed more about the character of this team. Despite shooting a mere 29.5% from the floor, the Lady Hose kept the game close and ultimately fell Jennifer Hilliard (25) prepares to make a pass to an open teammate. Hilliard has helped lead the Lady Blue Hose to an 18-5 record.

photo by Steve Owens

to the Indians, 77-72. Although a loss is never desired, upsets sometimes prove to be just what a team needs to help them refocus prior to playoff time.

The unity of this year's squad and the subsequent trust that they share is also an obvious ingredient for their success thus far. My coach used to remind us that when we were on the floor, he expected us to "give him everything we had," and then if we got tired, he'd put in a substitute. Sophomore Chris Mitchum confesses that she "has never played on a team like this before," and Hilliard adds that "knowing that there are so many people who can play really relieves the pressure."

With about two weeks and four crucial games remaining in the regular season, the Lady Blue Hose hope to continue to perform like they did in the first half of the season when they "really pulled it together," said Melanie Johnson. The pivotal game of the season was probably Wednesday night, when the Lady Hose put their perfect home record on the line against the SAC's first place team, Wingate. Although PC lost to the Lady Bulldogs earlier this season, coming into this game, the Lady Hose felt confident that they could hand Wingate a loss and recapture first place if they could simply not be intimidated by the tradition of the Wingate program. Sophomore Jennifer Mims explained that "we just need to quit being scared of them and realize that we are just as good, if not better than them." Unfortunately, despite strong play from both Hilliard and Watts, who had 14 points apiece, the Blue Hose fell to the ever-tough Wingate team 62-54. The Blue Hose are now second place in the conference

Mistakes lead to tough baseball losses early into the season

by Everett Catts
SPORTS EDITOR

Mental mistakes led to two losses for the Blue Hose baseball team, which opened its season this past Saturday at seventh-ranked Armstrong State and Sunday at Georgia College.

On February 12 the Blue Hose swung into action with Armstrong State, the first meeting between both teams. PC got on the board early with a run in the third inning. But the Pirates took the lead with a three-run rally in the bottom of the inning to go on top for good. Armstrong State added a run in the fourth, two in the fifth and two in the eighth to take a commanding 8-1 lead. But the Blue Hose didn't quit.

In the ninth inning the Blue Hose battled back. The comeback was highlighted by Sean McCarthy's pinch-hit single that drove in two runs. The rally started when Elton Pollock singled and advanced to second on Paul Bushway's walk. Russell McAlister reached on an error to load the bases, and Eric Andress singled to drive in outfielders Pollock and Bushway. Jason Bradley walked before McCarthy's big hit. But the five-run rally ended, as three of the next four batters were retired, giving Armstrong State the victory.

PC's mistakes—four errors and four runners picked off—haunted the Blue Hose all day. Darren Bane pitched 5 1/3 innings gave up six runs and got the loss. Donovan Harrison finished the game, giving up two runs in 3 2/3 innings.

Paul Bushway was the one bright spot of the day, going three for three, with a single, a double, a run scored and an assist in the outfield. Three other players—Andress, Pollock, and Brody Hendrix—had two hits apiece.

On the following day the Blue Hose were setback by Georgia College, 5-3. Down 2-0 in the sixth, the Blue Hose scored three runs to take a 3-2 lead. Jason Bradley's single that drove in Pollock and Bushway started the rally. After Pollock reached on an error, Bushway walked. McAlister's sacrifice bunt advanced Pollock and Bushway, and Andress was hit by a pitch to load the bases. After Bradley's big hit, Jamie Garland struck out. David Gant drove in the go-ahead run (Andress) with a single, but the Blue Hose did not score again.

The Colonials tied the score with a run in the bottom of the sixth, and took the lead for good with single runs in the seventh and eighth innings. Although none of the PC players were not picked off of first, two players were caught stealing and 8 runners were stranded. The defense also improved, committing only one error.

The Colonial pitchers allowed only five hits, and Pollock and Bradley combined for four of them.

This past Wednesday the Blue Hose hosted USC-Aiken, ranked fourth in the nation. PC will close out the brief homestand with a 1:00 game against intrastate rival Wofford before playing four straight road games.

Sports View

PC's Athletes mix brains with brawn

by Everett Catts
SPORTS EDITOR

It seems that I have upset some people by not publishing the PC athletic teams' grades properly and in the correct order. I apologize for doing so. For those athletes and teams who were left out last issue, here is a list of how each team ranks.

The team with the highest overall GPA is women's tennis, which had a 3.09 overall GPA last year. The squad had three Dean's List students, and in the 1992-93 academic year Jennifer Miller was an NAIA All-American Scholar Athlete.

Men's basketball came in a close second place with a 3.07 overall mark with one President's List student and four other Dean's List students.

With an overall GPA of 2.93, the women's soccer team was third. The squad had one President's List student and five were on the Dean's List.

The women's basketball team was tied with the women's soccer team also with a 2.93 GPA. The Lady Blue Hose had five Dean's List students.

Coach Beth Couture's women's volleyball team was fifth with a 2.88 GPA. Her squad had one player on the President's List and four on the Dean's List.

The track team is next, but because many football players also run track, compiling the team's grades is very difficult and could not be done before printing time. Coach Mike Owens said, "We've got several people on the Dean's List, and our GPA is between 2.8 and 3.0."

In sixth place was the men's soccer team, which had a 2.68 GPA and three Dean's List.

The baseball team follows with a 2.5 GPA and two Dean's List students.

The golf team is next with two Dean's List students, but the team's overall GPA was not tallied by press time.

The football team follows with four Dean's List students, but the team's GPA was not calculated in time.

The men's tennis team, known for its academic excellence, most likely had a high GPA in the fall, but Coach McKee could not be reached.

Men's basketball finds consistency; begins winning trend

by Everett Catts
SPORTS EDITOR

The men's basketball team is now 11-10 and 6-4 in the conference, and despite their record, Coach Nibert's squad may still have a chance to win the conference—with help from others.

The Blue Hose's 6-4 SAC-8 record puts them in a tie with three other teams for second place. PC has maintained a share of second place by playing some of the best basketball of the season. After losing 74-64 on February 26 at Mars Hill, the top team in the SAC, the rebounded with an 83-73 victory at Lenoir-Rhyne. But in that game, PC lost their point guard, freshman sensation Layne Fowler, who injured his knee.

"He had come off the best game of the year. He was providing a lot of leadership and the team believes in us," said head Coach Gregg Nibert.

Despite the loss, the men's squad quickly found players to take up where Fowler left off.

"It took us only one day to make changes. Andrew (Wellman) and Jay (Whitney) are two seniors who have played well and provided leadership (at that position)," said head coach Gregg Nibert.

Although the adjustment went smoothly, the Blue Hose lost the following game, an 85-

71 setback against Gardner-Webb. PC scored five unanswered points to end the first half, highlighted by Jay Whitney's inbounds pass with two seconds left to Tony Grant, who slam dunked at the buzzer to give PC a 31-27 halftime lead. But the Runnin' Bulldogs went on a 13-0 run and eventually won.

"They pressed us in the second half and got a lot of steals. Their 13-0 run shells shocked us, and we never got back in the game mentally or physically," Nibert said of the game.

Following that game, the Blue Hose played 16th-ranked Wofford on February 1. After falling behind 29-28 at halftime, PC out scored the Terriers 42-41 in the second half. Down 70-67 with seconds left, Jonathan Bankhead's off-balance, one handed three-pointer tied the score and sent it into overtime. But Wofford outscored the Blue Hose 11-9 in overtime and won 81-79. Ronnie Cannon had 15 boards and 15 rebounds, and Bankhead added 16 points. Brian Franklin poured in 12, and John Lloyd was also in double figures. Lloyd scored 12 points, hauled in 9 boards and blocked a shot.

Two days later, PC continued their excellent play when they crushed Catawba 72-55. Lloyd led the way with 21 points and 10 boards. Cannon added 15 points and 9 rebounds, and Brian Franklin had 12 points. Nibert commented on the two games, saying, "The last two games have been the most consistent all year. For the first time, we put two good games together, which is our goal."

On February 12 the Blue Hose finished the week with an 86-59 drubbing of Elon. PC shot exceptionally well, hitting 63.6% from the floor and 77.8% from the three-point arc. Bankhead and Lloyd had 10 points apiece, and Lloyd grabbed nine boards and blocked four shots. Franklin had 12 points, Andre Newman added 13, and Wellman led the team with 17.

Lloyd was named SAC-8 Player of the Week after averaging 17.6 points and 9.3 rebounds in three games. Lloyd leads the Blue Hose in scoring (13 ppg) and rebounding (5.5 rpg).

After playing Wingate this past Wednesday, PC will play at Carson-Newman on Saturday. Following those two games, the Blue Hose will play Newberry on Monday (7:30), Mars Hill on Wednesday (7:45) and Lenoir-Rhyne on Saturday (7:45). All three games are at home and the team encourages everyone to attend them.

Golf team swings into action this Monday

by Everett Catts
SPORTS EDITOR

The 1994 Blue Hose Golf team begins their season February 21-22, when they will compete in the NationsBank Intercollegiate tournament in Aiken, SC. Second year coach Tommy Addison will lead the golfers in a season which has the region's top teams on the schedule.

"Our schedule has tournaments which have the top five teams in the district," said Addison. Included in the schedule are Valdosta State, Jacksonville State, Wofford, and SAC-8 foes Catawba, Gardner-Webb, and Elon, and national power USC-Aiken.

If the Blue Hose are to stay ahead of the competition, they will have to rely on their young players. The squad returns only two lettermen—senior Will Holmes and sophomore Perrin Powell. Two transfer students and four freshmen will step into starting positions.

The youth will be tested early. The NationsBank Intercollegiate tourney has many formidable teams.

Addison commented on the eighteen-team tournament, saying, "I hope we finish in the top ten. It will have a lot of the top teams in the district."

Based on his team's fall performances (four top ten finishes), Addison is optimistic, saying, "We're in the thick of things as far as the SAC and district are concerned."

PC golfer pitches onto the green.

photo by Reid Collins

Tennis seasons begin for men and women

by Everett Catts
SPORTS EDITOR

The men's tennis team began its season on February 4-5 in dual play in the Furman Shootout. PC lost to Furman 7-0 and lost to Wofford 6-1 with David Kemp winning the only match.

When asked about the new dual match format that is being played, Coach McKee said, "The biggest advantage I see is the time saving factor. It really cuts down on time, and it also makes doubles more of a team concept as well."

The tennis team's next opponent will be UNC-Ashville, a February 16 home match. Following that match, the Blue Hose will play at Newberry on February 21 at 2:00 and at Gardner-Webb on the next day at 2:30. Next weekend PC will host Augusta on February 25 at 3:00 and USC-Aiken on Saturday at 1:00.

The women's tennis team swings into action today through Sunday at Emory, where they will play the host team along with Berry, Shorter, and Anderson. Following the weekend's action, the Lady Blue Hose will host Erskine on February 23 at 3:00 and Augusta two days later, also at 3:00.

Encore

Kim Rabon
ENTERTAINMENT EDITOR

There are many things that can entertain a person, but it is the little things that we sometimes overlook. Have you ever looked at an old picture of your friends or yourself and laughed? I find myself having the best time just browsing through old pictures. I was having a hard time thinking of something to write about for this issue, when I saw my Freshmen Directory. Considering it was only a year and a half ago I sent in that high school picture, I couldn't help but smile. It is so... weird how much people change in a year.

Over the last break, I looked through my high school yearbooks. Yearbooks are entertainment in themselves. Most of us went to elementary and middle school with the people in these yearbooks. We all practically grew up together. Some of the most special and memorable times happened with the people whose pictures are found in that book that collects dust now. I often wonder what some of the people that I used to see and talk to everyday, are doing now. It is fascinating how we go through these stages in our lives where we meet new people, make friendships and then move on. Of course we try to hold on to the people that we were close to, but it's hard to maintain that balance between the old and new times (especially when there is distance involved).

Pictures are a special part of the old times. They are always there to remind you of the best of times, and the best of friends. Whenever you need a laugh, you can always count on a picture to do the job. It always feels good to relive some of those great memories through pictures. Although there are numerous photos we could definitely look better in, when it comes down to parting with them, most of us can't do it. Before you leave on your next trip or just know your friends are all going to be together, don't forget your camera! Those pictures you take now, will bring a smile to your face later.

Presbyterian College Theater Company to present Museum

Press Release

Modern art will mingle with modern society when the Presbyterian College Theater Company presents Tina Howe's "Museum" Feb. 23-27 in the Harper Center Theater.

"Museum" takes place in a major museum of modern art the final day of an exhibit by three contemporary American artists. The comedy examines a group of today's "culture vultures," including art lovers, foreigners, skeptics, students, artists, and the museum guards, as they wander the gallery reacting to the exhibits and each other.

The production is directed by Dr. Dale Rains, professor of speech and drama.

The cast includes Mike Weaver, a junior from Snellville, Ga.; Shealy Painter, a junior from Spartanburg, S.C.; Ann Marie Blair, a senior from Dallas, Texas; Amy Ferguson, a sophomore from Marietta, Ga.; Conchita Woodruff, a senior from Kissimmee, Fla.; Matt Mains, a junior from Cape Coral, Fla.; Brooke Peterson, a sophomore from Irmo, S.C.; Carrie Yurcisin, a sophomore from Winter

Park, Fla.; Susan Houston, a sophomore from Augusta, Ga.; Alyssa Pinkerton, a sophomore from Merritt Island, Fla.; Carey Bailey, a freshman from Marietta, Ga.; Holly Nelson, a freshman from Marietta, Ga.; Lauren Heard, a sophomore from Clinton, S.C.; and Brad Williams, a senior from Ruby, S.C.

Five performances are planned, including 7:30 p.m. shows Feb. 23-26. A 2:30 p.m. matinee is scheduled for Sunday, Feb. 27. General admission tickets are $5 each, while student tickets are available at $3 each. To order tickets, call the PC box office at 833-8317 weekdays between 2-5 p.m.

The mystery of modern art meets the mystery of modern society when the Presbyterian College Theater Company presents Tina Howe's comedy "Museum" Feb. 23-27 in the Harper Center Theater. The cast includes (from left) Michael Weaver, Lauren Heard, and Matt Mains as gallery patrons and artists who interact during a major show.

Cotton Patch Gospel author to bring his play to life March 1 at PC

By Steve Owens
GUEST WRITER

When Tom Key first conceived the idea of a one-man play based on the idea of a contemporary "Matthew" telling the story as though Jesus were born in Gainesville, GA., Key was uncertain about the potential appeal of the play.

More than a decade later, the popularity of "Cotton Patch Gospel" has answered any doubts he may have had.

Key will bring his version of "Cotton Patch Gospel" to Presbyterian College's Belk Auditorium on March 1 for one showing. The 7:30 p.m. performance is free and open to the public.

"I have seen 'Cotton Patch Gospel' with Tom Key on video. I think it provides a unique perspective on the gospel in a way that is contemporary, challenging, and refreshing," said the Rev. Greg Henley, chaplain at Presbyterian College, whose office is co-sponsoring the local performance.

In 1980, Key performed the roles of all 21 characters in the story during a national concert-artist series tour, and then adapted the play using Dr. Clarence Jordan's "Cotton Patch" versions of the gospels of Matthew and John. In 1981, Key teamed with Drama Desk Award Winner Russell Treyz, Broadway producer Philip Getter, and the late singer-songwriter Harry Chapin to develop "Cotton Patch Gospel" into a five-person musical—with at least 18 songs Chapin wrote serving as the musical score.

Several months after Chapin's fatal auto accident, his brother Tom signed on as musical director for the project and guided it musically to the October, 1981, off-Broadway premiere at the Lambs Theater, where it drew rave reviews for 200 performances and garnered a Drama-Logue Award for Outstanding Achievement in Theater. The play also inspired NBC-TV to produce a special, "Harry Chapin's Cotton Patch."

It also played the Westwood Playhouse theater in Los Angeles, where Key was nominated for a Best Actor Award by the L.A. Drama Critics' Circle. As the popularity of the show grew, it broke attendance records in Dallas and Atlanta, and won the personal acclaim of celebrities like Jimmy Carter. The show has been praised by everyone from evangelist Billy Graham to Rolling Stone magazine.

The "Cotton Patch Gospel" script was published by Dramatic Publishing Company, which sold out of its first printing in record time. The play is still performed by thousands of amateur stock theater companies, as well as professional theater companies such as the Walnut Street Playhouse of Philadelphia and Tom Key who originated the idea for "Cotton Patch Gospel" and co-wrote the script with Russell Treyz, will bring his nationally renowned play to Presbyterian College's Belk Auditorium on March 1. The 7:30 p.m. performance is free and open to the public.

file photo

the Cleveland Playhouse. Plans are currently underway for its London premiere at the Westminster Theatre.

For more information on the Presbyterian College performance of "Cotton Patch Gospel," call 833-8285 or 833-8292.

Gordon's 'hard work' leads to success on and off the field

PC Senior Mason Gordon (46) was recently named South Carolina's College Football Player of the Year.

photo by Steve Owens

by Everett Catts
SPORTS EDITOR

On the bulletin board in Mason Gordon's room there are many awards—three Offensive Player of the Week certificates, SAC-8 Player of the Week (October 23), Don Hansen's Football Gazette Regional Player of the Week (also Oct. 23) and first team All-Conference. Gordon has won so many awards this year that he can't even fit all of them on the bulletin board.

Last month Gordon added more trophies and awards to his collection. The senior tailback was named South Carolina's College Player of the Year, beating out the athletes at Clemson, USC, The Citadel, and Furman. Gordon also received the Blake "Kilo" Watts Rushing Award for the second straight year after posting an average of 5.5 yards per carry. Gordon also won the Laurens County Player of the Year Award and was even named first team All-South Region and Honorable Mention All-American.

Gordon received all of these awards after having a career year at PC, following three years of hardship from injuries. As a freshman Gordon rushed for 496 yards, had a 5.6 yards per carry average, averaged 48.3 yards per game and scored two TD's. In his sophomore season Gordon averaged 5.6 yards per carry, 60.0 yards per game, rushed for 420 yards and five scores. In 1992 he switched from fullback to tailback, rushed for 723 yards, and averaged 5.0 yards per carry and 80.3 yards per game. Gordon's junior year was even more impressive because he played the entire year with injuries, missing two games and playing only one snap in another. In those three years, Gordon suffered injuries to his knee, foot, shoulder, thumb and ankle. But none of these stats compare to the season he had last fall.

Free of injuries in 1993, Gordon showed everyone how good he really was. Gordon rushed 255 times for 1,401 yards, averaged 5.5 yards per carry, averaged 127.1 yards per game, and tallied fifteen touchdowns. Against conference opponents, Gordon was deadly, averaging 156.9 yards per game. Gordon rushed for 234 yards in a 38-31 win over Catawba, and, two weeks later, broke the school record for rushing yards in a game with 254 yards in a 45-28 win against Mars Hill. Gordon owns two other school records for his regular season rushing total and yards per game average.

It is amazing to know all of Gordon's numbers after learning about his past. Gordon, a native of Due West, SC and 1990 graduate of Dixie High School, was recruited by all the big schools in the state, plus N.C. State after rushing for 889 yards as a junior. But when Gordon injured his knee in the middle of the 1989 football season, all the schools stopped recruiting him—except PC. Gordon was even planning to play soccer at nearby Lander University until former Blue Hose football coach Elliot Poss persuaded him to come to PC.

"Everything was going well my senior year in high school until I injured my knee. I was going to play soccer at Lander but got talked out of it and came here," said Gordon, a political science major.

Because of all the injuries he had, Gordon had thought about quitting the team and leaving PC. But his mother kept him from giving up. "My mom was a big influence. I've thought about quitting a lot after all of my injuries. She kept talking to me and telling me not to give up," said Gordon. He added, "She wanted me to graduate from here and if it wasn't for her, I wouldn't be here today."

The adversity of dealing with the various injuries Gordon has also influenced him, making him even stronger than before. In the summer of '92, Gordon, who worked Sundays after his games, worked very hard in rehabilitating the knee he had injured in the previous year. Gordon ran in the heat of every summer day, and conditioned himself for the season. In 1993, he worked and strengthened his knee so hard that he didn't even have to wear a brace when playing. The hard work even carried into practice, improving his work ethic.

The hard work has paid dividends for Gordon. He will graduate this May with a degree in political science, fulfilling his mother's wishes.

Campus & Clubs...

SGA

The Student Government Association reminds students that Executive Council elections will be held February 23 from 11:00 am until 5:00 pm in Springs Campus Center. Speeches for all Executive Council candidates will be February 21 at 6:00 pm in Springs.

SGA asks all students to remember to vote on Wednesday and listen to the speeches on Monday. "These elections directly affect you," said Lauren Owens, SGA president.

Pi Kappa Phi

The brothers of Pi Kappa Phi, Beta Chapter, would like to congratulate its latest 16 associate members: Patrick Arnold, Geoff Brookshire, Brent Clark, Welsh Conder, Uke Eaton, Steven Ellis, Clint Galloway, Dick Hiller, Chris Keeler, James Mitchell, Jack Murphy, Tate Painter, Drew Refshauge, Scot Sacha, Mark Smith, and Vance Walker. Also congratulations are extended to the newest social affiliates: Scott Keelick, Josh Lanikin, and Cameron Lockey.

Beta has earned a perfect 4.0 rating, according to the Pi Kappa Phi National Office. An "A" was given in the areas of service, involvement, membership and retention, housing, finance, and scholarship. Beta chapter is only the second chapter to ever receive a 4.0.

Residence Life Office

Resident Assistant applications are now available in the Student Affairs Office located on the 2nd floor of Douglas House. Applications must be returned before Spring Break (Friday, March 4). Interviews will be held the week of March 21 through March 24.

According to Andy Altizer, director of residence life, there are many positive aspects to being an RA. "RA's get paid approximately $100 each month. In addition, they gain valuable leadership experience. They are also expected to be friends, mentors, teachers, and available to those who need their help," he said.

Any student interested should contact Altizer at Extension 8276 (or "altizer" by E-Mail). Also, any RA or RD can answer any questions.

"Pick up your application packet and plan to be one of PC's 32 RAs," said Altizer.

Admissions Office

Margaret Williamson, vice president for enrollment and dean of admissions, was among those nominated for the 1993 Athena Award, which was presented during the Laurens County Chamber of Commerce's annual meeting, held in Greenville Dining Hall on January 18. The award recognizes an outstanding businesswoman in the county.

Crop Walk

The annual Crop Walk takes place this afternoon at 2:00 pm on the Intramural Complex. Students are reminded that it's not to late to participate and do their part to end the suffering of hungry people all over the world. Students participating in the Crop Walk are reminded that their sponsorship collections are due Monday, February 28. The Crop Walk is sponsored in part by the Chaplain's Office.

For more information, contact Jennifer Fouse at extension 8029.

Now Showing

Friday, February 15
7:00 pm
Springs Campus Center

'Vamps, virgins and killer nannies'

1994 Arnold Symposium to offer look at 'Women and the Media'

by Steve Owens
GUEST WRITER

Suzanna Walters knows that 1993 was proclaimed "The Year of the Woman." She watched television specials and network new reports on women in various walks of life, eager to see the influence that the attention would bring women.

According to Walters, an assistant professor of sociology at Georgetown University, 1994 has brought sobering reality.

"I think it was a terrible hype. We don't have a 'Year of the Man' or a 'Year of the Black' or a 'Year of the Jew,' so to me the whole idea of there being a 'Year of the Woman' was quite demeaning," Walters said. "It trivialized the real changes needed to create a world that is more equal."

Walters will be joined by Kathie Berlin, Barbara Reynolds, Richard Valeriani, and Barbara Brandon at Presbyterian College's eighth annual Arnold Symposium, which will offer a look at "Women and the Media." The symposium, to be held February 21-23 at PC, will examine the treatment of women though such media as motion pictures, television, newspapers, and magazines. All programs are free and open to the public.

"I think there tends to be, in all kinds of popular media, a dichotomy for women between the image of either a maternal or virginal character and a slutty sexual character," said Walters. "Interestingly, television has allowed more variability than film, which tends to surprise people. I look at a show like 'Roseanne,' which presents quite a new image for women. She looks differently physically from the women we used to seeing on television. She is neither the benign housewife nor the sexpot. She is self-defined, she is a feminist, and she calls the shots. I look at a character like that and I think, 'wow, we've gotten somewhere.'"

Berlin, senior vice president of MGM Studios, will open the symposium at 7:30 pm in Edmunds Hall with an examination of "Women in Film." Based in New York, Berlin buys books and develops projects for motion editorial board of USA Today, will present the first of three programs on Tuesday, February 22. She will draw on more than 25 joined USA Today in 1983.

Brandon, who became the country's first black female syndicated cartoonist in 1992 when Universal Press Syndicate signed her strip "Where I'm Coming From," will present a look at "Images of Women in Popular Media" at 2:00 pm in Edmunds Hall. Brandon worked as a fashion and beauty writer for Essence magazine, and her illustrations appeared in Elan, Essence, The Village Voice, and The Crisis before the editors of The Detroit Free Press, who were looking for a way to represent more black people, noticed her work in 1989 and signed her strip for their lifestyle section.

The final program on February 22 will be a 7:30 pm panel discussion in Edmunds Hall on "Women and the Media." Moderating the panel will be Richard Valeriani, a 31-year veteran with NBC News and the Associated Press, and one of the few reporters ever to cover the White House, the State Department, and the Pentagon on a regular basis. He is the author of "Travels With Henry," a bestseller recounting his experiences with Henry Kissinger.

Walters will close the symposium on February 23 when she presents "Images of Women in Television" at 11:00 am in Belk Auditorium. Currently in her second year at Georgetown University, Walters has published eight books and articles on images of women in the media. Her presentations on the topic have included such titles as "Vamps, Virgins, and Killer Nannies" and "Sitcom Subversions: Working Daughters and Radical Mothers."

PC's Russell Program is designed to create in students and the general community an awareness of the effect that modern communications media have on them and their values. The program is made possible by the generosity of Ernest and Frances Arnold of Atlanta, trustees of the Russell Charitable Trust.

Kathie Berlin

Barbara Brandon

Barbara Reynolds

Richard Valeriani

Suzanna Walters

file photos

pictures, works with writers and directors on scripts, and heads the publicity and promotions departments for the release of MGM films. She ranks as one of the few women ever to attain such a high-ranking position in the motion picture industry.

Reynold, who serves as a columnist, editor of the "Inquiry Page," and member of the years of newspaper experience when she speaks on "Women in the Print Media" at 11:00 am in Belk Auditorium. Reynolds was the first black reporter at the now-defunct Cleveland Press, is a former assistant editor of Ebony magazine, and has also served as an urban affairs reporter and Washington correspondent for the Chicago Tribune. She

1994 Arnold Symposium Schedule

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 21

"Women in Film"

Kathie Berlin (Senior Vice President of MGM Studios)
7:30 p.m. in Edmunds Hall

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 22

"Women in the Print Media"

Barbara Reynolds (USA Today Columnist and Page Editor)
11 a.m. in Belk Auditorium

"Images of Women in Popular Media"

Barbara Brandon (Syndicated Cartoonist)
2 p.m. in Edmunds Hall

"Women and the Media" — A Panel Discussion

Moderated by Richard Valeriani (Formerly of NBC News)
7:30 p.m. in Edmunds Hall

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 23

"Images of Women in Television"

Suzanna Walters (Georgetown University Faculty Member)
11 a.m. in Belk Auditorium

THE BLUE STOCKING

"Give the people the light, so they may find the way."

Volume LXXXVIII Number 8

PRESBYTERIAN COLLEGE

Clinton, South Carolina 29325

March 3, 1994

Olson elected Student Government President

by Gray Lesesne
NEWS EDITOR

The PC Student Government Association held its executive council elections on Wednesday, February 23, 1994. Elected were officers for the 1994-95 school year, including Dallas Olson, Jr. of Marietta, GA as SGA president. Olson defeated candidate Jon Wetzler. He is a Business Administration major and member of Pi Kappa Phi fraternity. Olson wants student leaders from all facets of student life to be involved in his administration. "I want to challenge all student leaders to do their best. I am very grateful to those who elected me and I will try my best to do a good job," he said.

Olson, current SGA treasurer, wants to continue to work with the administration on issues concerning the student body, especially those issues regarding Greenville Dining Hall. Olson has served as chair of the SGA Food Committee during his term as treasurer.

Sophomore class president Leigh Davis of Daniels, WV was elected SGA vice president. She won the seat over Jamie Chastain and write-in candidate Jason Humphries. During her term as sophomore class president she has successfully persuaded the faculty to allow for independent examinations. She hopes to educate PC students of the exam options before them since passage of the independent exams policy. "I will try to do a good job. I thank the PC student body for trusting me to be their representative. We are always available to help and express frustrations to the administration."

Marie Youmans of Barnwell, SC defeated Natascha Jones for the position of SGA secretary. Youmans is a junior and is the current chairperson of the Judicial Council. David Spivey defeated write-in candidate Brian Sacco for the office of treasurer. "I want to keep the SGA budget the same as it currently is, while SGA made some money off of the silent auction during PC homecoming, it needs to receive the same amount it did last year from the administration," said Spivey, a junior from Macon, GA. Spivey also wants

SGA to work for a student meal plan in Greenville Dining Hall.

Mary Beth Thomas of Columbia, SC was elected Judicial Council Chairperson, defeating Bill Wright. Thomas wants to ensure that "students continue to take the Honor Code and Code of Conduct seriously." Thomas will make appointments to the Judicial Council prosecution and defense teams later this spring. She also will assist in freshman orientation and the addition of new council members after spring break.

Charissa Cleckler of Cartersville, GA was elected to the position of Student Union Board president unopposed. "I want SUB to continue to have programs and events that PC wants. We will definitely keep popular programs and may change some that haven't worked well in the past. We have money to spend and student input into everything we do is welcome," she said.

"This group brings diverse interests and backgrounds to the Student Government Association. However, they all possess a common goal of making the Presbyterian College SGA responsive to the needs and desires of its student members. I'm positive that they will make the PC community a better place," said current SGA President Lauren Owings.

Faculty approves independent exams

by Gray Lesesne
NEWS EDITOR

The labor of SGA leaders and student advocates of independent examinations was realized last week when the faculty approved independent exams by a unanimous vote.

SGA Vice President-elect Leigh Davis, a sophomore, presented the proposal to amend the faculty policy on examinations. Under the new policy, students will be able to schedule exams independent of the scheduled periods during exam week with the consent of the administering instructor. Students can schedule exams outside of the allotted examination days with the permission of the Senior Vice President for Academic Affairs.

"The voices of PC have been listened to. Although the authority still lies in the hands of the individual faculty members, the students have greater freedom when scheduling their exams. And what a boost for the Honor Code," said Davis.

"I hope that students will take a long hard look at the advantages of independently scheduled exams and take this opportunity to put the Honor Code to use," said Jason Winfield, SGA secretary. Winfield called for independent exams in his bid for SGA secretary last year.

Students had expressed a desire for independent exams as an expansion of the privileges extended under the Honor Code. Other institutions such as Davidson College have adopted similar measures.

On The Inside

Page 2 . . .

Student opinions on new policy of independent exams.

Page 3 . . .

Women's basketball team clinches second place in SAC-8.

Page 4 . . .

Expose: Up close and personal with President Orr.

College conducts evaluation for re-accreditation

by Kelley Perkins
STAFF WRITER

For the next two years, members of the PC faculty, staff, and student body will engage in an intensive self-study of the college, its goals, missions, and policies, according to Dr. George Ramsey, Professor of Religion and director of the steering committee overseeing the program. "Presbyterian College is required to conduct a self-study once every ten years as a part of the process for re-accreditation by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools," said Ramsey. "The purpose of the self-study is to give the college an opportunity to look at its performance and evaluate its strengths and weaknesses," he said.

The process will consist of committee evaluations and reports on all aspects of college life. Eight committees will evaluate specific areas of the college, such as the Committee on

Student Development Services to be chaired by Dr. Tom Stallworth, Dean of Alumni

In the fall of 1994 the PC community will begin a two year self-evaluation of the college. Student participation is welcome and encouraged.

Affairs. The steering committee will oversee the entire program. Committees will consist of faculty members and students, with the number of representatives varying.

Student participation will also come in the form of questionnaires which will be distributed in the fall. Others participating in the questionnaire process will include members of the PC Board of Trustees, Board of Visitors, faculty, and alumni. The committee process will complete a large portion of their work in the fall of 1994. A final report will be completed in 1995 and in 1996 a committee from the Southern Association will visit the campus and analyze the findings.

"The accreditation process assures the public that we are a quality institution. This process is important because we want to reaffirm our strengths as well as identify our weaknesses," said Ramsey, who also stressed the importance of student participation in the process. In addition to responding to questionnaires, students who have special interests or concerns about one or more areas of the college and want to serve on a committee are asked to contact Ramsey at his office in Neville 321 or at campus extension 8271 by March 25, 1994.

THE BLUE STOCKING

"Give the people the light, so they may find the way."

Volume LXXXVIII Number 8

PRESBYTERIAN COLLEGE

Clinton, South Carolina 29325

March 3, 1994

Olson elected Student Government President

by Gray Lesesne
NEWS EDITOR

The PC Student Government Association held its executive council elections on Wednesday, February 23, 1994. Elected were officers for the 1994-95 school year, including Dallas Olson, Jr. of Marietta, GA as SGA president. Olson defeated candidate Jon Wetzler. He is a Business Administration major and member of Pi Kappa Phi Fraternity. Olson wants student leaders from all facets of student life to be involved in his administration. "I want to challenge all student leaders to do their best. I am very grateful to those who elected me and I will try my best to do a good job," he said.

Olson, current SGA treasurer, wants to continue to work with the administration on issues concerning the student body, especially those issues regarding Greenville Dining Hall. Olson has served as chair of the SGA Food Committee during his term as treasurer.

Sophomore class president Leigh Davis of Daniels, WV was elected SGA vice president. She won the seat over Jamie Chastain and write in candidate Jason Humphries. During her term as sophomore class president she has successfully persuaded the faculty to allow for independent examinations. She hopes to educate PC students of the exam options before them since passage of the independent exams policy. "I will try to do a good job. I thank the PC student body for trusting me to be their representative. We are always available to help and express frustrations to the administration."

Marie Youmans of Barnwell, SC defeated Natascha Jones for the position of SGA secretary. Youmans is a junior and is the current chairperson of the Judicial Council. David Spivey defeated write in candidate Brian Sacco for the office of treasurer. "I want to keep the SGA budget the same as it currently is, while SGA made some money off of the silent auction during PC homecoming, it needs to receive the same amount it did last year from the administration," said Spivey, a junior from Macon, GA. Spivey also wants

SGA to work for a student meal plan in Greenville Dining Hall.

Mary Beth Thomas of Columbia, SC was elected Judicial Council Chairperson, defeating Bill Wright. Thomas wants to ensure that "students continue to take the Honor Code and Code of Conduct seriously." Thomas will make appointments to the Judicial Council prosecution and defense teams later this spring. She also will assist in freshman orientation and the addition of new council members after spring break.

Charissa Cleckler of Cartersville, GA was elected to the position of Student Union Board president unopposed. "I want SUB to continue to have programs and events that PC wants. We will definitely keep popular programs and may change some that haven't worked well in the past. We have money to spend and student input into everything we do is welcome," she said.

"This group brings diverse interests and backgrounds to the Student Government Association. However, they all possess a common goal of making the Presbyterian College SGA responsive to the needs and desires of its student members. I'm positive that they will make the PC community a better place," said current SGA President Lauren Owings.

Faculty approves independent exams

by Gray Lesesne
NEWS EDITOR

The labor of SGA leaders and student advocates of independent examinations was realized last week when the faculty approved independent exams by a unanimous vote.

SGA Vice President-elect Leigh Davis, a sophomore, presented the proposal to amend the faculty policy on examinations. Under the new policy, students will be able to schedule exams independent of the scheduled periods during exam week with the consent of the administering instructor. Students can schedule exams outside of the allotted examination days with the permission of the Senior Vice President for Academic Affairs.

"The voices of PC have been listened to. Although the authority still lies in the hands of the individual faculty members, the students have greater freedom when scheduling their exams. And what a boost for the Honor Code," said Davis.

"I hope that students will take a long hard look at the advantages of independently scheduled exams and take this opportunity to put the Honor Code to use," said Jason Winfield, SGA secretary. Winfield called for independent exams in his bid for SGA secretary last year.

Students had expressed a desire for independent exams as an expansion of the privileges extended under the Honor Code. Other institutions such as Davidson College have adopted similar measures.

On The Inside

Page 2 . . .

Student opinions on new policy of independent exams.

Page 3 . . .

Women's basketball team clinches second place in SAC-8.

Page 4 . . .

Expose: Up close and personal with President Orr.

College conducts evaluation for re-accreditation

by Kelley Perkins
STAFF WRITER

For the next two years, members of the PC faculty, staff, and student body will engage in an intensive self-study of the college, its goals, missions, and policies, according to Dr. George Ramsey, Professor of Religion and director of the steering committee overseeing the program. "Presbyterian College is required to conduct a self-study once every ten years as a part of the process for re-accreditation by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools," said Ramsey. "The purpose of the self-study is to give the college an opportunity to look at its performance and evaluate its strengths and weaknesses," he said.

The process will consist of committee evaluations and reports on all aspects of college life. Eight committees will evaluate specific areas of the college, such as the Committee on

Student Development Services to be chaired by Dr. Tom Stallworth, Dean of Alumni

In the fall of 1994 the PC community will begin a two year self-evaluation of the college. Student participation is welcome and encouraged.

Affairs. The steering committee will oversee the entire program. Committees will consist of faculty members and students, with the number of representatives varying.

Student participation will also come in the form of questionnaires which will be distributed in the fall. Others participating in the questionnaire process will include members of the PC Board of Trustees, Board of Visitors, faculty, and alumni. The committee process will complete a large portion of their work in the fall of 1994. A final report will be completed in 1995 and in 1996 a committee from the Southern Association will visit the campus and analyze the findings.

"The accreditation process assures the public that we are a quality institution. This process is important because we want to reaffirm our strengths as well as identify our weaknesses," said Ramsey, who also stressed the importance of student participation in the process. In addition to responding to questionnaires, students who have special interests or concerns about one or more areas of the college and want to serve on a committee are asked to contact Ramsey at his office in Neville 321 or at campus extension 8271 by March 25, 1994.

POINT

Credit must be given where credit is due

SGA has actually served as the 'voice of students' this year

In the past, the Blue Stocking hasn't been one to give much credit to the Student Government Association. In fact, we have been quoted as saying it was a "big joke, lacking in respect and dignity." I have even called SGA a "necessary aggravation... with no support or legitimacy."

However, we must give credit where credit is due. This year's Executive Council, headed by SGA President Lauren Owings, has changed the image of the organization that was established to represent student opinion.

For the first time in many years, the SGA has been more than a social club and has actually served as a liaison between the students and the faculty and administration of this college. This year, SGA has functioned as the voice of the students and has aired our concerns and complaints.

The organization started out this academic year with a list of goals and priorities. Many of those goals, such as improvements in GDIH and the implementation of an independent exam policy, have become reality.

Thanks to the hard work of the SGA Food Committee, Greenville Dining Hall now offers a deli bar for lunch which has saved many students a lot of time in between 12:00 pm and 1:30 pm classes. In addition, the SGA has been instrumental in the push for the college to hire a professional, full time dietician.

Just last week, the faculty voted unanimously to accept a proposal from SGA concerning independent exams. Thanks to SGA, PC students will now have a little more freedom and choice pertaining to when they take final exams.

Much of the credit for SGA's success goes to Owings. She has worked hard to improve the organization's image, and she has been open and accessible to all students. In addition, much thanks should be given to the other officers of SGA. Vice President Tyler Van Leuven, Secretary Jason Winfield, Treasurer Dallas Olson, and Judicial Chairman Marie Youmans have also been instrumental in the positive works of SGA.

Elections were held last week for the 1994-95 Executive Council. Olson was elected SGA President. Other officers elected include Leigh Davis, vice president; Marie Youmans, secretary; David Spivey, treasurer; and Mary Beth Thomas, Judicial Council chairman. The Blue Stocking congratulates all of these individuals for their impressive victories and their willingness to serve the student body. We hope that they will continue to improve SGA and work to make it a better organization.

The previous SGA Executive Council has laid the groundwork. Now, it is time to take the torch and continue to make SGA a viable part of the PC campus.

Sidewalk Talk

How do you feel about the newly passed policy allowing independent exams?

Carrie Yurcin
sophomore

"I think it's a wonderful idea, it allows much flexibility and is much more convenient."

Amy Ferguson
sophomore

"I think they are fabulous, because students may need to leave school early."

Juli Garner
sophomore

"I would prefer to take exams in the scheduled periods, anyway."

photos by Reid Collins

Baseball team rides late inning rallies to success

by Everett Catts
SPORTS EDITOR

On February 16 the Blue Hose baseball team beat ninth-ranked USC-Aiken 5-4 in ten innings. The Hose had only one hit through seven innings until Elton Pollock singled in the eighth and Paul Bushway hit a home run to tie the score 3-3. That score stood until the top of the tenth when the Pacers took a 4-3 lead. But with two outs in the bottom of the tenth, Aiken's pitchers walked five straight PC batters. Jason Jalliet scored the tying run and Pollock touched home for the win.

On February 19 the Blue Hose edged Wofford 8-7. With two outs in the bottom of the ninth, Bushway doubled to drive in Jason Bradley and gave PC the victory.

On the following day the squad lost to Augusta College 9-5.

The Blue Hose then beat previously undefeated Coker College 4-0. Jason Bradley pitched 8 and 1/3 innings of no-hit ball until giving up a single. Following the hit, Bradley struck out the last two batters for the complete game victory. Bradley struck out five and walked only one Coker batter, who was caught stealing.

On February 26 PC crushed Newberry 18-6. Sean McCarthy led the way when he went three for three. McCarthy also walked twice, was hit by a pitch, doubled, homered twice, and drove in six runs. McCarthy broke a school record by reaching base in all six plate appearances.

Sean McCarthy tags first base just as the Benedict first baseman receives the throw.

photo by Kim Gibson

On the following day, the Blue Hose split a doubleheader with Benedict. PC won 3-2 in eight innings. Bushway went three-for-four with a double and an RBI. Donovan Harrison pitched seven innings, gave up two runs (both earned), struck out four Tiger batters, and walked two. Glen Bergeron got his third win (all in relief) after pitching a hitless eighth.

But PC's win streak was snapped when they lost game two, 6-4.

Following a March 1 game at Wofford, PC begins conference play with a doubleheader against Lenoir-Rhyne on Saturday, March 5 at 1:00 pm. That series will end with a 2:00 pm game on Sunday. The Blue Hose will then play Georgia College on March 9 before playing at Wingate on the following weekend.

The Hose host Augusta College today at 3:00 pm at the PC baseball complex.

Lady Hose clinch second in SAC-8

by Margaret Ellen Pender
STAFF WRITER

Just as the sharpest lawyers sometimes lose cases and the smartest students sometimes fail papers, the greatest athletic teams sometimes lose games. Despite hours of preparation, there are simply nights when things don't go as planned. Perhaps the team is having an "off night" while their opponents cannot seem to miss.

Unfortunately, the Lady Hose felt the frustration and disappointment which accompanies a game like their 62-54 loss to Wingate. In what had been dubbed one of the pivotal games of the season, there almost seemed to be a lid on the basket for the Blue Hose, who shot a mere 28.8% from the field, while there may as well have been a magnet in the basket for Wingate as evidenced by the fact that they sank 50% of their field goals. Similarly, in a contest at Carson Newman, the Lady Hose again experienced the agony of a setback, yet this time they were edged by a team that they had soundly defeated earlier in the season.

Displaying the heart of true winners and the talent which has led them to a 20-6 overall record, the Lady Blue did not hang their heads and abandon their hopes for a championship season. Instead they returned to their home court and clinched second place in the SAC, the highest Lady Hose finish in the history of the league, by demolishing Mars Hill 85-65. Senior Jennifer Hilliard led the way for the Hose with 19 points, Junior Kaye Watts grabbed 7 rebounds, and Freshman Karen Neeley turned in an incredible performance. Coming off the bench early in the first half, she scored 13 points (she was three-for-three from three-point range) and had nine assists and seven steals while committing no turnovers.

In their final regular season home court appearance, the Blue Hose were deadly from three-point range, especially in the second half when they nailed five of six from long range, and put away SAC foe Lenoir Rhyne 75-60. Chris Michum was the leading scorer for PC with 16 points while Kristy Tarallo headed the rebounding category with a career-high 16 boards. Seniors Jennifer Hilliard, Lavette Douglas, Shannon Trammel and Loretta Williams, and their parents, were recognized prior to the game and honored for their contributions to the women's program.

On Tuesday night the Lady Hose annihilated Gardner Webb in the first round of the SAC playoffs. They will play the winner of the Elon vs Mars Hill game tomorrow night at 8:00 at Wingate College in the semi-finals.

PC basketball eliminated from SAC tournament in first round

by Everett Catts
SPORTS EDITOR

After winning five straight games and playing well on a consistent basis, the Blue Hose lost their last two regular season games.

John Lloyd had 22 points and 14 rebounds to lead PC in their 71-70 win against Wingate on February 16. Andre Newman poured in 12 points and had nine boards in the victory.

On February 19 against Carson-Newman, the Blue Hose won 58-53. Ronnie Cannon had 15 points to lead the Blue Hose. Brian Franklin added 15 points in the win.

After crushing Newberry 71-50 on February 21, PC's winning streak was snapped with a 77-66 loss to Mars Hill. Cannon led the Hose with 13 points and seven boards. Newman and Andrew Wellman had 12 points apiece.

PC closed out its season with a 77-73 loss to Lenoir-Rhyne. The men's team honored the Blue Hose's four seniors—Andrew Wellman, John Lloyd, Tony Grant and Jay Whitney, and their parents. Grant had possibly the best game of his career at PC when he scored 17 points and was seven of seven from the floor, including a couple of thunderous dunks, which ignited the crowd.

The loss put PC in a three-way tie for second place in the SAC-8. They began the tournament seeded third, but were eliminated in the first round by a score of 64-61.

Track team paces itself with experience

by Everett Catts
SPORTS EDITOR

With twelve lettermen returning, the 1994 Track team is experienced and should be ready for their first meet, the Pembroke State Invitational on March 19. Coach Mike Owens' program, will have eight freshmen to give a good balance with its experience.

With only a week to prepare for their first meet, the Blue Hose will have a lot to cover, but conditioning should not be a problem.

"It [the pressure] makes practices a lot more competitive that first week, because they have a goal early. It doesn't hurt them," said Owens. "This has always been our track schedule. We always did well because of the athletes we have."

Owens split his twenty-man squad into two teams—the sprinters/jumpers/throwers, and the distance runners. Leading the sprinters are Senior Quincy Eigner and Junior Matt Glenn. Glenn, who runs the 400 meters, mile relay, and the 800 meters, was last year's All Carolinas Champion in the 800.

"If he cuts down a couple of seconds on his 800, Matt can qualify for the nationals," Owens said of Glenn.

The distance runners are led by Seniors Brian Johnson and Jason Whitener, and Sophomore Jonathan Dobson.

Following the March 19 meet at Pembroke State, PC will compete in the Francis Marion Invitational on March 26 and the High Point Invitational on March 29. There will also be four tentative home meets, but those dates have not been set.

Golf team driving for improvement

by Everett Catts
SPORTS EDITOR

The Presbyterian College golf team began its season February 21-22 with a ninth place finish in the NationsBank Intercollegiate. Freshman Jim Kent led all PC golfers with a score of 155. Freshman Gabe Southards was close behind with a 158.

Coach Tommy Addison was pleased in the team's second day performance. "We did not play very well the first day but played hard the second day and didn't give up," he said.

"The jitters are over with and they will play hard and well for every tournament," added Addison.

This weekend the Blue Hose will compete in the Cheerwine Challenge on March 4-6 at Lockwood Folly Golf Club in Holden Beach, NC, hosted by Catawba College. On March 14-15 the golfers will return to action in the Max Ward Invitational at Alamance Country Club in Burlington, NC, hosted by Elon.

THE BLUE STOCKING

Presbyterian College - Clinton, South Carolina 29325
Volume LXXXVIII Number 8, March 3, 1994

Editor-in-Chief... Jason West
Managing Editor... Tobin Turner
News Editor... Gray Lesesne
Sports Editor... Everett Catts
Entertainment Editor... Kim Rabon
Features Editor... Brian Sacco
Computer Design Editor... Todd Love
Photography Editor... Kim Gibson
Layout Editor... Angela Richardson
Staff Artist... Michael Christensen
Staff Advisor... Dr. Neal B. Prater

Staff Writers:
Amanda Barnes
Charles Smith
Dawn Banks
Kim Wood
Kristina Pruitt
Katherine Bonnet
Karen O'Connor
Margaret Ellen Pender

Brian Steely
Nhien Nguyen
Kelley Perkins
Camisha Clarke
Tonya Snead
Brian Parrish
Lauren Jones
Christie Grant

Photographers: Reid Collins, Brooke Petersen

The Blue Stocking is a tri-weekly student publication of Presbyterian College. The paper serves as a forum of news and opinion of regional and national concern. For advertising, contact The Blue Stocking, Presbyterian College, Box 1061, Clinton, SC 29325. The Blue Stocking welcomes letters to the editor from all members of the PC community. Signatures are required. Letters are printed on a space-available basis. The Blue Stocking reserves the right to edit all letters for proper grammar and punctuation. The final deadline for submitting letters is Friday at 12:00 pm on the week before publication.

'I may seem impatient sometimes, but I have ambitions for PC'

Orr proves to be more than a distant, stately figure

by Brian Sacco
FEATURES EDITOR

When most students think of the president of Presbyterian College, they envision a distant, stately figure, a man lacking real personality or a hands-on approach to the welfare of PC students. But upon closer investigation into the "personal" world of Dr. Kenneth B. Orr, one finds not only a man of commitment, but a man with similar interests, characteristics, and aspirations to an everyday student.

Like many PC students whose work is too overwhelming to allow for free time to engage in a hobby, Orr explained that he "did not have much time for hobbies because of the continuation and diligence required to maintain them." But when he does have free time he likes to visit his condo at the beach where he can "relax, sunbathe, read, eat seafood, and go barefoot." He stated that he also enjoys camping, especially the time he and his family camped all over Europe one summer, and he enjoys playing golf and tennis, and following the basketball team of his alma mater, Duke University.

Orr said he doesn't get an opportunity to watch TV often (sound familiar !?), but when he does, he enjoys the discourse of a panel of reporters on "Washington Week In Review" and the powerful "60 Minutes."

Orr stated that he was very intuned to the American political scene through his current readings and he especially enjoys political and historical publications such as The Washington Post Weekly and Gary Wills' Education of a Journalist, he described as "shrewd and insightful." Reinhold Nibuhr, on whom he wrote his master's thesis, was proclaimed by Orr as "the greatest American theologian of this century and he influenced me the most in my career path and I have the utmost respect for his ideas."

Orr said he occasionally likes to go to the movies. When asked about his preferences on the cinema, he stated, "It is hard to say who my favorites are, but I would probably have to say the 'gifted' Tom Hanks and Harrison Ford and Jane Fonda in her earlier films.

"The military was a good experience for me because it taught me to survive on my own skills and I was solely in charge of my destiny," described Orr when he was discussing his career in the Air Force. "The ultimate test was flying solo for the first time, there are not many things which replicate that experience."

Orr explained that his experiences in the Air Force were "the most difficult he had ever encountered and the intensity, pressure, and discipline called for gave me the ability to focus on my future." He spent four years in ROTC, three years on Air Force active duty, where he earned his wings at age 23, and then served for six years in the reserves.

When asked what he would change about himself, he stated, "I would be tall, dark, and handsome, instead of bald, round, and pudgy. I would also like to be less intense at times and be more patient with people who are less direct." He further explained, "I have never been satisfied to run in place. I want to move ahead and look for the next step. I may seem impatient sometimes, but I have ambitions for PC."

"There is a level of friendliness on campus; a concern and respect is evident, but what is more important is a genuineness of people," said Orr. "I enjoy the retreats at PC where I can, get out of coat and tie, get away from images, and engage informally."

Conversely, he added, "PC is small enough to maintain informality and accessibility between the students, faculty, administration, and townspeople." It is evident that, contrary to popular belief, Dr. Orr has a firm grasp on the aspects of student life which make PC so great and attractive to outsiders.

In conclusion, Orr philosophized, "I hope students use their four years here to discover and develop talents, I hope they graduate with 'toughness of mind, tenderness of heart.'"

Orr

file photo

PC adds international flavor with two Finnish exchange students

by Christie Grant
STAFF WRITER

If you've seen two unfamiliar faces this semester, they're probably Peter Bjorkroth and Lena Grahn, both exchange students from Finland.

Peter and Lena are both students from Abo Akademi in Aboturku, Finland, and both agree that life at PC is very different from life back home. They even agree that GDH food is better than the food at their college.

Lena is from Jeppo, a Swedish speaking city, and this is not her first trip to America. She once worked at a summer camp in the USA. She and Peter are going to Washington, D.C. with the political science department for spring break. "I enjoy my History of the South class with Dr. Burnside," said Lena. "I am also taking his ballroom dancing class."

In addition, Lena is also busy working on a directed study with Dr. Thompson. "My directed study is on the oral traditions

Finnish students Peter and Lena spending the semester learning about America from PC professors and faculty.

photo by Kim Gibson

of African-Americans," stated Lena.

Peter is from Abo, Finland, and this is his first visit to America. He speaks Swedish, Finnish, English, and a little German. He likes it here at PC and commented, "I'm happy to spend five months without having to do any dishwashing. You see, we in Finland don't live on campuses, we don't have a dining hall where we would be served good food three times a day."

Sophomore RA Tobin Turner has graciously opened his room to Peter, whom he affectionately calls Peter Porkchop, for the remainder of the semester. "To live in a dorm is also a new experience for me. I am used to living by myself, but I guess I can live with Tobin for some months. It's not too bad, and sometimes we even have hot water in Georgia Hall," exclaimed Peter.

Both students expect to accomplish many things while on campus and hope to meet many new and exciting people. They are ready to learn more and are willing to adjust to their new environment.

Lena said, "Professors at PC have been very helpful, a special thanks goes out to Dr. Stewart. I love my roommate Juli Garner. She has done a lot for me and has helped me adjust," said Lena.

"People frequently ask me if I like it here and I want to say that I do. I enjoy the classes that I am taking, although I have to work more here than back home," concluded Peter.

THE BLUE STOCKING

"Give the people the light, so they may find the way."

Volume LXXXVIII Number 9

PRESBYTERIAN COLLEGE

Clinton, South Carolina 29325

March 30, 1994

Owings responsible for late yearbook say publisher, current editor

by Jason West

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

After months and months of delay, the 1992-93 PaC SaC has finally been completed and is scheduled to arrive on campus soon.

Originally, the 1992-93 PaC SaC was slated for completion on May 25, 1993 and was to be distributed sometime in September of that same year. Lauren Owings, editor-in-chief of the 1992-93 yearbook, has blamed the delay on pages that were lost in shipping.

"There were approximately 100 or more pages that were sent to NewsFoto, the company that publishes our yearbook, that were never received. Those pages were lost in the mail," said Owings.

Owings says that after extensive checking with Federal Express, the lost pages were eventually recovered. "We finally found the missing pages; however, many of them were damaged. Some were torn and moldy. We had to repair several of the pages and that added to the delay in publication," she said.

Despite the recovery of the lost pages, college officials took the responsibility of finishing the yearbook away from Owings. Grant Vosburgh, PC's director of public relations, was designated by the Russell Subcommittee on Campus Communications to finish the book.

ish the book.

"Apparently, Owings was too optimistic about finishing the yearbook on time," said Dr. George Ramsey, chairman of the subcommittee. "Throughout the year, I and Dr. Dean Thompson, the yearbook faculty adviser, have talked with Owings about the situation. We also contacted the publisher several times. We finally decided it was best to complete the process without Owings," he said.

Owings was paid approximately $4500 to complete the 1992-93 PaC SaC. "I would estimate that Owings did about 95 percent of the job she was supposed to do. Of course, that portion was not done on time. The remaining five percent of work was completed by others," said Ramsey.

"In terms of hours of labor, I would surmise that Owings did most of her job," added Ramsey.

Others disagree with Ramsey.

"Lauren didn't finish her job. There is absolutely no reason why the yearbooks should be this late. It is ridiculous and all her fault," said Dena Elliott, the 1993-94 PaC SaC editor.

"Everything should have been finished by late May of last year. In August, Lauren had only turned in 99 out of 232 pages. In other words, she had not completed 133 pages at the start of this academic year," said Elliott.

"I understand that Lauren claims to have had problems with Federal Express. I have a hard time believing that. I have called Lauren numerous times throughout this year, and I know that the publishing company has called her about problems with the book, and she hardly ever returns my calls or the calls of NewsFoto," said Elliott.

Elliott says that the college has been fined for the lateness of the 1992-93 yearbooks. "We were originally supposed to be charged a $2000 late fee. NewsFoto has agreed to drop that fine and instead take out all the spot color in the '93 book," said Elliott.

Representatives of NewsFoto agree with Elliott. "Owings is responsible for the lateness of the yearbooks," said Lenoir Constancio, an official with NewsFoto. "Owings never returned proofs on time and never finished her book. We have had to work through Dena Elliott, this year's editor, in order to get the '93 book done."

Owings, who also serves as the Student Government Association President, believes that she has been unfairly criticized. "I feel that I have responded as the situation has called for me to respond. I apologize for any inconvenience. It has been difficult. Yearbook isn't the only thing I have been responsible for this year. This has been a trying process, and I have not taken it lightly," she said.

Thompson, the yearbook adviser, believes that mistakes were made by Owings but that there is no point in dwelling on those mistakes. "There is no question that time was mismanaged by Owings. There is no question that people were let down. However, the material is now in the hands of the publishing company. Owings has apologized for the delay. Let's accept her apology and move on," he said.

"There is no question that time was mismanaged by Owings. There is no question that people were let down."

Dr. Dean Thompson
PaC SaC Adviser

On The Inside

Page 3 . . .

PC adds computerized lottery for room sign-ups.

Page 6 - 7 . . .

Spotlights on three impressive PC seniors.

Page 10 . . .

SUB announces new officers for fall.

Trading places

photo by Kim Gibson

Chris Jones and Dave Grieve, residents of Smyth Hall, will have a new home next year. Occupants of Smyth and Barron Halls will soon be switching places. Smyth, after a long tenure as a male dormitory, will become a female residence hall; male students will have Barron Hall among their housing options. The switch will occur at the end of this academic year.

See story on page two.

PC Tidbits

Faculty promotions approved

Six members of the PC faculty were recently promoted during the Board of Trustees' recent meeting.

The trustees approved the following actions: Peter Hobbie was granted tenure and promoted to Associate Professor of Religion; Charles Rains was granted tenure and promoted to Associate Professor of Physics; Mike Rischbieter was granted tenure and promoted to Associate Professor of Biology; Dean Thompson was granted tenure and promoted to Associate Professor of English.

Also, two tenured faculty members were promoted: David Turpin was promoted to Professor of Modern Foreign Languages; and Tom Weaver was promoted to Professor of Political Science.

'No parking' signs posted, violators to be ticketed

The South Carolina Highway Department has posted 'no parking' signs on East Maple Street adjacent to PC Intramural Park. Public Safety will enforce the request of the highway department and ticket violators, said Grey Mayson, Chief of Public Safety.

Orr elected to lead national association of colleges

Dr. Kenneth B. Orr, president of Presbyterian College, was elected recently to serve in a one year term as president of the Association of Presbyterian Colleges and Universities. The association is composed of 68 institutions in states from Alaska to Florida. Orr was also recently appointed to advise US Secretary of Education Richard Riley of South Carolina on matters relating to higher education.

Special Olympics set for April

Athletes from Laurens and Newberry Counties will gather at PC's Bailey Stadium on Friday, April 16, when the college will host the Area Five Special Olympics for the 20th consecutive year. Approximately 300 athletes from 10 schools and centers in Clinton, Laurens, and Newberry will participate. The public is invited to attend and cheer on the athletes.

Barron, Smyth to change residents next year

by Gray Lesesne
NEWS EDITOR

College administration officials sparked heated debate and confusion last Friday when they announced that, beginning with the 1994-95 academic year, Barron and Smyth Halls would change residents. The college had previously announced the need to convert Laurens Hall into a female residence hall.

Reception by students to the administration's announcement was highly negative. Students in both Smyth, currently a men's residence facility, and Barron, a women's residence facility, expressed concern about the dorm switch, which would allow for an additional 16 beds for female students. Although college officials had weighed other options, the final conclusion was a necessary change in dorms.

The need to change dorms was prompted by a growing female residence population at the college. "Current trends in higher education are showing that the 1990s will be like a roller coaster as it relates to high school graduates. We're finding that there are fewer high school graduates out there and that fewer males are attending college. I think it says a lot for Presbyterian College that although the pool of students is smaller, we are getting more students attending PC." More of those students just happen to be women," said Andy Altizer, who hopes to move women residents out of the infirmary. "Other schools change dormitory facilities all of the time," he said.

Students blame the problem on the college's admission of too many female students for the 1994-95 academic year. They also point out the unfair policy in which residents of certain dorms and floors will not be allowed to keep their dormrooms—including floors of Clinton and Belk Halls, Maves Cottage residents, and Bailey Hall residents. Blocks of those halls have been specifically reserved for incoming freshmen. Also, residents of Barron, Smyth, and Laurens will not have priority in selecting rooms for next year.

Jerolyn Elliott, a current Barron Hall resident, is "upset with the way the college handled the situation. Barron Hall and Smyth residents should be given priority in registration or at least be guaranteed a room in the newly switched dorms, if they want it. Or, everyone should be put into a lottery. It's just not fair."

Altizer said that the college hopes to have another dorm constructed on campus before the fall of 1995. He said that the Housing Committee is looking at several options, including a dormitory behind Barron and Groves Halls that would have outside entrances and private bathrooms and thus could be used for either gender. He also said that the college hopes to improve existing residence facilities (including an overhaul of Laurens Hall) before students return to campus in August.

He said that his office is handling the situation in the best way possible. "I'm really very happy that students living in Barron, Smyth, and Laurens take pride in their buildings. I wish all students on campus took pride in where they lived. We have tried almost every other option. It's a tough decision. We were forced to make changes, and that is the bottom line," said Altizer.

Board of Trustees increases tuition by 6.4 percent Students express dissatisfaction with rising cost of college

by Kim Wood
STAFF WRITER

At its annual spring meeting, the Presbyterian College Board of Trustees approved a $986 increase in the cost of tuition. The price of attending PC as a residential student will increase from $15,400 to $16,386. The price for day students will increase from $11,764 to $12,750.

Skip Zubrod, PC's vice president for finance and treasurer of the college, believes that the 6.4 percent increase in tuition will cover next year's estimated 3 to 4 percent rate of inflation, salary increases and health and fringe benefits for employees, financial aid, and debt service.

"PC feels an obligation to students and their parents to keep costs as low as possible," said Zubrod. "That is something we work very hard at. The budget process is not simple. We make every effort to hold tuition down as much as possible. However, it is realistic to continue to expect an increase every year," he said.

PC students reacted with disappointment to the news of a tuition increase. "I believe that some of my friends will have to transfer because of the price increase," said Shannon Howard.

"It's a crock. If the price goes up, I think they should put it toward improving the food in Greenville Dining Hall," added Scott Plaisted.

"I don't like it, and I'm not really clear on the reasons why it's going up. I think if I knew why it was going up, I would feel better about it," said Kipper Edens.

Kim Rabon was more blunt. "The administration is just not thinking about the students. They say anyone can go to PC, but they are not making it easy for some people."

"I think that tuition increases are a fact of life, and we knew that before we came here. I hate it, but it is inevitable," said Amy Furguson.

Zubrod reports that the college is working to keep costs down as much as possible. "We're always evaluating our programs and trying to remain as cost efficient as possible," he said.

Specifically, Zubrod says the college is trying to increase efficiencies in equipment and buildings. "We are doing studies with outside companies in energy conservation," said Zubrod. "Energy meters are now monitoring each building on campus. We have made some progress in those areas and we have a long way to go," he said.

Zubrod says that students can have an impact on the cost of attending PC by conserving energy and cutting down on vandalism. A campus wide effort to do just that could be reflected in smaller increases in tuition in the future.

"The more we can make people aware of conservation and respect for property, the more we can all benefit," added Zubrod.

the
GOOD SON

Friday, April 8, 1994
Springs Campus Center
7:00 pm

Lottery system to determine housing assignments for fall

by Steve Owens
GUEST WRITER

Presbyterian College students planning on spending a restless night in the halls of Douglas House with hopes of being the first to claim a room assignment should make alternative plans this spring -- like playing the lottery.

Trips to Georgia or Florida are not required and millions of dollars are not at stake. However, students will be interested to know that computer-picked lottery numbers will determine the times during which they may sign up for rooms.

"The purpose of this new system is to better manage on-campus room space, develop a means to be more consistent in allocating space, and hopefully to eliminate long lines and camping out in the hallways," said Andy Altizer, director of residence life. "Almost all colleges and universities have a lottery to determine their sign-up times. We surveyed similar-sized colleges, such as Davidson, Roanoke, and Austin, and used that information to write the first draft of our plan over spring break."

A computer will randomly select numbers, which will be sent to students through campus mail by April 10. Numbers will be assigned according to class status.

"The best possible number for a rising junior will still not be as good as the worst possible number for a rising senior," Altizer said.

Altizer added that all students should be aware of the new policy regarding a mandatory $200 room reservation deposit which must be paid by April 15. Any student who has not paid the deposit will not be permitted to take part in the sign-up sessions, which begin on April 18 in Springs Campus Center.

"The deposit gives us a better idea of how many students will be living on campus next fall. In the past, several students would say they wanted a room for the fall and then back out, forcing us to make arrangements at the last minute," Altizer said. "The deposit will be applied toward housing costs, but it will be forfeited by students who do not return to PC or who decide after signing up for a room."

Altizer added that several groups helped develop the new system, including the Student Affairs Office, the officers of the college, the resident directors, and a diverse group of students.

Students will receive an informational brochure on the new plan by April 1. Any remaining questions may then be directed to Altizer or Deloria Burriss in the Student Affairs Office.

"We are planning to re-evaluate this system the week after sign-ups to see if there are any areas we can improve," said Altizer. "It may still be hectic, but instead of being hectic in a hallway for ten hours it will only be hectic for 20 or 30 minutes."

IMPORTANT DATES TO REMEMBER

- APRIL 1 — Receive brochure explaining the new lottery, housing deposit, and sign-up procedure.
- APRIL 10 — Lottery numbers received through campus mail.
- APRIL 15 — $200 room reservation deposit due.
- APRIL 18 — Sign-ups begin in Springs Campus Center.
- APRIL 19 — Sign-ups continue.
- APRIL 20 — Sign-ups continue.
- APRIL 21 — Sign-ups continue.

Information Booth not administration's idea

By Charles Smith
STAFF WRITER

As one walks to the western part of the campus on their way to Belk Auditorium or Edmunds Hall, the information gazebo often catches the eye of a passer-by. The booth, constructed last year, is rarely occupied and is often used as a meeting place for campus clubs and groups preparing to go off campus. Located beside Douglas House, the booth is designed to provide information to visitors who do not know their way around campus.

According to Dr. Ted Brown, vice president for financial development, the administration saw a need for an information booth to help people who sought knowledge about the campus. The anonymous local donor, who gave $30,000 for its construction, sought to beautify the campus.

Students staff the Information Gazebo and are paid minimum wage to work, as part of a federal work-study program. Seventy-five percent of federal work-study funds are paid by the federal government, twenty-five percent are picked up by PC, according to the Office of Financial Aid.

The booth is primarily designed for prospective students, although it is visited by various groups like members of the PC Board of Visitors, said Brown. The booth costs little to operate other than actual utility expenses, he said.

While the booth may attract prospective students, current students claim that PC Admissions Office can handle this effectively and that the funds for the construction of the Information Booth should have been used elsewhere. Others see the booth for what it is: a gift donated to the college that had to either be used or lost.

"PC had nothing to do with it. When money is donated to PC for specific things, we either use it or lose the gift. The college had no control over it," said Erin Salver.

Internet allows students, faculty to do research, communicate with colleagues

photo by Kim Gibson

Connections to the system are currently limited to those who access either through a microcomputer lab or on personal computers via a modem. Faculty and others may access the system through a fiber-optic hookup in their offices three or four times a week.

by Amanda Barnes
STAFF WRITER

PC students and their counterparts nationwide are linking into a computer network that is being called the wave of the future — Internet.

Internet is the largest electronic network in the world and offers such services as electronic mail, news wires, news groups, chat groups, access to libraries and information banks, and many others to its clients.

The Internet network is accessible currently to faculty members and some members of the student body who have expressed interest in the program. Presbyterian College is one of the first among smaller schools in the state to attain the Internet system. Furman University and Wofford College are also establishing the systems on their campuses.

"We have approximately 150 people on campus with accounts. Most of those are faculty members, and about 50 of those are students," said Morris Galloway, dean of administrative services. Galloway hopes to expand that number after finishing "construction" of the program. Currently, there are no students that are able to assist other students in going on-line, but Galloway hopes that will change in the future.

Connections to the system are currently limited to those who access either through a microcomputer lab or on personal computers via a modem. Faculty and others may access the system through a fiber-optic hookup in their offices or classrooms. The college hopes to expand hookup options in the future, possibly to allow student to access from their dormitory rooms.

For most students, Internet offers the chance to communicate with other friends and colleagues at distant colleges. The electronic mail service, also known as "e-mail," allows instant communication with virtually any other member school, government organization, or communications group worldwide.

"Internet is great. I write to friends at other schools at least twice daily," said Gray Lesesne. He also uses the service for research and even receives White House Press Briefings and daily schedules of the President. Through Internet, users can obtain information from the federal government and write high ranking officials like President Clinton or Vice President Gore.

"I've used it for research. I have been pleased with the amount of outside information that is accessible through the system. It's a good opportunity for PC students," said Brian Parrish. Parrish logs onto the network three or four times a week.

"I often mail friends off-campus, and use the news groups available," said Camisha Clarke. Clarke frequently uses the computer lab in Richardson Hall to check her mail and access other services.

POINT

Excellence ain't cheap, neither is Presbyterian

by Jason West
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

In 1976, a top-of-the-line new Toyota, complete with air conditioning and automatic transmission, cost only $4,100. In 1994, a top-of-the-line new Toyota, complete with air conditioning and automatic transmission costs approximately $14,000.

We live in a world of change. Unfortunately, we also live in a world in which the prices of food, houses, cars, and even postage stamps are always on the increase.

Recently, the Board of Trustees once again approved an increase in the cost of attending Presbyterian College. The administration reports that this year's increase of 6.4 percent is the smallest in more than a decade. The administrators say they are making every effort to keep the cost of PC at a reasonable level.

A reasonable level is important because PC does not need to become a country club where only the super wealthy can afford to send their children. At the same time, PC must continue to make every effort to improve its program, thus necessitating an annual increase in cost. Progress isn't free. Someone has got to pay for it.

Every year that I've been here, a number of students have withdrawn from PC and transferred to other institutions because they were backed into a financial corner or because they felt guilty for their parents' paying such a hefty bill. I would encourage anyone who is considering transferring because of the cost to stop and think about the character of PC and what it has to offer.

When I started PC, in August of 1990, it cost close to $12,000. Of course, the cost has increased over the years, and the financial aid packet has not.

However, as the price of PC has increased, so has the quality of the institution. In 1990, PC was ranked as the seventh best liberal arts college in the Southeast. Today, it is ranked second. In my four years here, PC has had three consecutive South Carolina Professors of the Year, one of whom was my academic advisor. In addition, the college has expanded its international scholarship programs and can now boast a Rhodes Scholar, numerous Rotary scholars, Hansard scholars, etc. I believe that PC is a quality institution. The school's academic reputation is at an all-time high. PC has not only provided me an opportunity to learn and have a promising career, but it has also allowed me to grow and see the "bigger picture." PC has instilled in me the importance of biology, math, politics, and English. However, it has also instilled in me the lessons of life: compassion, honor, friendship, and integrity.

Attending PC hasn't been easy. However, my parents and I committed to an academic investment, an investment that has made me a better person. I have been fortunate enough to receive a million-dollar education at a price of roughly $55,000.

My grandfather has a favorite saying: "Excellence ain't cheap." Grandpa has always been a smart man, and I believe he is right on target with his saying.

Sidewalk Talk

What do you think about the yearbook being seven months late?

"We have a yearbook!"

Carey Bailey
sophomore

"I accept that there can be some delays, but I find it outrageous that they haven't been finished, even with the extra seven months."

Christopher Phillips
Senior

"First we heard we'd get the yearbook in February, now it looks like never. I just wish someone would learn to do her job right."

Karen Wittenbrook
Senior

photos by Reid Collins

THE BLUE STOCKING

Presbyterian College - Clinton, South Carolina 29325
Volume LXXXVIII Number 9, March 30, 1994

Editor-in-Chief..... Jason West	Staff Writers:	Gray Lesesne
Managing Editor..... Tobin Turner	Dennie Lynn Hill	Nhien Nguyen
News Editor..... Gray Lesesne	Charles Smith	Kelley Perkins
Sports Editor..... Everett Catls	Dawn Banks	Camisha Clarke
Entertainment Editor..... Kim Rabon	Kim Wood	Tonya Sneed
Features Editor..... Brian Sacco	Kristina Pruitt	Brian Parrish
Computer Design Editor..... Todd Love	Katherine Bonner	Lauren Jones
Photography Editor..... Kim Gibson	Karen O'Connor	Christie Grant
Layout Editor..... Angela Richardson	Margaret Ellen Pender
Staff Artist..... Michael Christensen	Alison Nicole Barnard
Staff Advisor..... Dr. Neat B. Prater

Photographers: Reid Collins, Brooke Peterson

The Blue Stocking is a tri-weekly student publication of Presbyterian College. The paper serves as a forum of news and opinion of regional and national concern. For advertising, contact The Blue Stocking, Presbyterian College, Box 1061, Clinton, SC 29325. The Blue Stocking welcomes letters to the editor from all members of the PC community. Signatures are required. Letters are printed on a space available basis. The Blue Stocking reserves the right to edit all letters for proper grammar and punctuation. The final deadline for submitting letters is Friday at 12:00 pm on the week before publication.

Letters to the Editor - Letters to the Editor - Letters to the Editor - Letters to the Editor - Letters to the Editor - Letters to the Editor - Letters to the Editor

Professor praises paper

Dear Editor:

I would like to thank you for the series of articles in the February 18 issue of the Blue Stocking which addressed alcohol use and abuse on college campus. I was particularly glad to see the article quoting statistics from the Department of Education's CORE Drug and Alcohol Survey. Too often the reports of alcohol abuse and the connection between alcohol and sexual assaults are "merely anecdotal." These statistics give some idea of the true scope of the alcohol problems that exist and emphasize the need for changing the drinking norms of college students.

I was an undergraduate at the University of Kentucky in the early seventies. At the place and time, no one seemed to worry much about alcohol. (Frankly, I don't think the term "abuse" was ever applied to alcohol.) I don't recall there being any such surveys, but I am sure that my class would have posted numbers much more shocking than those reported here at PC. We "boomers" could have learned much from educational programs like OCTAA and organizations such as BACCHUS. PC is fortunate to have both on this campus.

Again, thanks for the articles, and keep up the good work.

Sincerely,

Joel Jones, Chair
Alcohol Advisory Committee

Student feels Lauren Owings 'neglected her duties' as 1992-93 PaC SaC editor

Dear Editor:

"In enrolling myself at Presbyterian College I solemnly pledge that I will conduct myself in such a manner as to reflect credit on the Presbyterian College community, and that I will uphold the Honor Code and the Code of Conduct of the College. If I violate this pledge, I will accept the imposed penalty which may include expulsion from the College." (quoted from page 17 of the 1993-94 Knapsack)

Each student must take this pledge before they are allowed to enroll at Presbyterian College. All of us remember the serious nature in which freshmen are required to make this pledge and symbolically sign the Honor Roll at the beginning of their careers at Presbyterian College. Is the Honor Code still in effect? Does it apply to all students regardless of position or class?

Recent events have caused me to question the fairness of the Honor Code and the procedures required to act upon a violation. It has come to my attention that a certain student leader has lied to the student body and the administration and no action was taken. I would like to know why. The Honor Code defines lying as "any attempt to deceive, falsify, or misrepresent the truth in any matter involving college business." In the December 10 edition of the Blue Stocking, Lauren Owings is reported to "dismiss(ed)" rumors of any type of late fee incurred because the publication was not printed by a December deadline."

This is just one blatant example of the lies that have surrounded the failure to complete the 1992-93 edition of the PaC SaC. The yearbook was in fact fined $2000 for failure to be completed on time. The PaC SaC was fined because the failure to complete the book was attributed to a problem on campus rather than a company error as was also reported by Owings.

Owings has also used her position as SGA president to cover up her negligence in completing the yearbook. As a member of SGA executive council, I have witnessed several occasions when Owings has lied to the council who in turn report to the students the excuses Owings has given. As recently as March 21, Owings told the council that she expected the yearbook to be delivered on February 22 and was confused as to why it has not been received at this late date. This statement is a lie because as of the week before Spring Break, Owings had not completed at least eight pages of the book.

It seems to me that Owings has hid behind her position on Judicial Council, as former chairman and a current council member, and her current position as SGA president. It may be because of the high profile positions that the Dean of Students, who is responsible for pursuing non-academic violations of the Honor Code, has been reluctant to bring Owings up on charges. Owings has also stated that the delay was caused because "the pages were lost in shipping." In actuality, according to the Copy Receipt Acknowledgement form provided by the publisher, Owings only turned in 50 of the 232 pages of the yearbook before the May final deadline.

Owings neglected her duties as PaC SaC editor which has directly contributed to the fact that we do not have the 1992-93 edition of the yearbook. Throughout the year, Owings has blamed the publisher and the US Postal Service for her own shortcomings. She has lied to the entire student body and should not get away with it. If another student lied to a professor it can be expected that the student will be brought up before the Judicial Council and the Honor Code would be upheld. I would like to see Owings admit to the truth and for the Dean of Students to take the appropriate action.

Deeply Concerned,

J. Warren Sloane, Jr.
SUB President

'When it comes to crunch time, I want Jason on my team'

When I first met Jason at the beginning of my freshman year, I was introduced to a new world of newspaper journalism, which I thought was not for me. Jason gave me the chance to write quite often, and through his guidance I was able to develop my writing skills enough to find enough reason to continue effort, and patience involved in publishing a paper, these commitments do not seem to bother or faze Jason because he always appears to be completely composed and in control of the situation. Jason displays a relaxed yet organized attitude which is highly uncommon, but very this fact, Jason also serves on his home county's school board, commuting back and forth between his academic and newspaper commitments and his commitment to making a beneficial contribution to the education of future college newspaper's editors and staff writers. This is truly fulfilling the idea of giving something back to the community. Jason is displaying a concern for others which is an important part of PC's philosophy, and he should be congratulated for his efforts outside of his academic career.

I probably could not pinpoint one clear-cut example of Jason's ability to garnish my admiration. His sincerity is truly characteristic and he continually, through his supportive words and honest actions, earns my respect, but that is what I admire most about him -- his ability to maintain a good attitude with a firm grip on reality at all times. I can always talk to him when I come into The Blue Stocking office, and regardless of the topic, he always converses with a friendly yet firm attitude. We need more people like Jason in this world, people who prove that it doesn't hurt to have a positive attitude.

'We need more people like Jason in this world, people who prove that it doesn't hurt to have a positive attitude.'

by Brian Sacco
FEATURES EDITOR

In this issue of The Blue Stocking, my centerpiece section consists of three articles composed from interviews with three seniors who have made a contribution, each in his or her own way, to this campus in their four years at Presbyterian. But, due to a conflict of interest, I had to omit a candidate who in my mind was just as deserving of inclusion as the other three interviewees. I can now in this column make amends for political correctness and journalistic ethics and explain to you, the reader, why Jason West is deserving of my personal admiration and the school's undying gratitude.

Jason possesses certain intangible skills and defining characteristics which would make him an asset to any organization with which he was involved. Most students do not realize the time, beneficial for a college newspaper. Editorial decisions are made by him with a compromising and, at the same time, confident manner. Jason always seems to be informed and "aware of his surroundings," yet at the same time he is able to adjust to any situation with which he is confronted. These past two years Jason has shown the newspaper and the school unparalleled dedication in producing a quality newspaper for the benefit of the entire school community.

For those of you not aware of Barry Brown knows 'where he's been and where he's going'

by Karen O'Conner
STAFF WRITER

You may know that Barry Brown is an English major from seeing him on the second floor of Neville Hall listening intently to one of Dr. Prater's lectures. Perhaps you noticed that he is an athlete because you've seen him play comeback for the Blue Hose the past four years. But did you know that Brown is part-owner of a record company based in Atlanta?

Brown's involvement in music comes as no surprise to those who know that he has been assistant student manager of Radio PC for the past four years. His interest in music has spilled over into the future; he, his best friend, his cousin, and an Atlanta businessman have collaborated in establishing Bar-Red Records, an "official business" which is now concentrating on funding and getting ready to produce its first rap record.

In the emotional and often confusing times that go hand-in-hand with impending graduation, Barry Brown is a PC senior with a clear sense of where he's been, where he is, and where he's headed. Both of Brown's parent's have their masters degrees, so from an early age Brown realized the importance of a good education. As a high school football player, Brown was recruited by a number of colleges, including Furman, but PC won out as his choice. When asked if he had any reservations about coming to a college where he would be in the racial minority, Barry admits that he gave the matter some thought. However, he asserts that PC is a racial microcosm of the United States and realizes that his being a minority student at PC has helped prepare him for the "real world."

Brown felt that the opportunities for him at PC were wide open. "I saw the chance to do three things at PC," Brown says, his voice filling with enthusiasm and his hands illustrating his words. "One, to get a quality education. Two, to play football. And makes Presbyterian a remarkable place.

But Brown's done more than simply keep his head above water. During his years as an undergraduate, he's poured his dedication into diverse activities on campus. In addition to majoring in English and minoring in

The last few months of senior year are a time for a nostalgic recollections, right? And Brown indeed acknowledges that there are many things about PC that he is going to miss after he takes his final walk as a PC student on May 7th. What won't he miss? Probably the two hardest classes he took at PC: Dr. Skinner's History of the English Language and Advanced Grammar, and Dr. Womble's Math 105. He chuckles sheepishly when he admits that one of the places he'll miss most is, believe it or not, Georgia Dorm — not for its cleanliness or wonderful laundry facilities, but for the lifelong friendships that he built while hanging around with his hallmates. Another building that stands out in Brown's mind is Templeton athletic annex, especially the dressing room where he and his fellow athletes prepared for each game. Georgia and Templeton are the two places that stand out most in his mind; but what he'll miss most, he says, are the special friendships that develop at PC.

Brown's past and present at PC are the ties that will keep him involved with Presbyterian College. Just as he's been active on campus during his collegiate years, he hopes to continue as an alumni. Brown would like to see PC increase its minority recruiting and admits that more diversity on campus will require financial means and an intense search. He feels that his education and his many activities at PC have prepared him well for the future. With hope, he will be able to pass on his philosophy about education to younger generations and continue to make a difference at Presbyterian College.

Physical Education, playing football, and working with Radio PC. Brown has served as Student Alumni Council president and Minority Student Union vice president. As a senior looking back, he's proud of the growth he's seen in MSU. He feels that the organization has gained stability from within and is now able to reach out to more students, both minorities and not, who want to be a part of it. Barry admits that it's sometimes hard to be an African-American student on campus, in terms of social opportunities. However, he feels that MSU's strength lies in the fact that the club not only allows black students a voice on campus matters, but also a social outlet.

Barry Brown has played an active role on the PC campus.

photo by Reid Collins

three, to make a difference. Boom!" he concludes. "I jumped in with both feet and had to swim!"

As an involved student and athlete, Brown quickly discovered that it's not always so easy to swim when you're trying to carry meetings, practices, games, AND academics on your back. He realized something early on, though. "As an athlete, you don't really have a choice — you have to put academics and achievement in the classroom before anything else. Academics and education are the things that last. You can't get a job without grades." The fact that PC promotes that kind of thinking — the school expects just as much academically from its athletes as it does from its non-athletes — is what

One last look Seniors reflect on the PC experience

Leigh Stokes: 'She is an asset to the entire school community'

by Brian Sacco
FEATURES EDITOR

When prospective students are introduced to the campus atmosphere at PC, they almost immediately notice a sense of friendliness, commitment, and community. And as hard as it seems to believe, there is generally a sincere desire on each student's part to contribute their time and efforts to benefit the school community. This is no more evident than in the outgoing and sincere personality of senior Leigh Stokes. Her genuineness is apparent from the first moment of introduction and her ability to converse with the utmost of ease and confidence only further strengthen the description of her as an "asset to the entire school community."

A psychology major from Kingsport, Tennessee, Stokes has made the most of her four years here at PC. She currently serves in head leadership positions in three organizations on campus. But what is even more remarkable than the actual organization titles is the fact that she is able to balance all of the activities along with singing in the Student Fellowship Choir, which she described as, "the most enjoyable and fruitful of all the activities I have been involved in at PC." She recalls vividly the first time she heard the group practice, "It brought tears to my eyes. The gospel music opened up a whole new world for me."

Stokes has not let her intense involvement stray her from her schoolwork and career objectives. She will be studying the very specialized and limited field of rural medicine at East Tennessee State University because she "wants to work with all ages and hopefully open a family practice." If that was not enough to keep her occupied, she is also getting married in June. This is further evidence of her intense desire to always be involved. With all of her involvement, Stokes has learned some very important lessons which will be with her forever. "I have noticed the importance of personal relationships and that those relationships carry more weight than the accomplishments. I want to have time to spend with people, and PC is full of those opportunities for everyone," she explained.

Overall, Stokes has found the PC experience to be a special one. "PC stands out because of the relationships formed. The relationship between the President, the deans, and the students involves even more than a first name basis. The school provides a secure atmosphere which serves as a springboard which helped me to explore. The school gives encouragement to pursue and to develop."

Leigh Stokes finds a few rare minutes to read and relax.

photo by Reid Collins

Stokes stated that she had developed a special and lasting friendship with Dr. Susie Smith of the Business Department, even though she added that she would never go into Jacobs unless necessary. She met Dr. Smith at a Bible study group and now they share the lead of their own Bible study group. Stokes stated of Dr. Smith, "She gets to know students on a personal basis and she interacts with all students. I admire her ability to balance being a career woman and a wife. She is a beautiful person who has given me a lot of advice."

Stokes described herself as being an idealist sometimes but said that she would like to see some of the friendliness on the outside of PC students develop into more personal relationships. She also feels that there is some tension on the campus involving those being left out because of race and/or economic differences. She added that she would like to see the campus community become more unified in the future.

In closing Stokes stated, "We [students] are more similar than we think we are. We need to give everyone a chance to look inside of each of us. We could learn from everyone. It may be hard, but it is something we should strive to do."

Camisha Clarke believes that she has 'changed a lot since her freshman year'

by Christie Grant
STAFF WRITER

No one exemplifies the PC motto of "Dum Vivimus Servimus" quite like senior Camisha Clarke, a math major from Miami, Florida. During her four years at PC, Clarke has been actively involved with Student Union Board, Student Volunteer Services, the Student Fellowship Choir, the Blue Stocking, and the Minority Student Union. In addition, she has also served as a resident assistant.

Clarke says she has changed a lot since her freshman year. "My attitude towards people has changed drastically. I used to think I was an island without other people. That's not true. Now every person I see, I look at as a potential friend or as an associate, not just someone I pass on the sidewalk," she said.

"When I first came to PC, I felt that I had an image to uphold, an image of independence. I used to come across as if no one could touch me. The image is still there to uphold, but I'm not trying as hard to be that way. If it comes across that way, then it just does, but I'm not trying to," said Clarke.

Clarke chose PC because she wanted to go to a predominately white college. "The world is predominately white, so why should I try to fool myself," she added.

Regarding minority relations at PC, Clarke said, "As a freshman, I used to make it a point to be friendly to all the black students on campus. I felt it was my duty, but now I know that blacks are just people like everyone else. I don't have to be friends with someone just because they're black. Now, I see beyond color."

Clarke feels that being in the Student Fellowship Choir has helped her mature. "The Student Fellowship Choir provided a place and a time where a group of students like myself could get together and sing and do what makes us feel good. We all had our differences, but when we were in choir, we were all there for the same purpose. I felt uplifted there and like there was a purpose in life," she said.

Clarke plans on attending graduate school in interactive communications or telecommunications. Her advice to underclassmen is to "keep your identity. It's easy to be absorbed, and the one thing you have when you leave PC is yourself. Don't lose your identity."

Camisha Clarke feels she has changed since arriving at PC.

file photo

Intimidation was never a factor for PC's Jennifer Hilliard

by Margaret Ellen Pender
STAFF WRITER

Some people simply do not know the meaning of the word intimidation.

Imagine that you are 5'8", which is definitely small stature for a collegiate post player, and game after game you are defended by girls who are on average several inches taller than you are.

For many athletes, the odds of excelling at a position where they knowingly begin at a disadvantage would be significant enough to justify changing positions.

For Lady Blue Hose Senior Jennifer Hilliard, however, intimidation was never a factor and the thought of shying away from a challenge probably never crossed her mind. Although she and twin sister Caroline began their basketball careers playing almost every position for their church league team, and according to Jennifer, "taking some crazy two-handed shots from half court," the two girls evolved into outstanding players. Caroline became a skilled guard while Jennifer seemed drawn to the post positions.

After deciding to hand in their tutus for high tops (both girls had originally been infected by the dance-lesson bug just as most young girls are), Jennifer and Caroline began to focus on their athletic pursuits. Each of them enjoyed an impressive career at Hammond School in Columbia where they contributed immeasurably to establishing a respected program for girls' athletics in volleyball, softball, and basketball.

It was Jennifer, however, who began about the seventh grade to dream of playing college hoops, and she remembers being inspired and encouraged by the success of Hammond graduate Martha Parker who was enjoying outstanding success at the University of South Carolina at that time. While Jennifer had without a doubt been blessed with athletic ability, it was the hours of shooting baskets in the backyard and working on post moves at the park that propelled her to greatness. Smiling, she confessed that "whenever [she] was mad or upset about something, [she] would go out and shoot." Knowledgeable (her father referees college games) and extremely supportive parents (they never missed a game) also factored into the equation which ultimately equalled incredible success for Hilliard, who notched almost 2,000 points at Hammond and served as a great role model for so many other little girls who were dreaming of someday becoming college basketball players.

Since becoming a Blue Hose, Hilliard who averaged 15.2 ppg, 6.8 rpg, and led the league in free throw percentage (74.4%) has made quite a contribution to the Presbyterian Women's Basketball program and has played an integral part in establishing the Lady Hose as a perennial power and a team that is heading toward even greater accomplishments. This season, the Lady Hose posted an impressive 22-8 record and advanced to the NCAA South Atlantic Region Semifinal Round in Wingate, NC where they suffered a disappointing and highly controversial loss to Wingate College, 64-63. En route to the NCAA playoffs, the Lady Hose captured second place in the SAC tournament in a nail-biting overtime setback from Mars Hill. Presbyterian coach Beth Couture was named Coach of the Year, and junior guard Kaye Watts was chosen for the All-Tournament team while Jennifer Hilliard was selected as a member of the All SAC First Team.

Jennifer Hilliard was a basketball star even as a child.

For all of her efforts, both her work ethic and her powerful leadership at PC, Hilliard will be greatly missed. As a social studies major with a minor in secondary education, she is now setting out to face new challenges as a teacher and hopefully someday as a coach.

Baseball team wins four in a row

by Everett Catts
SPORTS EDITOR

The Blue Hose baseball team is now 17-12 and 6-6 in the SAC-8 after winning four in a row.

After beating Augusta (6-5) and Wofford (15-9) on March 3 and 4, PC took two games out of three from Lenoir-Rhyne on March 5-6. The Blue Hose's Jason Bradley was named SAC-8 Pitcher of the Week after pitching a complete-game shutout in a 5-0 PC victory. Bradley gave up four hits, struck out seven, and walked three. He leads the team in innings pitched (52), strikeouts (30), shutouts (2) and complete games (3).

Following a 12-4 win against Georgia College on March 9, the Blue Hose split a double-header with Wingate on March 12. PC won the first game 5-3 as Darren Bane pitched a seven-inning complete game. Bane was named the league's Pitcher of the Week following an outing in which he gave up five hits, struck out three, walked none and allowed only one earned run.

The Blue Hose won two of their next three games in three days by crushing Ashland 9-3 on March 15, losing to Coker 11-6, and annihilating Furman 20-11 as PC outlit the Paladins 20-16.

But the Blue Hose lost the next three games on March 19-20 when they were swept by Catawba, losing 9-3, 11-2, and 13-11. In the first game PC had a 3-1 at one point.

The one bright spot to come out of the series was the play of Elton Pollock, who was named SAC-8 Player of the Week after batting .483 (11-29). Pollock had four hits (including a homer) in the series and had four doubles, eight runs scored, eight RBI's, and three stolen bases in four attempts. Currently, Pollock is batting .361 with six homers and 23 RBI's.

The Blue Hose lost its fourth straight with an 8-7 collapse against West Virginia State on March 22. PC blew a 5-2 lead in the eighth inning and could not come back despite scoring twice in the ninth.

The Blue Hose closed out their series with the Yellow Jackets with a 4-2 win on the following day. Pollock's squeeze bunt drove in David Gant to give PC a 3-2 lead in the eighth. Paul Bushway, who leads the team with a .373 average, broke out of a two-game hitless streak with his eighth homerun of the season. Bushway has had hitting streaks of nine and eleven games, and was once batting .465 earlier in the season.

Joey Popham got the win after he pitched eight innings, scattered eight hits, and allowed only one earned run. Donovan Harrison pitched a scoreless ninth for his first save.

PC increased their win streak to four games with a sweep of Mars Hill. The Blue Hose won twice on March 26 (3-2, 3-2 (8 innings)), and then won 5-2 on the following day to complete the sweep.

PC was led by their starting pitchers, who combined for six runs, 13 strikeouts, 22 innings, and two complete games. All three starters each got their third win of the season. At the plate Albert Mitchell led the Blue Hose with four hits in eight at bats, a double, two runs, and two walks. In game one Pollock was three for four and had his fifteenth multihit game. Sean McCarthy was two for four with two RBI's in game 3.

PC golf team proves its worth

by Everett Catts
SPORTS EDITOR

The PC golf team's season is off to a good start after placing fourth and eleventh in their last two tournaments, both of which had tough competition.

On March 5-6 the Blue Hose came in fourth place in the Challenge of the Carolinas. Chuck King was PC's top golfer and the tourney's ninth best with a total score of 153 (77-76). Perrin Powell followed with a 155 (76-79), good for twentieth overall. Gabe Southards rounded out the top three Blue Hose golfers with a score of 156 (79-77). The twenty-one team tournament was won by North Carolina.

Coach Tommy Addison commented on the tourney, saying, "I'm very excited about the way we played in the tournament. We ran into some trouble but we never gave up and that is what it takes. To beat everyone in the (South Atlantic) conference is terrific."

The Blue Hose followed their fourth place finish with an eleventh-place finish at the Max Ward Intercollegiate on March 14-15. Southards was PC's top golfer of the tournament with a 151 (73-78). Jim Kent followed with a 158. USC-Aiken won the twenty-three team tournament.

"We didn't play quite as well, but we never gave up. Perrin Powell was disqualified, which put us at eleventh instead of seventh," Addison said.

With PC's success on the links, the Blue Hose have gained recognition from all the teams in the region.

"Now, people are starting to watch when PC tees off," said Addison.

The freshmen have been a large reason for PC's success. They have proved their value to the team.

"They came in here with tournament experience, and they've shown it."

Since the Max Ward tournament, the Blue Hose have not played in any tournaments. Coach Addison has used the break to practice skill shots and simulate tournament competition in practice.

The PC golfers should be ready for their next tournament, the Francis Marion Intercollegiate on April 11-12 in Florence.

Sports View

Spring training is great fun

by Everett Catts
SPORTS EDITOR

Over the spring break holiday I experienced something every baseball fan should do. I caught two spring training games. I saw the Atlanta Braves play the Montreal Expos and New York Yankees in West Palm Beach, Florida.

Unlike the regular season, the spring training atmosphere is much more laid back. While I was there I saw Jim Abbot, the one-handed pitching ace for the Yankees, who pitched and even batted. I also tried and failed in getting autographs from the defending NL West champs. Superstars like David Justice and Fred McGriff passed me by with hordes of autograph seekers tackling each other for the mere satisfaction of getting an athlete's signature.

Another laid back aspect of spring training is the fact that the pitchers run between the foul poles during the game instead of before the game, like they do it in the regular season. Many times the pitchers have to avoid getting hit by deep fly balls or other players.

Another difference between spring training and the regular season is the availability of seats. When I would go to Braves games in Atlanta, it would be hard to get a seat close to the field. But at spring training, you can almost touch and even talk to one of the players. Despite the large number of fans, a crowd of three or four thousand at West Palm Beach can sound almost as loud as the 45,000 at the "Chop Shop".

If you like baseball, plan to see a few games in Florida next spring. The tickets usually cost less than the ones you get at the large stadiums during the season. It's a wonderful experience.

Loss of Kemp causes men's tennis team to slip

by Everett Catts
SPORTS EDITOR

The men's tennis team is now 6-6 and 2-1 in the conference, good for third place.

Back on February 25 the Blue Hose crushed Augusta 6-1 in a non-conference match. On the following day, PC shut out USC-Aiken 7-0. The victory was the squad's fourth in a row.

But that winning streak was snapped when the Blue Hose lost to SAC-8 foe Mars Hill 7-0 on March 15. The loss was PC's first in conference play this season.

The Blue Hose then lost a tough match, a 4-3 setback to Queens on March 19.

PC's losing streak was extended to four games on March 23 with a 9-0 loss to Kalamazoo College, the NCAA Division III defending national champions and second-ranked team in the nation.

Coach Bobby McKee commented on the team's play, saying, "They're playing right now where I expected. We lost our number three player (David Kemp). We had pretty good position players until we lost Kemp. It's tough for our players to make the jump up one slot. I've had to bring in a couple of new people to fill in the open slot." McKee added, "We're still looking for some consistency."

Currently, the Blue Hose are led by the doubles pair of senior Paul Roof and freshman Will Sharpe, who are 4-1 at the number three doubles slot.

Yesterday PC hosted Elon and Lenoir-Rhyne in two SAC-8 matches. The Blue Hose will play at Newberry on April 5 before returning home to play USC-Spartanburg on the following day at 2:00.

Scott Ambrose returns a powerful forehand.

photo by Brook Peterson

Women's tennis team wins six of seven games

by Everett Catts
SPORTS EDITOR

The women's tennis team is now 11-6 and showing signs of improvement. The Lady Blue Hose had a three-game win streak and have won six of their last seven games. Many of their wins have come against teams ranked regionally or nationally.

After crushing Lenoir-Rhyne 9-0 back on March 3, the lady netters competed in the Armstrong State Tournament during spring break. On March 11 and 12 the Lady Hose lost two straight matches—a 4-3 setback to Francis Marion and a 6-3 loss to Wofford. PC concluded the tournament with big wins against (14th in NAIA) Converse (6-1) and North Alabama (7-0).

The Lady Hose increased its win streak to three games with a 7-2 SAC-8 victory at Carson Newman.

But the winning streak was snapped when PC lost to SAC foe Elon 5-4 on March 19. The loss to Elon, previously ranked third in the East region, was the Lady Hose's first in conference play.

PC got back on the right track on the following day with its fourth win in five games, a 7-2 blasting of USC-Spartanburg, who was previously ninth in the South region. The lady netters continued their good play with wins against Lander (7-2) and SAC opponent Gardner-Webb (8-0).

Part of PC's success can be attributed to the play of senior Jennifer Miller and sophomore Jennifer Brim. The pair have been deadly on the court, each with perfect 17-0 records in singles.

"Brim and Miller have kept us in every match. When they go onto the court, I feel comfortable that we have a good chance to win, said coach Donna Arnold.

Also, the doubles tandem of Brim and freshman Chrissy Bolt have been almost as good as Miller and Brim in singles. The pair have a doubles record of 17-0.

Arnold also commented on her squad's overall performance, saying, "I think we're playing very well. We've had some tough three-set losses and have one of the toughest schedules ever, and are doing well against those opponents," Arnold said.

Following a SAC-8 match with Wingate today, the Lady Hose will play Mars Hill at home on March 6. On April 8-9 the lady netters will play at Division I foe UNC-Charlotte and at High Point.

Blue Hose track team accelerates early in season

by Everett Catts
SPORTS EDITOR

The PC track team has fared well so far this season despite having practiced for only two weeks.

On March 19 the Blue Hose competed in the 14th Annual Braves' Track Classic at Pembroke State. Matt Glenn led the team with first place performances in the 400 and 800 meter races.

Patrick Proleau took second place in the 400 meter hurdles and 110 meter hurdles. Zane Corriher and Tyreese Ingram were second and third, respectively in the high jump. Other top finishers for PC were Jeff Buchman and Keith Moore, who placed second and third, respectively in the discus. Also, Dave Amsler and Marvin Atchinson were second and third in the shot put. Vic Vickery was third in the javelin to round out the field events.

In the relay events Proleau, Lyndon Bell, Chris Thorpe and Willie Johnson were second in the 4x100 meter relay. The foursome of Smith, Tommy Lewis, Corriher, and Jason Whitener placed third in the mile relay.

On March 26 the Blue Hose finished second in the Francis Marion Invitational meet. High Point won the six-team meet. PC was without seven of their athletes for the meet.

Coach Michael Owens commented on his squad's performance, saying, "We've done pretty well for the fact that we've had only two weeks of practice. We're still getting in a track shape, and we're close to getting there."

"They've been working really hard so far," Owens added.

The track team has two home meets in the next two weeks. On April 5 the Blue Hose will host Voorhees and Morris College in a tri-meet. On April 7 PC hosts Morris in a dual meet. Both meets are at 1:00, and the track team encourages all students, faculty and staff to attend.

THIS PAGE CONTAINS FLAWS AND OTHER DEFECTS, WHICH MAY APPEAR ON THE FILM.

Encore

by Kim Rabon
ENTERTAINMENT EDITOR

Unlike most people at PC, I didn't do much over Spring Break. I went home and spent some quality time with the family and even put a few hours in at the office I work at over the summer. I spent some time doing things with friends I hadn't seen in a while, but the highlight of my week was going to the zoo. Yes, the zoo!

A friend and I decided to go to Riverbanks Zoo in Columbia for the day. Neither of us had been to the zoo in a long time. I really don't know how I came up with the idea to go there, but we had a great time.

Most people find it entertaining to play with their pets at home (I do), but that day I was just entertained by watching the animals. When you are young, you don't really pay attention to the animals, you just say "Ooh... Look at that!" and keep on walking. Normally a kid could look at every animal in the zoo in thirty minutes at the most. That day we walked around for about two hours! We saw everything from penguins (my favorite) to snakes to cows. The zoo had everything and it was all labeled, right down to the plants by the walkway.

It was so unusual seeing all those animals that you don't and won't see unless you travel around the world, all in one place. We commented on how the zoo attempts to create an environment similar to their real homes and how the animals seem to make the best of it. It was interesting seeing how the animals really act, rather than seeing edited parts of Trials of Life.

Nowadays, it is hard to set aside time to do things that not only give us a break from "adulthood", but things that also give us enjoyment. Going to the zoo was such a simple idea, one that normally wouldn't come to mind when searching for something to do. But then again, it is the simple things shared with friends that end up being the best times. The next time you are looking for the perfect thing to do with a friend, try the zoo. The animals won't let you or your friend down.

Ventriloquist is no dummy

Lynn Trefzger brings nationally known show to campus

by Kim Rabon
ENTERTAINMENT EDITOR

Lynn Trefzger, a self-taught ventriloquist, will bring her vocal illusions and comedy to Presbyterian College on April 19, at 7:30 pm in Springs Campus Center.

Lynn has appeared on ABC-TV's America's Super Showcase, Good Morning America, TNN's Statler Brother's Show, NBC's PM Magazine, and Del's Folks. She has also appeared with professionals such as Sinbad, Shields and Yarnell, The Turtles, and Kevin Meaney. Trefzger has been named NACA Comedy Entertainer of the Year and nominated for "Most Deserving Young Vent" at the International Ventriloquist Convention.

Several characters will be joining Trefzger in the performance. Some of these include Simon (main sidekick), Camelot (a lazy camel), Emily (loves shopping, men, and clothes), Judd Wapner (cranky old man), and human dummies (where Trefzger pulls people from the audience).

This SUB sponsored event is sure to be comical and entertaining. Come out and join Lynn Trefzger and her friends for a night of fun.

Lynn Trefzger, a nationally recognized ventriloquist, will bring her show to PC on April 19.

Celebrate the Spring Savings!

PC Campus Store

Inventory Reduction Sale

20 % discount on most sweatshirts and t-shirts

plus 2 display racks of merchandise at 1/2 price

Come on down for good selection

Sale continues through May 7

Take a gander at the newly expanded campus store
Stop by and visit our new convenience station

We're here to serve you!

SUB selects new officers

by Dawn Banks
STAFF WRITER

New officers for the Student Union Board have been elected and are already busy planning for next year. The new officers are Charissa Cleckler, president; Dean Sheorn, vice-president; Cindy Borders, secretary; and Melynda Ray, treasurer. Randy Randall, Chris Patterson, and Dr. Dean Thompson are the faculty advisors.

Randy Randall states, "We have many new and interesting ideas for next year already lined up for the Fall Semester! We are always open to suggestions and we value your input."

Some of the events scheduled for next year include a Bungee Run, A Velcro Wall, and at least four movies a month on the PC channel. Students will be able to view their favorite movies in their rooms. Those of you who enjoy the movies in Springs, don't worry, there will be occasional movie viewings there, too. SUB has also rescheduled Fun Flicks, Virtual Reality, The Alpha Experience, Blizzard of Bucks, the hypnotist, and the poster sale.

According to Randall, all SUB members plan to work very hard to provide the best entertainment possible for PC students. Students should pay attention to the SUB calendar for upcoming events and activities.

by Jason Bundrick
GUEST WRITER

Recently a number of albums were released, some more worthy than others. I thought for the last two issues of the paper I would review some of those for you.

Nine Inch Nails: The Spiral Downward

This album has been a long time coming, but well worth the wait. I

Columnist 'tickled pink' with Under the Pink album think I can honestly say this album is better than Pretty Hate Machine, Trent Reznor's first release.

For those who didn't like Broken but did like Pretty..., you will probably like this release. This album has the complexity of Pretty..., while still capturing the raw intensity and energy of Broken.

I just have one complaint with this album. The transitions from song to song are very rough in many cases. The transitions are very sharp and often break the flow of the album.

All in all, I would say go buy this album. Grade (A-)

Enigma: Enigma 2: The Cross of Changes

I was really disappointed with this album. After waiting for several years for this release, I expected something more than a rebash of the last album. The band uses the same chord progressions, effects, and drum lines as the last album. The only difference between the two records is the amount of vocals. Enigma 2 has vocals in almost every song, which is a real departure from the last album.

The only redeeming qualities of this release are the concept behind the album and the song "Return to Innocence."

Go buy the single, not the album: Grade (D-)

Tori Amos: Under the Pink

This album is so intensely good I can't say anything to do it justice. If you liked Little Earthquakes, you will love this one.

Go buy this record right now: Grade (A++)

Counting Crows: August and Everything After

I must admit this album wasn't as bad as I thought it was going to be. Of course, I wasn't expecting much in the first place.

To me, Counting Crows sound like every other "college rock" band in America. I couldn't tell if I was listening to the Gin Blossoms or Counting Crows or any other band from this genre.

Go get it if you have the spare cash and nothing else to buy: Grade (C)

The Muffs: The Muffs

A good mix of The Juliana Hatfield Three and Hole. Grade (A)

Majek Fashek and the Prisoners of Conscience: Spirit of Love

The best reggae I've heard since Bob died. Grade (A+)

Campus & Clubs...

Pi Kappa Phi

The brothers of Pi Kappa Phi, Beta Chapter, recently hosted the Second Annual "Biker Ball" Mixer with the sisters of Alpha Delta Pi. We would like to thank the ADPI's for a great party "biker-style." We had a great time.

A total of $8,190 has now been raised by the brothers and pledges for our philanthropy, PUSH America (People Understanding the Severely Handicapped). Beta Chapter is currently ranked second nationally in fund raising. We appreciate your continued support.

Congratulations to Dallas Olson, SGA president-elect, Jason Humphries and Dean Sheorn, the Student Alumni Association's new president and vice president, respectively.

Alpha Delta Pi

Alpha Delta Pi congratulates its new officers for the 1994-95 year: President Leigh Heurnburg, Executive Vice President Kelly Reiser, Most Executive Vice President Ashly Lawton, Rush Chairperson Leigh Davis, Alpha Education Chair Leigh Newsome, Panhellenic Representative Beth Threadgill, Recording Secretary Ann Dodd, Corresponding Secretary Ashley Small, Treasurer Ashley Williams, Guard Cecilia Barksdale, Chaplain Carolyn Rizk, Social Person Kate Hartman, Informal Social Person Jenny Wallace, Service Person Beth Boyett, Scholarship Person Natasha

Casada, Standards Person Tabitha Terry. Congratulations to Dr. Bob Hudson, the ADPI Biology Professor of the Month. ADPI would like to thank Pi Kappa Phi for a fun Biker Ball. Thanks also to everyone who contributed to the Teeter Totter Marathon for the Ronald McDonald House.

Student Affairs

The deadline for expressing interest in the editorship of the Student Affairs Newsletter is Thursday, March 31. Anyone interested should contact the Office of Student Affairs located in Douglas House, ext. 8276.

Intramural News

On Saturday, March 19, the PC Intramural Department hosted the first annual Presbyterian College Soccer Challenge at the Intramural Complex. It consisted of the intramural soccer champions from Lander University, Furman University, USC-Sumter, and two all-star teams from PC. Fans and players alike were treated to a fun day of soccer and sun. Lander defeated the PC team captained by Lance Dauby and Spencer Treadwell in the championship game by a score of 2-0 to claim the winner's trophy. Because of the success of this event, plans are already being made to host a second soccer challenge next Spring with a greater number of schools participating, including Wofford, USC-Spartanburg, and Winthrop.

This year's basketball championship games took place after Spring Break on March 14. The following teams won their league: Men's A - Public Enemy, Men's B - Staff Infections, Men's C - New Era, Women's A - You Lose, Women's B - ICHTUS.

In other intramural news, softball and indoor soccer have begun this Spring with faculty, staff, and students taking part. Indoor soccer is in its second season as an intramural sport and 25 teams have entered in this year's league. Softball is always one of the most popular sports on campus and this year seems to be no exception, with over 60 percent of the student body signing up to play this season. Other upcoming events include the Spring swim meet on April 10 and frisbee golf on April 14. To find out how to get involved in intramurals come by the Springs Center office.

Drama Department

The Presbyterian College Drama Department will present student directed one-act plays during the month of April. The Actor's Nightmare, directed by Ann Blaire, and After Magritt, directed by Brandi Rogerson will be performed on Friday, April 22 and Saturday, April 23 at 7:00 pm in the Harper Center. Admission will be $2.00.

ANDREA BOUGHNER
ANNA CHRIST
AMANDA COATER
SUSAN COOK
ALICIA DEAS
KIPPER EDDES
ANNE MARIE GOLDSMITH
MEREDITH HARSH
SAZY LIGON
CATHERINE MARTIN
BLYTHE MADPSON
ALLISON McNAIR
AMANDA MCFARLANDS
EMILY MOSS
SUSAN OLMERI
MEG OSPEA
MARGARET ELLEN PENDER
BEITH PEARE
JESSICA REDDICK
LESLIE ROBINSON
CARROLL ROE
ERIN SMITH
ADILE SPEARS
MARY BEITH THOMAS

CONGRATULATIONS TO OUR NEW ZETA SISTERS!!!

TACO BELL®

Let's Celebrate!

The new TACO BELL® restaurant at 920 East Main Street, Laurens is celebrating its Grand Opening!

Bring the coupons below to the new TACO BELL® restaurant, and while you're there, be sure to try our delicious 59¢/79¢/99¢ Value Menu items.

Only TACO BELL® has that TACO BELL® taste!

CROSS THE BORDER™

Price excludes tax.

Supreme
Me

Buy one Soft Taco Supreme® and get a second Soft Taco Supreme®

FREE

Limit one free offer per person per visit. Not valid with any other offer. Offer expires 4/30/94. Offer good only at the TACO BELL® restaurant at 920 East Main Street, Laurens. Cash redemption value is 1/10th cent. Void where prohibited. ©1994 TACO BELL CORP.

$1.00 OFF

10-PACK OF Tacos-To-Go

Limit one offer per person per visit. Not valid with any other offer. Offer expires 4/30/94. Offer good only at the TACO BELL® restaurant at 920 East Main Street, Laurens. Cash redemption value is 1/10th cent. Void where prohibited. ©1994 TACO BELL CORP.

THE BLUE STOCKING

"Give the people the light, so they may find the way."

Volume LXXXVIII Number 10

PRESBYTERIAN COLLEGE

Clinton, South Carolina 29325

April 22, 1994

PC sophomore charged with assaulting female student

by Jason West
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

A Presbyterian College student was arrested on Thursday, April 14 after getting into an altercation with another student at the Intramural Field.

John Stephen Wetzler, a sophomore from Marietta, Georgia, was charged with disorderly conduct and simple assault.

According to Grey Mayson, chief of Public Safety, Officer Jimmy Jenkins was dispatched to the Intramural Field after receiving an anonymous call that an altercation was taking place between a male student and a female. Upon his arrival, Jenkins confronted Wetzler, who was irate and appeared to be on drugs. The female student was not present at the time.

"Wetzler was not at all cooperative with Officer Jenkins. He was very loud and was shouting 'nigger' and other racial remarks at him," said Mayson. Jenkins called for backup in an effort to detain Wetzler.

Wetzler was taken to the Clinton Police Department. "At first, the Public Safety officers attempted to talk to Wetzler, but he wasn't very cooperative. For his own unknown substance. "We do not know where the marijuana came from, but Wetzler had just come from the Pi Kappa Alpha house before going to ing to the judicial proceedings outlined by the college," he said.

In relation to the Wetzler incident and several other fraternity related incidents, Nixon closed down the Pi Kappa Alpha house on Saturday, April 16.

"I did close down the house on Saturday during the Pi Kappa Alpha Hawaiian Party. I closed the house because of an accumulation of incidents involving the fraternity and its members, including the incident involving Wetzler," said Nixon.

According to Nixon, one incident will require several Pi Kappa Alpha pledges, as well as the fraternity itself, to face charges of vandalism before the Interfraternity Council.

Indicating the severity of the situation, Nixon stated, "If the fraternity is found guilty, the IFC will decide a punishment and the incident will be reported to the fraternity's national office."

"I cannot confirm or deny that Wetzler was on drugs, and I cannot confirm that he purchased drugs. My office is conducting an investigation, and it will be handled according to the judicial proceedings outlined by the college."

Joe Nixon
Dean of Students

safety and the safety of others, it was decided to take him to the city jail," added Mayson.

At 11:00 pm, the female student who had been involved in the altercation with Wetzler came by the Public Safety office and gave a statement that she had indeed been assaulted.

Mayson reported that Wetzler, who is a member of Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity, was apparently using marijuana that had been laced with some the Intramural Field. The marijuana could have very easily come from the Pi Kappa Alpha house," he said.

According to Joe Nixon, dean of students, an investigation is currently underway to determine if Wetzler did use and purchase drugs. "At this point, I cannot confirm or deny that Wetzler was on drugs, and I cannot confirm that he purchased drugs. My office is conducting an investigation, and it will be handled accord-

On The Inside

Page 2 . . .

Allen Morris, a '56 graduate of PC, is named the college's new athletic director.

Page 3 . . .

Dallas Olson and Dean Sheorn, brother of Pi Kappa Phi, plan to bike across the country this summer in an effort to help the handicapped.

Springtime splendor...

PC students Stuart Hackney and Kelly Pope enjoy a spring afternoon by the fountain near Neville Hall. The arrival of warm weather to the campus has signaled sunbathers and students alike to the campus's open plazas and appealing lakeside vistas.

photo courtesy of PaCSaC

PC Tidbits

Judicial Council sentences guilty student

On April 13, 1994, the Judicial Council held a hearing in the library auditorium at 3:30 pm. A student was charged with disorderly conduct and vandalism, both Code of Conduct violations.

The student pled guilty to the charges. The prosecution called one witness. The defense submitted a written statement on behalf of the accused's character. The prosecution and defense made closing statements. The council went into deliberation.

The council imposed restitution for the damage, estimated to be $480 and 20 hours of service with maintenance.

The accused was read the sentence and reminded of the right to appeal.

Judicial proceedings as outlined in the Knapsack were followed. The case was adjourned at 3:50 pm.

Russell Committee names 1994-95 communication editors, managers

The Russell Subcommittee on Campus Communications announced Wednesday the editors and manager of PC publications and Radio PC. Selected were the following: Jay Therrell, freshman, editor of PaCSaC; Tobin Turner, sophomore, editor of the Blue Stocking; Michael Weaver, junior, manager of Radio PC; Gray Lesesne, freshman, editor of Figs and Thistles.

SGA Class Officers elected

SGA elections were recently held for all class offices. Results are as follows: Senior Class President: Vanessa McAlister; Senior Class Representatives: Amy Becker, Katy Ross. Junior Class President: Levana Layendecker. Junior Class Representatives: Beth Boyett, James Chastain. Sophomore Class President: Josh Lamkin. Sophomore Class Representatives: Brandi Casto, Susan Haigler.

Barron, Smyth residents negotiate compromise

by Kelley Perkins
STAFF WRITER

Residents of Barron, Smyth, and Laurens Halls were left confused and upset regarding the college's decision last month to change these residence halls due to a shifting student population on campus. They were displeased with the college's policy that not only displaced them from their residence halls but also threw them into the new residence life lottery system with no priority in housing signups.

Student Government Association President Dallas Olson heard the complaints of the residents and arranged for a meeting with the Office of Student Affairs. Similar complaints were heard by Andy Altizer, residence life director, who said that his office started to rethink the policy.

At the April 6 meeting of the SGA, Altizer and Joe Nixon, dean of students, met Barron Hall will become a men's residence hall next year. Under the compromise worked out by SGA, Smyth, Barron, and Laurens Halls residents were given priority in registration.

photo by Kim Gibson

Smyth, and Laurens were allowed to sign up for their rooms on April 18, 1994, the same day that students who are staying in their rooms signed up.

Altizer had praise for the students leaders involved in negotiating the compromise. "I give all the credit for this compromise to the SGA. I'm very proud of Dallas Olson and Leigh Davis for coming to us and trying to reach a solution."

"I think it's great. It softens the blow. It's the only fair thing to do, and I'm glad the administration listened to us," said Cassy Hellsley, with student leaders and concerned residents and worked through several options and finally a compromise. Students living in Barron, a Barron resident who secured a room in Smyth Hall.

Morris to succeed Gault as athletic director

by Steve Owens
NEWS SERVICES COORDINATOR

Allen Morris, a 1956 Presbyterian College graduate who returned to his alma mater last July to serve as director of the college's Scotsman Club, will assume the role of athletic director on July 1, 1994, college officials announced today.

Morris was selected from among 152 applicants for the position. He will succeed Cally Gault, who has served as athletic director for the past 31 years at PC, an NCAA Division II member.

"Allen Morris brings to his post superb skills and experiences that have prepared him well," Presbyterian College president Dr. Kenneth B. Orr said. "He is one of the most highly acclaimed athletes in the college's history; he has been a very successful coach at an outstanding university; he has been the head of personnel for a large textile company; and he has been the parent of a PC student-athlete. These experiences will contribute to his success and enable him to lead PC athletics in the great tradition of Cally Gault, Lonnie McMillian, and Walter Johnson."

Morris, the former head men's tennis coach and director of tennis at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, said he is looking forward more to the challenge of the position than living up to the standard set by Gault.

"First off, you don't replace a Cally Gault.

You don't fill his shoes. In assuming the position he has held, it's impossible to replace a legend who has meant so much to the college and the community. I just hope that I can do half the job that he's done in the years he's been here," said Morris.

"I consider this a great honor to come back to PC and serve as athletic director. I look forward to working with the coaches, the administration, and the faculty, and my theme of leadership is the same theme that the college has had for years: my first priority is to graduate our student-athletes; my second priority is to compete with integrity; and my third priority is to compete to win."

A standout tennis player while attending Presbyterian College, Morris was an alternate on the U.S. Davis Cup team from 1954-56. In 1956, he reached the apex of his career by attaining a 14th-place world ranking and advancing to the quarterfinals at Wimbledon. He later won open singles championships in North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, and New York, and won the U.S. Senior Clay Court Championships in both 1977 and 1978, when he was ranked second in the United States and ninth in the world senior men's singles.

Morris has enjoyed equal success as a businessman and coach. He served as vice president for personnel at Text Industries in Greensboro, N.C., before accepting the coaching position at UNC. During his 13 seasons in Chapel Hill, Morris led the Tar Heels to a 227-1115 mark that included two Atlantic Coast Conference championships. Three of his teams were ranked among NCAA's top 25.

"I'm certain the athletic program will continue to be strong under Allen's leadership," said current athletic director Cally Gault, who has served in that capacity since 1963.

Morris was selected by a committee composed of members of the faculty, administration, alumni, and athletic department. Over 150 applications were received since January for the position, with the committee narrowing down the field to five applicants before Morris' selection.

Morris

TAKE THE KEYS.
CALL A CAB.
TAKE A STAND.

COMMENTARY

'I'm scared of leaving the comfort and security of PC'

by Jason West
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

The other evening I was walking across the front plaza of the campus. It was a beautiful spring afternoon and several students were laying out on the grass, while others were tossing a frisbee. It was while walking that I got hit with a stunning revelation.

I realized that I would no longer be found reading my political science textbook on a sunny afternoon at Lake Orr. I realized that I would no longer be doing layout at 2:00 am in the Blue Stocking office. I realized that there would no longer be any late night study sessions at the Waffle House. I realized that I would no longer be a part of the immediate PC family.

When I first walked onto the PC campus, I was a narrow-minded, self-focused individual from rural Kershaw County, South Carolina. PC opened my mind and expanded my world. It introduced me to oriental mix, students from other nations and cultures, the beauty of Baroque music, people who don't wear shoes to class, the love of the elderly at Presbyterian Home, the writings of John Locke, the history of the Russian people, and the importance of friendship.

It's not that PC has failed to provide me to leave. I am more than ready to meet the challenges of the so called "real world," but I am scared of leaving the comfort and security that PC has provided.

I am also sad about leaving the people who have made PC so special to me. In the past four years, I have made lifetime friends here, and they have added greatly to my PC experience. I couldn't leave PC without saying thank you to some of them, so in my final Blue

Stocking commentary, I intend to do just that.

Perhaps the person who has had the most influence on me at PC has been Dr. David Gillespie, my academic advisor, is my mentor and the person I would most like to emulate. He has always shown himself to be fair, consistent, and compassionate and has encouraged me to be true to myself and true to others. I not only count him as my professor, I also count him as a friend.

In addition to Dr. Gillespie, a number of other professors have played a role in my college life. I never had the fortune of being a student in Dr. Dean Thompson's class. Despite that, he did manage to teach me something. Dr. Thompson is a remarkable individual and a true humanitarian, showing constant concern for the young people he teaches. His help with the Blue Stocking has been invaluable. In addition, he has made me aware that there is nothing wrong with being "Southern" and there is nothing wrong with being from the "country."

Dr. Neal Prater has also provided me with a lot of assistance with the Blue Stocking. More importantly, he has been a great sounding board and has always given much needed and valued advice.

I couldn't leave PC without saying a few words to Todd Love, my college roommate. Todd and I are as different as night and day, but he has proven to be a good friend. He has even got me listening to "alternative" music.

Of course, Drew Latimer and Ben Summey have also proven to be good friends. They both managed to show me that life shouldn't be taken so seriously.

From the very first day I walked onto the campus, I have been fortunate enough to have two wonderful surrogate grandmothers. Mrs. Wells and Mrs. Johnson have been my favorite Blue Ladies and have both watched over my eating habits and have seen to it that I ate vegetables. They are the best that PC has to offer and I will miss them dearly.

Several of my best friends from PC have already graduated. I am thankful for the guidance that Stephanie Rains, Leigh Cummings, Dennis Caldwell, and Paula Warren gave me when I entered PC as a lowly freshman. I am especially grateful to LeJeanna Maddox, who has been my best friend and was my "right arm" last year.

In addition, I would like to thank this year's Blue Stocking Editorial Board. This was the absolute best newspaper staff I worked with in my four years here. Angie Richardson, Brian Sacco, Kim Rabon, Kim Gibson, Everett Catts, Gray Lesesne, and Tobin Turner made my work so much easier and for that I am grateful.

Finally, I would like to say a thank you to the entire PC community, ranging from the maintenance staff, who woke me up nearly every morning with their lawn mowers and leaf blowers; to Mrs. Grant, the infirm nurse who cared for me while I was sick; to Dr. Orr, Dr. Moncrief, and Dean Williamson, who proved to be more than just bureaucrats and administrators; to Public Safety, who managed to protect me and give me parking tickets; and to Ann Adams in Neville Hall, who invited me for dinner at her home on many occasions and even allowed me to use her washing machine.

This college community is indeed a family, and I will miss it greatly.

Sidewalk Talk

What are your plans for the summer?

"I'll be working at a Young Life camp called Pioneer Plunge in Windy Gap, North Carolina."

Lauren Jones
Junior

"I plan to go to England in May to interview for a job in which I would be sent to Singapore or Hong Kong for two years."

Hagan Thompson
Senior

"I plan to pursue my career in professional beach volleyball tournaments in Florida, California, and Arizona."

Joanna Frieling
Sophomore

photos by Reid Collins

THE BLUE STOCKING

Presbyterian College - Clinton, South Carolina 29325
Volume LXXXVIII Number 10, April 22, 1994

Editor-in-Chief	Jason West	Staff Writers	Dennie Lynn Hill
Managing Editor	Tobin Turner		Charles Smith
News Editor	Gray Lesesne		Dawn Banks
Sports Editor	Everett Catts		Kim Wood
Entertainment Editor	Kim Rabon		Kristina Pruitt
Features Editor	Brian Sacco		Katherine Bonier
Computer Design Editor	Todd Love		Karen O'Connor
Photography Editor	Kim Gibson		Margaret Ellen Pender
Layout Editor	Angela Richardson		Alison Nicole Barnard
Staff Artist	Michael Christensen		Photographers: Reid Collins, Brooke Peterson
Staff Advisor	Dr. Neal B. Prater

The Blue Stocking is a tri-weekly student publication of Presbyterian College. The paper serves as a forum of news and opinion of regional and national concern. For advertising, contact The Blue Stocking, Presbyterian College, Box 1061, Clinton, SC 29325. The Blue Stocking welcomes letters to the editor from all members of the PC community. Signatures are required. Letters are printed on a space available basis. The Blue Stocking reserves the right to edit all letters for proper grammar and punctuation. The final deadline for submitting letters is Friday at 12:00 pm on the week before publication.

Sheorn and Olson to spend summer trekking across the country

by Amanda Barnes
STAFF WRITER

In this modern world where many times self-gratification and personal gain are number one priorities, the people who take the initiative to serve others act as examples for us all.

Members of PC's Pi Kappa Phi fraternity, Beta Chapter, are doing just that by joining other Pi Kappa Phi chapters nationwide to participate in a program called PUSH America and the Journey of Hope '94' this summer.

Since PUSH America is the national philanthropy or service project of Pi Kappa Phi fraternity, each chapter raises money for the organization each year. The 145 chapters nationwide have raised almost three million dollars for PUSH America since its creation. This nationwide fundraising not only benefits the organization itself but also helps increase public awareness about the physically challenged.

This summer, Beta Chapter brothers Dean Sheorn and Dallas Olson are participating in PUSH America's Journey of Hope '94, a cross-country bicycle ride to raise money and public awareness for the organization. Each participating brother must raise $4000 dollars to qualify to be a rider and raise $3000 to qualify as a crew member.

Currently, Sheorn has raised $4600 through donations from family, friends, and other supporters and Olson has raised over $3000. The ride will last 62 days beginning in San Francisco, Calif. and finishing in Washington, D.C. The volunteers have a choice to take a northern or a southern route. Sheorn and Olson chose the northern route which will take them through Nevada, Utah, Colorado, Nebraska, Iowa, Illinois, Ohio, and finally Maryland, a trip totaling 3,530 miles.

Because Sheorn and Olson have spent many hours training, preparing, and raising funds for this event which shows their dedication and interest in helping others. When asked why they are giving up their summer for this project, both participants were quick to answer.

"It's the opportunity to do something to help people while doing something I enjoy. I think it is the ideal way to spend a summer," Sheorn remarked.

Olson replied, "I was looking for an internship for next summer which would provide experience in public relations and this opportunity arose. One of the keys to public relations is to work for a business or cause in which you believe, and PUSH America fits that requirement. I'm looking forward to helping spread awareness of needs for the disabled during the Journey of Hope."

PUSH America does not rely solely on student volunteers to raise funds, they have large corporate sponsors as well. These companies not only support PUSH monetarily, but many donate their products as well. Corporations such as Motorola, Pontiac, Saturn, 10-K, and Nationsbank help to make Dallas Olson and Dean Sheorn plan to "go the extra mile" this summer.

photo courtesy of Public Relations

these annual bike trips possible.

The money raised each year goes directly to PUSH America because most necessities like food and shelter have been donated by local civic clubs and organizations along the bike route. This is an added assurance to supporters concerning where the donation goes in the end.

The brothers riding on the journey this summer continue a tradition of Beta chapter's representation on the Journey of Hope program. Many are hopeful that Beta chapter can continue its involvement with this reputable cause.

"I love my fraternity and I think the philanthropy we support is very worthwhile," said Sheorn.

Seniors reflect on their final days at Presbyterian by Nhien Nguyen

STAFF WRITER

As the final days of the semester dwindle away, PC seniors find themselves remembering a few of the good old times and trying to create a memory or two more before the final diploma is handed out.

Todd Love admits he's enjoyed the PC experience, "from late nights studying at Waffle House to late nights out at the fraternity houses." Todd says he'll never forget the time he hopped on a train by McDonald's and ended up somewhere in Southern Kentucky. With a smile Todd adds that, if lucky, there "just might be enough time to do it again before I leave."

Senior Jason West states that his single most memorable event at PC is without a doubt the time he and two anonymous friends went on an Animal House style party raid through a girl's dorm. Jason admits, "I really doubt there will be a repeat performance anytime before I graduate."

Angie Richardson commented, "In my four years the funnest thing I remember doing is falling out of my seat during an 11:00 CEP on 'Methane Production due to the Flatulence of Bovines: An Impending Ozone Disaster.'" Upon further reflection Angie remembered she was only a junior but asked, "Has anyone seen three guys with a pair of panties?"

Some soon-to-be graduates offered advice for underclassmen, drawing on their wealth of wisdom acquired during the last four years. The advice varied from the "take it easy" attitude to the "take it seriously" one. Kevin Eby said, "Go out and experience as much as possible. Make the most of PC."

Another student, Kim Stancil, shared the same thought. She advised, "Get involved because it's a good way to meet students and faculty. Make time here worthwhile because it goes by really fast. Enjoy it while it lasts."

Benjamin Betsill had differing beliefs. He asked that students "not get caught up in the hassles of college life, and just enjoy the time they have here."

A few seniors had concrete plans for the immediate future, but many merely hoped a job would come along. They, like graduates everywhere, are aware of the difficulty of landing work after college.

Patrick Long said, "I plan to go to Highway Patrol School in August to be a state trooper."

Kim Stancil, on the other hand, expressed interest in furthering her education by "trying to get into medical school."

Several students were unsure about what they might do. Barron Grier stated, "I'm going to Colorado. I don't have a job."

Both Meredith Shealey and Sarah Knox wanted to work in education. Shealey said, "Hopefully, I will have a furniture job in the fall and eventually work on a master's degree."

Knox added, "I am moving to Atlanta with a couple of my sorority sisters and getting a teaching job in special education. I hope to marry and have a huge family someday."

The seniors, amidst many questions about their near future, were sure about at least one thing—their deep feelings for PC. Jay Rogers said, "I love it here. I wouldn't trade it for anything."

Dave Hyers agreed. "I will miss it a lot. It has been a time of growth and challenge. It's like a family here," he said.

A couple of seniors commented on how time does fly when you're having fun. Todd Love summed up his experience by stating, "I have really enjoyed my four years here at PC. The time does go by fast."

Valerie Schoenleber agreed. "Live your time at PC up to the fullest—time is short, make the most of it."

No one manages, however, to sum up the spirit of PC any better than Everett Catts when he asserts, "PC has been a tremendous, life-changing experience. From taping sweaty, swollen athletes' ankles to trying to get the sports pages laid out in a decent manner, I have learned so much and truly had the time of my life..."

"It's Here!"
nautica
Adair's
Men's Shop

On The Square • Clinton
833-0138

Letters to the Editor - Letters to the Editor - Letters to the Editor - Letters to the Editor - Letters to the Editor - Letters to the Editor - Letters to the Editor

Student says he would rather 'blow his nose' on the headlines of the Blue Stocking than read them

Dear Editor:

Upon reading the latest edition of the Blue Stocking, I had a thought that I never imagined myself having: What would it be like to attend another school?

With the loss of Laurens Hall, a home that I sometimes appreciate and enjoy more than my real one in Charlotte, I became extremely disappointed, but I knew that it wasn't the end of the world. However, now I'm told to "try and understand" that Smyth and Barron will also be changed. Andy Altizer was more than helpful in explaining the overpowering intake of female students for the coming year but this renaissance of dorm changes is nothing less than ludicrous.

Seriously doubt the "suits" in charge of dorm changes honestly did their homework in analyzing the situation. I'm sure that living in the infirmary is probably about as much fun as living in a hole in the ground but rearranging three whole buildings on a campus the size of PC is an overkill.

Now that I have a literal mess to sort out as far as where I'm going to live, I find that I'm going to have to enter a lottery to find out when to sign up for a room for next year. I don't recall anyone having a problem signing up last year under the old method. The saying goes, "If it ain't broke, don't fix it." It wasn't "broke" so why is it being fixed?

The Blue Stocking hints that the new changes in living quarters will solve practically everything but world hunger. Well folks allow me to be the first to tell you that it won't. Female residents are still going to live in the infirmary as well as Mayes Cottage and Doyle Hall's demolition has been postponed for another year. Until money for a new dorm building is coughed up the problems will remain.

Finally, the way the Blue Stocking treated one of PC's own students for the handling of the PaC SaC was perhaps one step up from a modern crucifixion. It shames me, my parents, and my peers to know that such harsh words and accusations can come from the mouths of her fellow students. I think we all need to collect ourselves and remember that it's only a book and it is going to get here eventually. Many colleges and universities don't even have a yearbook and I for one feel fortunate that Presbyterian College has the courtesy to furnish their students with one. Ms. Owings was a victim of circumstance pure and simple. When people get angry, by nature they look for somebody else to blame. In this case, the blame was excessive and uncalled for. Warren Sloan should shape up or ship out. The mere thought of openly asking to bring a fellow PC student up on ground of an honor code violation for something as minor as a mailing slip is appalling. That sort of "holier than thou" attitude has no place in such a close community. In the coming years is Ms. Owings going to remember all the great times that her college life gave her or is this black cloud going to make her wish she never came?

The Blue Stocking has damaged the student body today. If it was that hard-core journalism you guys were looking for, I'd say you're out of bounds. I can now safely say I'd rather blow my nose on the headlines rather than read them.

Sincerely,

John Grahame Long
Sophomore

*Editor's Note

The Blue Stocking has a policy that states all letters-to-the-editor must be published if they are signed. Unfortunately, John Grahame Long wrote a letter full of unsubstantiated accusations and signed his name to it and this newspaper must print it, despite the fact that it is nothing but a big pile of "manure."

Mr. Long, you mentioned in your letter that you were wondering what it would be like to "attend another school." We at the Blue Stocking encourage you to do this campus a favor and find out.

The Blue Stocking encourages all members of the PC community to express their opinions about matters concerning the campus and the world. If you have an opinion and would like to share it, you can send your letter by campus mail to PC Box 1061.

Letters to the editor must be signed and are subject to grammatical revisions. Letters must be turned into the newspaper office one week before publication. The next issue of the Blue Stocking will be published sometime in September of 1994.

Nixon launches investigation into PaC SaC controversy and questions the motives of Warren Sloan

Dear Editor:

As stated in the 1993-94 Presbyterian College Knapsack, the Honor Code reads:

A student, faculty member, or administrator who suspects a violation of either the Honor Code or Code of Conduct may choose one of two routes to address the situation. First, he or she may seek an explanation from the person suspected of the violation. If there is reason to believe a violation has occurred, the Judicial Council Chairperson or the appropriate administrative officer should be contacted. The Senior Vice President for Academic Affairs provides guidance in the initial stages of suspected violations involving academic matters. The Dean of Students provides similar guidance in all matters.

If the person who suspects the violation prefers not to confront the suspect, a second course of action is available. The Council Chairperson or the appropriate administrative officer may be contacted directly.

After reading the letter to the editor from Warren Sloan in the March 30 issue of the Blue Stocking and after reviewing the procedure described above for reporting a possible violation of the Honor Code, I wondered whether Warren Sloan had a concern for a possible honor code violation or a vendetta for the editor of the 1992-93 PaC SaC.

Regardless of Warren's motivation, I met with the outgoing and incoming Judicial Council Chairs to discuss an investigation which would be conducted to determine if there was sufficient evidence to make an Honor Code charge against the 1992-93 PaC SaC editor.

I asked the new Judicial Council Chairperson to appoint a prosecutor to conduct a preliminary investigation. If there is sufficient evidence to support a charge, the prosecutor, with the assistance of the Dean of Students or the Senior Vice President for Academic Affairs, will prepare a statement of the charges. A prosecutor has been assigned and the potential evidence and possible witnesses have been discussed.

I personally talked with Dr. Ramesy, Dr. Thompson, the 1993-94 PaC SaC Editor, Lenoir Constantino of Newsfoto Yearbooks, Lauren Owings, Grant Vosburg, Dr. Orr, and a Federal Express representative. No one has been able to tell me that they think there is sufficient evidence for an Honor Code violation charge to be made.

There is ample evidence of negligence, mismanagement, and procrastination.

Lauren takes full responsibility for the fact that the production of the 1992-93 PaC SaC was not handled in a professional way, but contends that she has not lied in a way which could be interpreted as an Honor Code violation. Since evidence for a formal charge is lacking, the procedure described on page 24 of the Knapsack will be followed.

Sincerely,

Joseph O. Nixon
Dean of Students

Margaret Williamson clears up rumors regarding male to female ratio for incoming freshman class

Dear Editor:

As the year ends, my colleagues and I in the Admissions Office thank the many, many members of the PC community who assisted us throughout this academic session. From students, faculty, the physical plant staff, to the cafeteria folks and administrative staff we have asked and received a tremendous amount of support. This group effort has paid off by another successful recruiting year.

I would like to clarify some misunderstandings about the class of 1999 and the projected male/female ratio for the coming fall. Nationally, more women than men have been going to college over the last several years. Institutions around the country have seen a shift from having predominately male student bodies to having more women. PC is just now reflecting this trend in our student body and entering freshman classes. However, contrary to popular rumor, PC is not going to have 70 percent women in the student body next year. Predictions are that we may go to 53-55 percent women and level off for the coming years.

In order to maintain the quality of the student body, we have not changed admission standards to offset gender trends in higher education. Admissions is not a science. It is very difficult to predict decisions of seniors in high school. We are sorry for the confusion caused by the projected number and gender breakdowns of this fall's entering class. However, we would prefer this problem over the alternative which many other institutions are facing, i.e. declining student bodies and closing of dorms for lack of students to occupy them.

Again, our heartfelt thanks to all who have been so supportive of our efforts these last months. Best wishes for an enjoyable summer.

Sincerely,

Margaret Williamson
Dean of Admissions and Vice President of Enrollment

Pollock provides power for the Blue Hose baseball team

by Everett Catts
SPORTS EDITOR

The PC baseball team is now 25-21 and finished seventh in the conference with an 8-13 league record. The Blue Hose have been led by junior Elton Pollock, who is batting .374 with 10 homers, 38 RBI's and 56 runs scored through April 17.

Back on March 30 PC edged Quincy 4-3 as Ryan Kane returned to the Blue Hose lineup after almost two months of being out with a broken arm. Kane had the game-winning RBI when he drove in Pollock with a sacrifice fly. Donovan Harrison took the win after pitching a complete game with 9 strikeouts, 5 hits and 5 walks.

On the following day, PC increased its win streak to six games, beating Quincy 5-4 after coming back from a 4-1 deficit. Matt Tebbets got the win in relief, allowing one hit and one earned run in two innings. Glen Bergeron pitched a perfect ninth for his third save.

On April 1 and 2 the Blue Hose lost

three straight to Gardner-Webb, 8-5, 7-6 (8) and 6-2. In game two PC was led by Pollock's 3 for 4 performance with two homers. In game 3 the Blue Hose were led by Paul Bushway, who went 2 for 3 with two doubles. In the same game, Pollock broke the school record for triples in a season (6) and career (9).

On April 5 the losing streak continued when PC was shut out by Anderson 10-0 (7inn.). David Smoak was the only Blue Hose hitter with two hits.

The losing streak ended when the Blue Hose beat 14th-ranked USC-Aiken 9-6 as PC took a 6-0 lead after four innings. But Aiken tied the score in the sixth with six runs of their own. PC battled back, taking the lead in the seventh on Adam Cantrell's two-out single that drove in two runs. Bergeron got his fourth win of the season in relief after pitching four shutout innings.

On the following day PC beat Newberry 4-1 as Donovan Harrison pitched a three-hitter in nine innings, with 12 K's. It was probably the best outing by a Blue Hose pitcher all year.

The short winning streak was stopped

when Elon swept PC in three games on April 9 and 10 (3-1, 1-0, 12-9). In game three PC trailed throughout the game. Pollock's solo shot in the fourth inning gave him the career record for homers, with 19.

On April 12 that losing streak was snapped when PC got revenge on Anderson, winning 8-6 after leading 8-0. Pollock was 3 for 4 with a triple, three runs, two RBI's and two stolen bases.

Kovash commented on Pollock's play, saying, "I think he's been outstanding in generating excitement and run production. He's done a great job at the leadoff spot. His moving (from outfield) to second base has added a fourth offensive threat with Albert Mitchell (batting .351) and defensive stability with Elon at second." Both players have been selected on the All-Conference teams, Mitchell on the second team, and Pollock on the first team.

Two days later, though, the Blue Hose lost to 4th-ranked Armstrong State 15-7.

PC rebounded with a 17-2 thrashing of Erskine on the following day, as Bushway's five RBI's gave him the career record for RBI's. Anthony Losey pitched five innings of shutout ball for the win, and Marty Russell took the save. Bushway was named to the All-SAC second team for his performance.

On April 16 the Blue Hose lost to Carson-Newman 16-6. On the following day PC swept a doubleheader, winning 6-5 and 7-6. Erik Andress was 6 for 8 in the three games, with two homers, two doubles and a whopping ten RBI's. Also, Kane went 7 for 12 with a homer, four doubles, three RBI's and five runs.

By winning two of three from the Eagles, PC set a new school record for wins and finished seventh in the conference to set up a rematch with Elon in Tuesday's SAC-8 playoff game, which the Blue Hose won against the Fighting Christians last year. But PC lost to Elon 10-3, thus ending their season.

Kovash commented on the team's inconsistency, saying, "We've been up and down in all four areas (batting, fielding, pitching and baserunning). When you have an inexperienced squad, you play around .500 ball."

Womens tennis team hopes to reclaim championship title

Dana Davis follows through on a forehand in a recent home match.
photo by Reid Collins

by Margaret Ellen Pender
STAFF WRITER

While unity is a crucial agreement for the success that the Lady Blue tennis team has enjoyed, talent is quite obviously the raw material, and in that category PC is certainly not lacking. Currently the Lady Blue Hose are ranked 4th in the East Region.

Leading the way for the 1993-94 squad is a trio of experienced seniors (Dina Padgett, Stephanie Hunt, and Jennifer Miller) who are appropriately serving as the captains for this season. Sophomores Jennifer Brim, Stacie Buttorff, Jessica Clark, and Liz Whitfield have also provided a powerful punch for the Lady Blue. As freshmen Dawn Dachelet, Chrissie Bolt, and Dana Davis.

Heading into the Conference Tournament, the Lady Blue Hose are aiming to reclaim the championship title which they had won from 1990-92 but were denied in 1993. If the 10 members of this team continue to support each other and perform as they have been, it would be a good idea to make room for another trophy in the case in Templeton.

Men's tennis team seeks to improve

by Everett Catts
SPORTS EDITOR

The men's tennis team is now 9-8 and 4-3 in the SAC-8, and, after years of excellence, seeks to improve its overall play and break over .500.

On April 5 the Blue Hose beat Newberry 4-3 in a close non-conference match.

Four days later PC lost to Wingate 4-3 in another tough match.

After edging Catawba 4-3 on Monday, the Blue Hose will play in the conference tournament at Carson-Newman today through Sunday.

DRUNK DRIVING DOESN'T JUST KILL DRIVERS.

Alonzo Drake, killed 3-17-91 at 10:54pm on Robbins Rd., Haverst, AL.

Next time your friend insists on driving drunk, do whatever it takes to stop him. Because if he kills innocent people, how will you live with yourself?

FRIENDS DON'T LET FRIENDS DRIVE DRUNK.

The Beverage Place

Sports View

by Everett Catts
SPORTS EDITOR

On the women's tennis team there is more than one leader. While Jennifer Miller may be one of the best leaders on and off the court, two others come to mind.

Dina Padgett, PC's number one singles player, has fought through injuries and won. Padgett was 20-7 in her freshman year, 23-8 as a sophomore, 12-8 as a junior and now 11-10 as a senior captain. Total, Padgett has a four-year record of 66-45 and is a two-time All-SAC selection at singles and three times at doubles.

Stephanie Hunt, PC's number two singles player, is a co-captain and two-time All-Conference selection at doubles. In singles Hunt was 22-7 as a freshman, 19-12 as a sophomore, 11-8 as a junior and 12-9 this year. At doubles she was 18-2 as a freshman and 12-2 as a sophomore.

Appropriately, both players have been best friends and roommates since their respective freshmen years. The pair is also similar in each of their families.

Major League Baseball's mistake

With the new playoff system in Major League Baseball, baseball has lost its excitement. Under the new system, there are three divisions in each league. In each league the three division champions, plus one wild card pick, make the playoffs.

That change, plus realignment, have hurt baseball. Gone now are the pennant races like last year's battle between the Giants and the Braves or 1991's race for first place between the Dodgers and the Braves. Also, the 1978 battle between the Red Sox and Yankees comes to mind.

With the new system, these pennant races are now history. Say goodbye to baseball of old.

Miller displays leadership on and off the court

by Everett Catts
SPORTS EDITOR

On the team picture of the women's tennis team's media guide, Jennifer Miller is in the middle of the seniors on the top row. That position is symbolic because Miller stands out as a leader on the team to everyone, including the other seniors.

Miller, who epitomizes putting academics in front of athletics, has displayed leadership off the court for the past four years. She carried a 3.4 GPA into this semester and is a four-time Dean's List student. Miller, also a three-time South Atlantic Conference Honor Roll selection, has won three other awards for her academic excellence.

During the 1992-93 school year Miller was named an Intercollegiate Tennis Association Scholar Athlete and an NAIA Academic All-American. Also, Miller won the Jane Hammet Academic Award, which goes to the upperclass female student-athlete at PC with the highest GPA.

Teammate and senior captain Dina Padgett says, "Off the court she's a leader in keeping a high grade point average."

Senior co-captain Stephanie Hunt adds, "She encourages everyone to do their best, and she's a good role model."

Coach Donna Arnold says, "For her to play tennis for four years and do that well in the classroom is exceptional. She's all

Jennifer Miller

photo courtesy of Coach Arnold

business."

On the court is where Miller has used that business-like attitude to excel just as much as off. In 1991 as a freshman, Miller was 13-5 in singles and posted a 4-1 record in doubles. In her sophomore year she was 12-5 in singles and did not compete in doubles. In her first two years Miller was a member of two conference and district championship teams that advanced to the nationals. But it was Miller's junior year when her play really improved.

As a junior Miller went 15-5 at the number four singles slot, where she finished as runner-up in the SAC-8 Tournament. Miller was also a co-captain on the squad. The Jacksonville, FLA native also enjoyed a 7-5 record in doubles.

The success in Miller's junior year has carried over to this year, in which she is undefeated at 21-0 in the #6 singles slot after the regular season. For the second straight year, Miller is a co-captain.

In all four years Miller has an amazing career record of 61-15, good for an .803 winning percentage.

Many of Miller's peers have incredible support for and confidence in her.

"On the court she sets a good example to the younger players. When she steps on the court she does anything to win," says Coach Arnold.

Padgett agrees: "When she goes on the court we know we've got a chance to win at number six."

Hunt shares Padgett's feelings about Miller.

"On the court it helps because it's pretty much a sure win at number six, which helps us keep any tough match close, and we always have a chance to win," says Hunt.

Miller, who is majoring in accounting and business administration, will receive her degree next month at graduation. Following graduation she plans to attend graduate school this fall and seek a Master's in accounting.

"I wanted to do better because I didn't play that much my first two years. So, I've worked hard over the past two seasons to improve," said Miller.

Golf team places in FMU Invitational

by Everett Catts
SPORTS EDITOR

The PC golf team closed out its regular season with a sixth-place finish in the 14-team Francis Marion University Spring Invitational on April 11 and 12. Penn Powell led the Blue Hose after tying for eleventh with scores of 80 and 72, totaling 152. Following Powell was Jim Kent, who tied for sixteenth with two 77's and a total score of 154. Rounding out PC's top three was Gabe Southards, who was also sixteenth and shot a 154 (76-78).

Francis Marion won the tourney, and Catawba was the only SAC-8 team to finish ahead of PC.

"I was disappointed in the team's first round performance, but we played awfully well in the second round to compensate," Coach Tommy Addison said.

The match was PC's last of the regular season. The Blue Hose will compete in the South Atlantic Conference Tournament on April 24-26, beginning Sunday.

Men's track leaps above competition

by Everett Catts
SPORTS EDITOR

The PC track team has had great success so far this season, as they have finished first in three of their first four meets.

On March 26 the Blue Hose finished second in the Francis Marion Invitational with 128.5 points. High Point won the meet with 151.5 points. It was the first time in eleven years that PC finished higher than Francis Marion (third) at their invitational, which began in 1983. The meet also marked PC's highest point total in ten years.

On April 5 the Blue Hose crushed Morris College (121-19) in a dual meet in which PC won all seventeen events. The Blue Hose were led by Matt Glenn, Patrick Prioleau, Randy Sullivan and Chris Thorpe, who won three events each. Glenn won the 440 and 880 yard runs and as a member of the mile relay team.

Sullivan won the long jump and triple jump, and Thorpe won the 100 and 220 yard dashes. Prioleau was tops in the 110 and 440 yard hurdles.

On April 7 PC again dominated Morris (122-15) in another home meet. Prioleau again led the Blue Hose to victory.

Prioleau won three more events and took second in another. He won the 110 and 440 yard hurdles, and as a member of the 4x100 relay team. Prioleau took second in the long jump.

PC won sixteen of the seventeen events. Coach Mike Owens commented on the meets, saying, "Morris doesn't have the depth we have. It was good competition and good warm up for going into the Carolinas Championship. It was also more of a testing meet and gave a lot of people a chance to participate and score."

Pollock provides power for the Blue Hose baseball team

by Everett Catts
SPORTS EDITOR

The PC baseball team is now 25-21 and finished seventh in the conference with an 8-13 league record. The Blue Hose have been led by junior Elton Pollock, who was batting .374 with 10 homers, 38 RBI's and 56 runs scored through April 17.

Back on March 30 PC edged Quincy 4-3 as Ryan Kane returned to the Blue Hose lineup after almost two months of being out with a broken arm. Kane had the game-winning RBI when he drove in Pollock with a sacrifice fly. Donovan Harrison took the win after pitching a complete game with 9 strikeouts, 5 hits and 5 walks.

On the following day, PC increased its win streak to six games, beating Quincy 5-4 after coming back from a 4-1 deficit. Matt Tebbetts got the win in relief, allowing one hit and one earned run in two innings. Glen Bergeron pitched a perfect ninth for his third save.

On April 1 and 2 the Blue Hose lost

three straight to Gardner-Webb, 8-5, 7-6 (8) and 6-2. In game two PC was led by Pollock's 3 for 4 performance with two homers. In game 3 the Blue Hose were led by Paul Bushway, who went 2 for 3 with two doubles. In the same game, Pollock broke the school records for triples in a season (6) and career (9).

On April 5 the losing streak continued when PC was shut out by Anderson 10-0 (7inn.). David Smoak was the only Blue Hose hitter with two hits.

The losing streak ended when the Blue Hose beat 14th-ranked USC-Aiken 9-6 as PC took a 6-0 lead after four innings. But Aiken tied the score in the sixth with six runs of their own. PC battled back, taking the lead in the seventh on Adam Cantrell's two-out single that drove in two runs. Bergeron got his fourth win of the season in relief after pitching four shutout innings.

On the following day PC beat Newberry 4-1 as Donovan Harrison pitched a three-hitter in nine innings, with 12 K's. It was probably the best outing by a Blue Hose pitcher all year.

The short winning streak was stopped

when Elon swept PC in three games on April 9 and 10 (3-1, 1-0, 12-9). In game three PC trailed throughout the game. Pollock's solo shot in the fourth inning gave him the career record for homers, with 19.

On April 12 that losing streak was snapped when PC got revenge on Anderson, winning 8-6 after leading 8-0. Pollock was 3 for 4 with a triple, three runs, two RBI's and two stolen bases.

Kovash commented on Pollock's play, saying, "I think he's been outstanding in generating excitement and run production. He's done a great job at the leadoff spot. His moving (from outfield) to second base has added a fourth offensive threat with Albert Mitchell (batting .351) and defensive stability with Elton at second." Both players have been selected on the All-Conference teams, Mitchell on the second team, and Pollock on the first team.

Two days later, though, the Blue Hose lost to 4th-ranked Armstrong State 15-7. PC rebounded with a 17-2 thrashing of Erskine on the following day, as Bushway's five RBI's gave him the career record for RBI's. Anthony Losey pitched five innings of shutout ball for the win, and Marty Russell took the save. Bushway was named to the All-SAC second team for his performance.

On April 16 the Blue Hose lost to Carson-Newman 16-6. On the following day PC swept a doubleheader, winning 6-5 and 7-6. Erik Andress was 6 for 8 in the three games, with two homers, two doubles and a whopping ten RBI's. Also, Kane went 7 for 12 with a homer, four doubles, three RBI's and five runs.

By winning two of three from the Eagles, PC set a new school record for wins and finished seventh in the conference to set up a rematch with Elon in Tuesday's SAC-8 playoff game, which the Blue Hose won against the Fighting Christians last year. But PC lost to Elon 10-3, thus ending their season.

Kovash commented on the team's inconsistency, saying, "We've been up and down in all four areas (batting, fielding, pitching and baserunning). When you have an inexperienced squad, you play around .500 ball."

Dana Davis follows through on a forehand in a recent home match.

photo by Reid Collins

by Margaret Ellen Pender
STAFF WRITER

While unity is a crucial agreement for the success that the Lady Hose tennis team has enjoyed, talent is quite obviously the raw material, and in that category PC is certainly not lacking. Currently the Lady Blue Hose are ranked 4th in the East Region.

Leading the way for the 1993-94 squad is a trio of experienced seniors (Dina Padgett, Stephanie Hunt, and Jennifer Miller) who are appropriately serving as the captains for this season. Sophomores Jennifer Brim, Stacie Buttorff, Jessica Clark, and Liz Whitfield have also provided a powerful punch for the Lady Hose as freshmen Dawn Dachelet, Chrissie Bolt, and Dana Davis.

On Sunday, April 17, the Lady Blue Hose closed out the regular season by crushing SAC foe Catawba (9-0) and propelling their record to 14-7 thus claiming the second seed for the SAC tournament, which will be played at Wingate beginning on April 22. Throughout the season, the Hose have benefited from the consistent performance of the top singles players (Padgett 21st in the East, and Hunt 40th in the East) as well as from the remainder of the ladder. This depth which is demonstrated by the outstanding 21-0 record of #6 singles Jennifer Miller and by the impressive 20-1 record of #5 Jennifer Brim has been essential for the success of the Lady Hose as well.

Indoubles play, the #1 team of Padgett and Hunt (22nd in the East), the #2 team of Dachelet and Davis (24th in the East), and the #3 team of Bolt and Brim who are also undefeated have overpowered opponents and often provided the margin needed for a Blue Hose victory.

Heading into the Conference Tournament, the Lady Blue Hose are aiming to reclaim the championship title which they had won from 1990-92 but were denied in 1993. If the 10 members of this team continue to support each other and perform as they have been, it would be a good idea to make room for another trophy in the case in Templeton.

Men's tennis team seeks to improve

by Everett Catts
SPORTS EDITOR

The men's tennis team is now 9-8 and 4-3 in the SAC-8, and, after years of excellence, seeks to improve its overall play and break over .500.

On April 5 the Blue Hose beat Newberry 4-3 in a close non-conference match.

Four days later PC lost to Wingate 4-3 in another tough match.

After edging Catawba 4-3 on Monday, the Blue Hose will play in the conference tournament at Carson-Newman today through Sunday.

DRUNK DRIVING DOESN'T JUST KILL DRUNK DRIVERS.

Alcohol Abuse Killed 31,912 in 1993
10:53pm on Robbins Rd., Harvest, AL

Next time your friend insists on driving drunk, do whatever it takes to stop him. Because if he kills innocent people, how will you live with yourself?

FRIENDS DON'T LET FRIENDS DRIVE DRUNK.

The Beverage Place

"Cold Beer" ...
"Warm Service"
Richie Simmons Manager
928 E. Carolina Ave.
Clinton, SC 29325
(803) 833-1207
AG • Sports Bar
(803) 831-1535

Sports View

by Everett Catts
SPORTS EDITOR

On the women's tennis team there is more than one leader. While Jennifer Miller may be one of the best leaders on and off the court, two others come to mind.

Dina Padgett, PC's number one singles player, has fought through injuries and won. Padgett was 20-7 in her freshman year, 23-8 as a sophomore, 12-8 as a junior and now 11-10 as a senior captain. Total, Padgett has a four-year record of 66-45 and is a two-time All-SAC selection at singles and three times at doubles.

Stephanie Hunt, PC's number two singles player, is a co-captain and two-time All-Conference selection at doubles. In singles Hunt was 22-7 as a freshman, 19-12 as a sophomore, 11-8 as a junior and 12-9 this year. At doubles she was 18-2 as a freshman and 12-2 as a sophomore.

Appropriately, both players have been best friends and roommates since their respective freshmen years. The pair is also similar in each of their families.

Major League Baseball's mistake

With the new playoff system in Major League Baseball, baseball has lost its excitement. Under the new system, there are three divisions in each league. In each league the three division champions, plus one wild card pick, make the playoffs.

That change, plus realignment, have hurt baseball. Gone now are the pennant races like last year's battle between the Giants and the Braves or 1991's race for first place between the Dodgers and the Braves. Also, the 1978 battle between the Red Sox and Yankees comes to mind. With the new system, these pennant races are now history. Say goodbye to baseball of old.

Miller displays leadership on and off the court

by Everett Catts
SPORTS EDITOR

On the team picture of the women's tennis team's media guide, Jennifer Miller is in the middle of the seniors on the top row. That position is symbolic because Miller stands out as a leader on the team to everyone, including the other seniors.

Miller, who epitomizes putting academics in front of athletics, has displayed leadership off the court for the past four years. She carried a 3.4 GPA into this semester and is a four-time Dean's List student. Miller, also a three-time South Atlantic Conference Honor Roll selection, has won three other awards for her academic excellence.

During the 1992-93 school year Miller was named an Intercollegiate Tennis Association Scholar Athlete and an NAIA Academic All-American. Also, Miller won the Jane Hummel Academic Award, which goes to the upperclass female student-athlete at PC with the highest GPA.

Teammate and senior captain Dina Padgett says, "Off the court she's a leader in keeping a high grade point average."

Senior co-captain Stephanie Hunt adds, "She encourages everyone to do their best, and she's a good role model."

Coach Donna Arnold says, "For her to play tennis for four years and do that well in the classroom is exceptional. She's all

Jennifer Miller

photo courtesy of Coach Arnold

business."

On the court is where Miller has used that business-like attitude to excel just as much as off. In 1991 as a freshman, Miller was 13-5 in singles and posted a 4-1 record in doubles. In her sophomore year she was 12-5 in singles and did not compete in doubles. In her first two years Miller was a member of two conference and district championship teams that advanced to the nationals. But it was Miller's junior year when her play really improved.

As a junior Miller went 15-5 at the number four singles slot, where she finished as runner-up in the SAC-8 Tournament. Miller was also a co-captain on the squad. The Jacksonville, FLA native also enjoyed a 7-5 record in doubles.

The success in Miller's junior year has carried over to this year, in which she is undefeated at 21-0 in the #6 singles slot after the regular season. For the second straight year, Miller is a co-captain.

In all four years Miller has an amazing career record of 61-15, good for an .803 winning percentage.

Many of Miller's peers have incredible support for and confidence in her.

"On the court she sets a good example to the younger players. When she steps on the court she does anything to win," says Coach Arnold.

Padgett agrees: "When she goes on the court we know we've got a chance to win at number six."

Hunt shares Padgett's feelings about Miller.

"On the court it helps because it's pretty much a sure win at number six, which helps us keep any tough match close, and we always have a chance to win," says Hunt.

Miller, who is majoring in accounting and business administration, will receive her degree next month at graduation. Following graduation she plans to attend graduate school this fall and seek a Master's in accounting.

"I wanted to do better because I didn't play that much my first two years. So, I've worked hard over the past two seasons to improve," said Miller.

Golf team places in FMU Invitational

by Everett Catts
SPORTS EDITOR

The PC golf team closed out its regular season with a sixth-place finish in the 14-team Francis Marion University Spring Invitational on April 11 and 12. Perrin Powell led the Blue Hose after trying for eleventh with scores of 80 and 72, totaling 152. Following Powell was Jim Kent, who tied for sixteenth with two 77's and a total score of 154. Rounding out PC's top three was Gabe Southards, who was also sixteenth and shot a 154 (76-78).

Francis Marion won the tourney, and Catawba was the only SAC-8 team to finish ahead of PC.

"I was disappointed in the team's first round performance, but we played awfully well in the second round to compensate," Coach Tommy Addison said.

The match was PC's last of the regular season. The Blue Hose will compete in the South Atlantic Conference Tournament on April 24-26, beginning Sunday.

Men's track leaps above competition

by Everett Catts
SPORTS EDITOR

The PC track team has had great success so far this season, as they have finished first in three of their first four meets.

On March 26 the Blue Hose finished second in the Francis Marion Invitational with 128.5 points. High Point won the meet with 151.5 points. It was the first time in eleven years that PC finished higher than Francis Marion (third) at their invitational, which began in 1983. The meet also marked PC's highest point total in ten years.

On April 5 the Blue Hose crushed Morris College (121-19) in a dual meet in which PC won all seventeen events. The Blue Hose were led by Matt Glenn, Patrick Prioleau, Randy Sullivan and Chris Thorpe, who won three events each. Glenn won the 440 and 880 yard runs and as a member of the mile relay team.

Sullivan won the long jump and triple jump, and Thorpe won the 100 and 220 yard dashes. Prioleau was tops in the 110 and 440 yard hurdles.

On April 7 PC again dominated Morris (122-15) in another home meet. Prioleau again led the Blue Hose to victory.

Prioleau won three more events and took second in another. He won the 110 and 440 yard hurdles, and as a member of the 4x100 relay team. Prioleau took second in the long jump.

PC won sixteen of the seventeen events. Coach Mike Owens commented on the meets, saying, "Morris doesn't have the depth we have. It was good competition and good warm up for going into the Carolinas Championship. It was also more of a testing meet and gave a lot of people a chance to participate and score."

Paint ball panache

by Chip Hill
GUEST WRITER

The Scottish Highlander Battalion has been very active this semester. On Saturday April 16, the ROTC department deployed on an air mobile paint ball mission. Members of the military science classes and members of the battalion from Lander and Newberry boarded helicopters and flew to the mission site early Saturday morning. Armed and dangerous and fully camouflaged the paint ball warriors entered their battlefield. Third year military science cadets, who will be attending the ROTC advanced camp in Fort Bragg this summer, exercised their leadership by assembling, moving, and securing their troops on tactical operations. As paint flew and adrenaline rushed the soldiers learned basic movement techniques, and technical operation procedures.

PC sophomore Marvin Atchinson said, "I really enjoyed it, I learned a lot, I think we should do more." Junior Cadet Captain Mark Albertus who will attend Advanced camp this summer said, "I think the paint ball went very well. The cadets learned a lot, but I think the air mobile portion of the operation was outstanding."

The Scottish Highlander Battalion is definitely on an upswing and is looking forward to more field training exercises in the fall. Other activities the ROTC department has participated in this semester include: land navigation at Fort Jackson, M-16 qualification at Fort Jackson, and exercises with several South Carolina schools also at Fort Jackson.

Inklings

PC's own coffee house, now open in the basement of Georgia Dorm. Coffee, poetry, and music!
For more info call Erin Salyer at 8841.

Columnist 'really, really, really, hates Morrissy'

by Jason Bundrick
GUEST WRITER

I'm back again! I've got a few more album reviews to try to help you find the best (and worst) of the new releases. Here we go...

The Crow

This is the movie in which Brandon Lee died while making. It was a great tragedy, but because of his death, some great bands gave songs to the soundtrack. Some of these include The Cure, Machines of Loving Grace, Nine Inch Nails, Rage Against the Machine, Violent Femmes, Stone Temple Pilots, Rollins Band, Helmet, Pantera, The Jesus and Mary Chain, For Love Not Lisa, My Life With the Thrill Kill Kult, Medicine, and Jane Siberry.

I would recommend this album, even some of the songs aren't that great. B+

Morrissy- Vauxhall and I

I really, really, really, really, really, really, really, really, really, really, really hate this album. I don't like Morrissy either. I really didn't like the Smiths either. F!!!

Green Day- Dookie

This band is being marketed as a punk band, but they have too much talent to a punk. But hey, nobody is perfect! This band shows a lot of potential, especially for a band nobody had heard of a few months ago. Go get this album, it is a must if you like "Longview". (You may even want to get their first two albums as well.) A

Pink Floyd- The Division Bell

This album is really good. It sounds like a good mix of "Momentary Lapse of Reason" and older Floyd like "Animals" or "Darkside of the Moon". I can't wait to see it live. A

These are some bands you've probably never heard of, but should....

The Darling Buds- The lead singer has a great voice and it is really good driving music.

311- They are a better, more talented Urban Dance Squad. Go get them!

PROTECT YOURSELF AND YOUR BABY
FROM AIDS

FIND OUT ABOUT DRUGS, SEX
AND AIDS
CALL 1-800-322-AIDS

Celebrate the Spring Savings !

PC Campus Store

Inventory Reduction Sale

20 % discount on most sweatshirts and t-shirts

plus 2 display racks of merchandise at 1/2 price

Come on down for good selection

Sale continues through May 7

Take a gander at the newly expanded campus store
Stop by and visit our new convenience station

We're here to serve you!

Off campus students asked to 'respect' community

by Katherine A. Bonner
STAFF WRITER

Some off-campus PC students were appalled upon receiving notice of a mandatory meeting held last week with local law enforcement and PC officials in order to discuss various city and county ordinances, many which pertain to alcohol policies and their enforcement.

Early last week, off-campus students were summoned to the meeting by a note from Dean Nixon explaining the college's goal of making students aware of city ordinances that the students must follow as citizens living in the community.

Parents of off-campus students received a copy of the letter, as well as a copy of a petition drawn up by several citizens who complained of noise, litter, and other problems that they had during the summer with student residents. Writers of the petition specifically complained about problems at the Rod Holmes Apartments on the 5th Avenue extension.

"I was a little upset. I felt like an isolated incident was blown out of proportion," said Lee Maynard, a senior. After the meeting, Maynard had positive words for city officials. "They were very nice... although I already knew about many of the ordinances."

Another senior, Karen Ivey, agreed, "I felt like it was unfair that the Dean sent our parents that letter. I am 21 and I should've seen a copy of the petition, too, so I kind of went in the meeting with a chip on my shoulder. Once I got there, though, I felt like it was very relaxed... I was almost glad to hear what they had to say."

Campus and local officials present at the meetings included: Dean Joe Nixon, Public Safety Chief Grey Mayson, Clinton Mayor Myra Nichols, Clinton City Manager Steve Harrell, Clinton Police Chief Carroll Barker, and Laurens County Sheriff Jim Moore. Meetings were held on September 6, 7, and 8 and off-campus students were required to attend one of those meetings.

At the September 7 meeting, Nixon opened by explaining that local and campus officials decided to hold the meetings following some complaints, including the petition, which came in over the summer; however, he said, "This is not an idea that is original with us." He noted that other colleges, such as Davidson hold a "Town Forum" type of meeting for off-campus residents in order to make them aware of the laws that they must follow.

City Manager Steve Harrell supplied each student with a packet containing copies of various city ordinances including information on noise, property maintenance, and parking.

"I don't want you to not have parties... All we're really asking is that if you live out in the community, recognize that other people live out in the community, too," said Harrell.

After informing students of their expectations, other officials made similar comments.

"Every college town has its problems," said Barker. He encouraged off campus students to be more careful. "Our main concern," he said, "is to protect and serve in any way that we can."

Sheriff Moore agreed. He explained, "If we could stop getting the complaints, you would see us patrolling very rarely."

Comments were also made about recent problems at Fraternity Court. Public Safety Chief Mayson stated, "We don't care how long you party; you can party all night. We just ask that you respect the rights of other people."

Following the meeting, students were invited to speak with officials one-on-one and ask questions. Copies of The Knapsack were also made available.

While many viewed the meeting as positive, some students complained, like Ivey, of not receiving a copy of the petition, and others, like Jeanie Kim thought there was too much finger pointing.

"Some of it was informative," she stated, "but I thought that naming specific apartments in the meeting was too much of a reprimand and was inappropriate."

Officials encouraged students to open the lines of communication with members of the community and law enforcement community, and in the words of Dean Nixon, be "better neighbors."

Charleston Southern's D'Angelo Dereef feels the sting of the Blue Hose defense as he is thrown for a loss in Saturday's home opener.

photo by Steve Owens

For more about Sports, see page 7.

Minority development a 'priority' for administration

by David L. Edwards, II
STAFF WRITER

Presbyterian College underwent a great change when a student named Barbara Green stepped onto the campus for the first time in 1969. She was much like her fellow students - with one special difference: Green was an African-American, and therefore the first minority student at the college. Since that time, PC has made the recruitment and retention of such students a priority.

This policy is most clearly shown in the long range plans of the school. These plans state that "the quality of minority student life needs to be addressed." In short, more minority students are needed on campus.

This need is being fulfilled by the intense recruitment of minorities and efforts to keep those students at PC once they arrive here.

In keeping with this vision, admissions standards and policies have been made fully egalitarian and recruitment efforts increased. However, as Margaret Williamson Dean of Admissions and Vice President for Enrollment said "Recruiting and retention are hand in hand." Therefore, most of PC's programs are a synthesis of these two ideas.

This synthesis is most clearly evident in the school's Office of Minority Affairs. This portion of the college provides necessary special attention to minorities in recruitment and in improving their student life. Since the arrival of the current director, Fachon Glover, a progress has been made toward a more diversified campus. Key to this advancement has been the creation of organizations like the Minority Student Union and the Minority Advisory Council.

Having replaced a catch-all organization called Pamoja (a word meaning "togetherness" in Swahili) in 1986, the Minority Student Union's primary goal is to build unity among minority students, or "students of color" as Ms. Glover terms them. In working toward this goal, the MSU plans events for students (including monthly parties, Black History Month programs, observance of Martin Luther King's birthday, etc.), participates in various areas of community service, and helps recruit minority students for the college. In addition, the union has established the Charlotte Hopkins Brown Cultural Center, where students meet, study, and relax. The building also serves to house MSU and Minority Affairs events.

The Minority Advisory Council, established in 1990, consists of minority students, educators as well as the officers of the MSU. This group forms a community basis for the support of minorities. It also aids in recruitment.

Also, the Student Affairs Council has initiated a standing committee for minority affairs. Consisting of faculty and students, the Minority Concerns Committee monitors race

see Minorities page 3

ON THE INSIDE

Page 3 ...

Nixon amends alcohol policy
at Fraternity Court

Page 5 ...

Blue Lady of the Month—
Mrs. Beaty

Page 7 ...

Does PC have a lack of athletic facilities?

COMMENTARY

A few days ago a first-year student was overheard complaining that it is difficult to fit in at PC. The student stated that the school is cliquish and lacking in diversity. Perhaps the student may have skimmed the truth with such a statement, but what the student failed to realize is that in the end only one person can be held accountable for happiness and success on this campus—that is, of course, one's self.

It is easy to understand how a student of any class, especially a freshman, could become distressed as the summer-camp atmosphere of FOB dwindles away with the coming of the first week of tests. The carefree, everybody's-happy feeling slowly gives rise to the awareness that there is more to PC than shaving cream fights and endless hours of relaxing. It is at precisely such a time that it can be extremely useful to stop and ponder what it is that you hope to gain from four years at PC.

To think of PC as consisting of only a few groups, each comprised of identical members, is to shortchange the school and the diversity that the school does have. Granted, PC doesn't have the same demographic variation that a large university might have, but PC does have considerable differences in the student body. If you limit the people with whom you associate, than you merely limit yourself. Not everyone you meet will prove to be your best buddy ever, but, as the cliché goes, everybody has something they can teach you.

It would be a foolish mistake to consider all football players, all members of a Greek organization, or all participants in a religious club as the product of a mold. If you are truly interested in enjoying the people on this campus get to know them for who they are, not for their affiliations. In fact, it is often the easiest to meet people when they are isolated from their established group. In getting involved, you will quickly notice the vast difference between finding your niche and joining a clique.

On this campus one quickly discovers that nothing is given away for free. Not grades. Not scholarships. Not fun. Not success. Anything you want from this college you have to earn. You also learn that there are achievers at PC that represent nearly every club and organization on campus, some that might even come as a surprise. This is also the beauty of the four years here. You arrive with a clean slate, able to be the person you want to be. It is simply up to you to capitalize on the offerings of the school and find the people who bring out the best in you. Take the burden upon yourself to get to know your fellow students.

The truth is, in fact, that PC offers much; there is a spot for everyone on campus, though it often takes time to find exactly where you're comfortable and where you belong. Unfortunately, it doesn't always happen that you stumble into your niche right away. It usually doesn't happen the first month and may not even happen the first semester. The great Pat Conroy stated in The Lords of Discipline that it's a sad fact of college life that so many spend their sophomore year stuffing off their freshmen year friends. It simply shows you can't make friends out of anything but shared commonalities. The search for new friends and experiences, as Mr. Conroy admits, is a never ending quest. So if ever you find yourself viewing this school as lacking in diversity remember it's only up to you to notice and take advantage of what there is.

The Blue Stocking Editorial Board encourages members of the PC community to submit letters to the Editor for publication (as space permits). All submissions must be signed and include a daytime telephone number. The Blue Stocking reserves the right to edit submissions for grammar, clarity, and brevity.

The new Mabry-Smith-Yonce Center has been completed for the school year. The Templeton Annex houses a large meeting room, several classrooms, and a kitchen. The center will be used for meetings, classes, and cooking.

photo by Jason Williams

T.O.P.S.
OF LAURENS COUNTY

NINTH ANNIVERSARY SPECIAL

9 Portraits for $9

THROUGH OCTOBER 3, 1994

For Class of '95 Seniors & Aged 50+ Seniors:
20% OFF REGULAR PORTRAIT PRICES UNTIL 9-30-94
15% OFF REGULAR PORTRAIT PRICES UNTIL 10-31-94

833-5878 • 107 E. Pitts at Musgrove • Clinton

Hours: 10 a.m.-6 p.m. • Mon., Tues., Thurs., Fri.
10 a.m.-2 p.m. • Wed. & Sat.

THE BLUE STOCKING

Presbyterian College - Clinton, South Carolina 29325
Volume LXXXVIII Number 10, April 22, 1994

Editor-in-Chief.....Tobin Turner
Managing Editor.....Angela Richardson
News Editor.....Gray Lesesne
Sports Editor.....Margaret Ellen Pender
Features Editor.....Amanda Barnes
Production Editor.....Brian Saco
Photography Editor.....Jason Williams
Staff Advisor.....Ms. Gina Prosch

Staff Writers:

John Scott
Lucy Mallon
Everett Catts
David J. Edwards, II
Alison Nicole Barnard
Katherine Bomier
Nhien Nguyen
Stephanie Hogan
Catherine Scholl
Elizabeth Hartman
Leighton Hart

The Blue Stocking is a tri-weekly student publication of Presbyterian College. The paper serves as a forum of news and opinion of regional and national concern. For advertising, contact The Blue Stocking, Presbyterian College, Box 1061, Clinton, SC 29325. The Blue Stocking welcomes letters to the editor from all members of the PC community. Signatures are required. Letters are printed on a space available basis. The Blue Stocking reserves the right to edit all letters for proper grammar and punctuation. The final deadline for submitting letters is Friday at 12:00 pm on the week before publication.

Nixon amends alcohol policy at fraternity court in light of recent arrests

by Gray Lesesne
NEWS EDITOR

Five PC students were arrested for underage possession of alcoholic beverages and taken to Clinton City Jail on August 30, the fourth night of freshman orientation. The arrests occurred after Clinton citizens complained of unusual noise in the fraternity court area for a Monday evening. College officials estimate that between 400-500 students were at fraternity court that evening, which Dean of Students Joe Nixon shut down along with PC Public Safety and Clinton City Police around 12:45 a.m. on August 31. Nixon said that while the noise "wasn't excessive", it coupled with the large group of underage drinkers prompted his decision to shut down the court.

About 12:30 a.m., Nixon received a complaint regarding the noise and notified Public Safety about the incident. Nixon proceeded to fraternity court, and when confronted with the large number of students, called in Clinton city officials for assistance. At that time, the city detained three students for underage possession and PC Public Safety detained two students for similar charges.

The students were charged with misdemeanor possession of alcohol and appeared before a Clinton city judge last week. Two students pled guilty to the charges, two have pled not guilty and requested jury trials, and one failed to appear at the hearing. PC officials had requested that the city drop charges against the students and allow the college to impose penalties, however the judge denied that request.

This incident is part of a growing concern of PC officials and Clinton residents regarding excessive noise and violation of college and city ordinances at fraternity court and other areas where students gather and socialize. Nixon held a meeting in early September with Clinton officials and local residents and with the owner of the Fifth Avenue Extension off-campus apartments, where another incident during freshmen orientation involving a raid by the Laurens County Sheriff. Clinton residents have repeatedly called the college in the past and requested more enforcement of the city's noise ordinance (particularly at fraternity court), said

"I can't see college without socialization. Fraternity court is the safest place for that."

Nixon.

As a result, Nixon held a meeting with Greek leaders and SGA officials on September 1 where he and Assistant Dean of Students Resa Welch expressed the college's primary concerns about the recent activities at the court: underage drinking, public drunkenness, the health and safety of PC students, and the college's relationship with the Clinton community.

SGA officials expressed concern about the safety of students at the court. SGA President Dallas Olson stated that his organization was trying to bring back the safe ride shuttle between fraternity houses and residence halls. Representatives from BACCHUS stated the financial and staffing problems which keep that organization from running the shuttle consistently.

Greek representatives voiced concern to

Nixon that the college was trying to crack down too hard. "I can't see a college without socialization. Fraternity court is the safest place for that," said Tyler Hudson, president of Kappa Alpha Order. Other fraternity and sorority heads said that it was difficult to maintain responsibility for independents who visit the court. They also expressed concern that over-enforcement of college policies at fraternity court would eventually drive students off campus to socialize or increase the number of students who leave campus on weekends.

After consultation with student leaders, Nixon announced the college's redefined policy for alcohol at fraternity court, a copy of which was distributed to the campus. According to the policy, the administration will restrict the consumption of alcoholic beverages to those of age at fraternity court to individual fraternity houses and their yards, with no consumption allowed in the parking areas, on the sidewalks, or in the inner horseshoe. While Nixon acknowledges that underage drinking is prevalent at the court, he will not "ignore it or tolerate it." Under the updated policy, Public Safety will patrol the court for underage drinkers. Nixon also encouraged individual Greek organizations to take extra precautions against underage consumption by their respective members.

Nixon announced that noise will be tolerated (within the city limits) until 11:30 p.m. on weeknights and 12:30 p.m. on weekends. If Public Safety or other officials have to request that the noise be turned down more than twice, the house will be shut down for the remainder of the evening.

"We want PC students to have a good time, but your safety and health is our primary obligation and concern," said Welch.

Class of '98 smaller than expected; admissions officials surprised by Alison N. Barnard

STAFF WRITER

The smallest enrollment in PC's freshmen class in nine years recently took college officials by surprise. Even though the small numbers are unfavorable for some recruiting and financial matters, it has relieved serious overcrowding problems on campus, gaining praise from administrators and students alike.

The class holds 281 students, significantly less than the college anticipated when making housing and financial preparations last May. "In the fall of 1993, applications were up by 12% and we were running way ahead on deposits. We were very excited to see the increased interest in PC. We stopped admitting in March because we were worried about classroom and dormitory space," said Margaret Williamson, Dean of Admissions and Vice President for Enrollment. Among the primary reasons some students chose other institutions include the new HOPE Grant, given to Georgia students attending a college or university in Georgia, along with decreased financial aid.

Williamson said that some schools were giving "exceptional financial aid to recruit students." To ensure favorable numbers in the future, the admissions office plans to recruit from the northeast area of the country, have special mailings, and review financial aid packages sent to prospective students.

With a decline in enrollment emerges the possibility of a monetary loss by the college, since officials formulate the college budget with anticipated enrollment as a guiding factor. Skip Zubrod, Vice President for Finance and Treasurer of the college, stated an estimated loss of approximately seven hundred thousand dollars to the school. "The college is very financially secure, but we will just have to tighten the belt a little and be a little more conservative," he said. Zubrod said at this point he does not anticipate the elimination of any programs or faculty positions or an additional rise in tuition costs beyond the normal annual increase.

The Office of Housing and Residence Life was glad to see smaller numbers of freshmen this year. Andy Altizer, Housing and Residence Life Director, dismissed the rumor of a large number of vacant dorm rooms on campus. "We don't have to use Mayes Cottage or the Infirmary as substandard housing for females. It also gives me much more flexibility concerning roommate changes and moves," said Altizer. He added that by making Smyth Hall a female dorm and Barron Hall a male dorm, the lack of space for women students and extra rooms in male dorms were eliminated.

Minorities

continued from page 1
discrimination, and tries to generally improve the lot of minorities on campus.

In addition to these organizations, there are a number of other minority-oriented programs. One of these is a visitation program coordinated in an interfaith effort through local churches. This provides an opportunity for African-American high school students to come onto campus for about twenty-four hours and become familiar with PC. Another policy involves the hiring of minority professors to provide valid role models and mentors for students.

Has all of this effort made for a more diversified campus? An estimate places the amount of minorities attending the college at about six percent. What is preventing the growth of PC's minority population?

Most people seem to agree that tuition is a major obstacle. To ameliorate this situation, a seventy-five hundred dollar scholarship has been initiated, and efforts have been made to get more financial aid to needy minorities. However, this is not the only problem.

Angeliue Cunningham, president of the MSU, said that while great improvements have been made, minority student life is still very limited. For instance, there are no historically black fraternities and sororities at PC. There have been such groups in the past, but they ceased to exist when their memberships graduated. According to Dr. Booker T. Ingram, Associate Professor of Political Science, a "critical mass" of students must be achieved in order to sustain a minority culture on campus. How then might this be done?

Ingram points to the admissions programs of other colleges. Davidson, a sister Presbyterian college, holds summer camps for talented young African-Americans. In a nutshell, a program of connection with minority students through high schools, especially those that are traditionally black, might lead to increased success for PC's minority efforts. Ohio State University increases its African-American population in graduate programs by working with historically black colleges in its area.

Whatever the case, most agree that PC has made improvements over the years in the area of minority concerns. However, many think that the college still has a way to go toward establishing a stable and unrestricted minority population on campus.

PC Tidbits

Altizer seeks student input in dorm vandalism reduction

Residence Life Director Andy Altizer is seeking student input on vandalism reduction of campus dormitories. The request comes as college officials consider a plan to increase fines and punishments for offenders, including possible required hearings before Judicial Council.

PC awarded drug abuse prevention grant

The U.S. Department of Education has awarded PC a $25,400 grant for the development of a drug abuse prevention program focusing on positive peer pressure. The college will increase substance abuse prevention programs.

Parking availability limited

The parking lot located behind Georgia Hall is now reserved for its residents only, due to the construction of the new academic center. Residents who find no available parking are reminded that parking is available in lot 17 north of Bailey Stadium.

Leadership: PC offer training, support for freshmen, sophomores

The Office of Career Planning and Placement is seeking freshmen and sophomore applicants for its Leadership: PC program. The year-long seminar offers its participants leadership training and exposure to active campus and community leaders. Interested students should contact the Career Planning and Placement Office at 8379 for further information. Applications are available in Springs Campus Center and are due September 23 to 2nd floor Douglas House.

SVS offers new food outreach program

Laurens County Soup Kitchen and SVS have teamed up to form a new SVS program this fall. Students will be able to serve, prepare, and deliver food to needy Laurens County residents. Interested persons should contact Andy Wampler at 8129.

'I've never regretted one minute of my life here.'

by Amanda Barnes
FEATURES EDITOR

I don't think this is going to be just another year - I expect great things from my sophomore year at Presbyterian and I will not settle for mediocrity! Since mid-June I've looked forward to getting back, not only to friends, but to my adopted home, PC. Living in a rat race like the metropolis of Atlanta all my life I was forced to recognize the dramatic culture shock I was headed for as I turned in my final acceptance letter to the Admissions Office almost two years ago. However, I've never regretted one minute of my life here and I don't think I ever will look to PC with anything other than fondness and warmth.

Arriving on campus nearly three weeks ago for FOB/TOB training along with orientation itself, I've had plenty of time to reflect on my first year at PC. Call me sentimental, but I could not help but stroll down the proverbial memory lane during each day of orientation. Watching the freshman and transfers I tried to recall my own emotions and thoughts from one year ago, wondering if they have any inkling what this year can and will hold for them. All the concerns I had, will I make decent grades, what will I do this weekend, what will I wear tomorrow and above all else who can I go with to GDH for lunch? Of course as the year progressed so went the overwhelming worry to fit in. I realized that practically everyone finds their niche and it becomes their own microcosm filled with things familiar and dear to them. So why was I so worried? Human nature — gets me everytime. And of course hindsight is always clearer, so I naturally see the error of my ways, but I've no regrets.

The lessons I learned my freshman year about people, about life, about the world, and about myself are priceless and I am a better person for them. One of those invaluable lessons I learned last year really made a lasting impression. I learned life is all about people. With every new year ahead of us, whether you are a senior at PC, with May looming overhead, or a Freshman with no idea what this year will bring, PC is a great people place. It is where the people of your microcosm are and the responsibility is yours to take. However, while we all find our groove, let's not forget who we can be together because that is where change appears — the big picture.

The theme or goal people are striving toward on campus this year is unity, and I happen to like that idea. But beware there is a fine line separating conformity and unity; I hope you can distinguish it. And so I extend to the new members of our family a hearty welcome and a word from the not-so-wise: don't forget who you are while you are busy finding others, because you have to live with yourself in the end.

Revised orientation proves to be a smashing success

by Catherine Scholl
STAFF WRITER

In years past cowardly freshmen were known to hide in their dorm rooms during orientation weekend. But the class of 1998 and the eleven transfer students seized the opportunity to meet their peers through the scheduled events of orientation. Fifty-eight upperclassmen helped ease the pressure of the freshmen's first college experience and the switch into another school for the transfer students.

The staff responsible for choosing the F.O.B./T.O.B. leaders included: Charissa Cleckler, S.U.B. President, Leigh Davis, S.G.A. Vice President, Dallas Olson, S.G.A. President, David Spivey, S.G.A. Treasurer, Mary Beth Thomas, Judicial Council Chairperson, and Marie Youmans, S.G.A. Secretary. They reviewed two hundred and sixty-five applicants for F.O.B./T.O.B. positions before narrowing their decision to fifty-eight. Each applicant had to answer one written essay question and go through an interview. The interviewers asked questions such as: "What leadership experiences have you had that would aid the F.O.B. and T.O.B.?" Applications had questions asking the applicants to plan mock events for their F.O.B./T.O.B. groups.

The F.O.B. and T.O.B. leaders arrived on campus two days prior to the incoming freshman and transfers. All day Thursday the F.O.B. leaders endured extensive training to prepare for the unsuspecting freshman. Members of the S.G.A. taught them how to deal with confrontations, use icebreakers, and work in small groups. That night leaders made welcome signs to put on dorm doors and throughout the campus. F.O.B. leader says of his F.O.B. experience, "Presbyterian College F.O.B. is an adventure, one of new faces but never seen before places."

The T.O.B. leaders however were told to give more time to question and answer sessions. They tried to ensure the transfers that they had made the right choice in coming to PC by comparing and contrasting their old schools to PC. T.O.B. leader Catherine Bunch tried to make the transfers feel comfortable at PC because, "I enjoyed my F.O.B. last year, it introduced me well to PC and made me feel at home. This year I wanted to make the incoming students feel the same way." The main goal of the T.O.B. leaders was to make the transfers feel as though their choice of coming to PC was a good one and to help it go smoothly. S.G.A. vice president, Leigh Davis, says,

Junior Pamela Weyand emerges safely from the FOB shaving cream fight. In the background the battle continues. photo courtesy Pac Sac

Transfer orientation is a special event at PC and we are excited about welcoming these new Blue Hose both to Clinton and into our lives on campus. S.G.A. is for all students new and old and we hope that their adjustment is a smooth one."

There were two F.O.B. leaders to every twelve to fifteen freshman. Differing from previous years, the groups were put together with the same sex. This was done in hopes of increasing attendance at scheduled events. Each group was matched with their roommates and hallmates so that they could go to the activities and events together. Freshman Mary Beth Gibbs remembers her orientation experience, "It was fun hanging out with the girls in my hall and getting to know them, now we're together all the time." This also helped the F.O.B. leaders in that they only had to go to one area to get their group. All of this helped the rise of this year's attendance to the orientation activities. In fact, the lowest attendance to any one event was 86% which was the optional worship service. In comparison, last year the highest attendance to any one event was 74%.

The total applicants for the class of 1998 reached a total of 1,216 high school seniors, 948 of which were accepted. In the end only 282 enrolled - 144 males and 137 females. Last year the number of incoming students was greater by twenty students.

The enrolled students came from eighteen different states: 129 South Carolina, 84 Georgia, 16 Florida, 11 Alabama, 11 Tennessee, 8 North Carolina, 1 New Jersey, 1 Illinois, 2 Texas, 1 West Virginia, 1 Mississippi, 2 Virginia, 1 Kentucky, 1 New Hampshire, 1 Pennsylvania, and 1 Alaska. The average S.A.T. score was a 1060 and the average A.C.T. score was a 24. The enrolled students' average G.P.A. was a 3.17 and 34% of them were in the top 10% of their class, 66% were in the top 25%, 23% were in the top quarter, and 89% were in the top half. The class of 1998 shows promise as far as contributing to their new community at Presbyterian College and the town of Clinton.

21 year veteran Blue Lady still a lover of life 'Heaven' on a Harley

The ever-smiling Mrs. Beaty, who can often be found serving the meat from the left line in GDH, enjoys spending her spare time with her sons, wherever that might be.

by Elizabeth Hartman
STAFF WRITER

Imagine walking into G.D.H. and seeing a "Blue Lady" sitting on a Harley. Although this seems rather outrageous, it is not impossible. P.C. is proud to have its own bike riding "Blue Lady". Every student has probably seen her face at least once and is completely unaware of what an amazing person she really is. Her name is Mrs. Evelyn Beaty, and for 21 years she has been greeting students with a warm smile every time they enter G.D.H. Mrs. Beaty moved here to Clinton in 1948 when her husband became the Plant Superintendent for the college. Two years later, Mrs. Beaty and her family moved into what is now called Beaty House, named in honor of her family. The Beaty family lived there for 31 years until they bought their own home on Chestnut Street, which she refers to as her "doll house". Upon hearing that students now live in Beaty House, Mrs. Beaty laughed and said, "If that old house could talk, I wonder what the students would hear." Mrs. Beaty began working here when the school was in need of help in the cafeteria. She and 2 other women were hired and became the first "Blue Ladies". While working here at P.C., she raised 6 sons, 2 of which graduated from P.C. These 6 sons have now given her 10 grandchildren and 4 great-grandchildren.

At age 78, Mrs. Beaty is as young and vivacious as any 20 year old. When asked why she so enjoys working here she responded, "I love the students. They keep me young". She says she likes to keep working because, "It makes me get up, get dressed, and get out. And it allows me to enjoy people". Mrs. Beaty claims the students keep her young, but the students could probably learn a thing or two from her about enjoying life. In her spare time she likes to "just go, plunder, and ride her son's Harley." She also enjoys shopping with her two sisters, traveling, collecting birds, and going to the mountains. "I like to be on the go all the time". In her opinion, her most admirable characteristic is her ability to "see the good in everybody". Mrs. Beaty's philosophy on life is to, "enjoy everything, have good thoughts, be happy, and you will live long". After conversing with Mrs. Beaty, it is evident that she is a very special woman full of knowledge and happiness. Her brother probably best put it by nicknaming her "Heaven" as a child; a name that has stuck with her and rightfully so. Mrs. Beaty has watched this school evolve from 250 students to the 1200 students it has today. Her only regret is that more history of the school is not given, because she finds it important for the students to know of their school's past. Mrs. Evelyn Beaty should serve as an inspiration to live life to its fullest and enjoy living. "I love life. It's fun," she says with a smile on her face. Presbyterian College is lucky to have such a wonderful person as Mrs. Beaty "dishing out" a plethora of warmth and passion for life for the college community to digest.

SUB plans for big year

by Leighton Hart
STAFF WRITER

In the days and weeks since freshmen arrived and upperclassmen returned to campus, the Student Union Board has been hard at work planning an exciting year for PC students. The Student Union Board, commonly known as SUB, is a division of the Student Government Association which is responsible for enhancing student life on campus. They are able to do this by scheduling concerts, comedians, trips, and countless other activities, all which add up to fun for the PC student. This year is no exception. Already this year SUB has made its presence known to us. Do you remember the Used Book sale? That was SUB. Fun Flicks? SUB was all over that. Poster Sale? Again, SUB. The fun doesn't stop here, folks.

An ongoing program that SUB has brought us is the nightly movie, seen every night at 7 and 10 P.M. SUB has lined up such blockbusters as Reality Bites, The Fugitive, Grumpy Old Men and The Pelican Brief. And who could forget Ace Ventura Weekend, which brought us 72 hours of Jim Carey sleuthing across the screen as Ace Ventura: Pet Detective? The nightly movie program is new this year, and popularity is high. Look for more movies every night in your room.

Coming up September 20th, SUB has arranged for singer Shannon Tanner to appear in Inklings, PC's new coffeehouse located in the basement of Georgia Hall. Mr. Tanner will be singing and playing guitar from 9 to 11 P.M. This will be the kick-off for Inklings' fall season of events.

Other SUB events this month include a trip to the Nantahala River for a day of whitewater rafting on September 25th and the Velcro Wall and Bungee Run, which will take place from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. in front of Springs the afternoon of the 23rd.

One important thing about SUB is that the students plan and execute all of the activities during the year. This means that student participation is essential to the success of the activities, and of SUB on the whole. SUB President Charissa Cleckler explains, "Student input is very important. We are constantly searching for new things to try. We take any and all suggestions that anyone might have." Students are strongly encouraged to get involved with SUB, because the success of SUB activities lies not only in the planning, but also in the appeal to students. Fresh ideas are always needed. To get involved, contact Charissa Cleckler, or the Student Activities Office.

UPCOMING SUB EVENTS

Velcro Wall and Bungee Run
September 23rd 11a.m. to 2p.m.
Nantahala Rafting Trip
September 25th
Blizzard of Bucks
October 3rd 7:30 p.m.
(PC's Game Show)
Blue Socks Festival
October 7th 7p.m.
(Homecoming Celebration)
Michael James Concert
November 8th 7:30

PC's
'Did you know?'

Percent of students that have more than one post-it note posted. 56%
Percent of students with their beds made. 52%
Percent of students that wash more than three loads of laundry per week. 16%
Percent of students that have not been to Subway this year. 44%
Percent of students that brush their teeth every night. 92%
Percent of students that watched more than three movies last week. 28%
Percent of students that can name two Blue Ladies. 24%
Percent of students ever stopped by a train in town. 54%
Percent of students that have ever said "Clinton". 44%
Percent of students that have been to Wal-Mart more than once this year. 66%
Percent of students that have misplaced their dorm card this year. 48%
Percent of students that eat breakfast in GDH during the week. 60%
Percent of students that eat breakfast in GDH during the weekend. 4%
Percent of students that have ever been in Lake Orr. 12%
Percent of students that have ever been in the fountain. 48%
Percent of students that have ever dropped their tray in GDH. 0%

A.G.'s

• Monday Night Football with Don
• Wednesday Night - Pool Tournaments
• Saturday Night - Karaoke
• Big Screen TV / Music
• Come Relax After The Game
Or Anytime
GO BLUE HOSE!
930 E. Carolina Ave. Phone: 833-1535

Fellowship of Christian Athletes

FCA is here for you! Our purpose this year is, "To know and to help others know God's love personally." Don't forget we are meeting in the new MSY Building next to Templeton on Wednesdays @ 9:00 p.m. Speakers, singing, sharing, weekend activities, and fun! Please come join us. Athletes and non-athletes are welcome. See you on Wednesday!

Inter-Fraternity Council

On Monday, September 12, 1994, IFC voted to amend the IFC constitution to read: IFC openly prohibits rush girls to be associated with any fraternity organization at Presbyterian College. Lists of females, dues paid by females, T-shirts associating females to a particular fraternity, intramural teams associating females to a particular fraternity, parties given by or for a select group of females in association with a fraternity, and any names derived which associates a group of females to a particular fraternity will not be permitted by IFC and just punishment will be carried out if these stipulations are violated. Reasons for this amendment are due to liability purposes, national chapter laws of each fraternity, and to promote sorority rush at Presbyterian College.

Panhellenic

Panhellenic has told freshman rushees about our three outstanding sororities at PC, but did you know that each sorority has been recognized by their respective nationals for their accomplishments?

Sigma Sigma Sigma has received several awards in the area of academics. They received the Scholastic Excellence Award, awarded to chapters with over ninety percent of their members maintaining a given GPA for two semesters. The Tri-Sigas also received two Achievement Comparative Standing Awards; one, for their average chapter GPA being above the national Greek average, and second, for their average chapter GPA being above the collegiate womens' average.

Zeta Tau Alpha was the recipient of several awards, including a Crown Chapter Award recognizing "all-around excellence in programming, philanthropic work, and scholarship." Chosen from the Crown Chapter Award winners, Zeta Tau Alpha was selected to receive a Silver Award, the Valleria Clough Ross Award, which recognizes "superior Panhellenic relations and outstanding support of and leadership within Panhellenic."

Alpha Delta Pi received several honors this summer, including the Diamond Four Points Award, which is based on leadership, scholarship, and campus participation. The chapter also received the Elizabeth Mosely Coles Award, the highest award presented by their national conference, for overall excellence, "pride and enthusiasm in sorority membership, and maintenance of tradition." Recent chapter alumna Jessica McCullough received the Dorothy Shaw Leadership Award, which recognizes academic achievement and leadership, within and outside of the sorority. Panhellenic is very proud of these accomplishments and encourages each sorority to keep up the hard work!

Pi Kappa Phi

Beta chapter is looking forward to another great year at Presbyterian College. We were given an overall grade of 3.8 on a scale of 4.0 on the chapter grading scale by nationals. We have been either first or second in the nation for the past three years. We received the Champion Master Chapter award for chapter excellence, and the Gold Star award for contributions to PUSH at Supreme Chapter this summer in Atlanta, GA. Congratulations to Dean Sheorn and Dallas Olson who represented Beta chapter on the Journey of Hope this past summer. Dean was one of an elite group of cyclists to ride every mile from California to Washington, D.C. and Dallas served as Public Relations coordinator, reaching over 30 million people.

Student Government Association

SGA wants to remind freshmen of the upcoming Freshmen Class President and Representative elections on Thursday, September 22. Applications will be available in Springs Campus Center from Tuesday, September 13 to Monday, September 19. Speeches will be in Springs on Wednesday, September 21. Be on the look out for SGA representatives in the dining hall this semester. They will be available for questions and suggestions about improving PC. SGA wants to thank all of the FOB/TOB leaders for their help throughout orientation and wants to remind everyone that they are selling FOB/TOB t-shirts in the SGA office.

Order of Omega

The Nu Chi chapter of the Order of Omega recently held officer elections for the upcoming year. The officers are:

Ashby Lawton, President
Karen Ivey, Vice President of Programs
Ruth Pulley, Vice President of Membership
Ashley Small, Recording Secretary
Alan Barksdale, Treasurer
Angie Richardson, Service Chairman

Seven new faculty members add diversity to campus community

by Nhien K. Nguyen
STAFF WRITER

Freshmen are not the only ones who have recently set foot on the PC campus for the first time, feeling awed and overwhelmed by the prospects of new beginnings. Seven full time faculty members have been welcomed by both colleagues and students alike since their employment earlier this summer.

Dr. Julian Arribas, assistant professor of Spanish, completed his doctoral program in Michigan in 1983. Prior to his arrival at Presbyterian, he taught at Grand Valley State University as a visiting professor. "I like to learn and to teach...to share what I know with others who want to know more," he said. In his free time, Arribas enjoys reading, listening to music, and watching police story movies and the Marx Brothers.

Dr. Sheryl Bair, an assistant professor of Special Education, completed her Ph.D. at Kent State University. She taught previously at Cuyahoga Community College in Ohio, noting the attractiveness of small academic communities like Presbyterian. Bair applauds faculty members for their friendliness and acceptance of new teachers. "PC students are mature (intellectually and socially), bright, very polite, and energetic," said Bair. She takes her teaching philosophy from Walt Disney in that she'd rather "entertain than to 'teach' someone and hope they're entertained."

Dr. Lloyd Cowling, assistant professor of computer science, comes to PC after teaching at Western New Mexico University. Cowling obtained his Ph.D. from Virginia Polytechnic Institute. "Students here are bright and interested," he said.

"What I try to do for students is to give them the ways to be successful with computers. (With regard to computers), I am more interested in how things work rather than why they work," said Cowling.

Benny Davis, an instructor of physics, received his M.S. from Notre Dame University and is currently completing his doctoral degree in physics. Most recently, Davis has been a research assistant at Notre Dame.

"My teaching philosophy is that I think you have to act as if you care about your subject and do so in a way that is obvious to students," said Davis, who like the small size of Presbyterian. His outside interests include scuba diving and anything involving the outdoors.

Dr. George Dupuy teaches in the Department of Economics and Business Administration. Dupuy completed his Ph.D. at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. His first contact with PC was over a year ago when he visited the college as chair of an accreditation committee. His primary goal is to "actively involve the students in the learning process as a means of developing career skills such as critical thinking, teamwork, and communication," he said.

Barbara Medley, an instructor of sociology, is currently working on her Ph.D. at Georgia State University where for the past four years she has been a graduate assistant. "The most important thing (in education) is that the students think, delving into what seems like the obvious, the complexity of life, and to learn to view human life with both an intellectual and compassionate perspective," she said. Regarding PC, Medley likes "the warmth of people, the dedication to academic principles, and the development of the whole person."

Dr. Jerman Disasa completed his Ph.D. in Education Administration with a focus on international education. He is originally from Ethiopia. Disasa is teaching a multicultural international class, in addition to coordinating the PC Special Projects office. He has started the PC Service Learning Program and PC Community Partnership on Educational Programs. The former is incorporated into courses and its goal is to encourage additional student/faculty interaction with the community through service with an academic connection. The latter program is designed to train economically disadvantaged middle schoolers that a college education is both a possibility and opportunity in their future.

The Beverage Place

- Full-Service Convenience Store
- Hot Dogs - 75¢ / 2 for $1
- BBQ Sandwiches
- Free Popcorn

928 E. Carolina Ave.

Phone: 833-1202

Buy 1 hot dog, get 1 free with this coupon

School hindering quest for good 'buns'

by Margaret Ellen Pender
SPORTS EDITOR

The days when men exhausted themselves by pushing plows and women perspired daintily while hoeing the garden are long gone. Today we all sweat together, but for most of us the desired result is not wheat for buns of grain but rather muscle for buns (and abs, and thighs) of steel.

If fitness has become such an integral part of our lives, then why is it that a progressive school such as Presbyterian College is lacking so severely in providing adequate exercise equipment for athletes and students? It is difficult even to imagine an explanation; PC is above reproach in virtually all other areas which would play a part in the decision making process for prospective students. In fact, for a school of less than 1200 students PC is truly incredible.

However, wellness is the area which seems to have been neglected, and though it may seem insignificant to some, many could attest to the fact that in order to continue to attract top-notch students we must make an effort to up-date our facilities. Of course, no one expects Presbyterian to offer facilities similar to those found at large universities, but there are several feasible improvements which should be made as soon as possible, considering the demand is great.

While the weight room in Templeton may serve the football team well, other athletes, especially female athletes, are in dire need of more refined equipment. Junior soccer player Elizabeth Roe presents an interesting argument in her confession that she finds it increasingly "difficult to compete with other teams who benefit from far superior facilities." Indeed, it is a well known fact that strength and endurance are not only the keys to injury prevention but also to victory!

The majority of the student body is also suffering from the availability of primitive weights and the unavailability of nautilus machines. The exercise room in Springs is simply unsafe due to the fact that the converter weight machine does not provide the support that is required for safe weight lifting. Additionally, the Stairmaster crisis continues to rage; while the Step Mill was a wonderful addition, four Stairmasters cannot be subjected to the demands of hundreds of students. Perhaps overuse is a primary cause for their need of constant repair.

Sophomore Class Representative Susan Haigler has been actively involved in this effort for improvement. After consulting with Randy Randall, she learned that a new stationary bicycle may be purchased soon and that a new workout room is in the future plans. The promise of new equipment is a great one so let's offer our support for any changes that may be made. If you have a suggestion or simply want to offer some encouragement, feel free to contact Randy Randall or any SGA officers.

Men's soccer not dulled by tough losses

by John Scott
STAFF WRITER

There is only one sport at PC where fraternities bring their couches and the fans truly become more than spectators. It's Presbyterian soccer and it's this year the Blue Hose are expected to make some waves and join the ranks of the soccer elite. Ranked number one in the SAC Coaches' poll, the Hose fought hard last week to uphold their standing.

The Hose opened the season last week with a 3-1 loss at USC Spartanburg in overtime. Since then, PC has faced two arch rivals and posted a very solid showing in the conference. First the Hose trounced Erskine last Thursday at home. Key contributors in the romp were Chris Napior, Brian Blackwelder, Todd Anderson, Todd Chandler and Bryan Ridgley, who each punched in a goal. An impressive performance was also made by the midfielder,

Jimmy May, whose three assists set a personal record and came one assist short of matching a single game Presbyterian College record. PC Goal Keeper, Mark Albertus, recorded three saves, and Erskine's Michael Lake drove home their lone goal. The final score was Presbyterian 5, Erskine 1.

'Ranked number one in the SAC Coaches' poll, the Hose fought hard last week to uphold their standing.'

Next the Hose faced the Bulldogs of Wingate, who were ranked number two in the SAC going into Saturday's home match. Saturday's contest was an intense battle of the goal keepers as PC's Mark Albertus made eight saves, and Wingate's Mark Caudle took the top with ten. The game was a fierce duel in which the referees made several questionable calls and failed to notice several rough plays. It is disputable whether the officials were a key factor in the outcome of the game.

Wingate's Kevin Terne scored the first goal of the game and the Hose found themselves down 1-0 after the first period of play. In the second period, PC evened the tally when freshman Todd Anderson hammered in a goal. Wingate nearly ended the match at the end of the first overtime, but the officials declared that the goal did not beat the buzzer. Consequently, the Blue Hose were graced with one last chance to put the Bulldogs away in the second and final overtime. Hopes sank as forward Jay Molloy shot in what would be Wingate's winning goal. The Hose made several more attempts to score, but the Wingate keeper, Caudle, stood in the way of victory for Presbyterian.

Blue Hose beat Charleston Southern in home opener

by Everett Catts
STAFF WRITER

With twelve starters and 35 lettermen returning to a team that was 5-6 and third in the SAC-8 in 1993, John Perry's 1994 PC Football squad should be ready to capture a conference title. The return of five starters and 18 lettermen to an offense that averaged 231 rushing yards per game in 1993 should help PC become one of the best offenses in the SAC-8.

Although the Blue Hose lost tailback Mason Gordon, who rushed for a school record 1401 yards last year, to graduation, junior Chris Yonce should help fill that void. With fullback Steve Gornie, quarterback Randy Sullivan and center Chris McGaha back, PC should return winning football to Clinton. All three were pre-season All-Americans.

The Blue Hose got their first test when they played on September 3 at Newport News Apprentice, a Division III shipbuilding school in Virginia. At the end of the first quarter, the Builders led 7-0. Newport News took a 14-0 lead early in the second period. But the Blue Hose retaliated with a TD of their own, on a one-yard run by Gornie. Freshman Brian Gornie, replacing All-American Frank Jordan, who decided not to return to PC this past summer, missed the extra point. Newport took a 14-6 lead to the locker room at halftime.

In the third quarter another one-yard run by Gornie narrowed the lead, 14-12, but PC's Sophomore Class Representative Susan Haigler has been actively involved in this effort for improvement. After consulting with Randy Randall, she learned that a new stationary bicycle may be purchased soon and that a new workout room is in the future plans. The promise of new equipment is a great one so let's offer our support for any changes that may be made. If you have a suggestion or simply want to offer some encouragement, feel free to contact Randy Randall or any SGA officers.

Chris Yonce's 131 rushing yards led the Blue Hose in that category, but a crucial fumble by Yonce gave the Builders the ball back inside their own 10-yard line in the second quarter.

Sullivan was almost perfect on the day, completing 12 of 14 passes for 162 yards and no interceptions. One of his 12 completions was a 28-yard catch by Gornie on a touchdown drive.

Gornie, whose three TD's were a career high, had 81 yards rushing and 76 yards receiving. For his efforts, the junior fullback was named SAC-8 Offensive Player of the Week on Sept. 5. A native of Snellville, GA, Gornie increased his 23-game rushing total to 1366 yards.

On defense, juniors Antonio Merriweather and Raymone George had six tackles each, all unassisted. Seniors Jason Sellars, who had one sack, and Tyron Phillips, each totaled five tackles.

The Blue Hose, who had the least penalties in the SAC-8 a year ago, were hurt by the flags, totaling eight mistakes for 82 yards. Perhaps the most crucial mistake came in the third quarter, when a roughing the passer call on a Builders third down gave Newport new life in a drive that ate up ten minutes of the clock. Instead of forcing Newport News to punt, PC made a mistake that led to seven points. The loss was PC's sixth opening day setback in a row.

But the Blue Hose refused to dwell on the defeat, and downed Charleston Southern 38-34 in PC's home opener in front of 1652 fans.

The Blue Hose got on the board early as reserve tight end Vic Vickery caught a five-yard TD pass from Sullivan with 6:32 left in the first quarter. Gornie's PAT gave PC a 7-0 lead. CSU tied the score late in the first, and took a 10-7 lead on a 36-yard field goal. But the Blue Hose took the lead on Gornie's eight-yard scamper with 6:40 remaining. A Gornie extra point put PC ahead, 14-10. A second Buccaneer field goal put CSU within one, 14-13 at halftime.

In the second half, a CSU touchdown put the Bucs ahead 20-14. But Vickery and Sullivan hooked up again, this time on an eleven-yard TD reception. The extra point gave the Blue Hose the lead again, 21-20, with eight minutes left in the third quarter.

Early in the fourth quarter, Chris Griffin's eleven yard run gave PC a commanding lead. It was the first touchdown of his PC career. Gornie's PAT put PC up, 28-20. A 20-yard field goal by Gornie increased the margin to 31-20. Griffin, a senior co-captain, added another score with 4:18 left in the fourth, making it 38-20. Nevertheless, CSU made a comeback, scoring twice more before attempting an onside kick. Ultimately PC ran out the clock and won 38-34.

Gornie was once again the star of the Blue Hose offense, rushing for 139 yards on 26 carries. The junior also had 85 yards receiving, on only four catches, with one reception for 35 yards. He even played tight end at times in PC's double tight end set, which was used over forty times.

"When we first ran (the formation), CSU's defense didn't adjust to it that well, and they put in a number of defensive sets in an attempt to adjust," said Jay Poag, PC's offensive coordinator.

PC tallied 406 total yards (255 rushing and 151 passing), and evened its record to 1-1.

Defensively, while the Blue Hose gave up 34 points, they were without Merriweather, who was out with a shoulder injury; and George, who played only half the game because of toe and thigh injuries. In George's place, linebacker Micheal Cook filled in nicely. Cook, a freshman from Irmo, SC, playing in only his second game at PC, had eight tackles and two interceptions in the game, and was named SAC-8 Defensive Player of the Week. Another freshman, Chris Hamilton, led the team with 10 tackles and three broken up passes.

This Saturday, the Blue Hose defense will have to be ready for Carson-Newman, which won the conference last year, and is picked to win it again. This game will play a crucial part in PC's hopes for a SAC-8 title.

Late goal lifts women's soccer team to upset of Barry

by Everett Catts
STAFF WRITER

With seven starters and sixteen letterwinners back from the 1993 squad that was 13-5 and third in the SAC-8, the 1994 Women's Soccer team should be ready to capture the South Atlantic Conference crown once again.

Although sixth-year head coach Brian Purcell lost four starters to graduation, this year's Lady Blue Hose should be one of the top programs in the conference and South region.

Key losses include Missy Butler, a four-time All-SAC choice and two-time SAC-8 Player of the Year; Kathleen Dowd, PC's leading scorer with 75 career points; Nicki Soderberg, an excellent defender and two-time All-SAC selection; and Stephanie Smith, a four-year starter.

The return of midfielders Christi Flack, Carey Bailey and Charity Brazeal, along with defenders Heather Frederick, Carly Peterson and Lisa Becker will help PC's defense (2nd in SAC-8 in '93) remain one of the best in the league. Flack, a stopper for the past three years; and Frederick, a sweeper since 1992, will switch positions.

The goal will be defended by a pair of experienced keepers in senior Tracy Pierro and sophomore Emily Campbell, who have 12 career shutouts combined.

The Lady Blue Hose defense will have to be strong again to be successful against a number of tough opponents, including Barry, FL, Queens, Quincy, Mo.-St. Louis, Berry, GA, and the usual SAC foes.

PC opened the season on September 6 at Mars Hill, and it didn't take long for the Lady Blue Hose to score as forward Renee' Bevil kicked Rebecca Hardiman's cross into the goal nineteen seconds into the game.

Hardiman, who scored five goals in '93, had two goals and an assist to lead the team. Freshman forward Brooke Wright, an All-State pick out of Marist High School in Atlanta, had a pair of goals in her first collegiate game.

The Lady Hose rejoice after a late game-winning goal

photo by Jason Williams

Bailey and Fredrick also scored in PC's 7-1 domination of the Lady Lions. Becker and Elizabeth Welborn had one assist each in the win, as the Lady Blue Hose outshot Mars Hill 39-3.

On September 10 the women hosted Barry University in PC's home opener. Barry, the Division II National Champions the last two years, beat the Lady Blue Hose 3-0 last year.

Ranked #1 in the nation coming into the game, Barry was shut out by PC thanks to the defensive play of Flack, Frederick, Becker and Lenoir-Rhynne, respectively.

Nevertheless, the Lady Blue Hose were also scoreless, forcing two fifteen-minute overtime periods. The game almost ended in regulation when Wright's shot was barely saved by Buccaneers goalie Janna Schimmells.

Following the first overtime, the match remained tied, 0-0, despite several attempts by PC and Barry. But with ten seconds left in the second overtime, a Barry foul gave the Lady Blue Hose one last shot on a free kick. Flack took the shot, curling the ball over a wall of five Buccaneers and into the upper left corner of the goal. PC gained control of the ball seconds later and ran out the clock, ending the game at 1-0.

Flack, a senior from Summerville, SC, was named SAC-8 Player of the Week for her defensive effort and game-winning goal. The goal moves her into fourth place on PC's all time points list (41).

Purcell commented on the impressive win, saying, "This is without a doubt the biggest win in PC women's soccer history. To beat a team like Barry is incredible...I was pleased with how composed (PC) played. I can't give enough credit to our players."

Two days later, the Lady Blue Hose hosted St. Andrews. Junior forward Cobi Shafe scored (11:52 in) on a header from a Hardiman cross that passed Knights goalie Amy Blaser. Frederick added a goal in the second half (55:38) off a Brazeal assist. Like the Barry game, PC was unable to capitalize on a plethora of shots on goal (24). But the Blue Hose won 2-1.

The win improved PC's record to 3-0 (1-0 SAC). The women—now ranked first in the South (ISAA) and third in Division II—played Erskine on September 15, closing out a three-game homestand.

Morris to fill void left by Gault

by Lucy Mahon
STAFF WRITER

When Allen Morris was selected to succeed Cally Gault as Presbyterian College's athletic director last spring, the college officials knew in doing so they had covered all their bases.

Morris was selected for the position (from among 152 applicants) because of the experience he has gained throughout his life as an athlete, a business man, a coach, and as a parent of an athlete. Presbyterian College president Dr. Kenneth B. Orr said it best last spring when the decision was announced, "He is one of the most highly acclaimed athletes in the college's history; he has been a very successful coach at an outstanding university; he has been the head of personnel for a large textile company; and he has been the parent of a PC student-athlete. These experiences will contribute to his success and enable him to lead PC athletics in the great tradition of Cally Gault, Lonnie McMillian, and Walter Johnson."

After enjoying an outstanding career as a tennis player at PC, Morris was chosen as an alternate on the U.S. Davis Cup teams from 1954-56. In 1956, he achieved a 14th-place world ranking and advanced to the quarterfinals at Wimbledon. Later he won open singles championships in North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, and New York;

additionally, he captured the title at the U.S. Senior Clay Court Championships in both 1977 and 1978, during which time he was ranked second in the United States and ninth in the world in senior men's singles. He has been inducted into four Halls of Fame, and notably was the first tennis player ever inducted into the North Carolina Sports Hall of Fame.

Morris was also prosperous as a businessman and a coach. He served as vice president for personnel at Texfi Industries in Greensboro, N.C., before accepting a coaching position at UNC. It was at Chapel Hill that Morris displayed his ability to dominate the game of tennis from a coaching position. In his 13 seasons at UNC, Morris led the Tar Heels to a 227-115 record that included two Atlantic Coast Conference championships. Three of his teams were ranked among the NCAA's top 25.

Morris' truly outstanding achievements in a variety of endeavors should attest to his ability as a leader and thus reassure all those affiliated with Presbyterian College that the future of Blue Hose athletics is bright. Perhaps the most satisfying words come from the man himself (Morris), "...my theme of leadership is the same theme that the college has had for years: my first priority is to graduate our student-athletes; my second priority is to compete with integrity; and my third priority is to compete to win."

Volleyball under new direction

by Margaret Ellen Pender
SPORTS EDITOR

How does a team react when the most successful coach in the history of its sport resigns her post to assume other responsibilities? Much to their dismay, the members of the Presbyterian volleyball team were confronted with that very question. At the end of the 1994 school year, the Lady Blue Hose learned that Coach Beth Couture, who had been promoted to Assistant Athletics Director, was stepping down from the position of head volleyball coach, and though such an announcement may not seem cataclysmic, it could easily have been. During her seven seasons at the helm of the Presbyterian program, Couture led the Blue Hose to a 233-50 record and in so doing propelled PC to a position among the volleyball elite.

Fortunately, the Lady Hose, winners of the 1993 SAC title, were placed under the direction of former assistant coach Allen Ansley. During his two year tenure with Couture, Ansley undoubtedly absorbed much of her wealth of knowledge which, when combined with his own philosophy, will hopefully equal a recipe for continued success.

After two weeks of the 1994 season and a respectable record of 5-2, Ansley and the Lady Blue Hose appear to be on track to defend their #2 pre-season SAC ranking. Though Ansley has undoubtedly incorporated his personal style into the program, it seems that he is a believer in the old "if it ain't broke, don't fix it" adage; consequently, the Blue Hose of this new era have retained many of the characteristics which enabled them to become the first PC volleyball team to earn an invitation to the NCAA Tournament. Aggressive yet smart play continues to be their key to success.

Though this year's squad is quite young (1 Sr., 2 Jrs., 4 Sophs., 6 Fr.), they have played like seasoned veterans in their first three home matches. On Tuesday, Sept. 6, the Lady Hose crushed Columbia College (3-0) and on the following Thursday, they demolished the Flying Fleet of Erskine (3-0). Over the weekend, the Blue Hose advanced to the quarterfinals of the Catawba Invitational before falling to High Point (3-1). PC notched their first conference victory over Catawba (9-15, 15-9, 15-1, 15-12) on Tuesday, September 13.

As expected, junior All Conference performer Kristy Tarallo has assumed an even greater position of leadership this season and will undoubtedly set new records for the Hose. On Tuesday, she recorded 13 kills, and 23 digs. Sophomore middle blocker Watona Williams, SAC Freshman of the Year in 1993, was named Player of the Week, and continued her domination of net play with 18 kills and 5 blocks. Freshman Erin Booth turned in an outstanding performance with 25 assists, 10 digs, and 10 kills.

Upset-minded PC prepares for Homecoming rival

by Everett Catts
STAFF WRITER

This year the Wofford game proved to be more than a simple battle for intrastate bragging rights between two small colleges only minutes away from each other. The Wofford match-up, long considered one of PC's biggest annual rivalries, proved to weigh heavily on Coach Perry's mind (if not his hair) as he agreed to a self-sacrificing effort to encourage his players: Coach Perry would shave his head if the Blue Hose could defeat the heavily favored Terriers. The final results showed PC on top and Coach Perry thin on top.

PC had allowed an average of 34 points in their first four games. It had allowed over 860 yards in the past two games. It was the Blue Hose defense. Many wondered if the "D" would be just as porous against Wofford, a team that scored 42 points in the previous week against Catawba.

But it did the opposite. The Blue Hose defense allowed only one touchdown in its battle against Wofford on October 1. Led by defensive ends Kevin Cox and Jason Sellars, the Blue Hose defense forced the Terriers to pass, yet allowed only 22 yards in the air. Cox, a junior, had twelve tackles, three for a loss (including two sacks) and a broken up pass. Sellars, a senior, totaled ten stops and also had a tackle for a loss.

Linebackers Antonio Merriweather and Diamond Carr had eight tackles (one for a loss) each, and Carr had a broken up pass. Also contributing was senior safety Tyron Phillips, who had two key plays—an interception and a fumble recovery.

While the defense was a big part of PC's win, one offensive play during Presbyterian's second series was significant in the victory. Working out of the shotgun and facing third to throw a 43-yard touchdown pass to wideout Todd Wofford (note the irony of that name). The diving Wofford made the catch with 1:05 left in the first quarter, and following Brian Gorney's extra point the score was tied at 7-field goal.

In the second quarter, following Phillip's fumble recovery, the Blue Hose went ahead 10-7 on a 44-yard field goal by Gorney at the 7:47 mark. The score remained 10-7 at halftime.

In the second half PC was unable to score and was forced to punt to Wofford a number of times and then to rely upon the defense. The Blue Hose offense got to the Terrier 18 early in the fourth quarter, but an interception stopped the drive. Another promising series was stopped when fullback Steve Gorrie fumbled and Wofford recovered on their own 42. Despite the offensive mistakes, the PC defense did not allow the Terriers inside the 35-yard line, stopping them with eight tackles for a loss. Neither team could score in the second half, and the Blue Hose won 10-7.

On offense PC was led by Steve Gorrie, who rushed 17 times for 78 yards after sitting out the Lenoir-Rhyne game with a shoulder injury.

One week earlier, PC lost to Lenoir-Rhyne 42-14. The Blue Hose were led by freshman Terrance Grant's 71 yards rushing (and two TD's) and Antonio Merriweather's eight tackles.

Back on September 17 PC lost to Carson-Newman 38-7. The Blue Hose were led by Sullivan, who was 11 of 17 for 103 yards passing. Defensively, Cox, Merriweather, Sellars, Carr and Phillips had at least ten tackles each.

With the Wofford win, PC improved to 2-3 and 0-2 in the SAC-8. Tomorrow the Blue Hose face Catawba at 3:00 for Homecoming.

Coach John Perry fulfills his date with the razor after a 10-7 victory over Wofford.

photo courtesy of the Clinton Chronicle

and sixteen, quarterback Randy Sullivan fumbled the snap yet miraculously recovered

7. The Blue Hose's first drive had ended unsuccessfully with Gorney's missed 40-yard

College officials plan new coed residence facility behind Barron, Grotnes

by Alison Banard
STAFF WRITER

A new housing facility is anticipated in a long-term five year plan, said a PC official recently. The new 88 bed facility will be located behind Barron and Grotnes Halls and would eliminate the need for substandard housing.

"We wanted to further improve housing. Without this residence hall, we had enough housing for all the students, but with it, there will be no substandard housing and it greatly increases our options for housing students," said Andy Altizer, Director of Housing and Residence Life. Plans for the facility include private baths, two handicapped rooms on the first floor, and furniture similar to that in Barron and Grotnes Halls. The new residence hall would be connected to the back of the Barron-Grotnes complex by a multifunctional courtyard.

The new dormitory will also be a co-ed facility, but with strict security. Each hall or floor would be equipped with a card entry system so all of the residents would have the same quality of security as the other dorms on campus. "This would give me the flexibility that I need to adequately house students, no matter what the male to female ratio of the entering classes is. I can adjust floors instead of switching buildings as with Barron and Smyth. Altizer also expressed the possibilities of demolishing Doyle Hall, using the fourth floor dorm rooms in Clinton Hall as single student housing, and decreasing the number of students living in other nontraditional housing such as James, Beaty, and Moorefield houses.

Altizer also stated that the design of the new dormitory would be planned so that, unlike Barron and Grotnes

Halls, the toilets will have toilet seats, a concern voiced by some current residents. Altizer also asked for student input on any aspect of the furnishings of the room.

Skip Zubrod, Treasurer and Vice President of Finance stressed that the new residence hall was still only a proposal and that fundraising for the project hasn't begun yet. The estimated cost of the facility is 1.8 million dollars. "It is a need that the college recognizes and we will work toward that as quickly as possible," said Zubrod.

Page 4 & 5 . . .

Page 6 . . .

Page 8 . . .

On the Inside:

Homecoming '94

Staff of the Month:
Buddy Wofford

Controversy over broken bottles at fraternity court.

COMMENTARY

Needed: Unity at Homecoming

The new approach to Homecoming has been the target of much campus discussion lately and not all of the talk has been positive. New policies and philosophies implemented by SGA President Dallas Olson and his association are getting double takes all over the campus, and with good reason. Instead of allowing only the highest vote getters into the court, each organization will have its representative on the field Saturday afternoon. In addition to coordinating the Homecoming Grand Court, SGA has also been busy building spirit and coordinating several other activities.

difficult time gathering together as one and cheering on our school's teams, academics, and individuals. Often, we become too polarized as individuals or groups and fail to see a bigger, much more important picture. Without each of the groups on our campus, PC would not be the place we know and love. They each represent an integral part of a bigger family. And this is the momentous task that is beginning to be dealt with this year with the Homecoming Court. Whether or not the new method of selecting a court is an improvement upon the traditional way is up for Homecoming Day. It promises to be a bustling day full of activities for students and alumni alike.

We at the Blue Stocking want you to yell for your team, your school, and your home.

As Dallas, Vice President Leigh Davis, or any other SGA officer will tell you, the real success of homecoming depends upon the spirit generated by the student body. And the sense of spirit here has been, at best, mediocre the last couple of years. There is no doubt that we are proud of this school and its many accomplishments. Being highlighted by U.S. News and World Report and listed in the prestigious Fiske Guide to Colleges shows that others also recognize that PC is a great place to live and learn. The sense of community that is found here is second to none. It's a major selling point for the college and the reason so many of us "felt at home" the first time we walked on campus.

However, with all of these positives floating around campus, we often have a for debate; however, the new way of selecting a court is at least an attempt to repair school spirit and unity and for confronting that vital issue SGA has the support of the Blue Stocking.

That bigger family is what SGA is inviting you to be a part of this weekend. All at once, PC will come together as a collective sum of its parts, and whether you're a student or alumnus, Greek or independent, athlete or academician (or both), we will stand united as one group where everyone has at least one thing in common—a love for and pride in an institution that, since 1880, has prepared thousands for a lifetime of service. We at the Blue Stocking want you to yell for your team, your school, and your home.

We know that PC is great. We've proven it time and again. Now is our chance to show that greatness as one single, proud, and loud voice.

Sidewalk Talk

Do you feel that there's a problem with broken glass at fraternity court?

Allen Barksdale
Senior

Yes, there seems to be an excess of bottle-chunking on the court, but I believe most of it is directed towards the street and not the houses.

I think there was a problem, but the administration has pretty much killed that problem along with fraternity life in general.

Ronnie Mueller
Junior

Broken glass on the court has recently changed from a minor annoyance into a potential roadblock. I feel broken glass is a problem, but at the same time, it's a very American's civil right to have glass as they see fit.

Eric Robinson
Senior

The Order of Omega would like to congratulate newly selected members:

Rob Alexander
Paige Bell
Avery Cheves
Leigh Davis
Elizabeth Foster
Kate Hartman
Lara Hearnburg
Tyler Henson
Teague Hunter
Kathryn Jones
Thomas Lewis
Marianne Smith
David Spivey
Beth Threadgill
Tobin Turner

THE BLUE STOCKING

Presbyterian College - Clinton, South Carolina 29325
Volume LXXXVIII Number 2, October 7, 1994

Editor-in-Chief: Tobin Turner
Managing Editor: Angela Richardson
News Editor: Gray Lesene
Sports Editor: Margaret Ellen Pender
Features Editor: Amanda Barnes
Production Editor: Brian Saxon
Photography Editor: Jason Williams
Staff Advisor: Ms. Gina Proulx

Staff Writers:
Elfrabeth Harrison
Lucy Martin
Kerwin Carl
David L. Edwards, II
Katherine Bonner
Alison Nolin-Barnard
Photographer: Steven Brinkley

Stacy Sperry
Langdon Hale
Bina Scott
Christine Gann
Catherine Schell
David Barks

The Blue Stocking is a bi-weekly student publication of Presbyterian College. The paper serves as a forum of news and opinion of regional and national concern. For advertising, contact The Blue Stocking, Presbyterian College, Box 106, Clinton, SC 29325. The Blue Stocking welcomes letters to the editor from all members of the PC community. Signatures are required. Letters are printed on a space available basis. The Blue Stocking reserves the right to edit all letters for proper grammar and punctuation. The final deadline for submitting letters is Friday at 12:00 p.m. the week before publication.

Clara C. Allen Foster

College's dorms to be retrofitted

by Whitney B. Rollins
STAFF WRITER

After a year of studies and audits of Presbyterian College's energy usage, Honeywell Inc., an Atlanta, Ga. firm, will begin to retrofit the campus for maximum energy efficiency. This week work will begin on the installation of a comprehensive school service program.

This program will include changing all light fixtures to more energy conscious styles of hardware. This procedure will minimize energy costs to the college and maximize efficiency. Honeywell will also maximize efficiency of all air conditioning and heating units in school buildings by changing high energy loaders and circulation loaders to high efficiency loaders.

The Honeywell plan will also install central cooling and heating in Laurens and Bailey Dormitories. "The work that Honeywell is doing on campus will help eliminate some of the problems the school has had in the past," said Skip Zubrod, Vice President of Financial Affairs. "One of the problems that we have had is the change over times in fall and spring from air conditioning to heating (or vice versa). The Honeywell system will automate this process to help eliminate the problem."

The maintenance staff on campus will be able to regulate the new system at a central control area that will allow the college to trouble shoot and quickly make necessary changes. This system up-grade will make a noticeable difference by improving all heating, ventilating and air-conditioning equipment.

Honeywell guarantees energy and operational savings to the school as well. This program will eventually pay for itself. Honeywell has implemented this comprehensive school services program at several colleges and universities across the country, including Texas Lutheran College in Seguin, Texas. A similar program there resulted in an annual savings of $41,000 and conserved energy while enhancing the comfort level for students and faculty.

"Honeywell's total approach to solving building problems made sense to us," said Keith Stadtmueller, Vice President of Student Affairs and Business Manager at Texas Lutheran. "Their people understand the problems a school faces. And from what I have seen, in terms of comprehensive capabilities, their service is unmatched," he said.

The work being done on campus not only will improve the physical atmosphere, but it will also have the possibility to help improve the performance and efficiency of students and faculty.

Studies have found that in business, industry, and schools, employees and students experience improved efficiency when proper heating and cooling is maintained. It has been proven that people stay more alert and become less tired with proper environmental control. They also have less accidents while working, according to industry sources.

"I feel that with this contact we have entered a 'win/win' situation," said Zubrod. "I am excited about this project and believe it's results will be beneficial to the school as a whole."

NO GIMMICKS
EXTRA INCOME NOW!
ENVELOPE STUFFING — $600 - $800 every week
Free Details: SASE to International Inc.
1375 Coney Island Ave.
Brooklyn, New York 11230

PC Sorority named
among best in nation

by Steve Owens
Office of Public Relations

The old saying goes that you must learn to crawl before you can walk—an adage that applies to people or organizations. At five years old, however, a PC sorority has run a marathon. PC's Eta Xi chapter of Alpha Delta Pi was named one of the top chapters in the United States recently, receiving the Elizabeth Mosley Coles Award during the national convention. The award, the highest honor presented at the conference, is based on pride in sorority membership, enthusiastic participation in Alpha Delta Pi events, maintenance of traditions, and qualifications for the Diamond Four-Point Award. The award is named for the president of Alpha Delta Pi when the sisterhood became a national sorority.

"We are the youngest chapter ever to receive the award," said Eta Xi president Leigh Hearnburg, a senior from Carrollton, Ga. "It was along-term goal, yes, but we really didn't expect to win it so soon. Our real aim has been to be a stronger chapter and to make a difference on campus. Because we are so young, we've focused our attention on the sisterhood and our projects on campus. We really did not aim for awards."

"The Alpha Delta Pi chapter at PC is exceptional and the Elizabeth Mosley Coles Award recognizes that although the chapter is young, it is an exceptional one worthy of recognition," said Resa Walsh, advisor to Panhellenic Council and assistant dean of students. "I think these awards serve as another example of how women in sororities address complex issues and strategies for leadership."

PC

Tidbits

Fine Arts schedule changed

Two changes have been made to PC's fine arts schedule for the fall semester.

The Knight Program lecture by architect Richard McDonough on "Environmental Ethics," which was postponed on September 13, has been rescheduled for Tuesday, Dec. 6 in Belk Auditorium. Also, the Oct. 25 faculty recital by Dr. Fran Sherman has been cancelled.

Thomcat goes online

After years of delay and financing problems, Thomason Library's on-line catalog went online earlier this month. Students and online users will be able to access the catalog from terminals in the library, campus labs, and off campus via modem.

Gillespie, grounds staff make noisy Wisconsin debut

A noted authority on third party politics, PC Political Science prof Dave Gillespie was a guest on a Wisconsin Public Radio call-in show Wednesday morning. During the show, expert Gillespie became muted by the whirring and purring one of PC's famous drag racing lawn mower crew. During the break, he called his wife in a plea of desperation, asking that she do anything possible to stop the mowing.

"I thought the policy was no mowing during prime academic time. When's that supposed to take effect?" he asked.

Dorms to close for Fall Break

PC Residence Halls will close on Friday, October 14 at 5 p.m. for the college's Fall Break. Students wishing to stay on campus must contact the residence life office to activate their dorm cards for entry during this time. The Residence Life Office can be reached at 8278.

The dorms will re-open on October 18 at noon. The Resident Director on duty for Fall Break is Jamie Childers, who can be reached at 8551, or on the weekend pager at 1-800-402-1163.

Judicial Council sentences two; decisions appealed

The Presbyterian College Judicial Council held its first trial hearing on Sunday, September 18 in Chapman Conference Center at 8 p.m. Two students were accused of lying as defined under the provisions of the Honor Code.

Both of the accused pled guilty to the charges. The prosecution presented its case, calling two witnesses and producing evidence. The defense called one witness during its presentation of the case. Both prosecution and defense gave closing statements, and the council went into deliberation for sentencing.

The council imposed suspension for both students for the remainder of this semester and on additional semester. The accused were read their sentences and reminded of the right to appeal. The Judicial Council adjourned at 9:50 p.m. Procedures were followed as written in the Knapstuck.

Both students appealed to the Board of Appeals. On Friday, September 23, the Board of Appeals convened and granted appeal to one of the students, reducing that student's sentence to suspension for the remainder of this semester. The Appeals Board denied the appeal of the other student, upholding the decision of the Judicial Council.

Compiled from staff reports

The only thing skimpy
about lunch at Pizza Hut
is the price.

$3.99
$2.99
Weekdays
11:30 a.m. - 1:00 p.m.

Lunch
BUFFET

All You Can Eat

CLINTON ONLY
111 JACOBS HWY.
833-8800
LIMITED TIME

Kids 4 1/2 half price and three and under free with purchase of adult buffet.

Dear Members of the PC Family:

Presbyterian College consists of more than a small group of organizations and clubs. By allowing every organization's representative onto the Grand Homecoming Court, we are showing our friends, families, alumni, faculty, and supporters of the college that we are indeed a united student body. Each organization is of equal importance regardless of their size, numbers, or affiliation.

In an effort to reunify to student body, the Student Government Association is making every effort to represent the entire student body. We feel that it is just as important to represent Presbyterian College as it is to represent our individual identities. On behalf of SGA, I wish you the best Homecoming ever.

Sincerely,

Dallas Olson
SGA President

Homecoming is a time when alumni from all over the nation will return to campus to pay tribute to an institution which has had a tremendous impact upon their lives. Above, PC alumni share in the annual lakeside barbeque at the 1993 Homecoming. The classes of '44, '54, '64 and '59 will hold formal reunions this weekend. photo courtesy PC News Services

A Common Bond: Homecoming events planned for students and alumni

by Elizabeth Hartman
STAFF WRITER

Homecoming weekend is here again, and with it much excitement and many activities. While students frantically search for a date to the game, the staff prepares for the many coming events. The classes of '44, '54, '59, '64, '69, '74, '79, and '84 will be on campus throughout the weekend celebrating their respective reunions with banquets and meetings. Starting off the weekend will be the Scotsman Club with their Wing-Ding Golf Tournament at 1:00 pm Friday. This will be followed by a banquet at 7:00 in the Mabry Smith Yonce building. Speaking at this gathering will be Coach Art Baker, a PC graduate now working with USC. Also at 7:00 pm Friday evening is the Blue Sox Festival for students. This should prove a fun event as skits and talents will be seen from many different student groups. Saturday is packed with events beginning at 9:00 A.M. when the visiting alumni register in front of Neville. This is to be followed by a Barbeque at 11:30 on the West Plaza. The Alumni Association meeting will then be held at 1:00 pm in Edmunds Hall. Special awards will be presented at this time to outstanding alumni. These awards include the Gold P. Award which will go to Mr. G. William Dudley, the Alumni Service Award to Rion D. Bassey, the Young Alumna Award to Gwen Machen Cook, and the first annual Dum Vivimus Servimus Award to Dr. Harold Hope. Also at this meeting, Mrs. Ginny Cartee will be inducted as the new President of the Alumni Association. The new officers will also be inducted at this time. The football game vs. Catawba will begin at 3:00 pm. During halftime, the 25 1994 Homecoming Representatives will be presented, and the Queen crowned. Students voted for their Queen Wednesday. Immediately following the game there will be a Minority Reunion/Reception at the Charlotte Hawkins Brown Cultural Center. This will create an opportunity for minority students and alumni to interact. All day Saturday there will be an art show in the library auditorium. On exhibit will be works by artists Judy Jerrett Brown and William P. Jacobs III. Their paintings are based on pictures made on the England Experience Alumni Tour this past June. This tour was led by the Chairman of the P.C. English Department, Dr. Neal B. Prater, and his wife Marion Sunday morning the Homecoming festivities will come to a close with the Alumni breakfast at 9:00 A.M. All these many activities and events should keep everyone busy and proud to be a "Blue Hose".

SUB plans Blue Sox festival for laughs, unity

by Amanda Barnes
FEATURES EDITOR

The roots of the Blue Sox Festival, in contrast to most traditions at PC, do not run as deep as one might expect. This pre-Homecoming spirit rally was created by Mr. Randy Randall, PC graduate and current Director of Student Activities. During the fall of 1976, Randall and other members of the Student Entertainment Board hosted the first Blue Sox Festival which was designed to mimic the spirit rallies at larger universities. In the tradition of the very first Blue Sox, the main source of entertainment of today's festival consists of a student skit competition that aims to excite the student body while reinforcing a chosen theme.

The skit competition is open to any group of students which desires to participate, but the competition itself has been dominated by fraternity and sorority groups in the past few years. Concerned with the level of a variety of groups taking part in Blue Sox, sophomore Robin

Billington stated, "It would be great if all types of organizations got together to do Blue Sox, because Homecoming is a time for all of PC to come together and for everyone to have a chance to get involved." The Student Union Board (SUB), the organizer of the Blue Sox Festival, wants to emphasize unification and unity in school spirit along with this year's theme, "What the Hell is a Blue Hose?." Each group's skit is a different notion and idea defining a "Blue Hose" from origin to present meaning. Following the skits and various spotlights on campus talent, SUB will close the evening with the real tradition and meaning behind a "Blue Hose". Included in the festivities is a Master of Ceremonies from the student body who introduces and announces each group's skit and the other entertainment acts during the course of the evening.

In the effort to promote school spirit SUB is looking for humor, creativity, and the incorporation of the theme for the competition aspect of Blue Sox. The skit groups will be judged by three non-student judges. This fair rating process is imperative in light of the lucrative prizes offered ranging from $100 for first place, $50 for second place, and $25 for third place. For most groups the importance of school spirit alone is enough incentive to participate without monetary reward. Randy Randall commented on the festival, "It has always been a big draw but one thing SUB is trying to do this year is to have it become a spirit builder."

Even the planning of this annual event can be considered a time to unite and come together for the sake of PC. The special events committee of SUB consists of dedicated, hard-working students who have organized the entire affair not leaving one detail unattended. This SUB committee is headed by Laura Severinsen, Liz Whitfield, and Leigh Irwin. In addition, others such as Margaret Ellen Pender and Tracy Todd helped organize and plan the event. The event takes place tonight at 7 p.m. in Belk Auditorium.

1994 Presbyterian College Grand Homecoming Court

Paige Michele Bell
Katherine Alice Bonner
Mary Wallace Campbell
Avery Dudley Cheves
Dena Roseanne Elliott
Heather Lynne Frederick
Brandy Nicole Ginn
Jean Anne Greenman
Miriam Katherine Hall
Elizabeth Suzanne Jowers
Ashby Baker Lawton
Christine Peden Massey
Renna Kathryn Massey
Vanessa Lee McAlister
Emily Ray Meyers
Julie Kathleen Nielsen
Karen Elizabeth O'Connor
Margaret Ellen Pender
Kelly Devonne Pope
Melinda Marcie Ray
Ashley Anne Small
Tracy Alison Todd
Pamela Ann Warren
Watoma Denise Williams
Allison Leigh Wingard
Sara Marie Youmans

The 1994 Presbyterian College Homecoming Court is represented by over 25 campus organizations this year. All representatives will appear in the Grand Homecoming Court during Saturday's halftime events. The Grand Court is being promoted by SGA as another means by which to unify the campus in a celebration of the whole college.

photo courtesy the Pacesetters

College is my last chance to discover and explore

by Amanda Barnes
FEATURES EDITOR

I've often wondered just how many people stop and think about why they are here. Going past the obvious reasons: to get a job (hopefully), to put our parents at ease, not to mention the popular trend that encourages people to follow the crowd and go to college. I must confess that I really did not think through my decision to go to college and I suspect most other people my age did not either. These days if you are able to go to college you go - without a second thought to the why's or wherefores of the concept of higher education.

What do most of us see in college? Speaking for myself I have an updated definition of college compared to what I thought it would be as a high school senior. Today, I see college as a privilege and my last chance to discover and explore before the shackles of responsibility are forced upon me. I can only speak for myself, but I enjoy learning about new things and understanding the world. I find it frustrating that I have to concentrate most of my time in one field and cannot take classes for curiosity sake. I've gone through the agony of declaring a major and the seeming incessant planning necessary to accommodate all the required classes. Isn't the goal a well-rounded individual; concentration in one field seems somewhat lop-sided to me. To my dismay not every accommodation can be made, which makes adequate knowledge of at least one thing a priority.

I am just as guilty as the next person when it comes to complaining about tests and assignments but in retrospect I should be grateful. Knowledge is valuable; it is something that can never be taken away by someone else. In addition, knowledge helps us understand our world and the people and customs within it. I'm glad I have the opportunity to come to college because I know that an education can only make me a better person, increasing my awareness of my world. But we cannot forget the social aspect of learning it is just as important if not more important to growth. This season in my life is dedicated to learning and building myself into an individual. I hope that I make the most of my time here, and I don't mean that I want to study all day, everyday - life's instructions aren't included in any textbook.

Campus and Clubs

Pi Kappa Alpha

We would like to congratulate our newly initiated brothers: Brad Alexander, Dave Amsler, Shane Bickley, Matt Bishop, Zane Corriher, Mikel Lupisella, Alan Powell, Wade Perry, Wiley Rucker, Chris Wilson, and Tripp Bryan. We would also like to announce our completion of the First Annual Game Ball Run from PC to Wofford for The Bob Watters Foundation. We presented a one thousand dollar check to the foundation at halftime of the game this year.

Alpha Delta Pi

We would like to congratulate two of our sisters on their recent honors. Leigh Hearnburg was named recipient of the National Order of Omega scholarship and Avery Cheves has been nominated as our Homecoming representative this year. We are looking forward to our annual Harvest Party next Thursday and our Alumni Homecoming Brunch on Saturday.

Fellowship of Christian Athletes

Something's going on at FCA! We've been having a turn out of about 100 people each week! There will be any opportunity for anyone to share or show-off their talents at the FCA Variety Show on October 19th. We will be hosting the FCA Fall Retreat on October 21-23 for a refreshing, renewing, and relaxing weekend in the mountains. On Saturday, October 29 we will be having a Parents' Weekend Barbeque. Come join us whether you are an athlete or not on Wednesday nights at 9:00 pm in the MSY building.

After a hard week working on the grounds of PC, Buddy Wofford enjoys spending his free time at the many race tracks in the area.

PC groundskeeper racing fan on, off job

by Leighton Hart
STAFF WRITER

If you have ever seen Buddy Wofford cut grass, you know that he has a love for speed. Some may think that his speed and precision on a lawnmower comes from the eight and a half years he has spent working at PC, but there's much more to it. It comes from the almost eighteen years he has spent involved with racing cars.

Mr. Wofford, who lives in Cross Anchor with his wife and two children, has worked as a groundskeeper here at PC for almost nine years. During those years, he has devoted his weekends to one of his life's greatest loves, racing. Although he has been involved in racing since he was 11, Mr. Wofford has only been driving since 1988. Before that, he helped out friends with their cars. Racing is a passion for him, and one which he hopes he can pass on to his two year-old son.

Lately though, racing has taken a backseat to his family. He lost most of his free time during the construction of his new home. Mr. Wofford commented, "When you're working ten hours a day, six days a week, there's just no time to get the car ready for a weekend race." His spare time has also been reduced since his wife gave birth to their daughter in June. He hopes that he can get his son involved in racing at an early age, solely being limited by restrictions for young participants. Like so many other sports, Mr. Wofford believes that younger competitors have a distinct advantage over older ones. This strategic idea is even true in racing Wofford believes. While he is unsure of the future of his driving career, Mr. Wofford will be active in racing as he brings his son up through the ranks. His dream is to someday win a Nascar race, but he is not sure whether he will be the driver or his son will fulfill his lifelong dream.

Mr. Wofford races in the "Limited Late Model" class, which takes him to races all over South Carolina, in such cities as Laurens, Gaffney, Chester and Traveler's Rest. His races are supported by his sponsors, which are mainly long-time friends. He is even sponsored by a fellow PC groundskeeper, Mr. Betsill, who owns a peach farm not far from here. The racing season lasts from mid-March to late October, and races are on Friday and Saturday night. Mr. Wofford's current car has a 550 hp engine, capable of top speeds near 120 mph. He says that he averages around 90 mph during a race. That average speed is dependent on a number of factors, he says, most of which deal with the handling and tuning of the car. Wofford admits some nights are better than others and success is dependant on many variables. When asked about the school's mower, he says that it corners well, has tremendous pick-up, and is capable of speeds near 12 or 13 mph. He wishes he could have the pick-up in his car that he has in the mower.

Mr. Wofford has a life that most only dream of. He has a good job, a beautiful family and he lives out his dreams on the dirt tracks of South Carolina. So next time you see him racing over the grass of the PC quads, you can bet that he's day dreaming about the checkered flag at Indianapolis.

SUB: Active in many areas of student life

by Dawn Banks
STAFF WRITER

Of course many of you remember Blizzard of Bucks, Blue Sox Festival, Fun Flicks, Virtual Reality, Winter Formal, Spring Swing, and much more. These are just a few of the many activities sponsored by the Student Union Board of Presbyterian College. SUB's main objective is to enhance the social phenomenon of student, faculty, and staff life in the PC community. SUB establishes an avenue on which the PC community can lessen the stressfulness of academics through unity, exploration, and appreciation of social interaction with one another, visiting guests, and the miracles of modern technology.

Coordinated by Mr. Randy Randall, SUB has done a splendid job in the past and is up for yet another spectacular year of fun and exciting entertainment. For instance, on October 7, SUB will host the Blue Sox Festival where different social organizations perform Homecomings skits. Nightly movies are shown on PC channel 46 and a listing of these can be found in the monthly Student Affairs Newsletter calendar. However, there is always "Inklings." Mr. Randall describes Inklings as, "a coffee house in which PC students, faculty, and staff come and congregate to discuss issues of their concern. Poetry readings, comic shows, mini concerts, and many other great entertainments are held at Inklings." Inklings is open Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Saturday nights.

With all the social events sponsored by SUB taken into perspective, how could you possibly be bored at PC? How could you possibly be stressed out? Take a break, have fun, but most of all, socialize. Don't let the endeavors of the Student Union Board be in vain. Indulge yourself in these many great social activities because that is what SUB contributes to PC's campus.

NO GIMMICKS
EXTRA INCOME NOW!
ENVELOPE STUFFING - $600 $800 every week
Free Details: B&S to International Inc.
1375 Conny Island Ave.
Brooklyn, New York 11230

Women's volleyball squad perfect in SAC at 6-0, 13-2 overall

by Margaret Ellen Pender
SPORTS EDITOR

Just at that moment when you were feeling frustrated, exhausted, and ready to give up, someone who was intent upon seeing you persevere reminded you of a simplistic yet valuable little phrase. Perhaps it was your first grade spelling teacher, your mom, or a wonderfully encouraging coach. Regardless, their words stuck in your mind just as they must have echoed through the minds of the 1994 Presbyterian College volleyball team. Practice makes perfect.

Practice was indeed the chief means of preparation for the Lady Blue Hose this season, due to the youthfulness of the squad. Of the thirteen players on the roster, six are freshmen who obviously could not have any college level experience, and six others are sophomores or juniors. Add a new coach to the mixing bowl, and it might appear as though you had created a recipe for a long, frustrating season.

Under the direction of first year head coach (former assistant) Allen Ansley, however, the Lady Blue Hose set ambitious goals and refused to accept the season of mediocrity which may have seemed inevitable.

Sophomore Watoma Williams prepares to serve the ball into play.

At the outset of practice, the Hose set their sights upon claiming not only the regular season title but also the tournament crown, and thus far, they seem to be on track to have the opportunity to capture both trophies.

After fifteen matches, the Presbyterian record stands at 13-2 overall and 6-0 in the SAC. The blemishes were notched early in the season at the Catawba Invitational when the Hose fell to USC-S and Highpoint. In the three weeks since those disappointing losses, the Lady Hose have been on fire, posting a 9 match winning streak.

In recent action the Blue Hose downed Francis Marion, Wingate, and Carson-Newman. Junior Kristy Tarallo was named SAC Player of the Week (September 25) for her outstanding play in four of PC's matches; she is currently averaging 3.11 kills, 4.72 digs, and 0.63 blocks per game. Additionally, Tarallo has tallied a 92.3 serving percentage and a 95.4 passing percentage.

Sophomore Watoma Williams has continued her dominance of net play this season. She notches 4.2 kills per game on average and 1.09 blocks. Sophomore Brooke Flemming has been a menace to opponents as well with her average of 0.91 blocks per game while freshman Mary Kruse has chipped in 3.35 digs per game. Erin Booth, another of the freshmen on this squad, has been a key to the undreamt of success of this team; her 6.92 assist per game average combined with freshman Jenny Frieling's 4.40 average has enabled the Lady Hose to continue their aggressive, attacking style of play.

What is the secret to the Blue Hose success? According to Coach Ansley, there are two easily recognizable factors. "I have been extremely pleased with the leadership of our two co-captains (Kelly Pope and Tarallo) both on and off of the court. Also I have been greatly impressed with the roles that our freshmen have been able to fill; they have not played like freshmen." Coach Ansley was also quick to add that all of the returners had arrived at the first practice "ready to work hard."

Though it is hard to admit, your teacher, mom, or coach may have been right, or at least it seems so in the case of the Lady Blue Hose, who may not have reached perfection but are performing on a level that displays their desire to do things right. This weekend, the Hose will face some tough competitors, one of whom is SAC rival Elon College, here at PC. Action begins at 9:30 Saturday morning!

Lady Blue Hose fall to Quincy in overtime

by Everett Catts
STAFF WRITER

It was almost perfect. The fourth-ranked Quincy Lady Hawks on October 2 in the final game of PC's Women's Soccer Invitational. It was a battle of two evenly-matched teams.

Head Coach Brian Purcell called it, "one of the biggest games of the year." The Lady Blue Hose, ranked first in the South, faced the number one team in the Central region. For the most part, the game played up to its billing. An early goal gave Quincy a 1-0 edge. That lead stuck until halftime despite many scoring opportunities by PC. In the second half, both teams continued to attack, but no one scored in almost thirty minutes. The Lady Hose finally found the back of the net on freshman Brooke Wright's goal off a Rebecca Hardiman assist. The forward's goal came at the 73:49 mark and tied the game 1-1. The score remained tied in regulation, and two fifteen minute overtimes followed. Unfortunately, Quincy added three goals in overtime and won, 4-1. It was PC's first loss of the season.

The day before, the women hosted 20th-ranked Missouri-St. Louis. PC took a 3-0 lead at halftime as Wright was once again the star. The freshman forward had a hatrick (three goals) in the first half. The second goal was assisted by Carey Bailey and Christi Flack. Bailey also had an assist on Wright's third goal. Another freshman, Vicki Dailey, starred. The midfielder from Klein, Texas had two goals in the second half, the second off a Heather Frederick assist. Junior Charity Brazeal added a sixth goal at the 64:10 mark, and the Lady Blue Hose won 6-2.

Back on September 28 PC beat Wofford 5-2. Brazeal led the team with two goals. The junior midfielder from Easley, SC has eight goals and two assists for a total of 18 points.

Wright added a goal and leads the team with eleven scores and 24 points. Bailey and Hardiman also had goals in the game. Hardiman, a sophomore forward, leads the team with five assists. PC outshot the Lady Terriers 31-7.

Eight days earlier, the Lady Hose shut out Queens 4-0. Wright scored an unassisted goal ten minutes into the game. Frederick found the back of the net four minutes later on an assist by Brazeal. Hardiman added a goal at the 24:00 mark to give PC a 3-0 halftime lead. In the second half Brazeal tacked on a goal with seven minutes left in regulation, as the Lady Hose won 4-0. PC outshot the Knights 24-9.

On September 17 the women crushed Carson-Newman 5-0. Frederick scored just eight minutes into the game. Cobi Shafe made it 2-0 with a goal (assisted by Wright) ten minutes later. Brazeal added a goal at the 33:00 mark off a Susan Olmest assist. PC led 3-0 at halftime. Wright found the back of the net five minutes into the second half, assisted by Bailey, and had an assist on Brazeal's second goal of the game eight minutes later. The Lady Blue Hose won 5-0, improving their conference record to 2-0. Goalkeeper Emily Campbell got her third shutout of the season and leads the SAC-8 with a 0.26 goals against average.

Two days earlier, PC crushed Erskine 6-1. Wright and Brazeal had two goals each. Brazeal's goals came off assists by Liz Roe and Carey Bailey, respectively. Hardiman added a goal and assisted on one of Wright's scores. Shafe rounded out the scoring on an Elizabeth Welborn assist at the 64:53 mark.

Purcell commented on his team's 8-1 start, saying, "Record wise, it's a better team, but we've still got a long way to go. I'm happy and excited so far, though."

The Lady Blue Hose will have five SAC-8 games, including last Wednesday's Lenoir-Rhyne match, to close out the season. Now ranked in Division II, PC next hosts Wingate on October 13.

Buy A Pizza

FREE
Salad Bar

FREE
Breadsticks

FREE
Dessert

Get A Meal

When you purchase any medium or large pizza at regular menu price

DINE-IN ONLY

Available for a limited time at participating units. Days and times may vary. Offer good for up to 2 people per medium pizza and up to 4 people per large or BIGFOOT® pizza. Not valid with Personal Pan Pizza® or any other offer.

Rick's Barber Shop

(Formerly Gallman's Barber Shop)
314 W. Pitts St. - Clinton, SC 833-3670

3 Barbers - no waiting

8 a.m. to 6 p.m.
Tuesday - Friday

8 a.m. to 1 p.m.
Saturday

VACUUM
Freezing Spray
Special $7.00

Maintenance believes bottled beverages should be banned at Fraternity Court

by David L. Edwards, II
STAFF WRITER

Is there a litter problem on the campus of Presbyterian College? At first glance, no. For the most part, the campus is well-cared for, and garbage on the grounds kept to a minimum. However, there does seem to be at least one problem area at PC - fraternity court. The problem there stems from one particular type of litter - broken glass, according to college officials and residents.

Why the special concern with glass? Mostly, the worry lies in the threat it poses to the safety of students. The utility of broken bottles as projectiles and hand-to-hand weapons is one problem. Also, the damage that glass in the street and on sidewalks might cause to students and their vehicles is another matter of concern.

Nevertheless, John Sigman, chair of the Interfraternity Council, contends that while there is some glass on the court, it does not constitute a major hazard. This counters the opinion of many students, who describe themselves as "fed up" with the glass and litter at the court. One needs only to walk down to the houses to see that their complaint is not without basis. Much of the court is heavily littered with glass of various types.

Residents of the area seem most bothered by the problem. One of these is Michael Weaver, a brother of the Alpha Sigma Phi house. He complains that every morning he has to navigate around mounds of glass to avoid damaging his car. Other denizens of the fraternity court profess much the same problem.

Physical Plant and the IFC have both tried to combat this problem. A street sweeper was once proposed, but the idea has yet to see concrete results. At least one fraternity has imposed a fine on anyone who breaks glass of its property.

Some have proposed a ban on bottled drinks to alleviate the glass problem. Such measures have long been in place at other colleges like Davidson. While such a ban might not be currently in the works, Sigman says that one might be imposed if bottles continue to be thrown on fraternity court.

Opinion on a possible ban varies widely among students. One Kappa Alpha brother argues against it as just another of the succession of rules that have been imposed upon the court. The majority of opinion seems to fall along similar lines. Michael Weaver, while bothered by the glass, does not support a ban. "[Instead] I think the fraternities should just take more responsibility," he says. However, another resident, Michael Crawford, while finding the possibility of a ban personally undesirable, states that, "Looking...over the long term, it would be better if we banned them."

Jack Robertson, director of Maintenance and Physical Plant, is the PC staff member most closely concerned with this issue. He supports the idea of a ban as the easiest and safest measure against the proliferation of broken glass.

In the final analysis, it is clear that strides have been and are being made towards removing broken glass from fraternity court more effectively. Whether current efforts are sufficient to end the problem still remains to be seen.

Soccer team victory proves important in SAC standings

by John Scott
STAFF WRITER

With a break-even season thus far, the Blue Hose men's soccer team's game against Lenoir-Rhyne proved to be very important for a good SAC standing. The Hose, ranked fifth in the conference going into last Saturday's game, needed a victory and got one trouncing the Bears 3-1. The win was sufficient in bringing Presbyterian to an even 2-2 record in the conference, and a winning 5-4 record overall.

On Saturday the Hose controlled the field. The first goal came only ten minutes into the game when forward Chris Napoir chipped from the right side setting up a spectacular header by midfielder Tyler

Boulware to put PC ahead 1-0.

Not ten minutes later, Tyler Boulware took a shot much like Napoir's from the right side finding Richard Wright for another head shot, but the Lenoir-Rhyne keeper, Randy Howell, robbed Wright of the goal. It was evident that the Hose were out to win this game. The Bears could scarcely get the ball into PC territory as Presbyterian's defensive play pushed the ball back past midfield to pressure the goal again and again. About halfway through the first period, Neil White's corner kick was deflected by a Lenoir-Rhyne defender straight in the air near the goal. As it fell, Kevin Smith was there for yet another header blown past the Bear keeper.

In the closing minutes of the first period, Hose up 2-0, Lenoir Rhyne took one of their few trips into PC territory to threaten to score.

After a PC defender kicked the ball out of bounds, Lenoir-Rhyne set up for the corner kick. The ball was kicked impeccably near the center of the goal. Presbyterian goal keeper, Albertus, seemed to be anticipating a header high into the goal. Instead the Lenoir-Rhyne offender missed the head, and the ball feebly rolled into the goal off the foot of another bear player. Graced with luck, the Lenoir-Rhyne Bears would end the half on the board and in the game, with the score at 2-1 in favor of the Hose.

In the second half, the bears weren't quite as lucky. The PC defensive side totally shut down the Lenoir-Rhyne offenders. PC goal keeper, Mark Albertus, recorded not a single save in the game, mostly because there were almost no shots on goal. About midway through the second period the Hose decided they weren't finished with the scoreboard. From near midfield, Stefan Svardh passed the ball to Todd Chandler who, perhaps, had the most spectacular goal of the game. Chandler took the ball alone past two defenders and punched the ball down the middle of the goal leaving the Bear Keeper, Howell, in disbelief.

With only a few minutes remaining and the PC defensive skill stepping up a notch, the game was certainly in the hands of the Hose who put together one of their best performances of the season, beating the Lenoir-Rhyne Bears 3-1.

Presbyterian's upcoming schedule includes one conference game against Gardner Webb and three other games including nearby Lander, a long time rival. With wins like the one on Saturday, a winning season is in the future for PC.

10% off to students everyday

Tapestry

Ladies apparel & Gifts

Next to Terry's

Special hours on the 29th will be from 9am to 7pm

Parents Day (Oct. 29)

20% Off to all parents and students

Sorority & Fraternity cross stitch kits available

GDH nutrition, quality still major concern for students

by Gray Lesesne and Alison Barnard
NEWS EDITOR AND STAFF WRITER

Frustrated GDH student diners blame the college administration for a continued lack of change and response to student and parental concern about the food service program at Presbyterian College. Partial efforts to improve the facility by college officials at the request of SGA leaders has fostered a new effort to for drastic changes in the facility, including the establishment of a meal plan similar to other institutions.

College officials insist that the current setup in the dining hall is the most economical for students and for the college. They also insist GDH's dining options are healthy and tasteful. But student dissatisfaction with the dining hall was high in a recent college wellness survey, administered to students on a random basis. Of the students that responded to the survey, 75% disagreed or strongly disagreed with the following statement: "GDH provides adequate choices for a healthy diet."

The survey was sponsored by the college's Wellness Committee, which was established by PC president Ken Orr last spring to examine the overall health, dietary, and fitness needs of the PC community. Resa Walch, assistant dean of students, chairs of the committee. According to Walch, copies of the results of the survey, in addition to summaries and recommendations by her committee were distributed to college officers. Other than a recommendation of some response by GDH Director Vernon Powell and PC vice president Skip Zubrod to the survey results, the committee suggested no other action to the college. Previous recommendations made by similar committees have resulted in no change, said SGA officials.

SGA calls to change the system in GDH have mostly gone unheard, according to SGA Food Committee co-chairs David Spivey and Amy Becker. They said the primary SGA qualms with GDH include: the lack of a meal plan, the lack of quality foods, and the unwillingness of college officials to listen to either food committee or student comments or concern.

Vernon Powell was contacted, but was not available for an interview before Parents' Weekend. Many students echo the same sentiment. "I am not only concerned by the unhealthy food served in GDH, but also by the seeming indifference to students' concerns as evidenced by the lack of change in GDH," said Melissa Boyett, who serves on the wellness committee.

"The extreme lack of variety of foods served and the poor quality and taste of the food served make GDH one of the weakest links in PC's otherwise strong chain," said Jay Therrell.

"One of the primary reasons I got off campus was GDH," said Becker, a senior. "I'm working for change not for me, but for those who are behind me here—my friends, family."

"I wish the administration would listen to us. Since this issue has been around for at least five years, I know we're not just a bunch of complaining brats. If college officials had to eat there every meal, every day, they'd be sick of it too," said Spivey.

GDH's method of food preparation also concerns many students. "What kind of dietary program consists of frying everything possible?" said David Miller. "Not only is it unhealthy, but it gets old really fast," he said.

"They shouldn't have so much oil in the vegetables, and they serve too much fried stuff," said Chase Thornton.

Student leaders said some positives should help as they attempt to make more change. Spivey and Becker said GDH Assistant Director Jerry Kent seemed "interested and enthusiastic" about proposed changes and improvements in the dining hall. Changes in the card reading system, although still in its first changes, should help, particularly with the formation of a proposed meal plan, said Spivey and Becker. The plan would reportedly offer students the option of eating less in GDH for a slightly lower yearly cost.

SGA officials are negotiating for a different meal plan which would allow student the choice of the number of meals. Student leaders hope to change school policy, although they express doubt at the possibility of a settlement which is agreeable to all.

"If I had to make a recommendation, it would be letting Powell take over all of the private catering for PC and allowing Kent to run day-to-day school dining. Powell is well known and liked in the Clinton community and that's where he could serve best," said Spivey.

PC study aims for self-improvement

Survey results tabulated; "extensive and exhaustive analysis" to follow

by Leighton Hart
STAFF WRITER

Since the fall of 1993, the faculty, staff and student body of Presbyterian College have been preparing a self study of the school in anticipation of the school's evaluation by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools (SACS). It was during this time that the directors of the self study were appointed, and things have been progressing steadily and successfully since then, according to self-study director Dr. George Ramsey, professor of religion.

Since it only happens every ten years, most students are not familiar with the self-study and evaluation process. "Every ten years, all accredited institutions have to engage in a process of self-assessment, to determine how clear they are about the institution's mission and how well they are accomplishing the goals and purposes set forth in their mission statements. The intention is to identify those areas of the institution which need improvement, and develop specific plans for accomplishing those improvements," said Ramsey.

This self-study is no easy task. The whole process involves, says Ramsey, "nearly two years of extensive and exhaustive analysis of all kinds of data (facts and figures about admissions, retention, financial aid, grade distribution, endowment, etc.) and opinion (survey of students, faculty, staff, administrators, alumni, trustees) about the college. All of the information is being prepared in anticipation of the SACS visit to the campus in March of 1996.

Surveys were given to students earlier in the semester, and some of the data has already been compiled, and is being analyzed and assessed now. The student survey results were of great interest to Ramsey. He found that the responses to the survey were not entirely surprising. The students responded positively about such programs as SWS, intramural athletics, and rated men's and women's intercollegiate soccer as their favorite sporting event. The negative responses were also not entirely surprising to Ramsey. The students responded negatively to questions about GDH, parking availability and minority recruitment. Ramsey was also impressed by the student participation in the survey. 743 students responded to the survey, representing all four classes and all walks of life. One of the advantages of the survey, Ramsey said, is that it can be used to recognize the concerns of specific groups on campus. The example he used was the fact that 209 students responded that they were varsity athletes. Knowing that, it is possible to look back through the survey, and see how the athletes responded to questions about the athletic programs at PC. From there, steps can be made toward improving the quality of the programs. For those who responded, the survey was a way to have their voices heard and changes made.

Assisting Ramsey with the self study are nearly 100 other people who sit on eight various committees. These committees are composed of selected faculty, staff and students of the college. The Associate Directors of the self study are Dr. Ron Deapney of the Academic Affairs Office and Professor Ann Moorefield of the English Department. The students who sit on the various committees were nominated by SGA at the beginning of the semester. The various committees report back to the Steering Committee in December, and a first draft of the comprehensive report will be produced in the summer of 1995.

While the self study is exhausting to the organizers, many are pleased that the college is actively focused on its own advancement. It's hard work, but the results are certainly worth the labor. In its mission statement the college says that "The compelling purpose of Presbyterian College, as a church-related college, is to develop the mental, physical, moral, and spiritual capacities of each student in preparation for a lifetime of personal and vocational fulfillment and responsible contribution to our democratic society and the world community." The goal of the self-study is to recognize where that mission is and is not being met, and to quickly develop plans for the necessary improvements.

Final word from the SACS committee comes in December of 1996.

Page 4...

On the Inside:

PC signs study abroad agreement with South Korea

Page 7...

Staff of the Month: Public Safety's Faye Barrington

Page 10...

Volleyball team captures Jacksonville State tournament to highlight season

GDH in need of substantial improvement

Student efforts to reform the college's dining service options and policies over the past two years have resulted in little noticeable change in Greenville Dining Hall. Current and former SGA officials negotiated with reluctant PC administrators, who promised to change the way that GDH feeds over 1000 people daily. After almost two years of promises, committees, reviews, and oversights on the college's part, what does the dining hall have to show for improvement? Not much, according to PC students, with over 75% saying in a spring 1994 survey that GDH does not offer adequate choices for a healthy diet.

Granted, there is probably a student faction on every college campus in the U.S. that complains about their institution's food. However, PC's faction unfortunately comprises a majority of the student body. Consequently, PC administrators are undoubtedly tired of hearing the complaints of students here, but have administrators quit really listening? The Blue Stocking acknowledges that most GDH personnel are personable and likeable individuals, but it takes more to effectively run a dining hall.

PC is continually trying to distinguish itself as a quality school far above the average college or university. To be a truly noteworthy school, though, means to strengthen all aspects of the institution, even the weakest areas of the college, not to just build up one department or heavily fund a particular program. The truth is that GDH needs improvement. What's wrong with the dining hall? Little selection (leftover, parched vegetables on the hot bar included), unhealthy preparation of entrees, repeated and leftover entrees (baked ham or some derivative was recently served over four times during the course of one week), the lack of a registered dietician to serve as director of dining services, the expenditure of college funds for a new identification card system which still has flaws seven weeks into the school year, and a staff which rarely listens to student comments and concerns.

GDH Director Vernon Powell proudly points to the fact that the dining hall comes in under budget each fiscal year and is one of the most cost-efficient operations on campus. However, saving nickels and dimes at the expense of students' health and well-being is not a point on which to brag, especially at a school where financial well-being is assured for many years to come.

The Blue Stocking recognizes that not every meal in GDH can be a five-course, black-tie affair. The time has come, though, for improvement. The absence of concrete plans for improvement, or even a re-evaluation of the current system, from college officials coupled with little action from either the administration or dining hall personnel lead students to believe that there must be a change either in the way decisions are made in GDH planning or in those who are ultimately responsible for food quality. There is a need for more change than just adding a salad bar or waffle maker to temporarily allay student qualms.

We at the Blue Stocking urge students to take advantage of the opportunity available this weekend to discuss concerns about the dining hall with parents who can in turn communicate these concerns with college administrators during the faculty/staff visitation period. Their financial influence and parental concern for your health may help to persuade college officials of the urgency and seriousness of this situation to the student body. The time has come for the student body to do more than merely gripe. If we as a collective whole truly believe that GDH is less than adequate, offering food of severely limited variety and, even more importantly, serving food that it is of poor nutritional value, then it is our right to be heard. The administration of PC has the ability to implement changes in GDH, but will only move upon the issue if forced to do so. Improvements will definitely mean more funding and more personnel (a dietician!).

It will take more than an editorial or an SGA food committee to bring out the needed changes in GDH food quality and nutrition, it will take the interest of the student body as a whole.

Letters to the Editor

STUDENT QUESTIONS DEAN OF STUDENTS' ACTIONS

I have noticed that Dean Nixon was been writing a lot of people up for drinking at fraternity court lately. I realize that it is his job to keep the student body under control, and to enforce student policies, but I think he is going about his job the wrong way.

By scaring people away from fraternity court he has encouraged people to look for places off campus to socialize. Fraternity court is the perfect place for people to go because it is far enough away from residential areas so that noise does not bother anyone, but close enough to the dorms for those who have been drinking to walk safely home. Transportation home from off campus activities could be dangerous for students because they could be picked up by Clinton police for public drunkenness if walking and risk wrecking or getting a DUI if driving.

If Nixon wants to stop underage drinking on campus, he should try to attract a different student body to PC. If PC sponsors more things for students to do on the weekends then the fraternities will not be emphasized as much and prospective students will have the opportunity to have a good time on their visits without being exposed to alcohol and the school will attract students that don't drink as much.

If Nixon continues to patrol fraternity court like he has been doing lately, the school will become a suitcase college and enrollment will go down. PC faculty, staff, and students have worked for a long time to make PC one of the best liberal arts colleges in the country and I would like to see PC stay that way.

DREW REFSHAUGE
Sophomore

FOOTBALL TEAM UNSPORTSMANLIKE

I am a graduate of Wofford College and a long-time follower of the Wofford PC football rivalry. Sadly, this rivalry led to a low point following PC's 10-7 victory in Spartanburg several weeks ago.

As the final ticks of the clock wound down and the Wofford players walked onto the field to shake hands of the Blue Hose, they were greeted with an unfortunate lack of sportsmanship on the part of the PC team. Rather than accepting the congratulations of the Terriers, PC players stomped and trashed Snyder Field's 50-yard line. (Ironically, this show of disrespect was followed by a public prayer by the PC players and coaches.)

Coming to reports at Wofford, the PC team proceeded to leave the visiting locker rooms with the showers running and food and tape all over the floors. Such displays of disrespect would be inexcusable at so-called "outlaw" programs and, indeed, even for a third-rate junior high school team. For a team from a school which thinks of itself as a dignified educational institution to show so little class should truly be an embarrassment.

Naturally, the PC players were excited to win at Wofford. Wofford was certainly proud to win in Clinton last season. But when Wofford beat PC last year, the Terriers shook the hands of their opponents and left the field without incident. Taunting and showing disrespect for another team would not have been tolerated by Wofford Coach Mike Ayers, nor by the Wofford community. Apparently, Coach John Perry and PC have a different standard.

PETER COOPER
Wofford Alumnus

STEERING COMMITTEE HEAD THANKS STUDENT BODY

On behalf of the steering committee for the Self Study, I want to express our appreciation to the student body for the time and thought which they devoted to completing the extensive survey recently conducted.

Elsewhere in the Blue Stocking is an article giving more details about the study's survey and some of its results. Some students may be interested in seeing a fuller summary of how various constituents of the College have assessed matters covered in the survey. When results are tabulated, copies will be available at the front desks of Thomson Library and Springs Campus Center.

Eight major committees are at work to evaluate all areas of college life. Each committee includes faculty, staff, and at least two students. Only if the self study is an honest appraisal of the College's work will plans for the future have a solid foundation. If at any time students have thoughts to share with any of these committees, I encourage them to contact a committee member or me.

Professor GEORGE RAMSEY
Director, Self Study

IFC to limit independent male visits to fraternity court

by Christie Grant
STAFF WRITER

The Inter-Fraternity Council has recently passed a new proposal to promote Greek unity, according to Greeks and their leaders. The proposal, according to IFC President John Sigman, is a result of the problems fraternities have been having with independent male students. These problems include pushing, shoving and fighting at the fraternity court usually involving independent students. Fraternity members get blamed for these type of problems, according to Sigman. "Therefore, the proposal is a culmination of these occurrences," Sigman commented.

The proposal will go into effect after Fraternity Rush, which ends the weekend of November 4-5. Every independent male will get a letter in their mailboxes which will outline the details of the proposal. Lance Dauby, a member of Pi Kappa Alpha who worked on the proposal, said that two fraternities, Pi Kappa Alpha and Pi Kappa Phi, agreed that independents must have a card that states their name, age and what fraternity invited them when they go out to fraternity court. The other four fraternities will have guest lists. If an independent isn't on a guest list or doesn't have a card for a particular fraternity, he will not be allowed into that fraternity house.

"An independent will not be limited to one house. Theoretically, an independent could be on all four guest lists and have a card admitting him to the other fraternities," Dauby also commented that a main reason for the new system is liability. "If an independent brings a cooler out to a fraternity house and the authorities found out about it, that fraternity could get shut down or kicked off campus. The same result would occur if an underage independent male was drinking alcohol at a house that he was not registered with," Dauby said.

Both Sigman and Dauby agreed that some situations involving male independents have gotten out of hand. They said that because non-Greeks pay no dues, and because some aren't paying respect to the houses they frequent, it's not fair to the members. "It's gotten to the point where some fraternity members are wondering what's the point of joining a fraternity when everyone's getting the same privileges," said Sigman.

"Some independents are just using us for partying, and they have to realize that that's not all that fraternities are about," said Dauby.

"As far as the fighting between non-fraternity members goes, the proposal makes a lot of sense because the fraternities are getting a bad rap for something that's not their fault. But I don't know if the guest lists are the way to solve the problem. There are some people that aren't causing problems that won't be on the guest lists," said Bebo Norman, an independent student.

Bernie Schultz, a graduate intern at PC who serves as the Greek Life Coordinator, said that the proposal is in effect to control the situations at fraternity court. He said, "I think this will help the situation because it will show people that fraternities are serious about taking responsibility for their actions. Because it's a new policy, it might not work at first, but you never know until you try."

Judicial Council sentences student guilty of vandalism

The Judicial Council convened on September 26 in the Thomson Library Auditorium to hold a trial for a student accused of vandalism, a Code of Conduct violation. The accused pled guilty to the charges. The Council requested both sides to present evidence and recommendations for sentencing. The prosecution presented its case, calling no witnesses and presenting evidence. Defense presented its case. Closing statements were made. Prosecution recommended suspension for two semesters, in addition to retribution and counseling. Defense asked for retribution and community service.

The Judicial Council went into deliberation. The Council elected to delay sentencing until a psychological evaluation of the defendant could be performed. After receiving approval from the evaluation for sentencing, the Council reconvened on October 6 in Chapman Conference Center and sentenced the student to sixty (60) hours of community service by December 16 and a $500 fine for retribution.

The accused was read the sentence and reminded of the right to appeal.

Judicial proceedings as presented in the Knapsack were followed. With no further business, the council adjourned.

—compiled from staff reports

Judicial Council members sentenced the student that pled guilty to vandalizing the floor of Doyle Hall to 60 hours of community service to be performed prior to the end of this semester and payment of $500 in fines. Pictured above is the section of the carpet which was burned by the student. photo courtesy Office of Residence Life, Judicial Council

PC

Tidbits

PC to host SC Intercollegiate Choir tonight

The state's top college singers will return to PC for the fifth consecutive year for their yearly workshop, culminating in a choir tonight at 7:30 p.m. in Edmunds Hall. Seating is limited, and PC students are advised to arrive early and bring your PC ID.

Sororities complete rush, fraternities in process

PC's three national sororities completed their formal rush activities Sunday with the traditional acceptance ceremonies held in front of Neville Hall. Over 100 females participated in the program, with 67 signing commitments to sororities Sunday, according to Panhellenic president Amy Robbins.

PC's six fraternities are in the midst of their rush programs. Fraternity rush ends Nov. 4. About 42% of PC students are affiliated with a Greek organization, according to college officials.

New academic center opening delayed

Construction delays caused by weather have pushed back the opening of PC's new Mathematics and Social Sciences Center. College officials now anticipate a January 1996 opening for the new building.

PC Players to present "Beside Herself"

PC players will bring the Harper Center's Caldwell Harper Theatre to life as Joe Pintauro's play "Beside Herself" made its PC debut last night. The play runs nightly through Saturday in addition to one matinee which will be offered Sunday at 2:30. For tickets and reservations, call 8524.

Scholarship established for children of Christian educators

Presbyterian College has established a $1000 individual scholarship for children of certified Christian educators in the PC USA church, beginning with the 95-96 academic year. Interested students should contact financial aid at 8290.

THE BLUE STOCKING

Presbyterian College • Clinton, South Carolina 29325
Volume LXXXVIII Number 3, October 28, 1994

Editor-in-Chief.....Tobin Turner
Managing Editor.....
News Editor.....Gray Lesene
Sports Editor.....Margaret Ellen Pender
Features Editor.....Amanda Barnes
Production Editor.....Brian Sacco
Photography Editor.....Jason Williams
Staff Advisor.....Ms. Gina Prosch

The Blue Stocking is a tri-weekly student publication of Presbyterian College. The paper serves as a forum of news and opinion of regional and national concern. For advertising, contact The Blue Stocking, Presbyterian College, Box 1061, Clinton, SC 29325. The Blue Stocking welcomes letters to the editor from all members of the PC community. Signatures are required. Letters are printed on a space available basis. The Blue Stocking reserves the right to edit all letters for proper grammar and punctuation. The final deadline for submitting letters is Friday at 12:00 pm on the week before publication.

Alpha Delta Pi congratulates our new Alphas!

Lori Adams
Julie Adkinson
Elizabeth Baxley
Christie Bolt
Debbie Broxton
Laura Caudell
Dawn Dachelet
Lindsey Edmonds
Camie Everhart
Kathleen Fountain

Virginia Gatewood
Mary Beth Gibbs
Hope Gossett
Elizabeth Hartman
Jill Heiser
Laurie Hettinger
Stephanie Hogan
Elizabeth Hubbard
Maggie Jackson
Taryn Jackson
Stephanie Jones

Jennifer Keane
Ginny Lawton
Hansell Lynn
Jeanna Middleton
Julie Olson
Ruth Sessions
Suzie Stewart
Page Tucker
Lindsay Wentz
Sara White

PC signs major agreement for South Korean study abroad

by Gray Lesesne
NEWS EDITOR

East meets west

Presbyterian College has established a new educational program with Han Nam University, offering PC students, faculty, and administrators the opportunity to study and conduct research in South Korea. The program also allows students, faculty, and administrators from Han Nam to study on the Presbyterian campus. Han Nam University president Dr. Chong Min Pak and Director of International Relations Dr. Nam Soon Kim visited PC recently to sign the agreement with PC president Ken Orr.

"This is a program that will open up opportunities for our students and faculty to come to know Korea through the particular academic and cultural programs and experience available at Han Nam University," Orr said. "We also expect to be enriched by the exchange students and faculty from Han Nam to PC. This program increases the college's long range plans to allow our students the opportunity to experience other countries, cultures, and communities as a part of their liberal arts education," he said.

Students will have an opportunity to study in Han Nam as a part of the college's unique foreign study program, which allows students to carry financial aid and transfer academic credits directly back to the institution. PC currently offers 18 approved study abroad programs including other institutions in Europe, China, and Japan. During their stay at Han Nam in

Presbyterian College President Dr. Kenneth B. Orr (right) looks on as Dr. Chong Min Pak, President of Han Nam University, signs a cooperative agreement between the two institutions. The agreement will allow PC students, faculty, and administrators to travel to South Korea, and PC will serve as a host for students and officials from Han Nam.

photo courtesy Steve Owens/PC News Services

Taejon City, South Korea students will enroll in classes with other students and take, among their basic courses basic Korean language, three East Asian history courses, Korean literature, and Asian economics. The study abroad in Korea is a full year program, and PC students can stay in either Han Nam's dormitories or in a host home, quite a challenging feat for a student knowing little or no Korean, said Kim.

Presbyterian College students will find the Han Nam experience different from their home school. PC's 212 acre campus will seem quite large compared to Han Nam's 80-acre campus holding 11,000 students. Dr. Ron Dempsey, assistant academic dean at PC, does not anticipate a rush to sign up for the program. However, Dempsey does expect a program to be established at Han Nam similar to the college's current summer program at Oxford University's Corpus Christi campus, which will allow students and faculty to do research and study such topics as economics, sciences, or other disciplines within a different culture. Dempsey does expect students from Han Nam to study on the PC campus soon. The program will also be open to other private college students in South Carolina.

The effort to establish such a program on campus was headed by Dr. John Somerville, a 1949 graduate of PC and a former professor at Han Nam. "Americans meet a lot of Asians on a regular basis in today's society. Wouldn't it be great to have an understanding of their culture and be able to develop that understanding during undergraduate study?" Somerville said. "The 20th century, to me, has been a waste because 70 million people have been killed by wars, disease, and genocide. We're interested in creating a new society for the 21st century, a society of peace and understanding. And as an alumnus of PC, I am proud of this school for taking part," he said. Somerville also credited Dr. Ron Burnside and Dr. Bill Moncrief for their assistance in bringing the program to PC.

Steve Owens, PC News Services Coordinator, contributed to this report.

Crop Walk to raise money, awareness for world hunger

Walk to be held Nov. 7th at Intramural Complex

by Tommy Reiser
STAFF WRITER

Though we may often think that famine is isolated to just a few third world countries, it is a problem of global proportions. In the brief span of one minute, 28 people die from hunger or other related diseases. Often, the worst hit are children. One child in the world in every ten dies before its first birthday, largely attributed to hunger. Here in the U.S., 20 million citizens may go hungry for at least some period each month.

Many times students' view on stopping world hunger is shaped by television commercials that ask for just one penny a day, so that a starving child may survive. Since most of us don't go running to dial that 800 number, her is an easy and rewarding way that we can make a difference. It's called the CROP walk and is coming to Presbyterian College. Presbyterian College is holding its annual CROP walk Monday, November 7th. All students are welcome to participate. On October 31st, there will be a sign up sheet in GDH. Then on the 7th, bring your walking shoes and come to the intramural track to walk from 4:30-6:00. Church World Service sponsors the CROP walks and the event is sponsored on campus by the Chaplain's office. Last year alone, there were close to 2000 walks worldwide. Individual participants gather sponsors who will donate money for a certain amount of time or distance that the individual walks.

The CROP gifts are then shared through partner agencies in more than 70 countries. They provide food, relief supplies, refugee assistance, preventive health-care, improvements in food production, and the further development of water resources. Currently, Church World Service is working to provide relief in Cambodia, Rwanda and Haiti as well as in the U.S.

"The goal of this year's walk is to have at least 75 walkers participate, with the person collecting the most money receiving a dinner for two at Terry's," said Alison Vaughan, a PC senior coordinating the event. "Feel free to stop by the Chaplain's office to pick up a sponsor sheet or ask any questions you may have. It's a great cause and will be a lot of fun, so come out and make a difference," said Vaughan. Help CROP stop hunger, around the block and around the world.

The only thing skimpy about lunch at Pizza Hut is the price.

$3.99
$2.99 Weekdays 11:30 a.m. - 1:00 p.m.
Lunch BUFFET
All You Can Eat

CLINTON ONLY
111 JACOBS HWY.
833 6800
LIMITED TIME

1 Large Specialty PIZZA for $10.99 or 2 Large PIZZA for $16.99

One Large Pizza For Medium Charge

© 1994 Pizza Hut, Inc. All rights reserved.

Campus & Clubs

Minority Student Union

The Minority Student Union encourages all students to join its efforts in spreading diversity throughout the campus. MSU serves to promote diversity and awareness on campus in addition to serving as a voice for PC's students of color. Any student can be a member of MSU and dues for the academic year are $10.00. Programming scheduled for the 1994-1995 academic year include service projects, car washes, parties, Sickle Cell Anemia fundraising, and "guest speaker" meetings addressing time management, financial planning, relationships, and various other topics of interest.

Peer Connectors

Congratulations to senior Tyler Van Leuven who won the Homecoming raffle contest sponsored by the Peer Connectors. Thanks to everyone who entered!

Pi Kappa Phi

Beta chapter would like to congratulate the following brothers whom were elected to offices for the upcoming year:

Jason Williams, Archon
Brian Sacco, Vice-Archon
Chris Jones, Treasurer
Tyler Binney, Secretary
Welsh Conder, Warden
Patrick Arnold, Historian
Steven Ellis, Chaplain

SUB & FCA

The Student Union Board, in conjunction with the Fellowship of Christian Athletes, is bringing country music to PC. Michael James will be in concert on Friday, November 18 at 7:30 pm in Belk Auditorium. Mr. James, who hails from Nashville, Tennessee, has recently performed with such music stars as Amy Grant and Michael W. Smith. Tickets are only $5.00 and can be purchased by contacting Casey Ross at 8507.

BACCHUS

YOU are invited to drive the Safe Ride Shuttle. Send your name, birthday, phone number, driver's license, and state to Box 251. If you prefer a particular night please include the date. Thanks!

Student Volunteer Services

Go "Into the Streets" to serve Laurens County on Saturday, November 12 from 9:00 am to 12:00 noon. Contact Melynda Ray at ext.8719 or call the SVS office at ext.8458. Thanks!

French professor remembers D-Day on anniversary

by Abigail Smith
STAFF WRITER

Parent's weekend activities set

Presbyterian College will welcome approximately 1,000 parents to campus Oct. 28-30 during the college's 38th annual Parents Weekend, giving family members of PC students an opportunity to learn more about the college, spend time with students, and enjoy various activities.

"For students, Presbyterian College is a home away from home. It is a place where they live, learn, and make new friends. Parents Weekend is an opportunity for students to share that experience with their families, and an opportunity for the college to thank parents for their support," said Grant Vosburgh, senior director of public relations.

Saturday's schedule begins with registration and refreshments at 9 a.m. at Belk Auditorium. An informative and entertaining program is planned for 10:30 a.m. in Belk Auditorium, including a look at Presbyterian's foreign study opportunities with a special focus on a spring trip to Honduras.

Parents will also have an opportunity to meet with faculty members throughout the morning, and may bid on items being offered through the SGA silent auction. A barbeque luncheon on Lake Orr followed by a matchup with SAC rival Wingate College will wrap up the afternoon, followed by a candlelight buffet in GDH Saturday night.

Sunday's schedule includes a worship service in Edmunds Hall and a matinee performance of "Beside Herself" in Harper Center.

Although the 50th anniversary of D-Day, the infamous World War II assault by the Allies, was celebrated this summer on June 6, Presbyterian College is currently planning for their own celebration of the historic victory. The commemorative events planned include a wide variety of experiences covering all aspects of the D-Day era and sentiment surrounding that period.

Recalling the landing in the beaches at Normandy, France on June 6, 1944 is the goal for the display that is to be set up in the lobby of Thomasson Library beginning Monday, November 7 and lasting through November 16. This proposed exhibition is hosted by Dr. Claudine Thire and students from the French department in the effort to increase awareness of the event, the importance it held and the impact it has made through the years. The display will also highlight the events, turning points and outcome of World War II with and emphasis on D-Day.

In addition to sponsoring the D-Day memorial display in the library, Dr. Thire, a French professor at PC, has her own remembrances of that time in history. Dr. Thire heartily welcome that the French extended to the soldiers who eventually liberated France beginning with the city of Paris. She remembers the destruction of her native city, Caen, including most of its churches and her father's workplace. Her memories also include the bombing and tragedy of lives lost because of the violence and warfare that caught innocent citizens. Dr. Thire also recalls that despite the devastation the French welcomed the Allies ashore and felt with their coming a hope for the future.

Supplementing this primary source for first hand D-Day experience, other aspects of the invasion are being recognized around campus. A concert will be held in Belk Auditorium at 7:30 p.m. on Wednesday, November 9 under the direction of Dr. Oleason and assistant Adam Alter. Some of the music performed will commemorate the second World War and the style of music popular during that time. The concert will feature senior Chris Coble and freshman Rosie Simon as soloists. The Blue Ladies and GDH are also getting involved with the activities by serving French style cuisine on the opening day of the library exhibition.

Dr. Claudine Thire remembers D-Day, and will help with a commemorative display at the library.

photo by Jason Williams

was born in Caen, France which is located near the beaches at Normandy. The professor can only vaguely remember actual events, however, she can recall the feeling and emotion of that monumental event. Among Dr. Thire's "mixed memories" are the feelings of relief and of a

PC signs major agreement for South Korean study abroad

by Gray Lesesne
NEWS EDITOR

East meets west

Presbyterian College has established a new educational program with Han Nam University, offering PC students, faculty, and administrators the opportunity to study and conduct research in South Korea. The program also allows students, faculty, and administrators from Han Nam to study on the Presbyterian campus. Han Nam University president Dr. Chong Min Pak and Director of International Relations Dr. Nam Soon Kim visited PC recently to sign the agreement with PC president Ken Orr.

"This is a program that will open up opportunities for our students and faculty to come to know Korea through the particular academic and cultural programs and experience available at Han Nam University," Orr said. "We also expect to be enriched by the exchange students and faculty from Han Nam to PC. This program increases the college's long range plans to allow our students the opportunity to experience other countries, cultures, and communities as a part of their liberal arts education," he said.

Students will have an opportunity to study in Han Nam as a part of the college's unique foreign study program, which allows students to carry financial aid and transfer academic credits directly back to the institution. PC currently offers 18 approved study abroad programs including other institutions in Europe, China, and Japan. During their stay at Han Nam in

Presbyterian College President Dr. Kenneth B. Orr (right) looks on as Dr. Chong Min Pak, President of Han Nam University, signs a cooperative agreement between the two institutions. The agreement will allow PC students, faculty, and administrators to travel to South Korea, and PC will serve as a host for students and officials from Han Nam.

photo courtesy Steve Owens/PC News Services

Taejon City, South Korea students will enroll in classes with other students and take, among their basic courses basic Korean language, three East Asian history courses, Korean literature, and Asian economics. The study abroad in Korea is a full year program, and PC students can stay in either Han Nam's dormitories or in a host home, quite a challenging feat for a student knowing little or no Korean, said Kim.

Presbyterian College students will find the Han Nam experience different from their home school. PC's 212 acre campus will seem quite large compared to Han Nam's 80-acre campus holding 11,000 students. Dr. Ron Dempsey, assistant academic dean at PC, does not anticipate a rush to sign up for the program. However, Dempsey does expect a program to be established at Han Nam similar to the college's current summer program at Oxford University's Corpus Christi campus, which will allow students and faculty to do research and study such topics as economics, sciences, or other disciplines within a different culture. Dempsey does expect students from Han Nam to study on the PC campus soon. The program will also be open to other private college students in South Carolina.

The effort to establish such a program on campus was headed by Dr. John Somerville, a 1949 graduate of PC and a former professor at Han Nam. "Americans meet a lot of Asians on a regular basis in today's society. Wouldn't it be great to have an understanding of their culture and be able to develop that understanding during undergraduate study?" Somerville said. "The 20th century, to me, has been a waste because 70 million people have been killed by wars, disease, and genocide. We're interested in creating a new society for the 21st century, a society of peace and understanding. And as an alumnus of PC, I am proud of this school for taking part," he said. Somerville also credited Dr. Ron Burnside and Dr. Bill Moncrief for their assistance in bringing the program to PC.

Steve Owens, PC News Services Coordinator, contributed to this report.

Crop Walk to raise money, awareness for world hunger

Walk to be held Nov. 7th at Intramural Complex

by Tommy Reiser
STAFF WRITER

Though we may often think that famine is isolated to just a few third world countries, it is a problem of global proportions. In the brief span of one minute, 28 people die from hunger or other related diseases. Often, the worst hit are children. One child in the world in every ten dies before its first birthday, largely attributed to hunger. Here in the U.S., 20 million citizens may go hungry for at least some period each month.

Many times students' view on stopping world hunger is shaped by television commercials that ask for just one penny a day, so that a starving child may survive. Since most of us don't go running to dial that 800 number, her is an easy and rewarding way that we can make a difference. It's called the CROP walk and is coming to Presbyterian College. Presbyterian College is holding its annual CROP walk Monday, November 7th. All students are welcome to participate. On October 31st, there will be a sign up sheet in GDH. Then on the 7th, bring your walking shoes and come to the intramural track to walk from 4:30-6:00. Church World Service sponsors the CROP walks and the event is sponsored on campus by the Chaplain's office. Last year alone, there were close to 2000 walks worldwide. Individual participants gather sponsors who will donate money for a certain amount of time or distance that the individual walks.

The CROP gifts are then shared through partner agencies in more than 70 countries. They provide food, relief supplies, refugee assistance, preventive health-care, improvements in food production, and the further development of water resources. Currently, Church World Service is working to provide relief in Cambodia, Rwanda and Haiti as well as in the U.S.

"The goal of this year's walk is to have at least 75 walkers participate, with the person collecting the most money receiving a dinner for two at Terry's," said Allison Vaughan, a PC senior coordinating the event. "Feel free to stop by the Chaplain's office to pick up a sponsor sheet or ask any questions you may have. It's a great cause and will be a lot of fun, so come out and make a difference," said Vaughan. Help CROP stop hunger, around the block and around the world.

The only thing skimpy
about lunch at Pizza Hut
is the price.

$3.99

$2.99
Weekdays
11:30 a.m. - 1:00 p.m.

Lunch
BUFFET

All You Can Eat

CLINTON ONLY
111 JACOBS HWY.
833-6800
LIMITED TIME

1 Large Specialty
PIZZA for $10.99

2 Large
PIZZA for $16.99

One Large Pizza
For Medium Charge

May add up to $2.99 for pizza or $1.99 for pizza and drink. Tax and tip extra. *Not valid with other offers. Offer good 11/1-11/7/94. See us for details.

May add up to $2.99 for pizza or $1.99 for pizza and drink. Tax and tip extra. *Not valid with other offers. Offer good 11/1-11/7/94. See us for details.

Campus & Clubs

Minority Student Union

The Minority Student Union encourages all students to join its efforts in spreading diversity throughout the campus. MSU serves to promote diversity and awareness on campus in addition to serving as a voice for PC's students of color. Any student can be a member of MSU and dues for the academic year are $10.00. Programming scheduled for the 1994-1995 academic year include service projects, car washes, parties, Sickle Cell Anemia fundraising, and "guest speaker" meetings addressing time management, financial planning, relationships, and various other topics of interest.

Peer Connectors

Congratulations to senior Tyler Van Leuven who won the Homecoming raffle contest sponsored by the Peer Connectors. Thanks to everyone who entered!

Pi Kappa Phi

Beta chapter would like to congratulate the following brothers whom were elected to offices for the upcoming year:

Jason Williams, Archon
Brian Sacco, Vice-Archon
Chris Jones, Treasurer
Tyler Binney, Secretary
Welsh Conder, Warden
Patrick Arnold, Historian
Steven Ellis, Chaplain

SUB & FCA

The Student Union Board, in conjunction with the Fellowship of Christian Athletes, is bringing country music to PC. Michael James will be in concert on Friday, November 18 at 7:30 pm in Belk Auditorium. Mr. James, who hails from Nashville, Tennessee, has recently performed with such music stars as Amy Grant and Michael W. Smith. Tickets are only $5.00 and can be purchased by contacting Casey Ross at 8507.

BACCHUS

YOU are invited to drive the Safe Ride Shuttle. Send your name, birthday, phone number, driver's license, and state to Box 251. If you prefer a particular night please include the date. Thanks!

Student Volunteer Services

Go "Into the Streets" to serve Laurens County on Saturday, November 12 from 9:00 am to 12:00 noon. Contact Melynda Ray at ext. 8719 or call the SVS office at ext. 8458. Thanks!

French professor remembers D-Day on anniversary

by Abigail Smith
STAFF WRITER

Although the 50th anniversary of D-Day, the infamous World War II assault by the Allies, was celebrated this summer on June 6, Presbyterian College is currently planning for their own celebration of the historic victory. The commemorative events planned include a wide variety of experiences covering all aspects of the D-Day era and sentiment surrounding that period.

Recalling the landing in the beaches at Normandy, France on June 6, 1944 is the goal for the display that is to be set up in the lobby of Thomason Library beginning Monday, November 7 and lasting through November 16. This proposed exhibition is hosted by Dr. Claudine Thire and students from the French department in the effort to increase awareness of the event, the importance it held and the impact it has made through the years. The display will also highlight the events, turning

Dr. Claudine Thire remembers D-Day, and will help with a commemorative display at the library.

photo by Jason Williams

was born in Caen, France which is located near the beaches at Normandy. The professor can only vaguely remember actual events, however, she can recall the feeling and emotion of that monumental event. Among Dr. Thire's "mixed memories" are the feelings of relief and of a points and outcome of World War II with an emphasis on D-Day.

In addition to sponsoring the D-Day memorial display in the library, Dr. Thire, a French professor at PC, has her own remembrances of that time in history. Dr. Thire hearty welcome that the French extended to the soldiers who eventually liberated France beginning with the city of Paris. She remembers the destruction of her native city, Caen, including most of its churches and her father's workplace. Her memories also include the bombing and tragedy of lives lost because of the violence and warfare that caught innocent citizens. Dr. Thire also recalls that despite the devastation the French welcomed the Allies ashore and felt with their coming a hope for the future.

Supplementing this primary source for first hand D-Day experience, other aspects of the invasion are being recognized around campus. A concert will be held in Belk Auditorium at 7:30 p.m. on Wednesday, November 9 under the direction of Dr. Oleason and assistant Adam Alter. Some of the music performed will commemorate the second World War and the style of music popular during that time. The concert will feature senior Chris Coble and freshman Rosie Simon as soloists. The Blue Ladies and GDH are also getting involved with the activities by serving French style cuisine on the opening day of the library exhibition.

Exposure to the "real world" is exposure to diversity

by Amanda Barnes
FEATURES EDITOR

In the past couple years I've seen more emphasis placed on diversity than ever before, and I have yet to truly understand exactly how that term applies to my life. I know that diversity is linked to experiencing new ideas and cultures, but is it simply a one-time thing? Maybe one of the reasons we need to experience more diversity is so that we can begin to understand each other better. After all, understanding is the first step to respect and tolerance, and this world could use much more of each.

You might ask, "What is the point of understanding..." and take a "live and let live" attitude, but in the end what good will that bring humankind? I believe in order to accomplish things of consequence in this world such as: maintaining peace, setting guidelines, and solving problems we will at one point need to cooperate and work together. I find it extremely ironic that in the midst of a world that is screaming for peace there exists an intolerant bubble that separates people into groups of commonalities. In my opinion this first step toward harmony includes a great deal of tolerance.

I agree that we do not have much exposure to the "real world" and it's array of culture within the imaginary boundaries of PC's campus. Nevertheless, we need to examine what experiences and ideas we do have among us and how we incorporate or exclude them from our lives. Do we truly respect each other? Can we really accept someone that has nothing in common with us, and can we understand their point of view? If we cannot learn to get along and respect differences, what is the point of being exposed to differences at all?

I guess it can all be traced back to the importance of basic respect for human life. After all, that is the underlying reason we can respect one another. This topic can be taken in another direction if we look at the increasing number of sexual harassment cases, rape cases or even the violence that stems from racial injustices found in the news daily, but doesn't that also go back to basic respect for a human's right to life?

I'm not an idealist, and I do recognize that respect isn't a magic problem-solver for all the problems of the world. However, I would like to think that I'm doing my part to make our world a little easier to live by "swallowing my pride" and beginning to look at things from a different perspective. Maybe Aretha was right all, R-E-S-P-E-C-T...

Peer pressure emphasised during Alcohol Awareness Month

If an Olympic-sized swimming pool were filled with beer, wine, and distilled spirits, the students body at a typical United States College would drain it during a single year.

That fact — and knowledge that well over 430 million gallons of alcoholic beverages are consumed annually by the more than 12 million college students in the United States — is enough to prompt Presbyterian College officials to supplement their regular alcohol awareness programs with a series of special programs during October as part of National Collegiate Alcohol Awareness Month.

"This is all about peers talking to peers. That is much more powerful than an administrator trying to talk to students," said Resa Welch, assistant dean of students at Presbyterian College. "We want students to care enough about each other to discuss alcohol as a problem on college campuses. We want students to care enough about themselves to recognize a drinking problem and get help. And we want them to say that as students at Presbyterian College they are smart enough to recognize these problems and come up with solutions."

Because National Collegiate Alcohol Awareness Week falls during Presbyterian College's fall break, Welch and Andy Altzer, director of residence life, elected to establish a month-long series of programs. Events range from videos and discussion groups to a party which includes "mocktails," non-alcoholic alternatives to popular alcoholic drinks. Another program called "Letter to a Friend" allows students to send a note through campus mail expressing their concern over a friend's drinking.

The majority of the events are sponsored and administered by students or student groups. "Students have been bombarded with information about alcohol abuse since middle school and high school. But we do a pre-test in our Introduction to Collegiate Life class, and most freshmen are surprised at how much they need to learn," Altzer said. "We don't preach to students, but we share statistics that have been generated at PC. Although they may not be interested in what's happening at another school, it is his home when they know we might be talking about their roommate."

"We've compared the drinking activity at Presbyterian College with other campuses, and although it is lower, that doesn't make it right. The way we approach it is to let students know that this is their community and they need to take care of it."

The National Collegiate Alcohol Awareness Month events are part of Presbyterian College's Peers Empowering Peers program, which was bolstered this summer by a two-year grant from the Fund for the Improvement of Postsecondary Education and actively involves students in alcohol and drug education programs on campus.

"The better informed students are, the better the chance they will make low-risk drinking decisions," Welch said. "There is also a large percentage of students who either choose not to drink or choose not to abuse alcohol, and some students indicate there is a slight upward trend in these groups," Welch said. "I think the trend now is to get students to examine what norms we have created regarding drinking and find ways to change those norms."

CEP to address getting high...naturally!

George Obermeier will introduce the key to "natural highs" when he speaks November 1 at Presbyterian College's Belk Auditorium. The 11 am program, part of Presbyterian College's recognition of National Collegiate Alcohol Awareness Month, is open to the public at no charge.

An educational humorist with a positive prevention message, Obermeier is nationally recognized for his work in the development of student assistance programs. He currently serves as vice president of J. Mayer & Associates, an educational consultant firm promoting wellness and developing human potential.

Obermeier was recognized by NOSAPP (the National Organization of Student Assistance Programs and Professionals) as the Outstanding Student Assistance Professional of 1988. In 1990, he received NOSAPP's Outstanding Prevention Program in Higher Education Award for his work at Dickinson College in Carlisle, Pa. Key topics in his work include natural highs, as well as the use of humor and creativity to avoid burnout.

His background in working with substance abuse includes a five-year period as executive director of a 100-bed hospital for drug and alcohol residential treatment in Williamsburg, Pa.

As honors graduate at Frostburg State College, Obermeier received his master's degree from Penn State University, where he also completed doctoral work in sports psychology and taught for eight years. He is also active in continuing education work at Rutgers University Summer School of Alcohol Studies.

The program is being sponsored by Presbyterian's Office of Student Affairs in conjunction with the Athletic Department. For more information, call 833-8285.

Heavily debated fall rush becomes a reality

By Amanda Barnes
FEATURES EDITOR

This year's version of fraternity and sorority rush is the by-product of much deliberation between PC's Greek leaders, faculty advisors and committees. "October rush" for the Greek organizations on campus is a bitter-sweet fruit of labor that spans four years.

Work on reforming fall rush and moving it within the academic year began in 1991 when concern was voiced by a faculty member for the grades of the students who opted to go through rush. The observation suggested rush influenced grades for the worse, and in light of the student's best interests, a motion was made to change the time of rush in efforts to alleviate the academic strain students face. Following this motion committees were established and information was gathered on both sides of the issue. Dr. David Evans, chemistry professor and rush decision committee member, summarized the event: "What got the whole thing started was the effect it had on academics."

Originally PC had Greek rush activities scheduled for the fall at the start of each new academic year like most colleges and universities with a Greek system. However, as problems arose changes were proposed and goals were set. In January 1992, PC Greeks celebrated their first deferred rush but after evaluation even this plan did not find satisfaction with faculty or Greek members. By postponing rush to second semester another set of problems were created and most of the strain was felt by the rushees themselves. After the initial stages of rush, the new pledge classes of the sororities and fraternities expressed their concerns about the revised system and launched a new strategy for reconstruction. Remembering the problems of deferred rush and the excitement of devising a new plan, Leigh Hearnburg recalls the changes: "That [proposed fall rush] was one of my biggest goals in joining a sorority and Panhellenic."

To understand all aspects of the dilemma, polls were taken campus-wide and within sororities; the information collected went to the Panhellenic Council for evaluation. With these polls they found that deferred rush did not solely affect the sororities and their rushees, but the entire campus. The polls exposed a definite decrease in school spirit and student involvement at a time when freshmen participation could be a deciding variable. Once Panhellenic had a solid information base they took it to a faculty committee for review. Recognizing faculty makes the final decisions regarding rush, including its general organization and scheduled time during the year, Panhellenic listened to the suggestions made and took them into consideration in forming their formal proposal to move rush back to the fall. However, before the faculty could approve the switch, the data collected along with the proposal by Panhellenic had to be approved and examined by Social and Greek Affairs and then by Student Affairs. After passing a careful examination by both committees the Panhellenic presentation was scheduled to appear before the faculty, where they were to explain their agenda and answer questions posed by the committee members. During the struggle to bring fall rush back to PC, the Interfraternity Council (IFC) joined Panhellenic in the dispute though they were prompted by different motives. By joining forces the Greek councils worked together toward the common goal, this cooperation increased student support even further. Before the close of the 1992 academic year the faculty voted on the ideas and proposals for fall rush, though without a full presentation from Panhellenic. The decision of the faculty was to keep a deferred rush system until more information could be obtained. This small setback did not dampen the energy of Panhellenic and IFC and in 1993 they tried again after collecting more polls and more student opinions. Passing through the lower committees once again it was the faculty's vote that would seal the fate of rush at PC. After their address to the committee, the representatives of Panhellenic and IFC, endured an extremely close vote that ended in defeat for the reconstruction of fall rush. Yet through the loss a compromise was made as another proposal was offered by a committee member to allow fall rush to take place anytime after fall break with the stipulation that no more changes were to be made for at least five years. The Greek council representatives welcomed that compromising decision and began planning for "October rush" for the 1994 academic year.

As the result of compromise this year PC's Greek system held their first "partially deferred" rush in hopes of solving most of the problems that plagued other alternatives for rush. Hoping for the best Hearnburg commented, "Panhellenic council and even IFC put so much work into this decision. I don't think many people realize just how much time was spent on it."

Barrington enlightens Public Safety, campus with smiles

by Stephanie Hogan
STAFF WRITER

She doesn't carry a gun by her side, she isn't involved in high speed chases and she has never made a drug bust. Despite these things, Faye Barrington, with her honesty and efficiency, holds together one of Presbyterian's most important divisions, Public Safety.

For almost two years, Mrs. Barrington has held the position of secretary of public safety where she helps Chief Grey Mason and his staff to stay in order. Originally, Barrington is from Columbia, SC. She attended the University of South Carolina where she obtained a degree in secretarial science. She moved to Clinton after living in Whitmire, SC and worked for three attorneys until Mason offered her a job at Presbyterian. "Working for three lawyers in town gave Mrs. Barrington the experience necessary for her job," said Chief Mason. "Her personality is such that when the position opened up, she was the first on my list of people who I knew could handle the responsibilities of the job."

As the wife of Phillip Barrington, and mother of high school daughter Tyra, and as secretary of Public Safety from 8:30am to 5:00pm weekdays, Mrs. Barrington keeps herself quite busy; however, she finds time to do the things in life that she enjoys most like regularly attending the First Baptist Faye Barrington, secretary in the Public Safety office, is shown in a familiar spot: behind the desk. Students paying parking fines or replacing dorm cards often see Mrs. Barrington in action.

Church of Clinton, spending time with her family and working in the yard.

As secretary of Public Safety, Barrington does everything from preparing I.D. cards to running the door-access computer to daily maintaining the parking tickets that are written to many PC students at least once during their stay at the college. The most important of her duties is secretarial work for Mason such as screening calls and setting up appointments which, according to Mason, she does with "an excellent attitude."

"She always tries to be really helpful.

Music professor takes skill beyond classroom

CLINTON, S.C. — Fresh from their appearance on "CBS This Morning," Michael Miller and David Rowe, who perform and record as The Miller-Rowe Consort, will present a concert Oct. 13 in Presbyterian College's Edmunds Hall.

The 7:30 p.m. concert is open to the public at no charge. For more information call 833-8285.

The Miller-Rowe Consort, which blends the sounds of the hammer dulcimer and the classical guitar, was featured performing "Oh What A Beautiful Morning" for a segue during the Sept. 30 edition of "CBS This Morning." The show uses that tune as its theme song.

"We were very excited when we heard it would be on national television," said Miller, a Spartanburg resident who teaches guitar at Presbyterian College. "The unusual thing is that we had two or three other people suggest that we should do a tape, and it had rattled around in the back of my mind. But I never came up with a way to do it."

Miller and Rowe, pastor of the Blacksburg ARP Church in Blacksburg, S.C., have developed a fan following in the Carolinas through their performances at such events as First Night Greenville, the Beale Chere Festival, and Christmas at Biltmore Estate. The artists' repertoire includes the traditional, Appalachian folk, old-time, Celtic, and early American music. Both instruments were also used in the art and folk music of Europe, especially during the Medieval, Renaissance, and Baroque periods.

The Miller-Rowe Consort has created its own arrangements of music from those periods, as well as creating original music aimed at tapping the musical potential the unique combination offers.

"There are guitar and hammer dulcimer duos around, but what makes us different is the use of the classical guitar, which has a real sweet sound different from that of the steel string guitar," Miller said. "The combination provides a happy, cheerful sound and I think that comes through in our music."

Rowe, who holds a bachelor of music education degree from Winthrop University, taught elementary music for three years before earning a master of divinity degree from Erskine Theological Seminary. Miller, who holds master of music and bachelor of music degrees from the University of Georgia, has been featured as a solo artist on the South Carolina Public Radio program, "The Attentive Ear."

PC music professor Michael Miller pictured with guitar.

photo by Jason Williams

Attention Seniors and Underclassmen
Senior and underclass portraits for the 1995 Pac saC are coming up!

Underclass Portraits are October 31-November 1 Senior Portraits are November 2-3

Underclass portraits will be taken on the 2nd floor of Springs

Senior portraits will be taken in the lobby of Edmunds and on the West Plaza

Please dress appropriately - Senior men are required to wear coat and tie and Senior ladies are required to wear dress attire

Senior sitting fee of $10.00 will be collected at the time of the photograph

Appointments Available or Just Drop In

VaVoom Products & Rofler

RICK'S BARBER SHOP
314 W. Pitt St.
Clinton, SC 29325
833-3670

Owner & Manager
RICK PARRISH

Hours
Tues-Fri 9-6
Sat 9-1

Homecoming '94: A weekend to remember

Clockwise: Homecoming Queen Vanessa McAlister, and escort Tyler Hudson take the ceremonial victory ride around Bailey Field; Junior Megan Ewald participates in painting the wall around the new mathematics and social sciences building; Four "Clintonites" ham it up in the annual Blue Sox Festival. A good time was had by participants and audience alike; As a highlight to the weekend, PC trounced an over-matched Catawba Squad 62-14.

photo by Chris MacLeod

photo by Jay Therrell

photo by Chris MacLeod

photo by Chris MacLeod

Buy A Pizza

FREE
Salad BarFREE
BreadsticksFREE
Dessert

Get A Meal

When you purchase any medium or large pizza at regular menu price

DINE-IN ONLY

5:30 - 8:00 P.M.

Available for a limited time at participating units. Days and times may vary. Offer good for up to 2 people per medium pizza and up to 4 people per large or BIGFOOT® pizza. Not valid with Personal Pan Pizza® or any other offer.

111 JACOBS HWY.

833-5300

$3 off a large
Pizza or $2 off a medium
Pizza

2 Medium Specialty Pizzas $13.99

Not valid with BIGFOOT® pizza or with any other offer.
Offer good for up to 2 people per medium pizza and up to 4 people per large or BIGFOOT® pizza. Not valid with Personal Pan Pizza® or any other offer.

Not valid with BIGFOOT® pizza or with any other offer.
Offer good for up to 2 people per medium pizza and up to 4 people per large or BIGFOOT® pizza. Not valid with Personal Pan Pizza® or any other offer.

Oxfam America

November 16 is a great time to go hungry!

"Give a man a fish and he eats for a day. Teach a man to fish and he eats for a lifetime"

Help fight world wide hunger! Sign up the week of November 6-11 in GDH at lunch or dinner to donate the cost of your supper to Oxfam on November 16. Oxfam is an international organization that helps fight world hunger through cultural education, not handouts. For each person who signs up GDH will donate $2.50. Your help is appreciated in making Oxfam '94 a success!!!

PC baseball player competes with a golden glove

by Margaret Ellen Pender
SPORTS EDITOR

How many little boys dream of playing baseball in the majors someday? We've all seen them running around the neighborhood park wearing all of the latest equipment, which is always about four sizes too big. Their stiff hats shadow their dirty, innocent faces and their shirts usually read something like "Bubba's Exterminating."

About every fourth year, those same little boys are taken with a new fantasy. How would it feel to play baseball in the Olympics and represent the USA? The thought of standing under the bright lights of a stadium in the warm night air waiting to receive a medal is almost too great for a young mind, or any mind, to imagine.

Although you would not recognize him now as the kid whose fly ball might have cracked your windshield, Ryan Kane was once one of those little boys who crammed ten pieces of gum into his mouth and ten batting gloves into his back pocket and dreamt of playing for the Boston Red Sox.

Baseball became a part of Ryan's life when he was very young; in fact his mom still has home videos of him swinging a bat at age two.

Since those years of tee-ball, Ryan has developed into an exceptional player, and his talents have not gone unnoticed. Former Presbyterian head coach Tim Corbin actually signed the third baseman simply on the basis of his high school stats and coach's recommendation. Ironically, Ryan (also a quarterback/defensive back) had been interested in securing a football scholarship and then attempting to become a walk-on member of a baseball team. Fortunately for PC, however, he decided to accept the offer and joined the Blue Hose squad in the fall of 1993.

During the summer of 1994, Ryan gained even more experience and recognition while competing in the Cape Cod league against some of the best college age players in the country. Not surprisingly, he was chosen as a starter for the All-Star team and from that honor sprouted the roots of what may become the fulfillment of those childhood dreams. Ryan was one of 72 players in the nation to receive an invitation to try out for team USA which will compete in world games next summer and then in the Olympics of 1996. After a tryout in Miami on November 1-7, a team of approximately 25 will be chosen, and those players will be the ones who begin preparation to represent the Stars & Stripes in '96.

Regardless of his fate in the tryout, Ryan will don a Blue Hose uniform in the spring and undoubtedly continue to be quite a powerhouse for PC. Although he missed the majority of last season with a broken hand, Ryan has been so impressive in his few performances that teammate Jason Bradley was confident in his assertion that "Ryan Kane could have a good shot at playing in the majors someday." With all of that talent, you might expect to be able to recognize Ryan easily as the cocky guy with the strong arm and the quick bat, but if you go out to a PC game or if you happen to be watching Olympic baseball in two years, look for the rather quiet, modest guy who smiles genuinely as he drops the bat and watches the ball sail out of the park.

Freshman student finds joy in "cutting" outside of class

Press Release

When a new freshman class arrives at Presbyterian College each fall, the students quickly learn that faculty members are strict in regards to "cuts." In fact, many professors encourage students to never miss a class.

Elizabeth Elliot of Estill, S.C., is a member of Presbyterian College's 1994-95 freshman class, and she has had plenty of success with "cuts." She even has her professors' blessing.

Confused? Elliot has made the transition well to college life and does indeed attend classes. Her "cutting" is a hobby reserved for skilled equestrians - a two-and-a-half minute ride during which horse and rider must isolate one cow from thirty head of cattle using a combination of hand and horse movements.

The sport originated when cowboys needed to separate cows from a herd to doctor or brand the animals. Eventually, the cowboys began making wagers to see which of them were the most skilled at cutting.

"It's addictive. I love horses and being able to spend time outdoors, so it is a great hobby. It is also one of the most exciting and hardest things I have ever done," Elliot said.

Elliot has proven herself to be a quick study in the classroom and in the corral. She placed fourth among 80 riders during a competition last summer in Fort Worth, Texas, added a top ten finish at the Augusta (Ga.) Jubilee, which included riders from North Carolina, South Carolina, and Georgia, and earlier this month she claimed a first place finish at Raleigh (N.C.) Cutting Series.

In addition to displaying her skilled riding abilities, Elliot has also shared her intellectual prowess by winning a speech contest at the Fort Worth competition. The combination of physical and mental skills is necessary for success in the sport of cutting, according to Elliot.

"A lot of the sport is really mental. You have to be a good rider, but you also have to stay as still as possible at all times," Elliot said. "You worry about how you are riding, how your horse is performing, and what cow you have picked out. It can be difficult not to get stressed out," she said.

Elliot became interested in the sport at age 13, after her mother took up cutting and encouraged her to try it. She proved to be a natural and has been addicted to the sport ever since.

Now that she is a full-time student at Presbyterian College, she has sacrificed much of her practice and riding times to avoid "cuts" despised by professors. However, she has not forsaken the sport or her riding partner completely, as she travels to competitions on weekends.

In fact, she is eagerly anticipating upcoming events in Columbia and Augusta after getting some recent practice time during fall break.

"I miss practice because I used to get to ride every day, but now I have to wait for the weekend to compete. You can't just have a trainer work the horse and expect to be at top form," she said.

Elliot hopes her studies will pay off in a career as an elementary school teacher, but for now she is content to focus on her studies and occasionally controlling herds of cattle instead of elementary students. Eventually, she says, she will mix her two loves.

"Right now, I compete against adults. Men and women also compete against each other and there is no seniors division, so there is no real handicap. I plan to keep riding and competing as long as I am able," she said.

INTO THE NIGHT

AT

Terry's

Terry's Fine Dining

Free milkshake with any entree

offer expires November 18, 1994

Terry's Fine Dining Open 6am until 10pm

PC Athlete's campus contributions not confined to sports arena

by Margaret Ellen Pender
SPORTS EDITOR

If I had to choose one phrase to describe PC student-athletes, I would borrow a catchy commercial jingle which is familiar to us all. To me, Blue Hose varsity athletes resemble the Energizer Bunny; "they just keep going and going and going!"

While I think that I realized upon arrival here on campus that the vast majority of Blue Hose athletes are not merely jocks/jockettes who concentrate solely on their respective sports, I became thoroughly convinced of the unique nature of our athletes over the course of the last week.

After watching everyone who was involved with sorority rush suffer from an occasional STRESS ATTACK due to the pressures of time, school, etc. I was amazed by the calm, focused approach of the female athletes who seemed to have limitless energy and awe-inspiring ability to juggle their chaotic schedules. As I watched them slip in through a side door with hair wet and costumes in hand, slightly out of breath from the hurried dash, I developed a complete appreciation and admiration for the involvement and dedication of Blue Hose athletes.

Of course, Blue Hose athletes are not only involved in Greek life, but in numerous areas of campus activity. SVS, FCA, MSU, SUB, WF, and SGA are just a few of the organizations which have benefitted from the labors of PC athletes, and most leaders of these groups will attest to the fact that our Blue Hose give 110% on and off the field.

Academic achievement, however, is arguably the most praiseworthy characteristic of many Presbyterian varsity athletes. Just as all students, they are required to fulfill the rigorous standards of the college, which include labs and CEPs. Perhaps it is the busy schedule of each day which inspires many athletes to learn the invaluable art of time management, and thus they are able to achieve in the classroom just as they are on the field. As a result, our athletes do not graduate with meaningless diplomas which were actually earned by someone else; instead they depart from PC with the tools and confidence to find success in the business world, and they leave to Presbyterian more than a few additional trophies to display in the case.

Lady Hose capture 2nd place at Jacksonville State

by Margaret Ellen Pender
SPORTS EDITOR

No one would have dreamed that a young squad such as the 1994 Blue Hose volleyball team would enjoy such great success. The Lady Hose have demonstrated, however, that talent and hard work can overcome lack of experience.

Currently, Presbyterian's record stands at 23-9 overall (9-4 SAC) which includes recent victories over North Alabama, Alabama-Huntsville, West Georgia, and most notably previously unbeaten USC-Spartanburg. All of the previously mentioned wins were notched last weekend at the Jacksonville State Invitational, where PC advanced to the finals before falling to host Jacksonville State. While settling for a second place finish may have been slightly disappointing for the Hose, their elation over the semi-final victory could not be dulled; a mere four days prior to the match at Jacksonville State, PC had suffered a setback at the hands of USC-Spartanburg (13-15, 2-15, 15-9, 2-15), but at the neutral site the Lady Hose came out of the locker room on fire and downed USC-S 15-11, 15-12, 15-13.

Sophomore Watoma Williams, who earned All-Tournament accolades, paced the Hose with 17 kills in the semi-final match and 18 kills and six blocks in the finals. For her impressive efforts, Williams was also named SAC player of the week; she continues to lead the conference in kills per game and hitting percentage.

Erin Booth digs a ball in a match against Wofford,

photo by Tobin Turner

Junior co-captain Kristy Tarallo surpassed a milestone in her career last weekend; she broke Christi Wynn's record to become the all-time dig leader at PC. Tarallo, who leads the squad with an average of 4.9 digs/game, has now recorded 1,639 digs in her career.

Obviously, the Lady Blue Hose, who are currently ranked third in the SAC, devote much attention to the team concept, but several other individuals have made noteworthy contributions which serve to further the success of this squad. Freshmen Erin Booth (8.0 spg) and Jenny Frieling (5.2 spg) have certainly stepped up to fill the essential roles of consistent setters; without their precision, power hitters such as Williams, Tarallo, and junior Brooke Fleming would not be able to leave opponents and spectators marvelling at their ability. Freshman Mary Kruse has also proved to be quite an asset to the defensive scheme of Presbyterian; she averages 3.72 digs/game.

As the season draws to a close, the Lady Hose look to be in good standing for post-season play. If the Hose continue to perform with the poise and intensity which they have displayed thus far, a first year coach and a young squad will much to celebrate

Golf team fares well in early season

By John Scott
STAFF WRITER

The Presbyterian Golf team is off to a marvelous start as they have placed well in three tournaments. The first was Carson Newman's permission hill golf tournament in which PC's two teams swept first and second place and took five of the seven lowest scores. Sophomore Chris Wilkins was the low medalist with rounds of 72 and 70 followed by Chris Owen (third 75-75), Jim Kent (fourth 75-76), Perrin Powell (sixth 76-77) and Al Shadwick (seventh 75-80). In the Graysburg golf tournament also hosted by Carson Newman, PC placed fifth. Jim Kent placed second with scores of 71 and 73 on the two rounds. At the "Battle of Musgrove Hill" Golf tournament in Clinton, PC placed third behind USC-Aiken and Wofford. Chris Wilkins placed third scoring rounds of 74 and 76. Jim Kent placed ninth with 79 and 75, and Perrin Powell placed seventeenth shooting 81 and 76.

Trip LaCoste of Theta Chi placed third. In the Women's Cross Country, independent Amy Becker finished first, followed by ZTA's Liz Foster and Betsy Brunby.

SPORTS TRIVA
Toy Wensel won for the men, and Alpha Delta Pi won for the women.

Upcoming events include the swim meet on October 24, volleyball in November, and, also in November, PING PONG!!!!

Football team suffers tough losses to Mars Hill and Elon

by Everett Catts
STAFF WRITER

Following back-to-back wins over Wofford and Catawba on Oct. 1 and 8, the Blue Hose football squad lost two SAC-8 games in a row, falling to 3-5 and 1-4 in the conference.

On October 22 PC lost at Mars Hill, 35-17. After the Lions took a 7-0 lead on their opening drive, the Blue Hose made it 7-3 with a Brian Gorney 32-yard field goal at the 8:48 mark. PC took the lead with a 10-7 edge with 1:32 left in the first quarter, following an eleven play, eighty-yard drive, capped by Terrance Grant's six-yard run.

But Mars Hill regained the lead, 14-10, three minutes into the second period. The Blue Hose's next series ended on the Lions' 28-yard line, when Randy Sullivan's pass was picked off. Mars Hill scored on that same possession to extend their lead to 21-10, but PC came back, scoring on Sullivan's 10-yard pass to Chris Yonce with only 19 seconds left in the half. Brian Gorney's extra point pulled the Blue Hose within four, 21-17 at halftime.

In the second half it was all Mars Hill, as the PC offense sputtered and was unable to score. The Lions tacked on two more TD's, and claimed the victory.

Leading the Blue Hose was Steve Gorrie, who rushed for 98 yards, 92 of which he tallied in the first half. The junior fullback ranks second in the SAC-8 in rushing, seventh in receiving, ninth in total offense, second in scoring and fourth in all-purpose yards. Defensively, PC was led by Patrick Prioleau, Tyrone Phillips and Desmond Carr, who had 12, 11, and 10 tackles respectively.

"Against Mars Hill we had a good game plan and did things well in the first half, but we backed up offensively and couldn't move the ball effectively," said head coach John Perry.

On Oct. 15 the Blue Hose lost to Elon, 28-21. Elon took a 7-0 lead on Quentin Mitchell's 60-yard TD run on the first play from scrimmage. PC tied the game 7-7 with Sullivan's 21-yard touchdown pass to Yonce and a Gorney PAT. The score remained tied at the end of the first quarter, and neither team could score in the second period.

In the third quarter the Blue Hose took the lead on Chris Thorpe's 36-yard TD reception of a Sullivan pass. Gorney's extra point gave PC a 14-7 lead with 7:28 remaining in the third quarter. Gorrie's one-yard scamper capped a nine-play, 52-yard drive and extended the lead to 21-7 with a Gorney extra point. But Elon scored 21 unanswered points in twelve minutes, stopping any chance for a PC win.

Leading the Blue Hose offense was Thorpe, who had five catches for 100 yards and a score. Sullivan completed 15 of 24 passes for 227 yards and two TD's. Another target of Sullivan's was Kevin Lindler, who had 58 yards receiving. Jon Ory and Antonio Merriweather led the PC defense with seven and six tackles, respectively.

"The Elon game was tough on us, especially because the team played so well. But we had a couple of key breakdowns that cost us the game," said Perry.

On Oct. 8 records fell as the Blue Hose thrashed Catawba in PC's first Homecoming win since 1989. Three PC records for offense—most first downs (33), most yards rushing (518) and most yards total offense (640)—were broken in a 62-14 domination. PC's offense averaged 8.3 yards per down, and the reserve offensive players had three touchdown drives. Leading the offense was Sullivan once again. The sophomore quarterback had 109 yards passing and three TD's in the air, along with 79 yards rushing and two TD's on the ground. For his offensive outburst, Sullivan was named SAC-8 Player of the Week. PC running backs Gorrie, Yonce, Chris Griffin and Lyndon Bell had 136, 141, 77 and 75 yards rushing, respectively.

PC's final three games are at home, giving them a chance to have a winning season. Tomorrow PC hosts Wingate for Parents' Day at 2:30.

In the last three games, the Blue Hose must play "good" football by Perry's standards, dominating offensively and defensively for two halves, not just one. Without that domination, PC could have their sixth straight losing season.

Men look to close season with tournament wins

After a disappointing final record, the Hose approach the SAC-8 tournament with "poise"

By John Scott
STAFF WRITER

It was an outstanding foreshadowing of the remainder of the season. Blue Hose men's soccer posted their second win in a row on Saturday defeating the Catawba Indians.

The game was a superb showing which included several key defensive plays. Senior goalkeeper Mark Albertus racked up three saves and nearly increased his career shutout total to 23 but was denied this accomplishment due to a late second half goal by Indian defensive back Wesley Stevens. Juniors Mark Martin, Stefan Svandh, and Jimmy May at midfield added key hustle that kept the pressure off of Albertus until the closing minutes.

The first goal wasn't scored until the second half. The rough physical play of Catawba resulted in several failed attempts to score in the first half, however, the skill and finesse of PC defenders prevailed throughout the remainder of the game. After only seventeen minutes of play in the second period, Brian Ridgely found the net on a powerful shot left and low, eluding the Indian keeper Trey Cutrell.

Only nine minutes later, Jimmy May passed down from left midfield to the right side finding Todd Chandler. Chandler coolly dribbled past two defenders and set up Brian Ridgely once again for another bullet, low and down the middle, putting PC up 2-0 with just under twenty minutes remaining. Then with twelve minutes left, Neil White passed to Todd Chandler who hammered in the Hose's third goal of the afternoon. Catawba's lone goal came with less than two minutes remaining. For the first time in the regular season since the founding of the South Atlantic Conference in 1989, the Blue Hose trounced the Catawba Indians 3-1.

The game against Catawba on Saturday marked the end of an outstanding week which included an earlier win against Thomas on Tuesday. Saturday's game, however, was "an expensive win" in the words of junior midfielder Richard Wright as two key PC players were injured. Junior forward Chris Napior suffered pulled ligaments in one leg about midway through the second period, and junior midfielder Tyler Boulware broke three bones in his right foot and Hose's break even record. Presbyterian is defending not one but two consecutive SAC championships, and the goal, of course, is to win the third. As a result of their "high expectations," the Blue Hose would often become discouraged if they were not performing well. "When things didn't go right, we put even more pressure on ourselves," Polson commented. PC has also handled an unopposed schedule, facing four national class AA top 20 teams. "If you want to play better, you've got to play the best," coach Polson added. Also with PC's winning reputation "everyone is playing us to knock us off."

Despite the few losses, PC has their last two regular season games coming up this week. They will play USC Aiken on Wednesday here at home, and then will travel to Elon on Friday, October 28. Coach Polson expects two wins. "If we play like we have the last four or five games we should be 10-7. Most teams would love to have that record, but it's far below what we're accustomed to."

While Polson and his soccer team aren't entirely happy with the record, they remain confident about the upcoming SAC tournament. "We still believe we can win a conference tournament," said Polson. After Saturday's triumph, the Hose are in fourth place in the conference and, thus, gained a home field advantage for the first round of the SAC tournament. A Blue Hose victory on Friday against Elon will ensure a tie for second in the conference.

If the Hose claim the conference title this year, it will be the first year in the history of the SAC that a senior class has won either a regular season title or a tournament title every year of their eligibility. With new life and poise, the Hose should be well prepared for a strong showing in the upcoming conference tournament.

will be out for the remainder of the season. It is possible that Napior will play in the conference tournament, "but on a limited basis," according to coach Ralph Polson.

Despite the injuries, the Blue Hose have fared well in the latter part of the season. Their performance against Thomas and Catawba revealed significant improvement and poise on the field. "Things weren't clicking before, but now we're finally coming together," said Brian Blackwelder, the junior defensive back from Columbia, SC.

PC's 8-7 record reflects some hard fought losses and some missed opportunities in the conference, but there is an explanation for the

PC looks to add women's softball

by Lucy Mahon
STAFF WRITER

Many changes are taking place in the athletic department at P.C. this year. Allen Morris is excited about being the new athletic director, and as a result of his energy and spirit there has been talk of adding a new women's sport to the distinguished Blue Hose athletic program. The obvious inequality between the provisions for men's and women's teams (7 to 4) has apparently been recognized as an area that needs to be improved upon.

Morris is fulfilling his commitment to continue Callie Gault's tradition of leadership and excellence by initiating many new policies to all the sports under his control. At the coaches' meeting on September 27, the primary objective was to create unity among the various sports at PC. The new policies (which concern scheduling, budget reports, work orders, purchasing reports, vehicle requests, etc.) will allow Morris to "keep tabs" on the activities of each team and to recognize the needs of athletes and coaches.

Once these policies are established, the athletic department will be able to assess the feasibility of adding another women's sport. Morris stressed that expanding the athletic program to incorporate another sport would involve many factors that come into play. For instance, the financial support, the coaches, and the facilities necessary for the sport must be considered as well as the number of scholarships that will be offered. Most importantly, however, is the availability of opponents.

For that reason, Morris turned his attention toward softball. Aware that there is a group of students interested in starting a team, Morris offered the possibility of softball as a partial remedy for the inequality between support of men's and women's teams. "There are already 6 or 7 schools in our conference that have softball teams," Morris said, "and we would like to be able to play the SAC teams as much as possible." In addition to the popularity of softball within the conference, stands the obvious fact that one of the fields in the intramural complex already has lights and could easily be converted into a playing field.

The issues concerning funding and a coach remain, but the enthusiasm and interest that has already been shown by the group of students led by freshman Larianne Collins makes the future of softball at P.C. look bright. Anyone interested in helping start a team should contact Larianne (ext. 8668).

Women's soccer captures SAC-8 title with win at home

By Everett Catts
STAFF WRITER

Brian Purcell hadn't planned it. The women's soccer head coach said that PC's playing Catawba at home on Oct. 22 in a battle of the top two teams in the SAC-8 was only "a coincidence."

"I think both (PC) and Catawba this year...wanted that game to be the last game of the regular season. The game might be deciding the conference, and it keeps everything open for the SAC-8 standings until the end. We were lucky to get it scheduled as the last game of the season."

Coming into the match, the Lady Blue Hose were first in the SAC-8 and third in the nation. A PC loss would force a tie for first between the two schools. On the other hand, a win would give the Lady Blue Hose an outright league title and the number one seed in this week's SAC Tournament.

The women did exactly that, beating the 18th-ranked Indians 3-1. At the 33:40 mark, PC found the back of the net first when Carey Bailey's shot was tipped and knocked into the goal by Catawba's goalie, Schermie Dalton. Six minutes later, the Lady Blue Hose made it 2-0 when Charity Brazeal's shot was knocked into the goal by Catawba's Tammy DeCesere. The score remained 2-0 at halftime. Only nine minutes into the second half, PC increased its lead to 3-0 on Lisa Becker's free kick goal off the post. The Lady Blue Hose shut out Catawba until the 89th minute, when Jan Johnson scored a controversial goal.

Following the game, PC did not engage in a traditional pile-on after a championship, being tired and relieved it was over.

"(Winning the conference) was a big relief more than anything, and I didn't expect that. We got to the point where...it was ours to win, and we were relieved to get it over with," said

Purcell.

Purcell's players had a different opinion about winning the SAC-8.

"I'm excited as I've ever been. I think it's great that we were the first team to go undefeated in the SAC-8. We've accomplished so much more than what the team had set goals for," said into the second half, PC's Brooke Wright scored off a Vicki Dailey assist. Juliana Swetman rounded out the scoring with a goal five minutes later, on an Elizabeth Welborn assist. Senior goalie Tracy Pierro got her tenth career shutout in her last regular season game at PC. Prior to the Catawba game, the squad's three seniors were way through," said Purcell.

Back on Oct. 15 PC went to 5-0 in the SAC-8 by blanking 15th-ranked Elon, a team which the women had never beaten before. After a scoreless tie at halftime, Hardiman found the back of the net on an unassisted goal at the 57:40 mark. Swetman's goal, which had come after Wright's shot bounced off the post, gave PC a 2-0 lead. The score remained 2-0, as Emily Campbell got her fourth shutout of the season. Campbell leads the SAC-8 in goals against average (0.44) and is tied for first in shutouts despite playing in only eight games.

Following the victory over Elon, Hardiman was named SAC-8 Player of the Week. The sophomore forward had three goals and an assist in two wins that week, the other being a 3-1 win over Gardner-Webb. The native of Tucker, GA is fourth in the SAC-8 in points (30) and goals (11) and leads the league in assists with eight.

In the win over Gardner-Webb, Cobi Shale scored on a Hardiman assist, while Wright assisted on Hardiman's first goal. Wright, a freshman forward, ranks third in the SAC-8 in points (31) and goals (13), while leading the team in both categories.

One of the reasons why PC, now 4-1 against ranked opponents, won the SAC title was its team unity. The Lady Blue Hose have played together well in leading the league in scoring offense (3.8 goals per game) and defense (1.00 goals per game).

Next up for PC (14-1 overall) is the SAC Tourney. Following a first-round home win (6-0) versus Wingate this past Tuesday, the Lady Blue Hose will travel to Elon for Saturday's semi-final against Lenoir-Rhyne (11-0) and Sunday's final. With a tournament championship, a bid to the NCAA Nationals is possible.

Many members of the team are still hungry for another SAC-8 (tournament) crown. They won't rest until both of those goals are achieved.

photo by Tobin Turner

Freshman Tiffany Worrell and teammate Elizabeth Welborn relentlessly attack a weaker, fallen Wingate player. The women's team rode roughshod over Wingate winning 6-0 in the season's home finale. The Lady Blue Hose finished perfect in the conference, the first team ever to do so.

Bailey, a junior co-captain

"Winning the championship hasn't sunk in yet. I won't be satisfied until we've won the SAC-8 Tournament," said senior Tracy Pierro.

The Lady Blue Hose won the championship by going undefeated (7-0) in the SAC-8. One of those seven wins was PC's 5-0 drubbing of Wingate on Oct. 20. Rebecca Hardiman had the first two goals, one on a Lisa Becker corner, and another on a penalty kick. Hardiman also assisted on Liz Roe's goal at the 35:18 mark. Two minutes honored in a pre-game ceremony. In four years the seniors (Pierro, Christi Plack and Heather Frederick) have amassed a 47-22-1 record and two SAC-8 crowns.

"You can watch the steady improvement of the team, and see that the seniors were with the team when it was average, to good, to really good. They've been a big part of the team this year, and their improvement has gone along with the team's improvement. They've been the leaders of the team, in their own way, the whole

Tapestry

Ladies apparel & Gifts

Parent's Day Special
20% off on all regular price fall merchandise for all students and parents!!!

9am til 7pm

*located beside Terry's

Women's soccer dream season ends at NCAA tournament

by Everett Catts
STAFF WRITER

On October 31 at 1:00, the women's soccer team gathered in sports information director Art Chase's office, awaiting the call that would notify them if they had attained a berth to the 1994 NCAA Division II National Tournament.

The women received their first bid to any national tourney. They were the third Blue Hose team to advance in only the second full-fledged year of PC's membership in NCAA Division II. After defeating the two-time defending champions Barry University 1-0 in overtime, the Lady Hose earned the right to represent the South Region in the six-team tournament.

On November 5th, PC (15-2 overall, SAC tournament runner-up) sought revenge against Quincy (12-3-1), the only team to beat the women (4-1 in overtime) during the regular season, in the quarterfinal round at Quincy, Illinois. The Lady Blue Hose took an early lead when Charity Brazzel hooked the ball around the Quincy goalkeeper and into the side of the net off a 1-1/2 Roe assist twenty-two minutes into the game. Rebecca Hardiman's unassisted goal at the 38:32 mark gave PC a 2-0 advantage, which remained at halftime.

But that lead was reduced to 2-1 when the Lady Hawks' Jenny Hackett scored three minutes into the second half. As the field continued to be drenched with rain, Quincy took advantage of the conditions and eventually tied the score 2-2 on Carrie Bechtold's goal with fifteen minutes left in regulation. Despite several attempts by both teams, the score remained 2-2 at the end of regulation, forcing overtime.

Just four minutes into overtime Quincy took the lead 3-2 and held the edge for the rest of have accomplished this season," said head coach Brian Purcell.

The women finished their dream season with school records for wins (15) and winning percentage (.833), and had many individual awards. At the SAC-8 tournament banquet, Purcell was named Coach of the Year and five (advancing to the NCAA's) was beyond my wildest dreams. Since my freshman year, I never thought (the team would) go to a national tournament. It was a good way to end my career."

Charity Brazzel joined Flack on the first team. The junior midfielder ranked third on the squad in '94 with 11 goals, four assists and 26 points.

Also named to the first team was forward Rebecca Hardiman, who led PC in goals (15), assists (9) and points (39).

Brooke Wright, a freshman forward, represented PC on the second team, and was also named SAC-8 Freshman of the Year.

Heather Frederick, a senior midfielder, was named to the second team after registering five goals and three assists while starting as the defensive midfielder in her senior year.

"I couldn't ask for a better way to go out. This year, in my senior season, our goal was to win the conference title outright (which PC did do). Going to the nationals and being recognized as one of (Division II's) best teams was a bonus," commented Frederick.

Commenting on this season and the next, junior co-captain Carey Bailey said, "I think it's great that we did as well as we did, and it just leaves us room to improve for next year. I'm looking forward to next year and hope we can exceed the accomplishments we had this year."

The history-making 1994 PC Women's Soccer team.

photo courtesy of soccer team

overtime, thus ending the game and PC's season.

"I have no complaints with the way we played. Quincy is a great team, and I think they can do well in the final four. It was one of those games where someone has to win and it was Quincy. I'm sorry I won't see the team play again. The pieces really fit together well this year. I'm very proud of our players and all they

PC players were named to the all-conference teams.

Sweeper Christi Flack was named to the first team after leading a defense that allowed only 111 goals per game (third in the South). Flack, a senior, had the only goal in the Lady Hose's upset win over Barry.

Commenting on the season, Flack said, "It

PC ROTC recognized in 75th anniversary celebration

by Gray Lesesne
NEWS EDITOR

The Presbyterian College Scottish Highlander Battalion recognized its alumni and garnered support for its future this past weekend during the Army ROTC's 75th anniversary celebration on campus. The celebration comes as the unit faces probation and possible elimination as the Army downsizes and eliminates programs which fail to meet its four year program standards, which include two years of introductory military science and two years of intensive officer training for candidates electing to make a commitment to the Army after graduation. Upon successful completion, the program produces officers for commission as a second lieutenant with an undergraduate degree.

PC's unit attracts over 168 students from PC, Lander University, and Newberry College for its two year introductory and two year officer training sections. The unit has been placed on probation by the Army for failing to produce enough candidates for the senior program, which includes advanced training for those wishing to serve as officers in the Army. While PC's program is not in immediate danger, says Maj. Kirk Thomas, PC's ROTC commander, thinks that if the program isn't turned around, closure is a definite possibility. "Programs are reevaluated on a yearly basis by the Army," said Thomas.

This past weekend, the ROTC alumni gathered on the campus to discuss the their concerns regarding the possible closure of the PC battalion, one of the oldest in the nation. The ROTC Alumni Association was created by Presbyterian College president Kenneth B. Orr and Maj. Gen. James Allen, a PC alumnus, in response to the concern about the possible discontinuation of PC's unit. Allen, a 1955 graduate of Presbyterian College, serves on the Military Assistance Council for the state of South Carolina.

"I remember being a student and seeing the lieutenants coming back after they had graduated. They were wearing their 82nd Airborne uniforms and they were proud of two things, that they were U.S. Army officers and that they were graduates of Presbyterian College. The great thing was called the PC spirit was entwined throughout the whole campus, whether it was on the football field, in the classrooms, or on the parade field. Those are the things that build solid foundations that you just don't lose sight of. You don't ignore them and you don't forget them. Those are the things that impact you for the rest of your life," said Allen, who is the president of the PC ROTC alumni association.

The ROTC alumni association has established the goal of keeping PC's unit on campus by increasing enrollment and financial support for the unit which over 1000 alumni have participated in, according to Tom Stallworth, Dean of Alumni Affairs. The recent anniversary weekend kicked off the association's effort to raise over $150,000 per year for the next five of years to supplement the Army's scholarship and funding of the college's ROTC programs. Stallworth raised over $10,000 just within the past few weeks.

"This anniversary celebration is an opportunity to recognize a program which has influenced the lives of more than 1,000 Presbyterian College alumni," said Stallworth. "The Scottish Highlander Battalion is among the nation's oldest and most elite ROTC units, and this is an appropriate time to recognize our current and former military science students in an effort to strengthen and honor a program which has been a part of the Presbyterian College tradition."

"The establishment of our new scholarship program in 1996 will certainly help, with regard to recruitment," said Thomas. "We're going to probably commission about five officers this year, and those numbers will continue to rise. Also, we're increasing our visibility on campus. Our students in the senior program wear their uniforms more on campus, and the word is getting out about the number of possible career options and military service options officers have after graduation," said Thomas.

"The word is getting out about our program here, and the numbers are slowly increasing," said Thomas. Qualified students who have not taken the two year introductory program are still eligible to participate in ROTC if they complete a summer training program before their junior year, he said.

"It would be a tragedy to lose one of the oldest programs in the country, and we're going to do everything to keep the program here. Our goals are in line with Presbyterian College's overall goals, both pursuing a commitment to excellence. I'm optimistic about keeping the unit here. I wasn't assigned to turn out the lights and shut the door on this program," said Thomas.

SGA's open forum discusses IFC policy, meal plans

by Gray Lesesne
NEWS EDITOR

Changes in Greenville Dining Hall, the proposed IFC policy restricting independent males from Fraternity Court, and the social climate of Presbyterian College were among the topics discussed at the Student Government Association's Open Forum Thursday night in Springs Campus Center. Students packed the center's lobby to discuss, but not "gripe," according to Dallas Olson, SGA president.

"We are here tonight to enhance the communication between PC students and administration," said Olson. "We will express concerns and propose solutions, but we are not here to moan to the administration."

David Spivey, SGA treasurer and co-chair of the SGA food committee, reported on the committee's negotiations with the administration regarding changes in Greenville Dining Hall, which won preliminary approval last week at the college's trustees meeting in Asheville, N.C. According to Spivey, the college will offer 15 or 21 meals per week in the dining hall beginning in the fall of 1995, with students selecting their option at the beginning of the year. Under the new plan, lunch in the canteen in Springs Campus Center will be included as an option daily, and a card reader will be installed at the canteen to facilitate such efforts. Additionally, a student committee will pre-select all menus in the dining hall after the Thanksgiving holiday before they are sent to a nutritionist and before any food is purchased. Students who have interest in GDH menu selection should bring them to the attention of Brandi Casto or Susan Haigler, sophomore representatives to the association.

"I want to thank the SGA and the administration for listening to our concerns," said Ashby Lawton. "This is the most progress I've seen on this subject since my freshman year here, and I want to commend you for all of your hard work," she said.

The meeting also discussed the proposed limitation of independent males from fraternity court who are not on a "guest" list. IFC president John Sigman pointed out to the attendees that the limitations were a part of a growing national trend and were primarily due to increased insurance regulations on fraternities.

"Independent students are using the houses as a social outlet. We pay rent for these houses...being invited out there should be a privilege," said Lance Dauby. Other students commented that it is not the obligation of fraternities to provide nightlife for PC students, and they asked that the Student Union Board try harder to provide activities for independents.

"Before this policy is passed, I want members of fraternities to think about the population of the college and the community itself," said Alan Jenkins. The policy goes before the Social and Greek Affairs Committee next week and must also be approved by the Student Affairs Council, according to Sigman.

Students also discussed the social climate of the college, and pointed to problems with Clinton police and college regulations on parties at fraternity houses. "We want this campus to have a great social climate," said Dr. Ken Orr, president of the college. "But we're also advocating sensitivity and accommodation to our fellow students and neighbors in Clinton." Orr also said that he has encouraged Clinton police to stay off campus unless called for by the college's own public safety officers. Other matters proposed by students at the meeting included the possibility of a beer and wine license for Inklings as an enhanced, alternative area for independent students to congregate and comments about the college's heating and air systems, which Orr assured would be more manageable after the completion of a new system designed to better regulate the college's environmental climate in three to four months.

Letter to the Editor

Dear Editor,

I have been asked recently by many students at PC about the 1994 Pac saC and exactly when it will arrive on campus. First, I would like to explain that the Pac saC is published on a fall delivery basis. Therefore, the book should arrive, if on time, at the end of August or the beginning of September. Obviously, this has not happened this year.

While I am not the Editor-in-Chief for the 1994 Pac saC, I am working in conjunction with the former editor to hasten the publishing process and bring the yearbook to campus as soon as possible.

In my most recent conversation with Lenoir Constancio, our publishing representative with Newfoto Yearbooks, Inc. in San Angelo, Texas I have learned that in all likelihood the 1994 Pac saC will be shipped on November 21. Unfortunately, Thanksgiving weekend will delay the book from arriving until we return to PC on November 28. I am expecting the yearbook to arrive early that week. Also, please remember that seniors who have graduated will most likely receive the 1994 Pac saC by mail that week, as well.

I can assure you that my staff and I, in conjunction with the former Editor-in-Chief, will do everything in our power to deliver the books to you expeditiously and efficiently. I hope this has cleared up any uncertainties there may have been about the arrival of the book and I can assure you that I will do everything in my power to ensure that the 1995 Pac saC will arrive on time at the beginning of the 95-96 academic year.

Jay Therrell
Editor-in-Chief, 1995 Pac saC

THE BLUE STOCKING

Presbyterian College • Clinton, South Carolina 29325
Volume LXXXVIII Number 3, October 28, 1994

Editor-in-Chief.....Tobin Turner
Managing Editor.....Angela Richardson
News Editor.....Gray Lesesne
Sports Editor.....Margaret Ellen Pender
Features Editor.....Amanda Barnes
Production Editor.....Brian Sacco
Photography Editor.....Jason Williams
Staff Advisor.....Ms. Gina Prosch

The Blue Stocking is a tri-weekly student publication of Presbyterian College. The paper serves as a forum of news and opinion of regional and national concern. For advertising, contact The Blue Stocking, Presbyterian College, Box 1061, Clinton, SC 29325. The Blue Stocking welcomes letters to the editor from all members of the PC community. Signatures are required. Letters are printed on a space available basis. The Blue Stocking reserves the right to edit all letters for proper grammar and punctuation. The final deadline for submitting letters is Friday at 12:00 pm on the week before publication.

THE BLUE STOCKING
November 22, 1994

PC

Tidbits

PC Public Safety confronts military recruiter for improper phone etiquette

After several complaints from PC students about harassing phone calls from an individual identifying himself as a military recruiter, Public Safety began warning students not to answer any personal questions asked over the phone. Public Safety has since found the caller to be a recruiter, but the individual was using improper procedures and has been removed from work in the PC area.

Career Planning and Placement seeks to aid students

Students looking for career planning and summer opportunities should remember the resources in the Career Planning and Placement Office located at 215 Douglas House. Students interested in the high-paying paralegal profession, summer internships, and job choice information should contact Andrea Long.

Residence Halls to close for Holidays

All residence halls and houses close on Friday, December 16 at 5:00pm for Christmas Holidays and re-open on Saturday, January 7 at 10:00am. GDH will serve its last meal for lunch on December 16, and will begin serving again for lunch on January 8. Students will register for classes on Monday, January 9, and the Spring semester begins on Tuesday, January 10. The Residence Life Office joins the Blue Stocking in encouraging all students to drive home safely. For a list of safe driving tips please contact Andy Altizer.

D-Day Commemoration display in library

Students of French have set up an extensive array of articles, newspapers, and artifacts in honor of the 50th anniversary of D Day. The exhibit is very much worth a closer inspection.

Correction

The Blue Stocking would like to apologize for stating in the October 28, 1994 issue that 75% of all PC students indicated a dissatisfaction with GDH. In actuality this percentage is only reflective of the students who took the wellness survey (about 240). The Blue Stocking regrets the error.

THE BLUE STOCKING
November 22, 1994

Faculty and Board of Trustees unanimously approve mission statement

by Christie Grant
STAFF WRITER

PC's faculty unanimously approved the college's revised mission statement at its September meeting. According to Dr. Ken B. Orr, the revised statement reflects two or three things. It now has certain elements that are required by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools, such as a historical statement, which includes information about PC's founder, William Plumer Jacobs; the date PC was founded, and how the college has evolved from a predominantly male institution to a fully coeducational college.

Dr. Orr said, "This particular document has the strong consensus of both the faculty and the Board of Trustees. It was well-drafted, well-reviewed, and didn't create frustrations. The Board of Trustees made two minor amendments to the mission statement, which further amplified the essence of it."

Dr. Orr also commented that the mission statement isn't a different statement; the essence of it is still the same. The statement may be found in a copy of the college's catalog.

Dr. George Ramsey, the chair of PC's self-study, said that the old mission statement, which was ten years old, was reviewed by the regional review board. The board then found some deficiencies in the statement. These deficiencies included not having a historical statement, not telling what type of student PC selects, and not telling which region that the student body typically represents. The revised statement reflects these changes.

Dr. Ramsey added, "The third paragraph of the statement is the heart of it." After the Board of Trustees amended it, the third paragraph now reads: "The compelling purpose of Presbyterian College, as a church-related college, is to develop, within the framework of Christian faith, the mental, physical, moral and spiritual capacities of each student."

Dr. Ramsey said that one of the major changes in the document was "declaring, without embarrassment, the relationship to the church that PC has."

In the mission statement, the College lists goals in its attempt to fulfill its mission. The Trustees amended one of these goals by stating: "To help students attain a sense of dignity, self-worth, and appreciation of other persons with diverse backgrounds." Another goal that was added was: "To foster in students an appreciation of, and concern for, the environment and natural resources."

Dr. Ramsey commented that the first step of the college's self-study is telling our mission statement. The self-study will take two years to complete, he said, "in order to see if we do a good job of fulfilling our mission."

PC commissions South Carolina license plate

by Leighton Hart
STAFF WRITER

It seems these days the most popular form of transportation is by the automobile, or that we corrected and resubmitted over the summer. The finished product finally arrived at the end of October for our approval. We have signed off on the design and production should begin in the coming days.

These plates are good for many reasons, but perhaps the best reason to buy one is because when you buy a plate, part of the money comes back to the school. Mr. Vosburgh says that the plates are comparable in price to other South Carolina vanity plates, and PC makes a decent dollar from every plate sold. The school receives $9 a year for each plate purchased or renewed. Mr. Vosburgh explains that, "The money will go into the school's general operating fund after the institution recoups the registration cost that it paid at the beginning of the project." Well, come to think of it, the best reason to buy one of these plates is that it will look fantastic on the backs of your cars.

The plates should be available for purchase at the beginning of 1995. Mr. Vosburgh says that getting a PC plate "will be no different than obtaining the usual South Carolina tag. Simply go to your local license plate office and inquire about it. If the PC plate is not in stock or not displayed, just indicate to the clerk that you would like to order one."

It is important to note that while the Public Relations Office was in charge of the project, they are not involved in taking orders from students or from the general public.

PC Librarian finds job full of 'excitement'

by Amanda Barnes
FEATURES EDITOR

Native to Clinton, Mrs. Jane Presseau has not only observed but also aided scores of PC students during her employment of almost 25 years on campus. However, Mrs. Presseau's travels have not been limited to Laurens County. Currently holding the title of Student Services Librarian at PC's Thomson Library, Mrs. Presseau has reached her position after a life time of experiences and learning. Beginning at Erskine College in Due West, South Carolina, Mrs. Presseau pursued a dual degree in Elementary Education and Social Studies and looked forward to making her mark on the children of the future by teaching. But she did not stop her higher education there, rather she studied for a Master's degree in Library Sciences at UNC-Chapel Hill and since then has worked at many prestigious libraries across the state such as University of South Carolina. At this point in Mrs. Presseau's life she was newly married with one daughter but soon moved to Greenville, South Carolina, a widow trying to start over with her child.

After spending 8 years in the upstate, Mrs. Presseau was hired by PC's library as the first Student Services librarian. Hired to be a link between the students and all the library's information, Thomson Library's newest employee began to make a difference to students immediately. Only three short years later Mrs. Presseau married Dr. Jack R. Presseau, a religion professor at PC. Commenting on her second marriage Mrs. Presseau joked, "You really can find a husband in the library." Today PC employs not only Dr. and Mrs. Presseau, but Dr. Suzanne Jones Smith, Mrs. Presseau's daughter, who teaches in the Business Department.

It is evident that Mrs. Presseau loves her work in the library because of her willingness to explain and look for needed information for any student that needs assistance. In speaking with Mrs. Presseau, she was very eager to talk about new services available to all students and when asked if students realize just how much information is at their fingertips she emphatically replied, "No!" A Student Service Librarian's job description requires many qualities of public service workers.

Mrs. Presseau works to help students directly by aiding in interpretation and evaluation of information. Drawing on her teaching roots early in her employment at PC, Mrs.

Presseau used to teach a Library Methods Research class here but as her responsibilities at the library increased the class was taken over by individual departments.

Contrary to the popular perception of libraries as boring or lifeless, according to Mrs. Presseau, "many exciting things are happening" at PC's Thomson Library this year. With the new computerized card catalogue system known as Thomecat and the installation of a new Macintosh computer equipped with CD-Rom's, Mrs. Presseau's 2 student assistants, Freshman Jennifer Estes and Junior Catherine Elliott, have quite a task in helping students learn to use the new technology. Among the provided programs on CD-Rom are ERIC bibliographic database and even a self-help program teaching the user "How to use a Computer."

Amid the library's world of knowledge Mrs. Presseau keeps a smile on her face and a light-hearted attitude that makes her willing to help students in every capacity. Our own Student Services Librarian, Mrs. Presseau, is more than willing to share part of her lifetime of learning.

Campus and Clubs

Alpha Delta Pi

Congratulations to Dr. Neal Prater, A&P's English Professor of the month. We are proud of our swim team for winning the IM swim meet and of our winning team in the trivia contest. Congratulations to our newly initiated Deltas. We are proud of you!

Sigma Sigma Sigma

The sisters of Epsilon Pi chapter would like to congratulate our new officers for the upcoming year: Kathryn Elliot, President; Jennifer Harris, Vice-President; Rebecca Richmond, Secretary; Marianne Smith, Treasurer; Shannon Smith, Membership/Rush Director; and Meredith Koegler, Education.

Alpha Sigma Phi

We would like to congratulate our new pledges: David Edwards, Brian Ballentine, Ben Dolan, Nick Crisafoli, Mike Nelson, and Chris McGaha.

Lady Hose capture third consecutive SAC title

by Margaret Ellen Pender
SPORTS EDITOR

Anyone who is an advocate of the power of perseverance would certainly concede that the success of the 1994 Blue Hose volleyball team exemplifies this philosophy. After losing their head coach and three key seniors, the opportunity for the Lady Hose to declare "We give up!" certainly presented itself, but instead the Blue Hose reacted with the spirit of true champions and adopted the attitude of "What a great opportunity!"

An observer may wonder what opportunity could possibly be seized in what would undoubtedly be a challenging season, but the Lady Hose recognized that this new environment may create a chance for them to, in the words of senior co-captain Kelly Pope, "pull together as a team" and achieve the goals which they had confidently set for themselves. In spite of the odds, the Hose never doubted their ability, and through their exceptional play this season they also absolved any doubts which opponents or fans may have held.

The seeds of success had definitely been sown for the Presbyterian volleyball program and this year should serve as a testimony to the fact that those seeds have rooted deeply. In the seven seasons prior to 1994, the Lady Hose, under the direction of Coach Beth Couture, had amassed an impressive 233-50 record and become the first PC team to earn an invitation to the NCAA Tournament. After Couture's decision to relinquish her position at the helm of the program, former assistant coach Allen Ansley was named head coach and again the Blue Hose enjoyed a thirty-win season (30-9 overall, 10-4 SAC). Most importantly, however, the Hose claimed their third consecutive SAC tournament crown by downing Lenoir-Rhyne, Elon, and Wingate (in the semifinals and finals). Unfortunately, PC fell prey to the NCAA's revised plan of organization and thus did not receive a bid for post-season play; in 1993, the Blue Hose were grouped with several competitive northern schools, but this year their region was composed of outstanding southern teams, two of which remained at the top of the polls all season.

Without the leadership of Pope and junior co-captain Kristy Tarallo, this squad would have distinguished itself as it did. Tarallo (4.90 dpg, 3.07 kpg), who has become the all-time dig leader at PC, was named first team All-SAC and was chosen for the All-Tournament team. Sophomore Watona Williams, who absolutely dominated play at the net this season (4.40 kpg,

1.17 bpg), was selected as the Most Valuable Player for the SAC Tournament and was also named first team All-SAC.

Though the spotlight has never truly fallen upon Kelly Pope, she has quietly labored for the improvement of PC's program, and this season her value as an example for the younger players was easily recognized. Junior Brooke Flemming (3.02 dpg, 2.01 kpg) also played a big role in the accomplishments of this squad. At the outset of the season, Coach Ansley challenged Brooke to refine her skills as a back row player and fill the void left by the graduation of Kelly Brown. Though her contributions may have been easily overlooked, Flemming "did all of the little things that it took to win." Sophomores Amy Couch, who had suffered a pre-season ankle injury, and Amy Lindell, who suffered a pre-season illness, were also key players whose return insured depth for Blue Hose.

In addition to noting the intensity and focus of this team, Coach Ansley cited the "development of the freshmen" as a major factor. Setters Erin Booth (8.39 apg) and Jenny Freling (5.2 apg) and outside hitters Beth Mann (1.89 kpg) and Mary Kruse (3.73 dpg) provided a glimpse of the bright future which awaits Presbyterian volleyball.

Golf team performing well, expecting much in upcoming season

By John Scott
STAFF WRITER

With four powerful tournament showings the Hose find themselves on top of the South Atlantic Conference and second in NCAA division II district three north.

At their last showing, PC placed second in the Francis Marion Intercollegiate Tournament in Johnsonville, South Carolina last week. Three tournaments preceded last week's key performance. In their best showing at the Persimmon Hill golf tournament hosted by Carson Newman College, the two PC teams swept the top two places in team ranking, taking five of the seven top individual scores. At the Graysburg tournament also hosted by Carson Newman, PC had their worst showing in placement gaining fifth, yet they finished only four strokes out of first place. At the Battle of Musgrove Mill tournament they posted a third place finish.

At the first of the season, fresh out of fall practice, the Hose have been a unified team. Boosting each other's confidence, playing off one another's support, there are no number one players in any victory or loss.

As this solidified unit, not only do they have high hopes, they expect and reach for the goal of placing in the NCAA division II tournament this spring. "If we continue to work hard, practice hard, and maintain our level of play, I feel confident we'll be in the NCAA (tournament)," Coach Addison commented. So the golf team is shooting to win and there should be a bright winning future ahead. In the mind of Chris Wilkins "we're not even playing to our highest level yet. In the spring scores get better." As the season presses on, scores and team morale reach new heights. "The better we play, the more confident we get," Wilson added. With team hopes, work level, and playing consistency continually reaching new highs, the golf team's good news is just beginning.

PC to keep Bronze Derby following Newberry win

by Everett Catts
STAFF WRITER

Sitting on the PC bench was the sacred Bronze Derby, the hat that marks the rivalry between Presbyterian and Newberry, schools that are 20 miles apart. In the 83rd battle between the two squads, the Blue Hose fought to keep the derby at home for two straight years for the first time since 1986. Although PC held a 49-28-5 overall record against the Indians coming into the game, the home team had not won the Bronze Derby Classic since 1989. Last year, the Blue Hose won in Newberry, 30-13.

After three unsuccessful offensive possessions, PC finally got on the board with Brian Gorney's 27-yard field goal. Gorney had attempted a 45-yarder, but it was blocked by Newberry's Kaaras Cohen. On the Indians' next possession, Earl Guidry recovered a Keath Porterfield fumble at the PC 24-yard line. Unfortunately, the Blue Hose could do nothing offensively and punted the ball away. Newberry's Jeff Martin kicked a 20-yard field goal to tie the score at 3-3 and to end the first quarter.

While PC's offense remained stagnant, the Indians tacked on a touchdown and another field goal to give them a 13-3 edge at the end of the third quarter.

But like the quick switch of a light bulb, the Blue Hose went on a scoring spree. Twenty-five seconds into the fourth quarter, PC found the endzone when wideout Kevin Linder caught a 30-yard pass from quarterback Randy Sullivan, capping a 67-yard, five-play drive. On their next possession, the Hose drove 78 yards in seven plays and tallied another seven on Linder's 29-yard reception. The TD gave the Blue Hose a 17-13 lead. Set up by Diamond Carr's 20-yard interception return 53 seconds later, PC increased its lead to 24-13 on Steve Gorrie's one-yard scamper. Another Blue Hose score by Chris Griffin was called by a penalty, and the game ended with PC on top, 24-13.

The defense was the story of the game, recovering all four Indian fumbles and shutting out Newberry in the fourth quarter. Although the Indians racked up 423 total yards, they were held scoreless in ten possessions. Leading the defense was Carr, who had eight tackles, a broken up pass, an interception and a tackle for a loss. PC had eight tackles for a loss, three by Jon Ory.

Offensively, the Blue Hose were led by Gorrie's 99 rushing yards on 23 carries, and Sullivan's 220 yards passing (12 of 18, 2 TD's and no INT's).

"The Bronze Derby is a big game for us. I've been associated with it as a player, spectator or coach for 25 years. The players get into it and realize how big it is, and how important it is. It makes the winner better than the loser with recruiting, spring practice and the next season, having won the ball game," said head coach John Perry.

Perry also commented on his players' pride and confidence in bouncing back to win after a loss, something the Blue Hose did on four occasions.

"I think because of the way our season went, it really showed the team's character. We lost a couple of heartbreakers (against Elon and Gardner-Webb). If you don't overcome those games emotionally, you could send your season into a tailspin. But our team bounced back," Perry added.

In the previous week, PC lost one of those "heartbreakers", as Gardner-Webb took the lead with 37 seconds left, and later ran back an interception for a touchdown, stopping the Blue Hose's comeback attempt and winning 33-24. Gorrie led PC on the ground with 169 yards rushing, while Sullivan threw for 184 yards in the air. Antonio Merryweather led the Blue Hose defense with ten tackles.

Back on October 29 PC bounced back from two straight losses by crushing Wingate 49-14. The Blue Hose scored twice on interception returns by Carr and Tyron Phillips, and PC's offense racked up 403 yards rushing. Sullivan, Chris Yonce, Terrance Grant and Griffin had 121, 102, 96 and 72 yards, respectively.

PC finished the season 5-6 overall and sixth in the SAC 8 (2-5). Enabled by a tough line led by second team All-SAC center Chris McGaha, the Blue Hose offense averaged a school record 375 yards per game. McGaha helped open holes up the middle for Gorrie, who was PC's lone first team All-SAC selection and rushed for 989 yards in ten games (99 ypg), both second in the SAC 8.

Representing the Blue Hose defense on the second team were Merryweather, who had 82 tackles (seventh in SAC 8) and six tackles for a loss, and Phillips, who had 65 stops, four interceptions and seven passes broken up, and ranked second in the SAC 8 in kickoff returns (25.5 yards per return).

Men's soccer suffers tough loss in first round of SAC tourney

In the opening round of the SAC 8 tournament the men's soccer team fell victim to Mars Hill by a score of 2-1. Jimmy May had the lone PC goal. The loss ended PC's season giving the Hose a final record of 9 wins and 9 losses, and a regular season finish of fourth in the conference. Garnering post-season accolades were Jimmy May, named First Team All-conference, and Bryan Ridgley and Brian Blackwelder named Second Team All-conference.

Senior mid-fielder Robert Goding called the season "disappointing." Despite the record the team worked hard and had fun. "Freshman Bryan Ridgley agreed adding, "We were extremely disappointed with the way our season went, but we are already beginning preparations to make as a great team next year."

Long term plans include new science center, GDH additions, workout center

by Gray Lesesne
NEWS EDITOR

PC's long-term plans for development

The PC Board of Trustees were presented with the college's long range plans at their recent retreat in Asheville, N.C. Included in the college's long range plans are a possible expansion of Greenville Dining Hall, the eventual construction of a new biology and chemistry facility on the West Plaza across from Edmunds Hall, the construction of a new dormitory behind Barron and Grotnes Halls, which is in the final stages of planning, the addition of a nautilus fitness center to Springs Campus Center, the addition of parking facilities for students as the college faces population and campus growth over the next ten years, the addition of spaces for PC's three sororities, and the construction of a possible "senior" apartment village, according to college officials.

A possible expansion to the dining hall comes as college officials attempt to change the college's dining services in response to student and parental concern. "We'd like to add a wing to GDH which would allow a number of things, including offering a greater variety of foods and offering a lot more specific services to students and the general public," said Skip Zubrod, PC's vice president for finance. College officials are discussing specific possible additions to the facility at this time. GDH Director Vernon Powell has given the college initial plans and desires for such an addition, although it is still in an early planning stage.

A new biology and chemistry natural sciences center is also in the preliminary planning stages, as the college recognizes the growing need for additional space in

Plan

- expansion of Greenville Dining Hall
- addition of biology/chemistry natural for sciences center
- addition of nautilus workout facility, Springs Campus Center
- establishment of sorority spaces
- new dorm behind Barron/Grotnes

Status

initial planning stages, college officials discussing possible designs college is looking for possible donors "earth-friendly" building report to be presented to Ken B. Orr, initial planning phase, Resa Walch to meet with sorority representatives to determine actual needs, report due April 1

schematic drawings approved, college seeking donors for construction of $1.8 million facility

Richardson Science Hall, said Zubrod. "We've recognized the need for additional lab space for the biology and chemistry departments, and we want to give them that space," he said. The plans for the facility include a possible "earth-friendly" design, including increased efficiency through a reduction in power costs. Ted Brown, vice president of financial development, is currently working to procure donations for such a facility. The college hopes to emphasize the building's earth-friendliness as a selling point for potential donors, said Zubrod.

The new dormitory building to be located behind Barron and Grotnes Halls is the administration's first priority in long range planning, said Zubrod. Schematic drawings have been completed and the college is in the initial stages of securing more than $1.8 million dollars to begin construction on the project. "We're moving forward on this project...the Board recently passed a resolution authorizing the beginning of fundraising for the new dorm, and our development office has now begun the fundraising work on that," said Zubrod. The dormitory will feature rooms similar to Barron and Grotnes Halls and will offer the flexibility of coed housing by floors, with the usual visitation and card access requirements in place.

Additions to Springs Campus Center are also in the college's plans, which Zubrod cites as more than a "wish list", but not as a final determination of college development. The Springs addition would include a nautilus center to be located where the outdoor volleyball courts are at present. Springs assistant director Bryan Madden is currently working on plans to present to college president Ken Orr regarding the facility.

Facilities for PC's three sororities are also in planning stages. A motion was approved by the Student Affairs Council in November to establish a committee to determine the space needs of sororities, "keeping in mind the possibility of sorority expansion." Representatives from each of the sororities on campus in addition to faculty members and administrators will assist Resa Walch, assistant dean of students, who will chair the committee. The committee will explore the space areas needed by sororities on campus and will make a recommendation to the college in April. The committee may determine that housing for each sorority is not the most desirable space needed, said Walch.

Other college projects in the distant future include a senior village townhouse-style complex behind the Brown Cultural Center, the connection of the college's computer network system to individual dormitory rooms, and the addition of parking areas near dorms as the campus grows. The college recently acquired a lot which may be used for overflow Georgia Hall parking at the corner of Calhoun and Adair Streets, said Zubrod.

The college has over 200 acres of property, and Zubrod said that while many of the spaces on the West and East Plazas have been occupied, the college is still looking to many areas, including behind the baseball field, for future development.

It's Christmas time at PC...

Junior Shelley Harrison and freshman Warren McSweeney took time from their busy end-of-the-semester schedules to put a plug in with Old St. Nick about their holiday wishes. SUB again had a free photo session with Santa Claus in Springs to help bring the Christmas spirit to PC.

Giving the holiday season a helping hand, once again PC's SVS is sponsoring a holiday gift drive that began November 15 and runs until December 15. Gifts of toys, clothes and non-perishable food items are requested to be dropped off at any one of several collection boxes kept by select organizations on campus. The proceeds from the drive will be given to a local Salvation Army and the Laurens Soup Kitchen for further distribution. Two separate prizes of $50 each will be awarded to the participating organizations. One prize will be given to the group that collects the most donations, and the second award will go to the organization that most originally decorates their collection box. Donations of all types whether monetary or material, are welcome and appreciated. Also spreading the Christmas spirit during December was SUB's "picture perfect" opportunity with Santa in Springs Campus Center. Students had the opportunity to give "Santa" their wish list this holiday season and having a picture taken alone or with friends free of charge.

I refuse to let Christmas chaos get the best of me'

by Amanda Barnes
FEATURES EDITOR

Everyone has their favorite Christmas flick, ranging from "It's A Wonderful Life" to the annual showing of "Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer", but why do we return to these old Christmas-spirit-motivators year after year? For me these cherished films from my youth bring back the magic and mystery of Christmas, which as I've grown older have given way to anxiety and frantic shopping-runs.

Of course, you can't help but begin to worry about getting your Christmas shopping completed in today's world where the Christmas season starts before Halloween, and enough Christmas sales are shoved down your throat to make you gag. It happens every year, and I expect it only to worsen. However, despite the odds I refuse to let Christmas chaos get the best of me.

I admit that I'm especially susceptible to being drawn into the holiday hullabaloo with Christmas lists and hard-to-please siblings who have it all, but all that mess aside, is there anything left to the holidays? When I stop long enough to notice people at Christmastide I am always pleasantly surprised and encouraged. People actually care for one another in the holiday season, more than any other time of the year. More donations are made to the needy, more smiles appear on more faces - in general, the world seems a kinder, gentler place. We have all heard someone wish for the Christmas spirit to last the whole year through, and it is a wonderful thought to entertain, but then reality hits. The world is not sweetness and light, but I want it to be and so I try to remember what the holidays feel like throughout the entire year.

It is quite ironic that during the busiest time of year, we all seem to be at our best and even to bring out the best in others. With this paradox in mind how can we blame our apathetic attitudes on the "no time" scapegoat? I have had the extreme privilege of coming into contact with a desperately needy family a few years ago, and from that experience I looked upon and consequently learned many things about the human spirit. In my humble opinion there is nothing greater than giving someone something they never expected to receive, the return on that type investment, although intangible, is priceless. So the best wish I could have for anyone anywhere is to have the opportunity to give someone an unexpected gift, and to watch one of the most genuine smiles known to man.

Opinion

Christian standard for faculty time-tested and effective

It is currently school policy that all faculty being considered for employment be a member of some Christian church. And while at first glance this prerequisite for faculty may appear to be in conflict with the ideal of providing students with a liberal arts approach to education and to the world at large, we at the Blue Stocking believe that this qualification is very much in accordance with the mission and history of Presbyterian College.

Presbyterian is a unique institution, with a very long history and with very obvious ties to the Presbyterian Church (USA). Presbyterian College has the goal of acquainting students "with the teachings and values of the Christian faith" and to helping "students develop moral and ethical commitments." In our opinion the best way to achieve these goals is to keep the requirement. This precondition for faculty undoubtedly excludes some highly qualified persons from seeking positions and limits student exposure to different ways of teaching and living. However, this mandate, in our opinion, does not stifle diversity so much as it attempts to maintain the ethical standards and authenticity of PC, qualities that have earned PC recognition and made the school synonymous with quality faculty, students, and graduates.

Faculty opinion on the issue is very split, with 42 percent favoring strongly or somewhat favoring the requirement and 52 percent disagreeing strongly or disagreeing somewhat with the requirement. It is obvious that there are pros and cons for both sides. There is the trade-off of greater diversity and more applicants to choose from in hiring, but the maintenance of PC's strong religious commitments would be compromised. Other church-related schools have abandoned similar requirements only to discover that the freer hiring policies coincided with a change in school character. To safeguard the distinct character and continue the excellence of PC, not just academically, but in the molding of outstanding, well-rounded individuals, we at the Blue Stocking believe the requirement is essential.

In the newly revised version of PC's mission statement there is a re-emphasis on the importance of the ties that PC shares with the church. After final approval by the Board of Trustees the new mission statement contains the same essence as the previous statement but states strongly that "the compelling purpose of Presbyterian College" is to "develop within the context of Christian faith the mental, physical, and spiritual capacities of each student." We believe the condition that faculty belong to a Christian church is an invaluable and indispensable aid to this mission.

Campus and Clubs

BACCHUS

BACCHUS invites you to participate in the Tree for Life campaign. Pledge not to drink and drive over the holidays, and when you sign up you will be registered for a free PC rocking chair (and it is nice!) to be given away at the Wednesday night study break.

THE BLUE STOCKING

Presbyterian College • Clinton, South Carolina 29325

Editor-in-Chief: Tobin Turner
Managing Editor: Angela Richardson (Her final issue)
News Editor: Gray Lesesne
Sports Editor: Margaret Ellen Pender
Features Editor: Amanda Barnes
Production Editor: Brian Sacco
Photography Editor: Jason Williams
Staff Advisor: Ms. Gina Prosch

The Blue Stocking is a weekly student publication at Presbyterian College. The paper serves as a forum of news and opinion of regional and national concern. For advertising, contact The Blue Stocking, Presbyterian College, Box 1061, Clinton, SC 29325. The Blue Stocking welcomes letters to the editor from all members of the PC community. Signatures are required. Letters are printed on a space available basis. The Blue Stocking reserves the right to edit all letters for proper grammar and punctuation. The final deadline for submitting letters is Friday at 12:00 pm on the week before publication.

Sidewalk Talk

How do you plan to spend your Christmas Break?

I'm going to spend my break earning money by selling shotguns at K Mart to the charming North Georgia natives.

Eric Erickson
Freshman

photo by Jason Williams

My holiday plans include lots of last minute shopping and baking. I'm looking forward to spending time with my family and hometown friends.

Kim Frampton
Senior

photo by Samm Brudgorth

I plan to go home and spend my last Christmas at home with my family and friends, and go to Atlanta to celebrate New Year's Eve.

Steve Willis Ellis
Senior

photo by Tobin Turner

PC's 'Porkchop': A cut above

photo by Jason Williams

by Catherine Scholl
STAFF WRITER

Franky Ginn, affectionately known as "Porkchop", works as a vital part of the PC campus maintenance team. Specializing in carpentry but he works on everything ranging from repairing windows and doors to building a new dressing room in Templeton. Since there is always something to repair and one more call to answer, Ginn commented that prioritizing is mandatory. Placing safety hazards at the top of the list, requests that can turn into problems that endanger the security or safety of students are always answered first.

"If I get a call for a broken blind and then one for a broken window, I'll fix the window first - someone could get hurt," commented Ginn. Although nearing a seventh year employed at PC, Ginn has hardly taken time out to notice the time gone by. Among the many benefits and extras he has come to know by working for the college, Ginn explains what he likes most about working for PC is the absence of monotony in his daily duties. "My job is a diverse job. I always know what's going on around campus and I get to talk to and serve everyone." Ginn has shown his dedication to his work to students, to faculty and to the college and simply states his hope for the students not only to be safe, but to enjoy their living environment.

After work Ginn goes home to his wife, Penny Ginn, and his twin daughters, Ashley and Heather. Mrs. Ginn is also employed by PC serving as the Associate Director of Computer Sciences in the Smith Administration Building. Always helping out with preparing dinner and miscellaneous yard work, Ginn carries his willingness to serve home with him daily. In his spare time he likes to read, watch old movies, work in his garden, fish and hunt. Having lived in Laurens County all his life, Ginn is also very interested in tracing his ancestry and enjoys listening to stories of his lineage as well as uncovering various folk histories of Laurens. Ginn has traced his ancestry back to Scottish and to Native American peoples.

As a part of the PC team, Ginn readily radiates enthusiasm for life in every job he performs. Ginn explained his nickname to be associated with the college, "It helps people remember my name - I just say Porkchop stands for PC - they never forget it!"

Ringin' in the holiday season, PC's Madrigal singers presented their annual dinner and performance the first weekend in December. Not limited to student attendance, this Christmastide celebration draws attention from family, friends, as well as the surrounding community.

photo by Samm Brudgorth

PC student brings touch of France to Clinton middle school students

by Gray Lesesne
NEWS EDITOR

For two hours each week, Presbyterian College senior Jenny Douglas brings joie de vivre -- joy of life -- French style, to a group of Bell Street Middle School students in Clinton. Since September, Douglas has been teaching French to a group of "Challenge" academically and talented students at Bell Street as part of her practicum teaching requirement for secondary education certification.

For the students, time with "Madame Douglas," as she is known in the class, means as introduction to simple French words and phrases, French culture, customs, and cuisine, and glimpses of French life through slides of Douglas' semester abroad in Paris.

"They're catching on pretty fast," Douglas said of her students. "The third time we had class, we began to work in small groups and it amazed me that they could say simple sentences after only two lessons. It's neat to watch them make the mental connections with the French and English which is composed of academically gifted and talented seventh and eighth graders. Wayne leads the class in studies of such topics as economics, the law, and other special units to enhance the school's general education program.

"The students think this unit is wonderful. My other classes are jealous because they don't get to participate in this special program. Jenny's caliber of teaching has been excellent," she said.

As the students learn their new language, Douglas has also learned the practical applications of her education classes at Presbyterian College and the value of experience in the classroom.

"I've learned that a lot of teaching is made up of finding out what works and what doesn't. Things don't move as quickly as I thought they would, and I have to go back and review sometimes. I've learned that it's easy to maintain discipline in the classroom if you respect your students and treat them as equals," Douglas said. "This has been such a rewarding experience for me. I wish I had time to do more with these students. It's been a good environment for me to learn from and work in,

Senior Jenny Douglas spends time each week teaching a pilot program in French to Challenge program students at Bell Street Middle School. photo by Gray Lesesne languages."

Teaching the "Challenge" group has provided challenges for Douglas, as well. Because Bell Street Middle School has never had a foreign language program, Douglas uses old French textbooks from Presbyterian College's curriculum lab, and she finds herself staying up late to prepare vocabulary worksheets and lessons for her next class session.

However, the experience has been rewarding for the French major from Columbia, S.C.

"When I first started teaching, I didn't know the kind of reaction I would get. But now, the students are bringing in newspaper clippings about France, bringing in French products, and really showing their enthusiasm for learning the language," she said. "I like teaching at the middle school level because you can really excite the students. It's a new subject for them and you can still do things like make funny faces when teaching them new words. They think it's fun."

Annabel Wayne serves as instructor of Bell Street Middle School's Challenge class, and it has given me lots of opportunities to experiment."

For Douglas, December will mark the end of her practicum teaching period at Bell Street, but she hopes to return to the classroom next September as a teacher at the middle school level.

"Jenny is going to be a great educator," said Dr. Kent Phillips, associate professor of education at Presbyterian College. "She seems very interested in teenagers and adolescents. She has the experience of studying abroad, and that, combined with her potential and solid educational background will make her a great teacher."

Douglas is scheduled to begin student teaching at Laurens District High School in the spring, and thinks that her experience at Bell Street will help her as she manages her own classroom for a semester.

"I've learned a lot from these students. They've been wonderful. This opportunity has really given me some time to prepare for my transition into the classroom," she said.

Lady Hose look to continue tradition of excellence

by Margaret Ellen Pender
SPORTS EDITOR

The 1994-95 Lady Blue Hose basketball team has big shoes to fill. In fact, they have gargantuan sneakers awaiting their calloused feet. After last year's squad set a school record with 22 wins and a .733 winning percentage, captured a second consecutive Little Four Tournament title; established new school records for points, scoring average, three point field goals made, and steals; and attained a first-ever national ranking, how will the current Lady Hose continue the outstanding tradition of excellence?

Undoubtedly, sixth-year head coach Beth Couture will do the things she's always done because "if it ain't broke, don't fix it." With her proven record of success and four returning starters, the possibility of matching and perhaps even surpassing the accomplishments of past teams seems quite likely. Although the loss of First Team All-South Atlantic Conference performer Jennifer Hilliard leaves a noticeable void, the Hose have much young talent to aid in compensating for her missed scoring abilities. Additionally, forwards Dionne Williams, Lavette Douglas, and Shannon Trammell were lost to graduation thus reducing one of PC's greatest assets, a seasoned bench.

Noting the talent and work ethic of the '94-95 returners, however, will quickly diminish any doubts regarding the fate of this team. Fueled by the scoring power of junior Kristy Tarallo (also an All-SAC volleyball performer) and senior Melanie Johnson, the Hose have posted a 5-2 record

Sophomore star Karen Neely looks to bring the ball up the court.

photo by Jason Williams

thus far and claimed their third straight Little Four crown by crushing Wofford 70-45. In a season opening tournament in Farmville, Virginia, the Hose defeated West Chester (77-68) behind Tarallo's 25 points and 10 rebounds but then fell to Longwood College (67-70) despite Tarallo's 18 points and 11 rebounds.

Returning home, the Lady Hose destroyed Morris College (95-36) in their opener at Templeton and again Tarallo was the leading scorer with 19 points. Sophomore point guard Karen Neely, who made a name for herself last year by setting a new NCAA Division II record for steals in a game (14 against Newberry), chipped in 15 points and six assists while sophomore center Watoma Williams led PC in rebounds with eight.

Presbyterian returned to the road to face Voorhees and USC-Spartanburg at the USC-S Tournament. In an outing in which Tarallo notched 22 points and 11 rebounds, the Hose dropped Voorhees, 89-67, but were then defeated by host USC-S, 72-82. Forward Melanie Johnson, who along with senior guards Kaye Watts and Leigh Irwin will be looked to for leadership, racked up 19 points in the loss. The Hose closed out November action at the Little Four Tournament where they overpowered Erskine, 60-41, before capturing the title versus Wofford.

Seniors Watts, who was named NCAA Tournament All-South Atlantic Region, and Irwin, who spent the summer playing abroad, will serve as co-captains of this year's squad which also boasts the return of three-point specialist Chris Mitchum. Mitchum, a junior, was the second leading scorer for the Hose last season (11.6 ppg) and matched the SAC single-season record for threes with 72. Junior center Jennifer Mims, sophomore forward Suzanne Thorsland, and sophomore guard Ellison Manley also return and will add experienced depth.

Newcomers for the Hose include sophomore walk-on Catherine Clayton and freshmen Tonya Kelley, Alice Ridgill, and Denyel Barman.

'Youthful' men's team struggles in early season play

by Everett Catts
STAFF WRITER

With three starters and nine letter winners back, the 1994-95 Men's Basketball team is ready to improve on last year's 14-13 record and third place finish in the SAC-8. The Blue Hose, picked to finish fifth in the pre-season poll, welcome back forwards Andre Newman and Ronnie Cannon (8.7 ppg in 93-94), and guard Ernest Holiday. Also back are forward Jonathan Bankhead and guard Layne Fowler, who contributed some valuable minutes prior to suffering a severe knee injury.

Gone are starters John Lloyd (center) and Andrew Wellman (guard), who had 1,000 career points each at PC. The Blue Hose will also miss reserve forwards Tony Grant and Jay Whitney, who contributed well off the bench, and junior Brian Franklin (12 ppg last season), who will be out for the year with a knee injury.

Fighting for Lloyd's place will be a pair of freshmen, Steve Rydzewski and Erik Rothwell. Filling in for Wellman will be Bankhead or Holiday. Taking Holiday's place at the point guard slot will be either Fowler or freshman Patrick Johnson.

When asked about the two 6'8" freshmen, head coach Gregg Nibert said, "Up to this point I've been pleased with the play of both Steve [Rydzewski] and Erik [Rothwell].

They've done a good job."

Nibert also pointed out that bench play will be a key to his team's success. "We need to have a quality player who can put the ball in the basket. That's going to be important," added Nibert. Following a pair of exhibition wins, the Blue Hose started their season with an 85-69 loss at Voorhees on November 21. Rydzewski led PC with 16 points and was 8 of 10 from the floor, while Bankhead notched 13. Cannon and Rothwell hauled in seven and six rebounds, respectively.

Two days later, the Blue Hose crushed Lees-McRae 67-46 in PC's home opener. Newman had a team-high 17 points and four assists. Bankhead and Cannon followed with 13 and 11 points respectively. Cannon, last year's conference Freshman of the Year, led the squad with eight boards, and Rydzewski hauled in seven. PC's defense forced 20 turnovers and held the Bobcats to a 31% field goal percentage.

But the Blue Hose lost their next two games. On November 28 PC lost to intrastate rival Wofford, 76-73. PC led by two points (35-33) at halftime and were ahead with seven minutes remaining. Cannon led the Blue Hose with 13 points and ten rebounds. Newman, Bankhead and Rydzewski had 11 points apiece, and Rydzewski hauled in eight boards. Despite the impressive individual efforts, team play was a bit lacking, as the Blue Hose had 24 turnovers.

Two days later, PC was edged by Newberry, 91-88. The Hose rallied from a ten point deficit with 51 seconds left to make it close. Misses (25 turnovers) haunted the Blue Hose once more.

Cannon again led the team in points (16) and added ten rebounds, which was second only to Rydzewski's twelve boards. Rydzewski and three other players—Johnson, Holiday and Fowler—notched double figures in scoring. Johnson handed out a team-high five assists in the loss.

With a youthful team (only two seniors), Nibert will count on the freshmen to contribute.

"We're calling on freshmen to come in and play well. They have the potential to be great players. With the type of competition we have, they're going to have to grow up fast," said Nibert.

That competition includes a conference that, to Nibert, "will have the most balance it has ever had." Nibert added, "there are a lot of teams that have at least three starters back."

After playing at USC-Aiken last Saturday, the Blue Hose (now 1-3) have two more games before Christmas break, including a home game vs. Erskine on Dec. 10. With consistent play, the Blue Hose could go to the holidays with a 4-3 record.

Fall student-athletes receive honors

by Everett Catts
STAFF WRITER

With the success of the four fall sports comes individual recognition. Many fall student-athletes were rewarded for their efforts both on and off the field or court.

Junior center Chris McGaha was named to the 1994 GTE Academic All-District III team. McGaha holds a 3.44 GPA in Biology and has been a Dean's List student in all but one of his four full semesters at PC. A native of Snellville, GA, McGaha was also named the SAC-8 First Union Scholar Athlete for football, an award that goes to the top student-athlete in the conference.

On the field, McGaha has been just as impressive. He was named to the All-SAC second team for leading an offense that averaged a school record 375 yards per game.

Offensive hitter Kristy Tarallo received All-South honors after leading the volleyball team to a 30-9 record and a third straight SAC tournament title. The co-captain and Pickens, SC native led the Blue Hose in games played (143) and digs (701), and was second on the team in kills (439), kills per game (3.07) and passing percentage (94%). Tarallo is also a two-time All-Conference selection.

Three women's soccer players were named to the All-South First Team as well, Christy Flack, Charity Brazeal, and Rebecca Hardiman. Senior Heather Frederick was named to the All-South Second Team. Flack was PC's top defender and scored the only goal against then top ranked Berry. Brazeal was third on the team in goals (11), assists (5), and points (26). Hardiman led the team in goals (15), assists (9), and points (39). Frederick, a defensive mid-fielder, managed to total five goals and three assists.

The squad's head coach, Brian Purcell, was also recognized by the South region. Purcell was named NSCAA/Umbro NCAA Division II South Region Coach of the Year. Purcell, a former PC student athlete, led the Blue Hose women to a school record 15 wins, the SAC-8 regular season title and a first-ever berth to the NCAA tournament. In only six years as coach, Purcell has been named SAC-8 Coach of the Year three times, including this past season.

Basketball Home Schedule

12/10	Erskine (M)	7:30
1/5	Erskine (W)	7:00
1/7	Flon (M & W)	5:45 & 7:30
1/11	Wingate (M & W)	5:45 & 7:30
1/21	Lenoir Rhyne (M & W)	5:45 & 7:30
1/25	Catawba (M & W)	5:45 & 7:30
2/11	Carson Newman (M & W)	5:45 & 7:30
2/15	Mars Hill (M & W)	5:45 & 7:30
2/25	Gardner Webb (M & W)	5:45 & 7:30

1995

THE BLUE

STOCKING

LXXXVIV No. 6

"ALL FOR PC

PC FOR ALL"

Volume LXXXV Number 4

PRESBYTERIAN COLLEGE

Clinton, South Carolina 29325

January 27, 1995

$19,500 Pac saC debt prompts college, editor to make changes

by Gray Lesesne
MANAGING EDITOR

Past budgetary and management problems with the Pac saC yearbook have led college officials and the publication's current editor into a discussion on how it may be improved and changed to better meet the college's needs and financial constraints. Discussions were initiated by current Pac saC editor Jay Therrell, who pressed the administration and the Russell Subcommittee on Campus Communications to examine more thoroughly previous yearbook operations and expenditures after the previous editors, Lauren Owings and Dena Elliott failed to turn in their editions on time or within budget. Owings book was over eight months late and was eventually completed by the school's office of public relations after college president Kenneth B. Orr removed her from her position last year. Owings conduct was examined by a Judicial Council prosecutor, but no charges were filed due to insufficient evidence. Elliott's book arrived last November, three months after its August due date. Owings and Elliott both graduated in December. Their combined budget excesses have placed the publication over $19,500 in debt, a deficit current editor Therrell has been left to deal with.

"I was never shown bills from the publisher by the previous editors. I'm glad that Jay has slammed the brakes on this situation and brought it to the attention of the business office," said Dr. Dean Thompson, Pac saC advisor.

"We've put all of the events of the past two years behind us. We're concentrating on a new Pac saC with an almost entirely new staff, and we're working hard to put out the finest yearbook PC has ever had. When it gets here in August, people won't recognize it," said Therrell, a sophomore and former editor of his high school publication.

Budget restraints due to the previous debt has caused Therrell to cut out frills in this year's book. "We're being extremely cost-conscious this year. We've dropped all the extras. If it's not essential, we're not doing it," he said. Therrell has eliminated embossing and graining of the front cover, dropped the foil stamping used on previous books, and eliminated copy on the end sheets of the book.

In addition to physical changes, Therrell has also made revisions to the book's content. He has established a theme for the yearbook, something he said hasn't been done in the last three years. This year's theme, Dateline PC, is a takeoff from the NBC news program Dateline NBC. Therrell has also eliminated photographs of alcoholic beverages from the yearbook, citing them as an embarrassment to without the aid of alcohol. There's no need for excesses to be shown," said Thompson. He lauded Therrell for "his emphasis on student body and organizational altruism" in this year's photo spreads.

Therrell proposed changes last week to the Russell Subcommittee on Campus Communications that would include changing the yearbook delivery date back to spring delivery with a supplement available of graduation pictures that would be attached to the back of the book.

"I'm all in favor of changing the delivery back to spring. A fall delivery adds nothing to the book. It was created only for the sake of a few pages that can be mailed during the summer," said Thompson, who has served as Pac saC advisor for the last three years. A decision on changing the book back to spring delivery will be reached by the Russell subcommittee in February.

In addition, Therrell recommended to the committee a possible change in publishing companies. Currently, Newsfoto Yearbooks of San Angelo, Tex. serves as the publisher for the Pac saC.

"Our needs are not being served by Newsfoto. We need a larger company that is more experienced with larger books like the Pac saC," said Therrell, who also cites Newsfoto's old software and unhelpful staff as factors that have contributed to his recommendation to change publishers.

The 1995 Pac saC cover features the "Dateline PC" theme. Photo courtesy of the Pac saC.

the college.

"The photo spreads should certainly have less emphasis on inebriation and irresponsibility when the emphasis instead can be on the genuine camaraderie developed

On The Inside

Page 4 . . .

FIPSE grant to fund student-led programming

Page 6 . . .

PC AD Allen Morris has made winning a lifetime commitment.

Page 7 . . .

The staff spotlight shines upon admin's Paula Sanders

by Alison Barnard
STAFF WRITER

Two PC students, Karen O'Connor and Melinda Diller have been named as recipients of Rotary International Scholarships.

Melinda Diller, a business and English major will study international law and business at the University of Sussex in Brighton, England. "I hope to obtain a greater understanding of the Rotary Club and of how the world perceives the U.S., as well as what can be done to change certain perceptions. Being away from my family and all of my friends will be the hardest part of being abroad for year. Despite being aware that she will miss much, she said that she is "anxiously awaiting" her departure in September. A member of the Judicial Council, SVS, Figs and Thistles, Society for the Advancement of Management, and Surlings, Diller plans to attend graduate school and pursue a joint degree in international law and international business.

Karen O'Connor, an English major, will study Anglo-Irish Literature at Trinity College

Dublin, Ireland. "I've been interested in Irish Literature for a long time, and I'm very excited to be able to study in Ireland." "My great grandparents were Irish immigrants, and I've always been interested in my Irish heritage and culture," O'Connor said that she too will miss her family and friends. "I am a little nervous about getting settled and finding an apartment, but I'm really excited." She is an active member of Zeta tau Alpha Sorority, Sigma Kappa Alpha and Omicron Delta Kappa honor societies,

SVS, innatural, and Stirlings. O'Connor, upon her return from Ireland, plans to pursue a doctorate in English with hopes to teach at the college level.

Both Diller and O'Connor said that they were very honored not only to be recipients of the scholarship, but also to be world ambassadors for Rotary International

(photos courtesy PC News Services)

O'Connor

Diller

From the Editor...

Sure, the buildings are nice. And the grass is always freshly cut.

But it's the people that make this college a special place. This year the Blue Stocking has brought you a staff member of the month in each issue. We hope that we have opened doors for you to approach these people and speak to each person, for they are all extraordinary people. But really we just hope you will take the time during your short stay here at the school to meet at least a few of the people who make PC such a wonderful place.

People hate to get behind me at GDH because, whether we're having country fried steak or that delicious breakfast dinner that we recently had (I haven't eaten so much since I've been here), I am going to have to talk to Mrs. Beaty, Mrs. Turner, and the host of other friendly people who make GDH their workplace.

It sometimes seems to me that through all the hustle and bustle of cramming as much food into the face as is possible between, say, a 12:00 class and lab, we students don't get the opportunity, or rather make the opportunity, to stop and converse with the infinitely amazing people who are right there in front of us serving gravy or pounding on the trayvator (is that really a word?).

The other night I was lucky enough to have the chance to spend some time with Mr. Gerald Hughes and Lt. Nelson, two of our public safety officers. I had seen them around campus a million times and generally said the almost obligatory "hello," but I had never before taken the time to talk to them. In addition to having an enjoyable conversation, I received a first-hand demonstration of the golf cart's new blue lights, and even unintentionally learned something from them: it is generally eight to ten degrees colder on the Templeton side of campus than it is on the Neville side. They didn't know why, but it is nevertheless a very interesting fact.

Everybody gets to know their professors at least somewhat while at PC and this is great; it is what separates PC from the large universities in the state. I know students who consider some of their professors among their closest friends and this simply exemplifies PC's commitment to personal relationship development. There are just so many intriguing people here at PC who can settle almost camouflaged into the background of the fast moving college campus unless we make ourselves look for them.

PC is impressive with its many columns, but the school is only as sturdy as its people, and it's got some great people.

Letters to the Editor

1994 Pac saC angers Greek leaders

Dear Editor,

After awaiting the release of the 1993-1994 Pac SaC, I must admit I was truly disappointed with the copy which introduces the section. Despite the lack of a verb, this sentence conveys a clear message of criticism. While not an effective introduction to a yearbook section, the sentence succeeds in alienating nearly half of the PC student body, the Greek community. The comment attempts to reduce Greeks to students bound by similar "logos." As president of the Order of Omega, I represent approximately fifty student leaders who I feel sure are offended that such ignorance is forever documented in our Pac SaC.

It would be easy for me to now explain to the author (or any others who also may be confused) the value of Greek life. It would also be easy to point out the number of clubs in the organization section which can also be considered exclusive. Instead, I would like to challenge those with questions to turn to a student sitting next to them in class (there is a 42% chance he or she is Greek) and ask for themselves. With increased communication, we will all know the truth about Greeks and many other organizations, hopefully before anyone of us are stigmatized in our Pac SaC.

Ashby Lawton
President
The Order of Omega

Dear Editor,

I recently received my copy of the Pac SaC, eager to revisit my first year at PC. Unfortunately, upon reading the introduction to the organization section my excitement turned to disappointment. The caption begins, "despite logo-bearing t-shirts and not-so-secret rituals, not all organizations at PC are exclusive." I am appalled at the audacity of the staff to offend more than 40 percent of our campus with such a statement. I am writing on behalf of the Panhellenic Council to address this inappropriate statement and the attitude which it reflects. My intention is not to slight the Pac SaC staff, indeed a great deal of work went into last year's book. This statement represents an attitude which frustrates PC's Greek leaders the most.

The irony in the Pac SaC's statement is that Greeks pictured in every organization featured. Also each organization appearing in this section is exclusive in its own way. For example, membership in STAC and PC Leadership require a nomination and a selection process, one must be interviewed to be a Stirling, and participation in the Pep Band and PC Choir require musical talent. Indeed not everyone who would like to be a member of these organizations is able to be. It is only the Greeks, however, who are recognized as being exclusive - this is hardly fair.

As a member of Panhellenic, it is aggravating to see all our hard work to improve the Greek system undermined with the stroke of a pen. We spend countless hours helping sorority women focus on our common ideals in hopes of improving relations with the community, faculty and administration, and independent students. By no means are we or the Greek system we represent perfect, but who is? We already fight an uphill battle, but we hope to be supported by our fellow students rather than insulted. Statements such as the one in question hardly aid us in our task.

I have never felt the need to question a publication, but I have never seen such a blatant underhanded insult to such a large portion of the PC family appear in an unbiased publication. If professionalism is the Pac SaC's goal, indeed some evaluation needs to occur before the publication of this year's book is complete. Granted I have never been on staff and am not fully aware of what goes into its production. Similar division of staff members who are not Greek are entirely out of line by criticizing the Greek system when they have no more knowledge of all that it entails. Panhellenic respects the work of our press and expects the same in return.

Thank you for your time

Catherine Bunch
Corresponding Secretary
Panhellenic Council

THE BLUE STOCKING

Presbyterian College - Clinton, South Carolina 29325
Volume LXXXVIII Number 6, January 27, 1995

Editor in Chief: Tim Turner
Managing Editor: Chris L. Jones
New Editor: Leighton Hart
Sports Editor: Margaret Train-Pender
Features Editor: Amanda Barnes
Production Editor: Brian Sikes
Photography Editor: Jacob Williams
Layout and Production: Stephanie Housh
Staff Advisor: Mr. Greg Pruitt

The Blue Stocking (ISSN 0007-1226) is published by Presbyterian College. The appearance of a notice of advertisement in this publication does not constitute an endorsement or approval by the Presbyterian College of the views or opinions expressed or the quality of the goods or services advertised. The Blue Stocking is published by Presbyterian College, 1000 North Main Street, Clinton, SC 29325. The Blue Stocking will accept advertising copy and orders for advertising space on a non-exclusive basis. The Blue Stocking reserves the right to reject any advertising copy that is not in accordance with its policies. The Blue Stocking is not responsible for the return of unsolicited advertising copy. The Blue Stocking is not responsible for the return of unsolicited advertising copy. The Blue Stocking is not responsible for the return of unsolicited advertising copy.

PC, Laurens County form educational partnership

Public and private education officials met Friday at Presbyterian College for a common cause—helping financially-disadvantaged school children take a first step toward attaining their educational goals.

PC officials were joined by members of Laurens County School Districts 55 and 56, Thornwell School, and the Laurens County Chamber of Commerce to unveil the CHAMPS (Communities Helping, Assisting, and Motivating Promising Students) Program. The cooperative program will annually bring 30 selected rising seventh graders to the Presbyterian College campus for an intensive two-week residential program that will include both academic and social activities with master teachers and caring mentors.

Through follow-up activities, support from the community, and eventually summer internships, the students may work to overcome their financial hardships and possibly make their dreams of a post-secondary education a reality.

"In the 16 years I have been at Presbyterian College, we have dreamed of ways that we could give back to this county some kind of special educational service in recognition of what the residents of Laurens County have meant to this college over the past 115 years. Our dreams have led to this joint effort to help disadvantaged young people," said Dr. Kenneth B. Orr, president of the college.

Overseeing the implementation and operation of the program will be Dr. Jerman Disasa, instructor of education and coordinator of the college's service-learning program. A native of rural Ethiopia, Disasa taught in middle and secondary schools for nine years in Ethiopia and the United States. He held faculty and administrative positions at the University of South Carolina for eight years before joining the faculty at PC in 1994.

"This program is going to open doors for some of our students who have potential, but do not see what they might be if they develop their talents,"—Charles Cummins

"Coming from an economically disadvantaged background, it did not take me long to personalize the intent of the program, to visualize the possible outcomes of the programs, and to imagine the role it could play in bringing together the community and the college," Disasa said. "Our county is not deprived of concerned, creative, and imaginative people. I am touched by that."

"While we recognize the enormity of the problem in our county and the limitation of the CHAMPS program, we cannot fail to visualize the difference it will make for the recipients of this program. This program is, in its simplest form, a collaborative solution to a persistent problem. Because we believe we have common threads, I know we will succeed in this endeavor. The strength of the CHAMPS program is not merely in its name, but in its content—a combination of the internal determination of the kids and their parents and the external joint commitment of the college and the community."

"We know that appropriate education is the key to the future. Without an education, we know that the future is going to be limited for a lot of students," said Dr. Charles Cummins, superintendent of Laurens County 56. "This program is going to open doors for some of our students who have potential, but do not see what they might be if they develop their talents. It is a great day for our school system and Thornwell School, and we thank Presbyterian College for initiating the program and allowing us to be a part of it."

In recognition of the collaborative CHAMPS program, the Consortium for the Advancement of Private Higher Education has provided $25,000 in seed money for the program. Program officials made it known on Friday that their realistic vision for the program extends beyond the grant.

"As we move into the decade, one thing that we discover is that people's lives get busier and more cluttered. We find that urgent tasks crowd our day and that things that are important can wait until tomorrow. Our children cannot wait until tomorrow," added Norman Dover, assistant principal of Thornwell School. "It is today that their dreams are forming, their vision is coming into focus, their goals are being set, and their course for the future is being charted. It is now that they have needs. A program like CHAMPS is able to come into the life of a child who shows academic promise but no experience no hope, and it will give that child hope for a brighter future. It will get students to think long-term and help them to realize that a college education is not just for someone else."

Administration ponders call waiting, other dorm changes

by Leighton Hart
NEWS EDITOR

In the past weeks and months, Residence Life Director Andy Altizer has been busy planning for the future of campus life at PC. He feels that the quality of dorm life at PC has gotten better during the past year and will continue to get better in the coming months.

One topic of concern for many students is the campus phone service. Many students believe that the phone service is in need of modernization in the form of adding services such as call waiting and voice mail. Morris Galloway, Dean of Administrative Services, commented, "I believe that SGA is going to be running a referendum or survey to see whether or not people want call waiting. It would need to be all or nothing; we couldn't manage to turn it on for one room but not for another down the hall. I think the added cost would be about $10 to $12 per resident-student per year, but it may come in less." Galloway also discussed the possibility of a voice mail service, "I have been in favor of an audio bulletin board for years, and I think SGA is in favor of it, too. When we have firm prices on full voice mail, we'll assess costs vs. benefits, and see whether an intermediate voice bulletin board is worthwhile, or whether we should go for the full voice mail system."

"We feel that call waiting is an attainable goal and should be enacted by fall of 1995. I'm willing to make sure of that," said Leigh Davis, SGA Vice President.

"Comparatively, many other schools have this feature. I am confident SGA will have it in place come August," said Susan Hangler, sophomore class representative.

There is also little doubt that PC housing will continue to get better, according to Altizer. The new co-ed dorm behind Barron and Groves Halls will begin construction soon, creating space in 1996 that may possibly make the Moorefield House, Women's Social Hall, Mayes Cottage and Beaty House obsolete. Altizer noted that discussion has taken place regarding the future of the Women's Social Hall. He says that he has been approached by many students who think that it should be used as a non-Greek social house. Altizer was also very enthusiastic about proposed campus apartments, which he thinks will be approved and under construction in the near future. These apartments would offer a very different housing experience than dorm living, said Altizer. Each apartment will have a common kitchen and living area, and each student will have a private bedroom. Other housing changes may possibly include the demolition of Doyle Hall, and possibly converting fourth floor Clinton Hall into all single rooms, he said.

Another topic Altizer spoke about was the possibility of switching to a universal ID card, which would not only serve as an ID, but also as a dorm key and debit card. These cards can be used not only for meals but also to buy books in the bookstore and check out library books. Such cards are used on other campuses such as Emory and Duke. Altizer said that, "I think we're moving toward a universal card. It may not be in the immediate future, but the chances are good that PC will come to use a universal card."

On the whole, Altizer is confident that PC residence life is very competitive with that of comparable schools. He cites the size of PC dorm rooms as a distinct advantage over comparable schools. The size of PC dorms, combined with the other advantages of PC residence life, such as the PC channel movies and cable in every room, serve to make PC very competitive with other private schools.

One new program implemented with this year's freshman class was freshman clustering. This idea of clustering freshman is one that Altizer has been in favor of for a long time. By housing the freshman students on the same halls and in the same dorms, he believes that the freshmen are able to better acquaint themselves with each other. This freshman clustering also lent a positive hand to the Freshman Orientation Board. Instead of FOB leaders having to walk all over campus to assemble their groups, they could locate them easily on one hall. Altizer also believes that being in an FOB group with the people that live nearby helps to get dorm life off on the right foot. Freshman Tommy Reiser said, "I think that the freshman cluster worked. Being in the FOB with the guys on my hall really helped a lot." Altizer believes that it was successful this year, and sees no reason why it shouldn't work in years to come.

Room registration for the 1995-1996 academic year will get underway on April 10th. On that date, room deposits will be accepted. Once a deposit has been paid, students will be assigned a lottery number, giving them priority over non-paid students. Students who turn in deposits early will have a better chance of getting their desired room than those who turn theirs in late. There have been rumors floating among the student body that there will be major dorm changes next year, but Altizer believes that everything will stay about like it is now. Once he receives enrollment numbers from admissions, he will begin the process of determining who needs to go where. He is confident that no major changes will be necessary.

PC Tidbits

Public Safety dons new golf cart lights

In a private law enforcement first, Presbyterian College Public Safety added new patrol lights to its roving golf cart fleet recently. Officers expressed excitement over the new blue lights.

"But, if you play with the blue lights too much, then you have to walk in and tow it (the cart) in later," said Lt. Nelson of the force.

Summey honored at music competition

PC junior Ben Summey was honored recently at the South Carolina Federation of Music Clubs competition in Hartsville. Summey placed first in the men's vocal division at the collegiate level. Summey is a voice performance major from Spartanburg, S.C..

Ukrainian pianist returns to PC

Widely-lauded pianist Alexander Peskanov, who performed at PC in 1993, returns to the campus this evening for an 8:15 p.m. performance as part of the PC Piano Clinic for teachers and students. Information is available by dialing 8470.

Staley Lecture questions societal, college role in human sexuality

PC trustee John J. Carey, who led the controversial committee of the Presbyterian Church (USA) on human sexuality, is the Thomas F. Staley Distinguished Christian Lecturer for 1995. Carey, a professor at Agnes Scott College in Atlanta, will lecture on the topic "Are We Learning the Right Things: The College, The Culture, and Human Sexuality" on Monday at 11 a.m. in Belk Auditorium. There will be no "F" period classes Monday. Classes will meet Tuesday during the normal convocation hour.

--compiled from staff reports

New FIPSE grant offers student-led grant programming

by Leighton Hart
NEWS EDITOR

Whether we like to admit it or not, alcohol and drugs are a problem on most college campuses. While PC does not have the party atmosphere associated with larger schools, it would be foolish to think that PC is void of high-risk and abusive drinking, according to Mary Wylie Madden, Assistant Coordinator of Alcohol and Drug Prevention at Presbyterian College, who is a 1994 graduate of Lander University. Madden and the Student Affairs Office are sponsoring grants for student-led alcohol and drug abuse prevention programs. This concept of student leadership is bolstered by a federal FIPSE grant, a program which provides funding to institutions of higher learning for the sake of alcohol and drug awareness. PC received a FIPSE grant last fall.

Presbyterian College is fortunate to have been selected to receive this grant. Only two other South Carolina institutions were awarded the FIPSE. Those are the Medical University of South Carolina and Voorhes College. The FIPSE, which entitles the school to more than $25,000 to fund awareness programs, is being managed by Madden. She spent most of the fall semester training for her duties related to FIPSE. Upon their return to PC after the Winter Break, leaders of campus organizations found a letter from Madden in their mail boxes informing them of the opportunity they have to use FIPSE money to sponsor alcohol and drug awareness events. Essentially, any campus organization is welcome to money provided they organize and execute a program or event emphasizing awareness of the dangers of high-risk drinking choices.

So far, FIPSE money has gone to certify faculty members to teach the On Campus Talking About Alcohol curriculum that is presented in Physical Education and Collegiate Life classes. Other grant money has gone to sponsor other events such as Alcohol Awareness Month in October and the "Natural Highs" C.E.P. speaker

"We [the Student Affairs Office] feel good just knowing that we can help," said Andy Altizer, director of residence life. The foundation has been laid for a strong awareness program, and now comes the time to put responsibility in the hands of the students. All organizations are encouraged to get involved with the FIPSE grant by sponsoring events to promote alcohol and drug awareness on campus. With the aid of the FIPSE grant, the school hopes to enhance the overall community atmosphere among the students by increasing peer involvement in substance abuse and by educating students in the areas of health and impairment problems relating to substance abuse.

SUB offers activities, options for PC students

by Dawn Banks
STAFF WRITER

During the late 1960's the Student Entertainment Committee, directed by Jean Sullivan, was established at PC as an incentive to provide and conduct social activities for the students of the Presbyterian College campus. The Student Entertainment Committee sponsored the college's dances/parties, etc. However, during the early 1980's the Student Entertainment Committee became known as the Student Union Board (SUB), as the organization became more than simply entertainment, and as student involvement increased. This new student interest resulted in many divergent committees being formed for various aspects of campus life. Although these first committees have been added to and revised over the years to more accurately serve the student body, remnants of the original program still exist. More recently established committees command an array of topics affecting all students and staff of PC.

The SUB is composed of several committees, the Special Events Committee (responsible for planning events such as Fun Flicks, Blizzard of Bucks, Bungee Run, Virtual Reality, etc.); the Concert Committee (responsible for conducting various concerts and dances at PC, Spring Swing, etc.); the Dance and Big Weekends Committee (responsible for organizing functions such as the Blue Sox Festival, Winter Formal, etc.); the Travel Committee (responsible for arranging various ski trips, white water rafting trips, visits to the Biltmore House, etc.); Games and Recreation Committee (responsible for sponsoring games such as the PC Dating Game, the Pumpkin carving contest, etc.); the Movie Committee (responsible for broadcasting some of the most current movie releases in the privacy of one's own dorm room on the PC channel); the Central Spirit Committee (responsible for planning campus spirit activities such as the Blue Sox Festival, home-game ticket prizes, etc.); the Short Course Committee (responsible for supervising the signing of classes for the hearing impaired, the Lion Dancing event, etc.); the MSU & SGA Committee (responsible for integrate events of minority affairs as well as events of student governmental affairs into various SUB social events); and finally, the Publicity Committee (responsible for publicizing and advertising SUB's upcoming events).

Undoubtedly, SUB has served the campus well throughout the years, and their many creative activities have enhanced not only the entertainment aspect of student life at PC, but also the strive for unification on campus. The vast majority of PC students have attended and enjoyed these events, however how often do we think about the hard work and determination that goes toward structuring these events? How often do we really think about what's behind the scenes of one of PC's most distinct groups, the Student Union Board?

Under the directorship of Randy Randall, who has been the Director of Student Activities since 1976 (1976-1984 and 1992-currently), the Student Union Board has progressed extensively over the years. Randall, who has also been the Director of Alumni Affairs, and PC's Women's Basketball coach, states that he prefers his position as Director of Student Affairs simply because he really loves and enjoys working with motivated PC students. Randall also stated that being the Director of Student Activities enables him to work and interact with a more diverse group rather than one specific group of people. Randall also states, "SUB has come a long way, bringing about many great changes as far as improvements are concerned. We've gone from greater quantitative and a less qualitative school dances to a less quantitative and greater qualitative school dances. We've also gone from broadcasting approximately ten currently released movies per year in the Springs Campus Activity Center, to approximately one hundred current releases on the PC channel. There is now more student involvement than ever before, bringing about more creative ideas and input. Most of our activities are categorized according to themes of particular events and time periods such as, Fall Festival in the Fall, Spring Swing in the Spring, Winter Formal in the Winter, black performances at Inklings during Black History Month, etc."

"We try to be creative, taking chances at new activities in order to uplift and uphold students' interest," Randall continues, "We also try to serve all students on this campus and not just cater to a few. Chances are everyone cannot be, will not be, and isn't always satisfied all at once, however, we do try our best to provide a great variety of activities to all."

Finally, everyone must realize that SUB's purpose is not to compete with fraternity houses, or any other organization on PC campus, but rather to provide all PC students with additional entertaining events and functions as well as school spirit and unity. It's all about teamwork, therefore I strongly encourage everyone to become involved with SUB.

SUB's President, Charissa Cockerle's, comment on her involvement with the Student Union Board, "Working with Randall, SUB's Director, Dean Sheem, SUB's Vice President, Melynda Ray, Treasurer, Cindy Borders, Secretary, and all the SUB's sub committees representatives has been a very wonderful, yet challenging experience for me. We work very hard, trying to bring the best of entertainment at PC, therefore, we really encourage students' participation and school spirit. With the strong leaders SUB employs currently, we can expect new and exciting things to be happening through the remainder of this academic year."

SUB's upcoming events include guitarist Tony Jarvis performing on Feb. 9th, 9 PM at Inklings, SUB sponsored ski trip, Feb. 19th; the Alpha Experience, a ventiloquist and comedy performance, Winter Formal, and many more splendid events to be announced.

Below are the names of the children who were adopted by the Presbyterian College community during the 1993-1994 adoption drive. The children were adopted by the Presbyterian College community during the 1993-1994 adoption drive.

FRIENDS DON'T LET FRIENDS DRIVE DRUNK.

Lady Hose maintain consistent pace in mid-season stretch

by Lucy Mahon
STAFF WRITER

If you've been fortunate enough to see them play, you'll know there are many ways to describe this year's women's basketball team. Tough, versatile, determined, and talented are some of the first that come to mind. Though the loss of last year's senior standout Jennifer Hilliard has resulted in some need for adjustment, the Blue Hose continue to be an intimidating threat both inside and outside of the conference.

With about half of the season expired, the Lady Hose are enjoying a winning season. Their overall record stands at 10-5 and the Lady Hose are holding steady in the SAC at 2-2. The margin of one conference loss (to Wingate) was a mere two points, but Presbyterian snapped a two-game losing streak last week by defeating Mars Hill, 70-58, on the road.

The team has been fueled offensively by junior Kristy Tarallo who has been averaging 16.3 points a game. Tarallo leads the team in scoring, assists (3.7pg), steals (2.7pg), and rebounds (7.5pg).

Her consistent shooting has been a point of stability for the team and no doubt a large part of its success. In eight of Presbyterian's 10 wins this season Tarallo has paced the Blue Hose in scoring.

Using Jennifer Mims as a screen, junior Chris Mitchum drives to the basket.

photo by Jason Williams

Senior forward Melanie Johnson has contributed to the scoring as well. She posted a season high 24 points against Furman and notched another season high against Wofford when she pulled down 16 rebounds. Perhaps even more impressive than those numbers is the fact that she leads the team on field goal percentage with a solid 47 percent.

While Tarallo and Johnson have captured much of the limelight thus far, consistent performances by several other Lady Hose have made the team even stronger. Chris Mitchum has filled the "quarterback's role" as an extremely effective point guard this year, leading the team in 3-pointers and providing the spark needed to execute plays. Mitchum has a 78.3 free throw percentage which is second only to sophomore Karen Neeley. Neeley, who is averaging 8.1 points a game, has an 83.3 free throw percentage. Neeley's quickness on defense and versatility as a shooting guard or point guard have made her another weapon for the Blue Hose. Both Mitchum and Neeley have consistently proven that they can pass the ball as well as shoot it, and together they have accumulated over 70 assists.

These stats, along with Tarallo's, reveal the deadly outside threat of the Lady Hose. With the ability of Mitchum, Neeley, Tarallo, and Johnson in the arsenal, the scoring potential of the Blue Hose is awesome indeed.

The backcourt of the Lady Hose is definitely not to be overlooked, considering there are four six-footers. Junior Jennifer Mims is the veteran forward, and she leads the team in blocks with 24 for the season. Mims has supplied the Blue Hose with generous rebounding as well as blocked shots, making her invaluable underneath the basket. Sophomore forward Watoma Williams has made great strides since last year and is really starting to mature in her position. With her increased playing time this year, Williams' moves have developed into a graceful and determined flow to the basket, as a result she is tied as the team's fourth highest scorer (7.5 ppg) and has accumulated 15 blocks.

Fifth year senior Kaye Watts, who is completing her eligibility after sitting out one year as a medical redshirt, continues to provide leadership on the court. Watts came off the bench and helped to fuel a 21-3 run against Mars Hill last Wednesday.

Upcoming action for the Lady Hose will involve much travel, as their next four games are away: the Blue Hose return to action in Clinton on February 11 against SAC foe Carson-Newman.

Blue Hose in the Spotlight:

Sophomore third baseman Ryan Kane has been named Pre-Season Second Team All-American. Kane was one of only two non-Division I players to make the squad. Additionally, he is ranked #27 on the list of collegiate prospects for this year's professional draft.

Campus & Clubs

Annual Fund Phonathon

The phones of PC's alumni will soon be ringing with student callers asking for support of the college in the annual phonathon. The phonathon will be held on the nights of February 2, 9, 13, 16, and 23.

The phonathon secures nearly half of the gifts made each year to the annual fund. These gifts help provide needed financial assistance for students, supplement faculty salaries, and help meet current operational needs.

Ten persons from each organization will be committed to two hours of calling, beginning with a 30 minute training session. Both organizations and individuals will have the chance to win cash prizes and merchandise. A total of $900 in cash and prizes will be given to organizations. Groups interested in participating in this year's phonathon should contact Jim Morton, Director of the Annual Fund, at extension 8325.

Student Volunteer Services

Spring semester has taken off, so come by the SVS office to sign-up for this semester's programs. We'll have the times posted, and the sign-up cards available. Even if you were involved last semester, please sign-up again. We would like to have everyone come and sign up by January 31. We are looking forward to a semester full of service.

Pi Kappa Phi

We have been hard at work raising money for disabled children this year. So far our chapter has raised more money than any other Pi Kappa chapter in the nation ($4,850). We will be holding another PUSH tollroad on February 4th in the Clinton area in an effort to reach our goal of $10,000 for the year. Senior Mike Milligan will soon be joining the ranks of the accomplished this summer by riding "The Journey Of Hope." He will ride his bike across the country representing his chapter, fraternity, and PUSH America. Mike will be the sixth brother from Beta chapter to complete this journey.

Zeta Tau Alpha

We would like to congratulate our newest sisters:

Elizabeth Bean, Sammi Bridgforth, Neile Bruce, Amanda Boswell, Laura Burton, Larianne Collins, Megan Cuts, Shelley Davis, Deidre Dunne, Elizabeth Elliott, Meg Ellis, Alyson Fowler, Meagan Gower, Summer Hendley, Hailey Johnston, Leigh Lanford, Lucy Mahon, Robin Meyer, Mary Craig Mooneyhan, Pressley Neal, Elizabeth Roe, Catherine Scholl, Claire Smith, Elizabeth Smith, Michelle Smith, Emily Spear, Lissa Sumner, Jill Treadwell, Maria Turner, Margaret Witherington, Tiffany Worrell.

We would also like to congratulate our Executive Council for 1995:

Ami Pitts, President
Anne Marie Goldsmith, Vice President
COC

Catherine Martin, Vice President DPP
Mary Beth Thomas, Secretary
Laura Severinsen, Treasurer
Beth Peake, Membership
Emily Meyers, Panhellenic
Liz Dukes, Judicial

PC athletic director makes winning with integrity a way of life

by Chris Coheleach
STAFF WRITER

If there were only one word I could use to describe Allen Morris's character, it would be integrity. As the new Director of Athletics for PC, he states his goals clearly, "to graduate our student athletes, compete with integrity, and compete to win." Allen Morris is most definitely a winner. But integrity is a more important value to Morris, one which has been instilled in him by his family since childhood.

Morris grew up in a duplex immediately around the corner from the location of the Fox Theatre in Atlanta, GA. As an only child, he says he was probably spoiled, even though he was a child of the depression. "My parents gave me everything they could, and I understood that," says Morris. What he also came to understand was the value of hard work. Both of his parents worked, and when his father came home he would sell apples on the street to earn more money. Describing himself as independent, Morris went out on his own into the world and created his own success.

His success as an athlete began when he was given his first tennis racket outside of the club where he watched the members play. He was twelve years old when a member of the club saw him there and tossed one of his old rackets over the fence of the tennis court to the young Morris.

Morris went on to play tennis and football at the Marist School for Boys, which was then a military school. He was the high school jock at Marist, and then received a scholarship to play football, his first love, for Georgia Tech. Although math and chemistry were not exactly his forte, Morris did well at Tech but was forced to discontinue his football career due to an injury.

Soon after being awarded a tennis scholarship to attend Presbyterian College, he began to amass a host of titles and state championships. As captain of the men's tennis team, he captured the title of South Carolina Intercollegiate Champion in singles every year of his PC career as well as in doubles for two years. In those days, Morris admired tennis great Tony Trabert, helioked Trabert's style of play, which epitomized great integrity. "He always made good line calls. He carried himself well."

Morris had an opportunity to play Trabert in the 1954 US Open, but they became friends, jogging together and playing in tournaments. Morris has played many other famous players as well, such as Rod Laver, Roy Emerson, and Arthur Ashe. But the highlight of Morris' tennis career came in 1956, when he upset fifth seeded Ashley Cooper from Australia and propelled himself into the Wimbledon quarterfinals. Morris went on to establish himself as a respected coach, while at the University of North Carolina, he won the Atlantic Coast Conference Men's Tennis Coach of the Year Award three times. Though his accomplishments in tennis are indeed impressive, Morris has excelled in virtually every endeavor to which he has committed himself.

Allen Morris graduated from PC in 1956, when the college's student body numbered about 450, all of whom were men. Morris was very active in all that student life had to offer, and his involvement did not end with mere participation; Morris was a leader.

He was President of Block P, an athletic organization; he belonged to groups like Blue Key, Seabard and Blade, and ROTC. He was also a member of Kappa Alpha I (number one). At that time there were no fraternity houses, so KA would have their socials in a maintenance shed outside of Laurens dorm. "It was just one big room with a bar and a TV, and we played records and invited dates from schools likeander and Converse. There was no alcohol allowed on campus then, but you would still see lots of people sneaking out to the cars to drink," says Morris. There were no band parties; the only live entertainment would be for a school dance or the Military Ball.

Morris majored in economics because he always knew that he wanted to be in business. "If there was any money in tennis back then, I would have earned a living that way," says Morris. But Morris was a very successful business man as well. After serving for six months in the army, he went on to work for Travellers Insurance, Burlington Industries, and finally for Text, where he worked for 13 years and earned the title of Vice President.

He returned to intercollegiate tennis in 1980 as Director of Tennis and head men's tennis coach at the University of North Carolina, where he remained until being lured to PC in 1993 by an intriguing offer. The opportunity to return to his alma mater and serve as the head of the Scotsman Club was too tempting for Morris to refuse.

After the retirement of Callet Gault in 1994, Morris was named as the Director of Athletics for Presbyterian College, and soon seems that his career has come full circle; Morris is now able to give other promising young athletes what he has been given him: the opportunity to attend a fine academic institution while participating in athletics at the intercollegiate level.

Morris lives here in Clinton with his wife, the former Dorothy Smith of Atlanta, whom he first met on a blind date (Morris took "Dor" to a GT vs. Clemson football game). They have reared four children: David, Larry, Catherine, and John, the latter a 1989 PC grad and member of the tennis team. Three grandchildren, Allyn (14) who is named after her grandfather, Michael (12), and Jessie (2) now bring the joy of youth to the Morris' home. Any future tennis stars? "Michael likes to play tennis," says Morris. No doubt it runs in the family.

Allen Morris is continuing his winning tradition in sports as PC's AD.
photo by Samm Bridgforth

Blue Hose men struggle as young squad posts 4-11 record

by Margaret Ellen Pender
SPORTS EDITOR

How does a head coach who is accustomed to winning handle what would be viewed by critics as a subpar season? For sixth year head coach Greg Nibert the answer is not a difficult one. "Our goal for this season is to continue to improve and be ready to play our best basketball at the season's end. We have made great strides though we've endured quite a few 'bumps and bruises.' The key is to keep getting better and not lose our confidence; we must remember that struggling results in growth for the future."

The 1994-95 Blue Hose squad has definitely not been traveling the sweet path of SAC dominance that it once knew; instead, the Blue Hose have been forced to take a slight detour and, as a result, they have encountered several potholes along the way, ranging from the loss of junior power forward Brian Franklin due to a knee injury to the loss of junior small forward Jonathan Baukhead and sophomore point/shooting guard Layne Fowler, both of whom recently elected not to continue their basketball careers.

While a 4-11 record may not be worthy of national acclaim, Coach Nibert concedes that the Blue Hose winning percentage is a bit deceiving. "We're close (to achieving the combination for success). If we were not, we couldn't have played Furman or Wingate so close." Thus far, P.C.'s record includes home victories over Lees-McRae (67-46), Erskine (63-54), and Elon (84-67); the Hose also defeated Lees-McRae (67-46) on the road.

As in any sport, experience is often regarded as an essential ingredient for success, yet after a quick glance at the Blue Hose roster it is apparent that, much like the struggling Blue Devils of Duke who start three freshmen, seasoned veterans will not be a part of P.C.'s recipe this year. A typical starting line-up for the Hose includes one senior, two sophomores, and two freshmen while six of the eight teams in the SAC are reaping the rewards of senior-oriented squads. "We play in a tough conference," Nibert admits with a chuckle, which offers a hint of the competitive spirit which envelops this team and has not allowed the majority of these players to abandon hope for improvement.

According to the Coach Nibert, the focus of the Blue Hose efforts should center around two key areas: improved shooting percentage (needs to be >50%) and more consistent defense. Sophomore Andre Newman has made noted improvements in his defensive game; in fact, Coach Nibert has dubbed him as one of the best defensive players in the league. Additionally, Newman leads the Hose in scoring (10.8 ppg) and assists (2.4 apg). Aside from statistical categories, Newman plays with a noticeable poise and grace that undoubtedly will benefit the Hose increasingly as they attempt to iron out the wrinkles caused by the unexpected loss of several players.

On a team marked by youth and inexperience, senior Ernest Holiday has stepped up to assume a key position of leadership. Though small in stature, Holiday has contributed a mammoth effort to improvement in his guard position and, as a result, has provided a much needed spark on offense. After 15 games, he leads the team in 3 point field goal percentage (43.5%).

Sophomore Ronnie Cannon, last year's SAC Freshman of the Year, has been a dominant force for Presbyterian in the paint thus far. Currently he leads the team in free throw percentage (74.4%) and is second in rebounding (7.5 rpg). The most impressive of Cannon's stats, however, is the team-leading number of steals (25) that he has recorded. It is not often that a post player possesses the quickness or "scrappiness" to drive on the floor after loose balls.

Two freshmen have also made a great impact upon the program already. Six-eight center Steve Rydzewski presently leads the Hose in rebounding (8.0 rpg) and ranks second on the team in scoring (10.5 ppg). Increasing his value to the squad are his sharp post moves, which have contributed to his 56.6% accuracy from the floor, and his quick hands, which have produced 9 blocked shots. Point guard Patrick Johnson, who has now moved into the starting rotation, is averaging 5.2 ppg but has demonstrated heightened confidence in recent games by driving to the hoop more often and maturing in his ability to read the press.

Last Saturday, the Blue Hose fell prey to first-placed SAC foe Lenoir Rhyne. Cannon led P.C.'s attack with 13 points and 8 rebounds while Johnson chipped in 12 points and 4 assists. Monday night the Hose suffered another setback at the hands of Interstate rival Wolford. Though the final margin was seventeen (66-49), the outmanned Hose performed respectably against the Terriers and actually pulled within 5 with a few minutes remaining.

Upcoming action for the men will involve much travel, but the Hose will return to Templeton on February 11 for a 7:15 PM contest against SAC rival Claxson Newman.

Admin's Paula Sanders: Connecting PC with the world

by Amanda Barnes
FEATURES EDITOR

Scores of PC students, past and present, can boast of knowing Mrs. Paula Sanders, PC's main switchboard operator. During her six years of dedicated service to the college, Sanders has directed thousands of calls and answered a myriad of questions about PC. Acting as the receptionist for the entire college, complete with a master calendar and student roster she is in contact with each department nearly every day.

Previously employed as a cloth inspector at Clinton Mills, Sanders explains that her favorite aspect of her job at PC was lacking from her former work place. The relationships, personal experiences, meeting people one-on-one as well as the students combine to create a welcoming tone that helps make Sanders feel at home. She states, "I love being a part of the PC family, including everyone: the faculty, students, and staff, it's really a family to me!" In talking about her job Sanders emphasizes how much she has learned about respecting others, mainly from the tremendous amount of respect she has been shown personally. Going on further to explain her role in Smith Administration, Sanders called her job "a ministry" that affects others as well as herself. Amid her daily chores Sanders said, "I like to be a mom to all the students, to make their day easier."

Off campus Sanders keeps a busy schedule that includes volunteer work as well as quality time with her family. Like most proud grandmothers, Sanders enjoys visiting with her five year old granddaughter Krista. Another way she spends time with her family is through activities such as river rafting. This daring hobby involves all three of Sanders' children and for the past four years the Sanders family has braved rivers such as the Chatoga and Nanahala.

Sanders admitted a weakness for Gospel concerts and confessed to taking her family as well as youth groups to concerts in the area. As a director of "Youth Alive" at her church in Clinton, Sanders teaches and chaperones on group trips. Sanders takes her willing heart outside the church also, as she has worked at "Straight Street" in Laurens for several years. Comparable to Clinton's "Open Door", "Straight Street" is a Christian youth Paula Sanders can be found day in and day out sitting, equipped with a phone and a smile, at the front desk of PC's administration building.

photo by Samm Bridgforth

Album Reviews

According to Jason Bundrick

*All opinions asserted in this box are the sole opinion of Jason Bundrick and not the Blue Stocking, whereas we have not really heard of any of these bands and are thus unable to express a qualified opinion.

Bad Religion Stranger Than Fiction

This album is pretty darn good. This is straight forward rock that should be accessible to most people. There are two videos for this album, "Stranger than Fiction" and "21st century (digital boy)", and if you like those songs you'll like the rest of the album.

My only problem with this band is the lead singer. I like his voice, but the man has no feel for words. He is blazingly intelligent with a large vocabulary, the problem is that he tries to include every word he knows in the album.

Overall, though, it is well worth your time to pick it up. B-

Captain Hollywood Project Love is Not Sex

It is not a big fan of most dance music, but these guys I can stand. The really surprising thing about them is that unlike most dance groups they are intelligent.

A couple of their songs got airplay and this album did O.K. There is nothing really shocking or outstanding on this record, but it ain't bad. C+

Compulsion Comforter

This is an Irish band, and like most other Irish bands they are political. The thing that sets these guys apart is their ability to make a statement without being whiny. This is their first major release in the U.S., but these guys are a little older and more experienced than some other bands (like the Cranberries).

It's good, solid rock that doesn't get old after you listen to it a couple of times. The songs are similar, but not the same and the album has enough changes in it to keep itself fresh. A-

Green Apple Quick Step Wonderful Virus

I don't see much of a career for this band. That sounds harsh, but you haven't listened to the album.

The lead singer sounds like a Bon Jovi wannabe and the song writing isn't much better. D-

Marilyn Manson Portrait of an American Family

I saw this band open up for Nine Inch Nails last semester and they impressed me. They remind me of a brutal, sadistic Jane's Addiction.

Some of the lyrics are cheesy, but the singer makes up for it with a rather unique voice and style. Also, a few of the songs have bad keyboard lines in them but these songs are so raw so it doesn't detract from the album that much.

It is a good first album and shows a lot of potential. Not for the faint hearted. B+

Pop Will Eat Itself Dos Dedos Mis Amigos

This album is somewhere between Ministry and Moby. Part industrial and part techno, but gets a little old by the end. It starts out good but you tend to lose interest towards the end. If this record was a few songs shorter it would be better.

Overall it ain't bad, though. C+

LADIES! LADIES! LADIES!

Get your money ready for the 6th Annual Pi Kappa Phi Pledge Auction!

Buy your favorite pledge and own him for 24 hours.

The star-studded list includes:

"Long & Strong" Michael Baughman
Matt "More than a but Scruffy" Duffie
Jack "I'm a Bad Habit" Hibbits
"Small Package" Ted Jarrett
Kevin "The Playboy" Johnson
Brandon "Too Tough to Tame" Lane
David "You Called Down the Thunder" Williams

"Payday" Jay McLaughlin
Warren "I Ain't No Sweetie" McSweeney
Matt "Can't Buy Me Love No" Moore
Warren "I am a Stormin'" Norman
Brian "The Mountain Top" Ridgley
Jason "Fire & Ice" Tinley
Jeremy "The Duke" Walker

Come out to the Pi Kappa Phi house Thursday, February 9th. The bidding starts at 7 pm and ends when every pledge has been auctioned off.

Bring this coupon for a free table dance by the stud of your choice!

Σ Σ Σ Σ Σ Σ Σ Σ Σ Σ Σ Σ Σ Σ Σ Σ

Make the most of your college career...
Join an organization where YOU can make a difference!

Sigma Sigma Sigma

Redefining Sorority Life.

Come meet us at our Open House Party
Friday, Feb. 3 at 7:00 pm
Chapman Conference Center in Jacobs Hall

For more information, call
Diane at 8833

Σ Σ Σ Σ Σ Σ Σ Σ Σ Σ Σ Σ Σ Σ Σ Σ

SUB to feature full ensemble of popular movies daily

by Amanda Barnes
FEATURES EDITOR

Regarded by PC students as a wonderful addition to the list of amenities available on campus, the daily movie showings on the PC channel have prompted many positive comments all over campus. Considering daily movies to be another service to students, the Student Affairs office has successfully undertaken this new responsibility and has maintained it since the fall. Although Mr. Randy Randall, Director of Student Activities, oversees the entire transaction he does receive input from student assistants in selecting the movies each month.

Stacy Doggett, chairperson for movie selection, commented on her involvement in the program, "Basically movies given priority are new releases ... and any wishes submitted by on-campus groups, ... students are the deciding factor and I just organize it all." In February, there will be movie selections to commemorate and honor Black History Month, an idea proposed by Chon Glover, SVS coordinator and Minority Student Union advisor. Glover has personally chosen 5 films ranging from documentaries to fiction to help celebrate the event. These special features will be aired on PC channel 46 or 47 from February 16 until the end of the month.

When A Man Loves A Woman

Strength and commitment unfolds as a determined family embarks on a courageous battle to pull together and deal head-on with a mother's devastating battle with alcoholism. Meg Ryan gives a powerful, poignant performance.

The Client

From the best-selling author John Grisham comes this gripping new film of a young boy who becomes a pawn in a battle the police and the mob- and the lawyer who works to protect him. Academy Award nominee Susan Sarandon stars with 1994 Academy Award winner Tommy Lee Jones in this blockbuster thriller that is certain to captivate the same audience who enjoyed "The Pelican Brief."

Maverick

Director Richard Donner joins with Academy Award-winning screenwriter William Goldman ("Butch Cassidy And The Sundance Kid," "All The President's Men") for this romantic adventure that will take the audience from the untamed canyons of the Old West to the smoky recesses of a saloon poker table- all in the charming and witty style that made the television series an all-time favorite.

The Inkwell

This coming-of-age story chronicles a young African-American teenager's growing experiences one summer. Similar in style to the classic "Summer of '42," "The Inkwell" examines an aspect of the black experience previously unexplored in film while recasting the fads, music and styles of the 1970's in a light-hearted yet touching way.

Three Amigos

Three of the most popular comedians saddle up as gun-slinging silent screen heroes. After a series of box office flops, the trio travels to Mexico where they are mistaken as real gun slingers who have come to rescue a town.

Untamed Heart

Just when you thought they didn't make sentimental romances anymore, along comes "Untamed Heart," a heartfelt story of two unlikely people whose romance slowly but surely blossoms into true love.

Can't Buy Me Love

Another of Patrick Dempsey's hits that you will remember, this romance comedy brings both touching and hilarious moments to the screen.

Son In Law

MTV star Pauley Shore follows up the hit "Encino Man" with this fun-filled, fish-out-of-water story of a funky surfer kid who agrees to pose as a girl's new fiancé for a weekend at her parents' country farm. Hilarious barnyard shenanigans abound as this city boy tries to fit in with "American Gothic" while her parents do everything they can to send him packing.

Scent Of A Woman

Al Pacino creates one of his most memorable characters in "Scent Of A Woman," a touching and tragically funny film. Pacino stars as Lt. Colonel Frank Slade, blind and irascible with a taste for the good life whose journey with a young prep student becomes an adventure that will leave them both changed forever.

Lorenzo's Oil

Academy Award nominees Nick Nolte and Susan Sarandon star with two-time Oscar winner Peter Ustinov in this critically acclaimed tale of an extraordinary couple who successfully battled against time and the medical establishment to save their son's life.

New coffeehouse and lounge adding flavor to student life

by Amanda Barnes
FEATURES EDITOR

A fairly new institution at PC, Inklings opened last April as a fully functional coffeehouse and lounge for the entire campus. Manager Erin Saylor takes responsibility for the idea, and explains that she noticed a need for a student hangout other than Springs Campus Center. Saylor envisioned "a place for students to gather, talk, listen to music, and study... kind of a relaxed atmosphere."

Almost one year old, Inklings has progressed remarkably from its volunteer two member staff to its present full staff with a work study salary. Assistant manager Levana Layendecker, played a key role in Inklings' success by offering new exciting ideas coupled with hard work. Both Saylor and Layendecker have spent countless hours planning and negotiating with college administration for financial and moral support. Surprised by the amount of encouragement received from the college, Saylor said everything has gone smoothly and the majority of needs have been met.

According to Saylor, Inklings was an idea stemming from personal regrets about our generation and the communication gap we seem to have created among ourselves. Wanting to take action and to work toward a solution to the problem, Saylor talked with Dr. Ann Stidham to obtain another viewpoint.

After seeing her dreams become reality, Saylor calls to every member of the PC community to understand what she wants to emphasize.

"I think with the mass media in our society we have lost our sense of communication... it's a lost art... people learn the most valuable things in life talking to other people," Saylor said. To her communication is one of the "most valuable tools in education" and observes that "people are almost afraid to ascend." Admitting her own failures to make this true communication a priority in life, Saylor agreed, "it's a fast paced society, we're all guilty of it," explaining how we as a society get caught in cycles of schedules and plans and overlooking who we are and how we fit together in the world. Looking ahead, the future appears promising for Inklings, with increased student participation whether there is a scheduled event or acting as a casual meeting place. Although student involvement has been Inklings' main goal, the staff also hopes to see more PC faculty and staff interest as well. Inklings is currently open on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday from 8 pm to midnight with fair attendance on weeknights. Overall, Inklings is considered a success by students and faculty alike, and is a promising permanent addition to PC campus life.

Some of Inklings' short-term goals include: sound proofing the existing room, installing more adequate lighting, and purchasing tables and chair sets, while the one long-term goal they are working toward is to see Inklings become a place students are actively involved in at all times not just for special events. Student comments and suggestions are welcome and many have already become reality, such as the suggestion for "Open-microphone night," which is already a hit after debuting this past week. The emphasis is on everyone coming together, involvement and participation. These things cannot be accomplished without an effort from everyone, and Inklings hopes to be the place where it all comes together.

Win a Romantic Dinner for Two

At the Upstate's Finest Restaurant Graystone
—Since 1969—

Send In Your Valentine's Lines of Love & You'll be Automatically Entered to Win!

Simply send us your typed or printed message to be published in the Feb. 10 edition of The Laurens County Advertiser.

(Please include your name, address & phone number to be eligible for drawing.)

Only $5 for 20 Words or Less plus tax and postage

DEADLINE: 5 P.M. WED., FEB. 8

Winner announced in the Friday Feb. 10, edition of The Laurens County Advertiser.

There's no better time than Valentine's Day to express your love or appreciation for that very special person.

Mail With Payment to:
The Laurens County Advertiser
Love Lines
P.O. Box 490 • Laurens, SC 29360

SUB to feature full ensemble of popular movies daily

by Amanda Barnes
FEATURES EDITOR

Regarded by PC students as a wonderful addition to the list of amenities available on campus, the daily movie showings on the PC channel have prompted many positive comments all over campus. Considering daily movies to be another service to students, the Student Affairs office has successfully undertaken this new responsibility and has maintained it since the fall. Although Mr. Randy Randall, Director of Student Activities, oversees the entire transaction he does receive input from student assistants in selecting the movies each month.

Stacy Doggett, chairperson for movie selection, commented on her involvement in the program, "Basically movies given priority are new releases... and any wishes submitted by on-campus groups... students are the deciding factor and I just organize it all." In February, there will be movie selections to commemorate and honor Black History Month, an idea proposed by Chon Glover, SVS coordinator and Minority Student Union advisor. Glover has personally chosen 5 films ranging from documentaries to fiction to help celebrate the event. These special features will be aired on PC channel 46 or 47 from February 16 until the end of the month.

When A Man Loves A Woman

Strength and commitment unfolds as a determined family embarks on a courageous battle to pull together and deal head-on with a mother's devastating battle with alcoholism. Meg Ryan gives a powerful, poignant performance.

The Client

From the best-selling author John Grisham comes this gripping new film of a young boy who becomes a pawn in a battle the police and the mob- and the lawyer who works to protect him. Academy Award nominee Susan Sarandon stars with 1994 Academy Award winner Tommy Lee Jones in this blockbuster thriller that is certain to captivate the same audience who enjoyed "The Pelican Brief."

Maverick

Director Richard Donner joins with Academy Award-winning screenwriter William Goldman ("Butch Cassidy And The Sundance Kid," "All The President's Men") for this romantic adventure that will take the audience from the untamed canyons of the Old West to the smoky recesses of a saloon poker table- all in the charming and witty style that made the television series an all-time favorite.

The Inkwell

This coming-of-age story chronicles a young African-American teenager's growing experiences one summer. Similar in style to the classic "Summer of '42," "The Inkwell" examines an aspect of the black experience previously unexplored in film while recasting the fads, music and styles of the 1970's in a light-hearted yet touching way.

Three Amigos

Three of the most popular comedians saddle up as gun-slinging silent screen heroes. After a series of box office flops, the trio travels to Mexico where they are mistaken as real gun slingers who have come to rescue a town.

Untamed Heart

Just when you thought they didn't make sentimental romances anymore, along comes "Untamed Heart," a heartfelt story of two unlikely people whose romance slowly but surely blossoms into true love.

Can't Buy Me Love

Another of Patrick Dempsey's hits that you will remember, this romance comedy brings both touching and hilarious moments to the screen.

Son In Law

MTV star Pauley Shore follows up the hit "Encino Man" with this fun-filled, fish-out-of-water story of a funky surfer kid who agrees to pose as a girl's new fiance for a weekend at her parents' country farm. Hilarious barnyard shenanigans abound as this city boy tries to fit in with "American Gothic" while her parents do everything they can to send him packing.

Scent Of A Woman

Al Pacino creates one of his most memorable characters in "Scent Of A Woman," a touching and tragically funny film. Pacino stars as Lt. Colonel Frank Slade, blind and irascible with a taste for the good life whose journey with a young prep student becomes an adventure that will leave them both changed forever.

Lorenzo's Oil

Academy Award nominee Nick Nolte and Susan Sarandon star with two-time Oscar winner Peter Ustinov in this critically acclaimed tale of an extraordinary couple who successfully battled against time and the medical establishment to save their son's life.

New coffeehouse and lounge adding flavor to student life

by Amanda Barnes
FEATURES EDITOR

A fairly new institution at PC, Inklings opened last April as a fully functional coffeehouse and lounge for the entire campus. Manager Erin Saylor takes responsibility for the idea, and explains that she noticed a need for a student hangout other than Springs Campus Center. Saylor envisioned "a place for students to gather, talk, listen to music, and study... kind of a relaxed atmosphere."

Almost one year old, Inklings has progressed remarkably from its volunteer two member staff to its present full staff with a work study salary. Assistant manager Levana Layendecker, played a key role in Inklings' success by offering new exciting ideas coupled with hard work. Both Saylor and Layendecker have spent countless hours planning and negotiating with college administration for financial and moral support. Surprised by the amount of encouragement received from the college, Saylor said everything has gone smoothly and the majority of needs have been met.

According to Saylor, Inklings was an idea stemming from personal regrets about our generation and the communication gap we seem to have created among ourselves. Wanting to take action and to work toward a solution to the problem, Saylor talked with Dr. Ann Studham to obtain another viewpoint.

After seeing her dreams become reality, Saylor calls to every member of the PC community to understand what she wants to emphasize.

